Nowe when Moſes hath ſpoken thus, hee addeth what they then ſay. Who ſhall aſſure vs to ſee the morning? Howe ſhall wee ende the day? When men vnderſtande once howe fraile they bee, and with howe many perils and miſeries they bee enuironed: then haue they no more happineſſe. In deede wee can well ſay, that there is nothing more certaine than death, nor any thing more vncertaine than the houre thereof: but in the meane while wee regarde it not, vntill God doe wring vs, and driue vs thereunto by force. For then they which did beare themſelues in hande that their life ſhould laſt without ende: (as we ſee howe men deceiue themſelues by fancying an immortalitie in this worlde, imagining that they ſhall liue a hundred yeares after they bee deade;) [doe finde the contrarie.] And therefore becauſe men are ſo blockiſh, God doeth ſtill conſtreine them to beholde preſent death continually pinching them and holding them at a bay. Thereupon they bee in continuall feare; and albeit that they vtter nothing with their mouthes, yet doe they ſay thus in their heartes, Who can aſſure mee to ſee the morning? To bee ſhort, to their thinking, the very earth ſinketh vnder them. And albeit that this doth not alwayes appeare, yet notwithſtanding the deſpiſers of God doe feele that this threatening is not in vaine nor without effect. Wherefore let vs not linger the time vntill God doe execute ſuch iudgement vppon vs, but let vs rather preuent it, by hauing that ſame willing feare which is ſpoken of in this wiſe: Bleſſed is the man (ſaieth Prou.28.14. Salomon) which feareth in his heart, that is to ſay, which calleth vppon himſelfe, and taryeth not vntill God inforce him whether hee will or no. When euerie of vs doeth ſtirre vp himſelfe, it is the greateſt benefite that wee can haue. Therefore where as the worldlings make themſelues dull heades, and wander away after their owne vaine imaginations, and fling beyonde the moone as they ſay to the intent to liue in peace and reſt without feeling of any griefe or trouble, whereas they (I ſay) would thus fall aſleepe; let vs looke to our ſelues, and gather our wittes into ſome feare, and let euery of vs quicken vp himſelfe. And if wee doe not ſtirre vp our ſelues in this manner, then muſt God needes torment and vex vs, and make vs a liuely portraiture of that which is mentioned heere. For in verie deede, after that the deſpiſers of God haue plaide the madde beaſts, and bleared out their tongues at all manner of doctrine, and ſet light by all threatenings, and like chafed bulles haue ruſhed againſt God and all his iudgementes: they muſt at the laſt feele themſelues vexed and troubled with vnquietneſſe: as wee ſee howe the great Tyrants that make all the worlde to ſhake vnder them, haue their part hereof without meaſure: inſomuch that where as they make others to drinke a little glaſſe of feare and terrour, they themſelues muſt drinke vp a whole potte full, and ſuppe vp the dregges, according to the phraſe of the Prophets, when they ſpeake of the greateſt puniſh- Eſa.51.22. ment that God ſendeth: Namely that when thoſe whom God chaſtiſeth, haue drunke more than their fill, in ſwallowing vp great ſtore of ſorowes; then they which haue liued at their eaſe and in pleaſure, muſt drinke the leeze, which is the bittereſt, and will make them to burſt. And in deede, we haue an example of a heatheniſh

Tyrant, who hath verie well prooued and declared that all his whole life was a continuall torment, yea euen by his owne witneſſe. For being flattered of one that ſaide vnto him, O ſyr, howe happie is your ſtate? Yea (quoth hee) and I will make thee to vnderſtande it thy ſelfe. And thereuppon hee made him a feaſt, and when hee had ſet him at ỹ table, he put a ſworde ouer his heade, hanging by one onely hayre, to ſhewe vnto him, what manner of ſtate that was, which hee had counted ſo happie. The man ſeeing himſelfe in that perplexitie, ſaide: Let this kingly ſtate be taken away from mee: for I had leuer die a hundred times than to be in ſuch vnquietneſſe and perplexitie. This I ſay, was the confeſſion of a heathen Tyrant: as if GOD ſhoulde haue helde him vpon the Torture, that it might bee a generall leſſon againſt all ſuch as make warre with God, and trouble the worlde with terrour: they muſt ſpite of their teeth bee made afraide themſelues, and finde no reſt. After many toſſings and turmoylings, hell muſt euermore waite for them, they muſt ſee their graues open which they are to fall into, and they muſt beholde the great gulfes readie to ſwallow them vp, and in the meane while can haue no recourſe nor refuge to God, but doe ſtil flee from him, where as he is the onely perſon to whom they ſhoulde haue ſought for ſuccour.

Nowe ouer and beſides that which wee haue ſaide already, namely, that we ought to preuent this threate, by fearing God of our owne accorde: let vs vnderſtande, that foraſmuch as we be all wretched ſinners, and there is not one, be hee neuer ſo well and rightly minded, which ought not to vnderſtande that hee is greatly indaungered vnto God: yet when wee haue our Ephe.2.14. Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who is our peace, and when wee can by his meane reſt vppon the fatherly goodneſſe of God: then may wee be ſure that he holdeth vs for his children, and that hee watcheth ouer vs, and procureth our welfare. And Rom.5.1. that is the cauſe why Sainct Paul ſaith expreſly, that when we bẽ once iuſtified by faith, then we be at peace with God. He ſaieth that we muſt be iuſtified by faith, that is to ſay, that wee muſt haue imbraced the grace which is offered vnto vs by the Goſpel: knowing that God forgiueth vs our ſinnes, and is mercifull vnto vs; in that hee beareth with vs for our Lorde Ieſus Chriſts ſake. Vntill we come to this, we muſt needes be alwayes in doubt and in perplexitie: but hauing knowledge once that God hath buried all our ſinnes, ſo as wee put our truſt in the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; then wee bee at peace, yea in peace and not in dulneſſe like as the vnfaithfull and the deſpiſers of God may haue ſome peace for a certaine time, as we haue ſaide afore: but foraſmuch as they forget themſelues, and do ſtill followe on their wicked traine, they vtterly beſot, and bewitch themſelues. But Sainct Paul ſaieth that wee haue peace with God, that is to ſay, that we acknowledging our ſelues vndone without him, may boldly preace vnto him and ſay: Seeing GOD is my father and hee hath ſhewed himſelfe ſo gracious to mee in this preſent life, as to giue me ſome reſt heere: ſurely there is a more bliſfull reſt prepared for mee, when as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſhall come to meete vs, for to guide vs, and to bring vs vp, that wee may ſeeke our God; as in deede that is the place which wee muſt come vnto, if wee intende to haue a place to reſt vs in. And in that reſpect is it that the Prophets in likewiſe ſpeaking of the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, doe alwayes ſay, that euerie man ſhall then ſleepe vnder his owne Mich.4.4. figge tree and vnder his owne vine: and nothing ſhall make him afraide. Nowe then concerning the threatenings which Moſes hath ſet downe heere; the Prophets as true expounders of Moſes, and as renuers and bringers of the Lawe to rememberance againe, hauing ſhewed vnto the people the vnbeliefe and rebellion which they ſawe in them, and hauing ſhewed the vengeance of God which was readie to light vpon them for it, did bring thoſe back againe vnto Ieſus Chriſt, which erſt were altogether vnreformable. And albeit that it behoued them to ſuffer ſmart for a time becauſe of their ſinnes; yet doe they giue them hope that God will make a couenant with them, and that then they ſhall ſleepe euery man in his vyneyarde and vnder his figge tree: doing them to vnderſtande that although they ſlept not in a locked chamber, but lay in yͤ middeſt of the fields, yet they ſhould be ſafe ynough becauſe they were vnder the protection of their God, by reaſon whereof they might ſleepe at eaſe and in ſafetie.

Foraſmuch then as wee haue ſuch aſſurance, wee ought to bee well ſetled in our mindes: and ſith wee haue vnderſtanding of the reconciliation that is made in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, wee haue nowe good cauſe to reſt vs in our God, and to be ſtill and quiet; howbeit, ſo as we forget not ſo great a benefite. And wee ſee that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is minded to raigne among vs. Let vs therefore ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned by his hande, and as Ewes and Lambes let vs followe our ſhepeherde, and then ſhall wee do that which our Lorde hath appointed for vs, ſo as nothing may hinder vs, but that we may attaine vnto him. Although wee ſee thinges turmoyled in this worlde, ſo as all goes to hauocke, yet ſhall wee bee able to take breath againe, and to ſay; Yet hath my God ſtill ſhewed mee the way: inſomuch that whereas other men haue beene poſted to and fro, I haue euermore ſtoode faſt: and although I haue beene diuerſe wayes troubled and vexed, yet doe I knowe Lorde that thou doeſt euermore gouerne thy people. Thus yee ſee that being ſtayed in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, wee may bee aſſured that GOD will neuer faile vs. Seeing it is ſo, let vs returne vnto him, and pray him to defende and delyuer vs from all euill. The way then for vs to bee ſure of our life, is, that although wee ſee nothing but continuall warre, yet wee muſt inforce our ſelues to fight, and perſeuere vntill we haue obtained the victorie, and if hee take vs away to himſelfe, hee will then bee the keeper of our ſoules. He will guide vs in this preſent life, ſo as both day and night wee ſhall feele his grace. When the euening commeth, albeit that the night doe bring neuer ſo much feare with it, yet ſhall we be in ſafetie. Why ſo? For God is that while our fortreſſe, and we ſhall not be forſaken of him. Therefore let vs tarie vntill the morning. Thus doe wee euer more referre our life vnto him. And although we be not ſenſeleſſe, yet ſhall we haue continually whereupon to ſtay vs when wee ſee our owne infirmitie. As for example, when a man perceiueth that hee is not able to ſtande, but his legges quake and folter vnder him; hee either leaneth to ſome thing, or ſitteth downe in a chaire, or elſe ſtayeth himſelfe vpon ſome ſtaffe; euen ſo is it with vs. For wee haue not the ſtrength of Gyants, wee bee not of ſuch power as to be able to defie our enemies, for wee ſee well that wee bee too too weake. But in the meane while wee ceaſſe not to ſtay vppon God, and that is our refuge. Neither haue we this affiance for this preſent life onely; but wee haue it alſo for the life to come: inſomuch that although our Lord doe put vs into the handes of our enemies, yet will he not miſſe to be our ſauiour euen in the middeſt of death. Let vs not doubt, but that he will ſafely conuey vs not onely from the morning to the euening, and from the euening to the morning; but alſo that euen in the middeſt of the darkeneſſe of death, we ſhall alwayes be lightened with his goodneſſe, and hee will ſhewe vs that the life which hee hath promiſed to his people, ſhall neuer faile. Therefore doth Dauid vſe this maner of ſpeach. Lorde (ſaieth he) thy ſtaffe or elſe thy ſhepeherdes hooke. He taketh the ſimilitude of a ſheepeherd, that hath his ſtaffe or his hooke. Lorde (ſaith hee) ſo long Pſal.23.4. as I ſee thy ſtaffe before me, I am ſafe, inſomuch that if wee were to goe into the darkeneſſe of death, yet being in that dark and yrkſome dale, yea euen in ſuch ſort as I might ſeeme to be caſt into hell: I woulde not ceaſſe to reioyce. After this manner muſt we practiſe this doctrine.

Nowe laſtly it is ſaid, that God will cary his people by the waie, concerninge the, which it was ſaid: Thou ſhalt neuer ſee it againe: & that they ſhould bee caried in ſhippes: and that being come into Egypt, they ſhould bee ſet to ſale as ſlaues, & yet no body ſhould buy them. They ſhould not be eſteemed, but as a people vtterly caſt away, and euery body ſhoulde diſdaine them. Now this was al one as if God ſhould haue meant to cut them off, ſaying, Remember how I merueilouſly deliuered you out of the lande of Egypt, when I made you to paſſe through the wilderneſſe, and in like wiſe to goe through the red ſea, or the ſea of Bulruſhes, (which they call yͤ red ſea: but properly it is the ſea of bulruſhes, becauſe of the Bulruſhes that growe in it) for I cauſed that arme of the ſea to ſhrinke back, that you might paſſe on drie foote. But nowe ſhall you returne thither in ſhippes; you muſt paſſe againe that way, yea, albeit that I forbade you, and inioyned you expreſly, that you ſhould not goe that way any more: yet ſhall you returne thither ſpite of your teeth. In deede at the other time that you were in Egypt, you ſorowed for the oppreſſion which you ſuffred, and I tooke pitie of you, and tooke you out of it. But at this time, when you ſhall require any bodie to buy you to bee their ſlaues, and to yeelde your life to the moſt miſeries that may bee: you ſhall haue no buyer at all. As if hee had ſaide, Seeing you haue deſpiſed the deliuerance that was wrought for you, and haue forgotten ſuch a benefite; it ſhalbe well knowen that you bee an vnhappie and a curſed people, and that I haue forſaken and refuſed you vtterly. This threat coulde not bee but exceeding terrible to the Iewes. And when the Prophetes expounded Moſes, wee ſee likewiſe howe the people gnaſhed their teeth againſt them. Howbeit, no whit were they meekened thereby, but rather they doubled their coufuſion: inſomuch that it was alwayes caſt in their teeth that their iniquities proceeded to ſuch extremitie as was intollerable. It is ſaide, that, notwithſtanding all the manaces of the Lawe were pronounced vnto them, yet they regarded them not, but helde on ſtill, and became ſo much the more hardharted, as though they had ment of ſet purpoſe to make warre againſt God. Soothly it is a horrible thing and againſt nature, that they which were the houſholde of God, the holy generation, the children of Abraham, and which from the beginning had beene trained vp in the doctrine of the lawe, and had had the ſayings alwayes laide before them which were written by Moſes, ſo as their eares were continually beaten therewith: ſhoulde yet notwithſtanding fare neuer the better for it, but ſtill goe on from euill to worſe. Was not that a horrible thing? Yes verily: and yet wee ſee the like example. Let vs make our benefite thereof, and beware that we wax not ſo hardharted, leaſt wee be poſſeſſed of Sathan, and forſaken of God, ſo that whatſoeuer is tolde vs & ſhewed vnto vs, we be touched with no manner of feare, but become like wilde bores which of their owne wilfulneſſe doe caſt themſelues into death. Let vs take heede that we prouoke not our God in that manner.

And moreouer whereas it is ſaide heere, that God woulde bring this people whom he had redeemed, into a double captiuitie and more reprochfull than was the firſt: let vs repaire vnto that redemption which was once wrought by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: and that we may be partakers thereof, let vs freely ſerue him which purchaſed vs ſo deerely. And ſeeing that our God hath redeemed vs in the perſon of his ſonne, to ſuch a ſtate that now we be franke and free from the bondes of ſinne and Sathan, let vs hencefoorth feare him and ſerue him all the dayes of our life, according as Zacharie ſpeaketh in his ſong, recited by Sainct Luke. Luk.1.75. Seeing then that the caſe ſtandeth ſo, let vs learne to walke in ſuch obedience to our God, as hee may make the redemption auailable which is wrought by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; and let vs ſerue him in all holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, that wee bee not bereft of the fauour which hee hath purchaſed for vs as wee ſee this people were, who after they had beene ſetled in the lande of Chanaan, were put out againe for their vnthankfulneſſe. Therefore let vs bee well ware that God diſpoſſeſſe vs not of the grace which he hath beſtowed on vs: but let vs learne to take ſuch profite thereby, as all the whole may yeelde fruite to his glory, to the intent he may make vs to vnderſtand, that as well in life as in death, hee is euermore our Sauiour and our redeemer, and yͭ we may make our boaſt that he hath not redeemed vs in vaine, but with condition, that we ſhoulde henceforth liue in libertie in deſpite of the diuell and of death, according as wee haue example thereof in Sainct Paul.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, beſeeching him to touch vs more and more to the quicke, that being ſtriken with ſuch a feare, as may make vs to ſee that of our ſelues we bee deade and forlorne; we may yet for all yͭ not faile to flee for refuge to his mercie. Let vs therfore ſeeke the way thither, which is, that we acknowledge our ſelues to be recōciled by Ieſus Chriſt, and that hee is our peace vnto the ende, according as he doeth continually declare and teſtifie vnto vs by the doctrine of his Goſpell. Eph.2.14. And that in the meane while it may pleaſe our good God, to giue vs the ſpirite of mieldneſſe and meekeneſſe, to the ende wee rebell not againſt him any more, nor haue our affections any more, ſtriuing and rebelling againſt his Lawe, but rather that wee may commit ouer our ſelues to his guiding, and bee confirmed in the aſſurance which hee hath giuen vs, that hee holdeth vs for his people; ſo as he may ſhew by effect, that hee watcheth ouer vs, and that hee will continue with vs to the ende to preſerue vs both in life and in death. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth.&c.

The CLXIIII. Sermon which is the firſt vppon the nine & twentith Chapter.

THeſe bee the wordes of the couenant which the Lorde God commaunded Moſes to enter into with the children of Iſrael in the lande of Moab: ouer and beſides the couenant which he had made with them in Horeb.

2 And Moſes called all Iſrael, and ſaide vnto them: you haue ſeene all that the Lorde hath done before your eyes in the land of Egypt, to Pharao, and to all his ſeruants, and to all his Countrie.

3 The great trials which thine eyes haue ſeene, and the great ſignes and wonders.

4 And yet the Lord hath not giuen you a heart to vnderſtand, eyes to ſee, and eares to heare, vnto this preſent day.

WHen GOD hath once ſhewed his wil vnto mē it ought to ſuffice for euer. For what would wee more, when wee vnderſtand yͭ we ought to walke in the obedience of our God: euen of him who hath formed and created vs; to whome wee belong, and who hath ſo dearely bought vs? Needs then muſt men be wonderfully vnthankful, whē they can forget that which God hath taught them. And that is the cauſe why it is ſo often times tolde vs that wee muſt not turne away from the trueth when it is once knowen vnto vs. But we ſee howe God was faine to ratifie his Law againe the ſecond time, to the end it might be receiued, yea euen of that verie people whom he had choſen; and yet we ſee that at that time the Iewes ought to haue beene ſufficiently reclaimed to obey God: for hee had brought them lowe with long affliction, and ſurely it is a thing that ought to make men yͤ more pliable to learn, when they haue bin beaten with the ſcourges of God and their pride bin long puniſhed in them, ſo as they haue beene driuen to flie vnto God to pray him to take compaſſion of their miſeries. It may well ſeeme that this ſhould make them as gentle and meeke as lambes. The people of Iſrael were in that caſe, but they did foorthwith forget the miſeries which they had ſuffered, they kicked againſt their God, and they coulde not finde in their harts to receiue the yoke that was laide vpon their necke. Therefore we haue here a faire lookingglaſſe of the naughtineſſe and frowardnes of our nature: for this is not written to this ende onely that we ſhould blame the Iewes: but much rather that wee ſhoulde conſider that we our ſelues doe nothing differ from them, vntill God haue reformed vs by his holy ſpirite. Here then in yͤ perſon of the Iewes, God ſheweth vs what we are of purpoſe to humble vs.

Therefore he ſaith, that God commaunded Moſes to make a couenant the ſeconde time with the children of Iſrael in the Land of Moab, yea ouer & beſides that couenaunt which hee made in Horeb, where the law was firſt deliuered. It is certaine yͭ Gods declaring of his law was to the intent that euerie man ſhoulde remember this leſſon both night and day, and for that cauſe was the law ſet downe in writing. For it is not ynough for vs to haue had God ſpeake once; but the fathers muſt alſo teach their children, and euerie man muſt exerciſe himſelfe in that which he hath heard, yͭ he may frame himſelfe thereafter frō day to day, & bee the better edified. Gods intent then was yͭ this people ſhoulde bee dayly furthered, and for that purpoſe alſo were the Prieſts ordained. For I haue tolde you for what purpoſe our Lord had choſen them from among the people: It was not for the ceremonies of the Temple onely: but (as it is touched in the Prophet Malachy) it was to Mal.2.7. ſowe good and profitable doctrine throughout all the whole lande: and to that ende alſo were they diſperſed euerie where, that the people might be retayned in the purity of Religion, and in obedience to the lawe. But the queſtion here concerneth the ſolemne couenant. When God Exod.19.16 Exod.20.18 publiſhed his law in Horeb, we vnderſtand that the lightnings did flie foorth, that there was a ſounde of trumpets, that the heauen moued, that the mountaine flamed, that mens minds were afraide, and to bee ſhort, that God there ſhewed his preſence with ſuch maieſtie, as all men muſt needes know that obedience was due vnto him. Marke heere the ſolemnitie that was kept to make the Lawe autenticall. I haue ſaide that this ought to ſuffice vs to the ende of the worlde. Shoulde wee then looke to haue him to doe it againe the ſeconde time? Seeing that God hath fully certified vs that the lawe proceeded from him, and yͭ it is not a doctrine of mans deuiſing, but Gods owne vnchaungeable wil, and the rule that hee meant to haue kept without breaking, not onely of them that lyued at that time, but alſo from age to age ſo long as the world ſhould laſte; ſeeing (I ſay) that God did ſo ſhew forth his power to his creatures, ought not the rememberance of ſuch a deede preuaile to rule vs, without any opening of our lippes againſt the doctrine conteined in the Lawe? Yes ſurely. Needes then muſt it be that the people were verie leawd, yea and very rebellious, ſeeing they coulde ſo ſoone forget that which God had ordained to cauſe his lawe to bee receiued with all reuerence.

And that is the cauſe why it is ſaide, beſides the couenant that was made in Horeb. Here Moſes reprooueth thoſe that ſhoulde teach their children and poſteritie, vpbraiding them that they had forgotten God, and not profited themſelues by the woonders which they ſawe at the publiſhing of the lawe, but compelled God to renue it againe at the ende of fourtie yeeres, as though they had not knowen whence the lawe came, but had caſt doubtes of it ſtill, and woulde make none account thereof, vnleſſe they were ſubdued againe by maine force, and fetched home againe by God like a ſort of ſtray cattell. That was a token of great malice. But let vs marke howe God hath turned the euill vnto good, by making it to ſerue to our ſaluation. For by this meane wee bee the better confirmed in the doctrine of the Lawe. If it had beene publiſhed but onely once in Horeb, it ought to haue beene more than ynough to vs. And ſeeing that God gaue forth his voice in the aire, inſomuch that if a beaſt had come neere the mountaine, it ſhould Exod.19.13. haue dyed; and men heard dreadfull things and all their wits were troubled; the reciting of theſe thinges vnto vs ought to make vs to caſt downe our eyes, and to yeelde our ſelues pliable to receiue that which is contained in the Lawe of God. But nowe ſeeing it is ſaide that God began againe, and that there was a double confirmation, whereby the lawe was ratified anewe, and God auowed himſelfe to bee the author thereof, and no mortal man: ought not the hearing of ſuch thinges, to aſſure vs ſo much the more to ſtay vpon the doctrine thereof without any replying? If we doe it not, double condemnation will lye vpon vs. And thus we do ſee that the rebellion of the Iewes profiteth vs by that which fell out vpon it, inaſmuch as it was an occaſion that God did yet better confirme the authoritie of his lawe.

Nowe let vs conſider whereat Moſes doeth beginne. He ſaith: The Lorde hath wrought dreadfull woonders before your eyes in the Lande of Egypt, there were tentations to trie you: you knowe what hee did vnto Pharao and to all his ſubiectes: yet notwithſtanding, you haue not conſidered any of all thoſe things; you haue had neither wit, nor eares, nor eyes, you haue bin deafe and blind, ſenſeles & beaſtly, and ſo ye ſee how al gods myracles haue nothing auailed you, becauſe of your dulnes. Iuſtly hath Moſes begun here with vpbraiding, and iuſtly doth hee blame yͤ people for that they had not bin more attentiue to vnderſtande and to marke the teſtimonies that God gaue them: yea verely. Whereunto tendeth that, but vnto this which hee addeth for a concluſion, My will was that you ſhoulde haue knowen that I am the euerlaſting your God? Lo howe God declared that his intent was to reforme his people, as if he ſhould haue ſaid, hold ye to me: know ye that ſeing I haue taken yͤ charge of you, your life ſhalbe happy, & I will haue care of you: therfore honor me, put all your truſt in me, ſettle your affection vpon me, & glorifie me in al your life. That was gods purpoſe, when he ſhewed his wonderful power in deliuering yͤ people of Iſrael out of the bondage of Egypt. Seeing then that all this profited them not, muſt it not needs be that they were too too froward, in burying ſo many teſtimonies of Gods preſence, ſpecially ſeeing it was for their welfare and felicitie to haue yeelded themſelues in ſubiection vnto God? Seeing then that they were ſo wildheaded, and would not by any meane bee reclaymed. it is a ſigne of too diueliſh malice. It is al one as if Moſes ſhold ſay thus: Look to your ſelues: For there is no excuſe why you ſhould be thus deafe, blind, and ſenſeleſſe. Whereas God hath wrought ſo mightily in the land of Egypt for your deliuerance, it was to the ende that you ſhould be ſtabliſhed in the truſt of his goodneſſe and power, and bee ſtayed vppon the mightie ſtrength which hee ſhewed vnto you in ſo excellent maner: But you haue doone no ſuch thing: and therefore yee be more than guiltie, becauſe nothing hath hindered you to knowe your God, which hath thus ſhewed himſelfe vnto you, but your owne vnthankfulneſſe in refuſing al maner of vnderſtanding.

In deede it ſeemeth at the firſt ſhew, ẏ Moſes doth in this place diminiſh the fault of the people, by ſaying, God hath not giuen you eares to heare euen to this day, neither eyes to ſee, nor minde to vnderſtand. For hee ſheweth that it was not in the peoples power to haue either reaſon or vnderſtanding, vntill the ſame were giuen them from aboue. Nowe if men bee ſo brutiſh that they cannot bee taught, vntill God call them vnto him; what can they ſay, but ẏ they are to be pitied, and that he ought not to condemne them for the ſame? It ſeemeth therefore that Moſes went about here to cloake the iniquitie of the people, in ſaying, that it was long of GOD. For it was in Gods power to haue inlightened that people if hee had would, but he did it not. And he ſayth preciſely, God hath giuen thee neither eyes nor eares. Whereby hee ſheweth that it is a ſingular gift of God, to bee able to beholde his workes and to diſcerne aright of them, that wee may be inſtructed by them. If we be deſtitute of the ſpirite of God, then are we altogether brutiſhe: inſomuch that although God ſpeake, yet we heare him not: and although he ſtretch forth his mightie hand, yet we perceiue it not a whit. Shold not this ſerue mẽ for ſome excuſe of their ignorance? And in very deede, they that woulde waſhe their handes, wil alwayes ſay, Why? If I haue libertie to doe well, I am to be blamed if I diſcharge not my ſelfe: but of whom is it long that I haue it not, but of God who depriueth me of his grace? Thus doe men pleade their cauſe, and it ſeemeth to them that they be iuſtified and acquited, ſo they can declare that it lyeth not in them to doe wel, vntil God do aſſiſt thẽ. And ſo ſaith Moſes. But yet is all maner of excuſe taken away, inſomuch that although men be not able to attaine to well doing, no nor (which more is) to conceiue one only good thought towards it: yet ſhal they ſtil abide condemned before God, neither can they haue any colour of excuſe for their infirmitie, or of the faultineſſe which is in their nature. Moſes (as I haue already declared) doth here plead the cauſe of God againſt ẏ people. The people therefore muſt reſt in their cõdẽnation, & be ſhut out frõ al maner of ſhifts. And what ſaith he to thẽ? The Lord hath not giuen thee eyes to ſee, yea euen to this people that is depriued of the grace of God: and yet are condẽned here neuertheleſſe. Let vs therefore marke it well, that the vices which bee in vs, ſerue not to diſcharge vs, ſo as God ſhoulde not alwayes haue his right to reproue vs, yea and alſo to condemne vs, if we folowe not his trueth when it is offered vnto vs. For the better vnderſtanding whereof, let vs conſider that this is not ſpoken of the Iewes onely, but generally of all men. For through the offence of Adam, we be ſo alienated from God, that al our powers be corrupted and faultie. By the powers of the ſoule I meane the vnderſtanding, reaſon, will and iudgement: All theſe thinges are vtterly peruerted by Adams turning away from GOD. And for proofe thereof, the reaſon and wiſedome which the firſt man had, were not in himſelfe, ſauing in that hee was faſhioned after the Image of God: and therefore as ſoone as hee was ſeparated from his creator, who is the fountaine of all goodneſſe, hee coulde not but be depriued of all the graces that GOD had earſt beſtowed on him. Yee ſee then howe Adam did ſo baniſh himſelfe from the kingdome of GOD, that in ſtead of the ſpirituall riches wherewith hee was firſt endowed, there is nothing in him now but al manner of wretchedneſſe. For the heritage which wee haue from him is to bee altogether ſequeſtred from Gods grace. In deed there doe yet ſtill remaine in vs certaine prints of them: to the intent wee ſhoulde not be like the brute beaſtes, I meane euen by nature. Although the Paynims bee not reformed by the ſpirit of GOD, yet are they not as Oxen, Aſſes, or Dogges. Wee therefore doe ſtill beare ſome marke of that Image of God which was imprinted in the firſt man: howbeit that wee haue corrupted it altogether. For although that wee can iudge betwixt good and euill, yet is not that able to leade vs to perfection of true doctrine; neither is it able to make vs to knowe our God, to honour him ſyncerely as we ought: but whereas wee haue a certaine ſeede of knowledge that there is a GOD, wee bee dazeled in our thoughtes, and forge vaine dotages to our ſelues. Thence come all the idolatries, that euer were in the worlde. For albeit that men doe very well vnderſtand that there is a certaine diuine maieſtie which ought to be honored, yet are they not able to attaine thereunto: but doe beguile themſelues with certaine imaginations, notwithſtanding the light which is in them: whereby they ſhewe, that becauſe of ſinne, they be bereft of all good vnderſtanding, ſo as they bee not able to ſette one foote forewarde to march one ſteppe in the right way. To be ſhorte, all the vnderſtanding and reaſon which wee haue, ſerueth but to make vs ſo much the more vnexcuſable; Rom.1.20. for wee cannot pleade ignorance.

Nowe then wee perceiue that there is no vnderſtanding in men that they ſhoulde ſay they knowe GOD, though hee haue opened himſelfe vnto them. Therefore ſayth Saint Paul that the naturall man is not able to vnderſtand the thinges which belong to the ſpirit. 1.Cor.2.14. Hee ſaith not, that men be ſo frowarde that they wil not vnderſtand: but hee ſaith that they cannot at all: the power or abilitie thereof is not in vs. And why? Becauſe of the corruption that is crept into vs through the ſinne of Adam. Nowe then like as our will is frowarde, ſo is our vnderſtanding darkened, ſo as we neither diſcerne ne deeme as were requiſite for our ſaluation. Whereas wee knowe both the good and the euill, wee encline to the euill rather than to the good. What cauſeth that? Becauſe wee bee captiues vnder the ſeruitude of ſinne, and 2.Cor.4.4. the diuell who is Prince of this worlde, reigneth ouer vs, vntill wee be deliuered out of his bands and Tyranny, through the grace of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And like as the will is frowarde in vs, euen ſo is our ſpirite wrapped in much ignorance, ſo that God muſt inlighten vs by a ſpeciall grace, or elſe we ſhall neuer iudge of his word or works, as becommeth vs. Now therfore we ſee here, that God doth ſo accuſe the Iewes, as that by that meane he ſheweth vnto vs, that we be all deafe, blinde and ſenſeleſſe. We muſt marke theſe three thinges; that vntill God giue vs eyes, eares, and ſpirite or heart, we can not but goe cleane contrarie to his will. Seeing it is ſo, let vs learne not to come with a fooliſh preſumption, thinking our ſelues meete to bee admitted to the knowing of Gods ſecretes: but rather let vs referre our ſelues vnto him, that when his word is pronounced vnto vs, it may pleaſe him to giue vs the ſpirite to receiue it: and to worke before our eyes, that we may be ſo inlightened as we may fare the better for his workes, by taking hold of his maieſtie and glorie, and by ſtooping vnto him. I ſpeake aſwel of his word as of his workes: and not without cauſe. For when we come to heare Gods worde, we ſee that many doe returne from it as they came to it, and beare nothing away; or if they can rehearſe aught, yet are they neuer a whit edifyed thereby. Whence commeth that? Euen of this, that GOD giueth eyes and eares to whome hee thinketh good. Therefore, let vs not imagin that we be ſufficient and capable to diſcerne well, when wee haue bin onely taught, but let vs referre our ſelues vnto GOD, knowing that all light, all reaſon, all skil, and all diſcretion proceede from his ſpirite. In deede wee vſe that kinde of praying before our Sermons: but yet there are very many which doe vſe it but as a ceremony, and are not touched with it at all. But looke how often wee deſire God to inlighten vs with his holy ſpirite; ſo oft doe wee make ſolemne proteſtation, that wee come thither as wretches that are blinde, deafe, and altogether blockiſh, vntil God haue reformed vs, & drawen vs to himſelfe. Then lyke as GOD ſpeaketh vnto vs outwardly by the mouth of men whome hee hath appointed: euen ſo muſt he alſo ſpeake inwardly by his holy ſpirit. Truely it is a grace that is not to be deſpiſed, when as wee haue the pure doctrine vttered vnto vs: but yet ſhall it not auaile vs, vntill GOD hath alſo touched our heartes and our mindes.

If wee will be edifyed in the word of God, we muſt bee drawen with this inwarde grace when wee be taught at the mouth of a mortall man. For lyke as the ſunne yeeldeth light, and yet the blinde ſee neuer the more for it: Euen ſo the worde of God is preached vnto vs without edifying, vnleſſe our Lord giue vs eyes wherewith to behold his countenance as it ſhineth forth in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. So much for that poynt.

Now as concerning the workes of God, it is alike. We doe continually eate the bread which hee giueth vs: wee take our fill of his benefites; but yet for all that wee reſorte not vnto him, neither doe wee any way thinke to come neere him, vntill hee haue giuen vs wiſedome and diſcretion, that ſo being nouriſhed by his goodneſſe, wee may yeelde him thankes, for that hee hath a fatherly care ouer vs. Lykewiſe wee ſee the puniſhmentes and corrections which hee ſendeth vppon the wicked, wee be blockiſh, and paſſe them ouer, vntill hee haue wakened vs and made vs to vnderſtand, that it is for our ſinnes, that hee hath his hand ſo ſtretched out. To bee ſhorte, whether GOD ſpeake gently to drawe vs vnto him; or whether hee correct vs, and ſhewe vs ſome token of roughneſſe, to make vs to ſtoope: yet all this ſerueth to no purpoſe, vntil God giue vs eyes to ſee, eares to heare, and heart to vnderſtand. Are wee thus reproued? Let vs learne to miſlyke of our ſelues, and let vs not counterfeite thoſe that kicke againſt God, as if their ſinnes ſhould ſerue them for a buckler: let vs beware of ſuch blaſphemies. For wel may wee reply and ſay, I cannot tell what to doe, my nature is ſo corrupted in Adam: and I am thereby diſfurniſhed of all manner of power to attaine vnto goodneſſe: but when wee haue well debated our cauſe, it is certaine that wee ſhall continue ſtill in our condemnation. And why? For the euill commeth of vs. Is it not enough for a man that hee may bee his owne witneſſe, and needeth not to haue any inditement preferred againſt him by otherfolkes, nor any information againſt him? If a man enter into himſelfe, although he bee a ſlaue vnto ſinne, and be altogether compacted of naughtineſſe; and is not any way able to attaine vnto goodneſſe: yet is it ſo, that of his owne proper motion, and of his owne free will (as they terme it,) hee is alwayes drawen vnto euill, howbeit, hee is not forced thereunto. It is certaine that it is not poſſible for him to doe good: and yet neuertheleſſe the ſinne which hee committeth proceedeth not from any where elſe, than of his owne inclination: his will is ſo. Now ſeeing it is proued that we ſinne not otherwiſe than of our own freewill; is not that enough to ſtop our mouthes? To what purpoſe ſerueth it vs to ſpurne againſt God, ſeeing that wee muſt needes come to this condemnation? Therefore on the one ſide let vs learne to magnifie the grace of GOD towarde vs; and therewithall caſt downe our eyes, for that wee can doe nothing elſe but ſinne againſt him.

Sith wee ſee ſuch dulneſſe in vs, that the workes of God doe paſſe before our eyes, and wee perceiue them not: let vs ſigh and ſay;

Alas, muſt it not needs be that we bee very frowarde, ſeeing that God ſheweth vs here, howe familiarly he offereth himſelfe, and that his power is open vnto vs, and yet notwithſtanding we remaine worſe than wilde beaſtes? After that manner ought wee to lament; and ſeeing that God doeth vs to vnderſtand, (as I haue ſayd afore) that the puniſhementes which he ſendeth vs; be for our warning: if we profite not our ſelues thereby, let vs impute it to our owne hardheartedneſſe & ſay, needs muſt I be too too wicked, ſeeing that God calleth me to his ſchole, & driueth me thither ẇ his rod, & yet his word profiteth me nothing, but I continue ſtill in my wilfulneſſe: what a dealing is ẏ? Although then ẏ we be both deaf & blinde; yet let vs learn always to giue glory to God by condemning our ſelues willingly for ẏ we reſort not vnto him, and for ẏ we vſe not the meanes better which he profereth vnto vs to bring vs backe againe into the way of ſaluation. Thus much for one poynt.

Nowe on the other parte, when God hath ſhewed vs the fauor to make vs ſee his works to our benefite: let vs alſo looke vppon his very face in the doctrine of the Goſpell, that we may bee transfigured into the ſame, and let vs magnifie ſuch goodneſſe, aſſuring our ſelues that wee attaine not vnto faith by our owne power or policie, as who ſhoulde ſay, we were able men, and had well marked Gods woorkes, and well conſidered of them. Nay let vs acknowledge that all this commeth of him, and that otherwiſe wee ſhould haue remained ſtill in our beaſtly ignoraunce, as we ſee many doe.

There is yet more, for when we ſee that God worketh in vs, and that in the meane while hee ſuffereth a great many others to remaine deaf & blinde; ẏ ſame ought to leade vs to a far greater conſideration of his goodnes, to ẏ end wee may perceiue our ſelues to be ſo much ẏ more beholding & bound vnto him. Dauid did acknowledge ẏ whẽ he was wel tamed through Gods chaſtiſements, it was a ſpecial gift, & likewiſe when God did reforme him by his holy ſpirit. And when he ſpeaketh of the vnderſtanding that he hath of the ſecretes of God, and of all the doctrine of ſaluation, hee attributeth the ſame to the holy Ghoſt: ſhewing that it behoued him to proceed alwayes in profiting more and more. And therefore he hath his recourſe to the heauenly grace, confeſſing that there is not ſo much as one drop of knowledge in him, but by the gift of God. And when he is to treate of his obedience towardes God: he ſayth that it is the worke of God to opẽ Pſal.40.7. his eares, and to ſubdue him throughly vnto him. We ſee then by this, how he by his owne example teacheth vs to doe our homage vnto God for all manner of wiſedome and diſcretion, for all the light of faith which he hath giuen vs, and for all the good affection and deſire that we haue to worſhip him. But as I haue ſayd heretofore, when God dealeth not alike with all men, but whileſt he draweth vs vnto him, he leaueth others in their vnbeleefe; therein hee magnifyeth his goodneſſe yet the more. And when we ſay that God giueth not men the hart to vnderſtand, or that he doth giue it them: our meaning is that he draweth ſome & letteth otherſome alone, according to his owne chooſing of them, Act.13.45. as it is ſayd in S. Luke. Yee ſee how S. Paul preached: and yet all beleeued not his doctrine, neither were they wonne to the knowledge of Ieſus Chriſt. And what is the cauſe thereof? Whence commeth this diuerſitie? Euen of this, that God calleth and draweth thoſe vnto him whome hee hath choſen, as S. Paul treateth as well in the viii. Cap. to the Rom. as hee doth more at large Rom.8.&9. in the ix: but he deriueth this argument from the calling; namely that after God hath choſen men, he conſequently calleth them vnto him. Lykewiſe doth he aſwel in the firſt to the Epheſians, Ephe.1. 5. as in other places; where hee ſheweth that God doth then teſtifie that he hath choſen and adopted vs for his childrẽ, when it pleaſeth him to drawe vs vnto him through his goodneſſe. That is the thing which we haue in effect to remember. When we heare Moſes in this place reproue the people of Iſrael, that they vnderſtood not the miracles of God: and yet ſaith: That God had giuen them neither eyes, neither eares, nor heart.

Now if it be demaunded why Moſes vouchſafed not to expreſſe the cauſe why God gaue not his ſpirite vnto the ſaid people; (for it ſeemeth that he might in one word more grieuouſly haue condemned the people, if hee had ſayd: Thou haſt not harkened, thou haſt not diſcerned:) There are two cauſes thereof. The one is to doe the people to vnderſtand that they were ſo froward, that although God had wrought a million of miracles mo than they had ſeene already; yet had it bin vnpoſſible that they ſhoulde haue bin conuerted by the ſame. When men ſee that they be ſo leawdly diſpoſed and froward, that although God ſhould create a hundred worlds before their eyes, yet woulde it ſtand them in no ſtead: ought they not to bee the more aſhamed of themſelues? Yes ſurely. And again let vs mark farther, that Moſes meant to exhort the people to pray vnto God, for that in deed is the onely remedy, when we find ſo groſſe and ſo exceſſiue brutiſhneſſe in vs, that wee forget all manner of good doctrine, and all manner of admonitions which God hath giuẽ vs, yea euen when he ſtretcheth out his hand effectually to make vs to feel his power. Whẽ we haue buryed al theſe things, let vs reſorte to the remedy, which is, that wee pray vnto him to giue vs wiſedome and diſcretion to iudge better hereafter. Moſes therefore did ame at thoſe two ends, as if he ſhould ſay, Wretched people, looke to your ſelues: for to preſume any thing of your own wiſedome, or of your vertues, what were it? Sith experience doth ſhewe that you bee altogether giuen to euil, & that although God work neuer ſo mightily in your preſence, yet it ſerueth you to no purpoſe. Therfore acknowledge your ſelues to be ſtarke blind, and no better than wretched brutebeaſtes. Forget all your glorying, put away al ouerwening, & flatter not your ſelues, as if you had this or ẏ: For you haue power to do nothing but euil. So much for ẏ point. Secondarily again he ſayeth vnto thẽ, Go to, what is to be done? As for to inforce your ſelues, you be not able, for all your indeuoring is but vnto wickednes. But wil you thẽ yeld your ſelues wholy vnto God? Knowe yee that it is his office to open mens eyes and eares. Therefore confeſſe your faultes, and deſire him to prouide for you, and to reforme your mindes in ſuch wiſe, as yee may from henceforth well conſider his workes, and that hauing conſidered them, ye may be edifyed in his feare and obedience, ſo as you may haue eares to receiue the doctrine which is offered vnto you in his name. That is it whereat Moſes amed. Thus wee ſee that they which giue themſelues to ouermuch curioſitie, doe peruert the doctrine of God, and falſly abuſe it. When it is preached that in ſtead of freewill (as they terme it,) men haue but a curſed and a corrupt will, and are ſo blinde, that all their reaſon is but brutiſhneſſe, and that they cannot attaine to the doctrine of ſaluation, vntil they bee haled thereunto: they fall to making of erroneous diſputations. But the meaning of the holy Ghoſt is much differing from them. For it is to humble men, that they may learne to miſlyke of themſelues, yea and vtterly to condemne themſelues, when it is declared vnto thē that they can doe nothing. And furthermore wee be prouoked to pray, ſeeing that God muſt bee faine to worke in vs. And when we feele our feebleneſſe and infirmitie, wee bee driuen to reſorte vnto him and to deſire him to keepe vs vnder his obedience, forſomuch as it pleaſed him once to elect vs. Let vs therefore take heede that wee doe not wilfully wander either this way or that way: but as often as it is tolde vs, that we haue not yet bin taught of the holy ghoſt, nor bin reformed by him: let vs ſigh, at the beholding of our naughtineſſe which ceaſeth not to make vs euer guiltie. And thereupon let vs reſorte to our God, and pray him to haue pitie vppon vs, and to prouide remedie for all our faultes, and to giue vs henceforth both eares, eyes, and heart, to ſee, heare, and to vnderſtand the thinges which he telleth vs.

Now then foraſmuch as we haue here an inſtruction in the perſon of the people of Iſrael: let vs acknowledge our vnthankfulneſſe. True it is ẏ God hath ſo wrought, as there is none of vs which can excuſe himſelfe, that he hath not bin inſtructed ſufficiently at ſome time of his lyfe, to walke in the feare of God. In very trueth, we ſaw not the giuing of the law in Horeb, we heard not ẏ thunderclappes, wee ſaw not the lightenings, neither heard we the Trumpets ſound: but yet doth God dayly worke in ſuch maner, as he leaueth not himſelf without witnes, yea euē though there were none other thing than ẏ hee cauſeth Act.14.17. the Sunne to ſhine, and ſendeth vs rayne and faire weather: as S. Paul ſayth in the Actes. Behold, ẏ heauen & the earth, & the thinges which we ſee are witneſſes vnto God. And yet for all ẏ, God ceaſeth not to doe notable actes & worthy of memory, which ought to waken vs although we were neuer ſo blockiſh. Had a man liued but onely fifteene yeres in this worlde, it were time long enough to make him knowe Gods wonderfull workes. But when we haue continued here a fortie or fiftie yeres and more, and God in that time hath renewed the memory of his workes, one while comforting vs, and another while chaſtiſing vs: inſomuch that we are forced to perceiue his power ſo many wayes, and to knowe ẏ he hath deliuered vs from ſo many and ſo apparant daungers, & that he hath reached vs his hand to pluck vs, (as it were) out of the bottome of the graue, yea euen when we were as good as drowned in death; if wee notwithſtanding ſuch inſtructions, doe ſtil remaine deafe and blinde; ſhall we not bee condemned by this text? Yes truly. And let vs not in this caſe ſay, O the time ẏ I remained in papiſtrie; I was thē a blind wretch, but yet I ſinned not: let vs beware of ſuch ſhifts: for they wil ſerue vs to no purpoſe. But let vs vnderſtand, that we be alwayes to bee condemned for our ignorance, for they ẏ ſinne without lawe, ſhall periſh without the lawe, as S. Paul ſaith in the ſecond to the Romanes. For in whom is the Rom.2.12 fault ẏ we ſee not the thinges which God ſheweth openly vnto vs, but in our owne naughtines? After that maner therefore muſt we condemne our ſelues, when we can not learne by any of the meanes which God deliuereth vnto vs, as when he would drawe vs to his knowledge, & that wee ſhoulde be inlightened to knowe him to bee our God & father, & that his loue might bee imprinted in our hearts, to ẏ end we ſhould come vnto him freely, & with a pure & rightmeaning mind.

But yet this acknowledging of ourſelues to be guiltie, and this condemning of our ſelues for it, is not all ẏ we haue to doe: but we muſt alſo ſeeke the remedie by praying vnto God to play ẏ phiſition in curing all our diſeaſes. And foraſmuch as he doth now ſend vs to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, vnto whom he hath giuen this charge & office; let vs commend our ſelues vnto him. It is ſayd in the Prophet Eſay, that Chriſt at his comming Iſa.42.7. into the world ſhould make the blind to ſee, the deafe to heare, the lame to go vpright, and that he ſhould eaſe the dead. All theſe thinges hath he done viſibly, as is to be ſeene throughout all the hiſtorie of the Goſpel. But S. Matthew telleth vs that ẏ ſame tendeth to a higher purpoſe. Matt.8.17. For in healing the bodily diſeaſes, he ſheweth himſelf to be the ſpiritual phiſition of our ſoules, and ſaith that the ſame was done to the end that the ſaying which was ſpoken by the Prophet Eſay ſhould be accompliſhed, namely, that he did beare our infirmities. Now it is certaine that the Prophet ſpake not there neither of the feuer, nor of the burning agewe, nor of any other diſeaſe Iſa.53.4. that appertained to the body: he ſpeaketh of the diſeaſes of our ſoules. Seeing it is ſo, let vs then conclude that it is the peculiar office of Ieſus Chriſt to giue ſight to the blind, and to giue hearing to the deafe. And forſomuch as he hath the ſpirit of wiſedome and diſcretion in all fulneſſe, we muſt come directly to him to be inſtructed. Iſa.11.2. Wherefore let vs not doubt but that God is foreward and ready to receiue vs. In conſideration whereof let vs giue this honor to Ieſus Chriſt, to acknowledge him to be the light of the worlde, and the Phiſition of all our ſpirituall diſeaſes, & that he wil worke toward vs, according as his father Iohn.12.46. hath charged him. And to the intent wee ſhould not bee diſcouraged, Moſes doth expreſly vſe this word; to day, or this day. In deede he dooth reproue the people, for ſleeping ſo long a while. What, ſaith he? It is now fortie yeres ago ſince yͤ law was publiſhed & you deliuered out of yͤ land of Egypt: and in al theſe fortie yeeres, hath God preuailed any thing with you? Ye haue had a tabernacle, wherein to doe ſacrifice dayly: a nūber of miracles haue bin added thereto, yee haue bin fedde with Manna from heauen, you haue drunke of the water that iſſued out of the harde Rock: and yet for al that, you haue continued ſtil lyke beaſtes, yea and much woorſe: ſo as it may well ſeeme that yee haue made a diueliſh conſpiracie, to caſt off all the inſtructions that God gaue you; and lykewiſe all the chaſticementes, and puniſhmentes which hee hath ſent vppon you. Moſes therefore dooth iuſtly blame the people for continuing ſo long in their beaſtlyneſſe. But yet hee ceaſeth not to encourage them to returne vnto God, ſaying: Vnto this day. As if hee ſhoulde ſay: your GOD calleth you againe vnto him. For albeit that you haue perſeuered in your beaſtlyneſſe and ignorance; yet is he at this day ready to enlighten you, whenſoeuer you come to ſeeke in him the remedy that hee hath ſhewed you. The thing then which wee muſt doe, is, that hauing confeſſed our faultes paſt, wee doubt not, but that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt will reach vs his hand, and bee ready to reforme vs. Let vs take heed therefore, that wee ſhut not the gate, lyke folke that will needes throw themſelues wilfully into hell, but let vs commit our ſelues to our God. And ſeeing he ſetteth his worde before vs, let vs pray that it bee not lyke the ſeede that falleth among the ſtones, and among the thornes: but that he will ſo manure vs by his holy ſpirite, as we may be edifyed and eſtabliſhed in his feare and obedience, and that he will ſo worke for vs, as wee may haue occaſion to prayſe him in all our lyfe, and the very infidels may knowe that hee dwelleth among vs

Luke.8.6.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes: beſeeching him to voutſafe ſo to touch vs with them, as we may vnderſtand that there is nothing in vs but damnation: and that in the meane while wee may not ſeeke any ſtartingholes; but come offer our ſelues before him as our Iudge: and perceauing how wee be altogether accurſed, and haue none other remedie, but that hee through his infinite goodnes doe recouer vs and bring vs home againe vnto him. And that it may pleaſe him to reclayme vs, hauing obteyned pardon of our treſpaſſes, we may become newe creatures through the meanes of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, ſeeing hee hath expreſly ſent him of purpoſe to repleniſhe vs with all manner of ſpirituall good things. Therefore let not vs hinder him to finiſh his worke in vs, nor ſhut the gate againſt his grace: but rather ſet it open with all lowlyneſſe and feare. That it may pleaſe him to beſtowe this grace not onely vppon vs, but alſo vppon all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the vij. of April, 1556.

The CLXV. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the nine and twentith Chapter.

5 And I lead you for the ſpace of fourtie yeeres through the wilderneſſe, and your garments waxed not olde vpon you, neither did thy ſhoes weare vnder thy feete.

6 Alſo you haue not eaten any bread, nor drunke either wyne or beere: that you might know that I am the Lorde your God.

7 And ſo you came into this place: And Sehon the King of Heſebon, and Og the King of Baſan came forth againſt vs to battell, and we vanquiſhed them.

8 And wee haue taken their lande, and giuen it in poſſeſſion to the Rubenites and Gadites, and to halfe the Tribe of Manaſſes.

PRoceeding with the matter that was begunne yeſterday, Moſes dooth here declare vnto the people, that they were too dulheaded in that they conſidered not the goodneſſe of God, which they had ſeene, and inioyed by the ſpace of fortie yeres. If God ſhould nouriſh a man but the ſpace of a three or foure dayes, without one morſell of bread; it would ſeeme to bee aboue the ordinary courſe of nature. But behold, here was an infinite multitude of people nouriſhed with a kind of meate that had not bin common. God made it to raine downe Manna frō heauen, and the people were fedde with it; for they had alwayes ſo much as was needefull, and this miracle was ſo viſible, that it could not bee called in doubt. Yet notwithſtanding, the people continued ſtill hard hearted, howbeit, not for want of knowing that they receaued that food from God. If the Iewes had bin asked that queſtion, there was none of them which woulde not haue Exod.16.15 & 17.6. anſwered thereunto ſaying, Since the time that wee came into the wilderneſſe, God hath had pitie of vs, and ſuſteyned vs; we ſhoulde haue dyed through miſeries and hunger, had he not Num.20.11. cauſed Manna to raine downe from heauen. Alſo he cauſed water to iſſue out of the Rocke, that wee might haue whereof to drinke. Euery one would in deede haue confeſſed this. But yet notwithſtanding they ceaſed not to murmure againſt Moſes and Aaron, neither ceaſed they to haue longinges after their owne luſtes, ſaying Numb.11.6. that the Manna was nothing toothſome, and therefore they coulde not lyke of it. Then fell they to fornication, and ſedition, and gaue Numb.25.1. ouer themſelues to idolatrie and much filthines. Thus dooth it appeare that this people forgate GOD. The matter therefore conſiſteth not altogether in the hauing of ſome ſleight knowledge; but it muſt bee applyed to the right vſe, that is to ſay, that GOD bee honored among vs, that wee doe him homage for the benefites that hee beſtoweth on vs, and thereby beginne to put our truſt in him, and to haue recourſe vnto him. Let vs marke then, that whereas Moſes in this place reproueth the Iewes, for not knowing the fauour which GOD had done vnto them when hee fedde them with Manna in the wilderneſſe: hee meaneth not that they had giuen forth in ſpeech, that the Manna came not to them through the goodneſſe of God: but that they ſtill continued dulheaded, whatſoeuer they did confeſſe; for that they deſpiſed their God, and turned away from his worde, and ſhut their eyes, euen knowing the thinges as altogether apparant.

But as it was touched yeſterday, albeit that Moſes doe here ſpeake to the Iewes; yet dooth it alſo concerne vs. So then wee be condemned here before God, if wee profit not our ſelues by all the benefites which wee receiue at his hand, as wee may thereby bee induced and prouoked to honor and ſerue him, and to reſort for refuge to his goodneſſe, in ſuch wiſe as wee wander not in our vaine and fraile hopes, ne ſtay vppon this preſent worlde, ne preſume any thing vppon the creatures. Now therefore let euery of vs looke into himſelfe; howe doe wee make the giftes of GOD auaileable, by yeelding our ſelues pliable to ſerue him? Nay, it ſeemeth rather that when he hath made vs fat, wee take occaſion thereby to kicke againſt him: Deut.32.15. as it is ſaid hereafter in the ſong of Moſes. In the meane while it appeareth that wee vnderſtand nothing that may auaile vs, to leade vs in the right way. For whence commeth ſo much couetouſneſſe wherewith men be caryed away, ſo that ſome are vnſatiable in their greedineſſe, ſome doe burne in their ambition to attaine to credit, ſome lyke brute beaſtes doe ſeeke to fil their bellie, and otherſome are caryed headlong to filthineſſe and fornication? Thus are wee all lyke ſheepe ſtrayed from GOD. And whereof commeth this, but that wee neuer taſte of his goodneſſe, neither doe wee vnderſtand it a whitte, where as notwithſtanding, all our wits ſhould bee applyed thereto? When the worlde caryeth vs thus away, we make it manifeſt that wee haue ſmally profited by receiuing the benefites which God with his owne hand hath beſtowed vppon vs. Foraſmuch therefore as this people was at that time blamed by Moſes for the vnthankfulneſſe which you ſee here: let vs in theſe dayes caſt down our eyes and confeſſe, that although God hath mightily wrought toward vs, yet doe we continue as doted, and all our ſenſes bee as it were, dazeled by Sathan: Inſomuch that our eyes are blinde, & our eares deafe, and wee haue no vnderſtanding nor reaſon. If a man reply, alledging that God hath not done any ſuch miracle amongeſt vs as hee did amongeſt the Iewes when hee nouriſhed them with Manna from heauen, let vs mark wel that which is ſayd by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt in the ſixt chapter of Iohn: for the Iewes at that Iohn.6.32. time did take occaſion to deſpiſe the doctrine of the Goſpel, for that our Lorde Ieſus ſeemed not comparable to Moſes, becauſe hee alſo had not led the people through the wilderneſſe. But it is declared there, that hee hath brought vs a meate much more precious, and of more eſtimation than the Manna: and that it is no excuſe for vs, to ſay hee made no Manna to fall downe from heauen. And why ſo? For the ſonne of GOD is content not onely to feede our bodies, but bringeth vs alſo the ſpiritual food to nouriſh our ſoules: which is not ſuch a kinde of meate as Moſes did giue. For although the Prophet, (to magnifie the grace of God) doth Pſal.78.25. ſay that it was the bread of Angels, wherewith the people of olde time were fedde: yet is it nothing comparable to this foode which wee haue at this day. For what elſe is our life than the ſonne of GOD whoſe will it is that wee ſhould bee fedde with his owne ſubſtance? Seeing then that wee liue in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and that hee is giuen vnto vs, ſo as at this day wee are become fellowes with Angels, and bee partakers of his bodie, and bee made his members: there is no excuſe for vs if we doe not acknowledge ſo excellent and ineſtimable a benefit, to bee altogether enflamed with the loue of our GOD, to bee brought to his feare, and to truſt ſtedfaſtly in him. And therefore let vs marke well the compariſon that is made here betwixt the meat wherewith the fathers were fedde in the wilderneſſe, and the foode that is giuen vs at this day by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt.

Hauing ſpoken thus of the Manna, Moſes addeth: That the people did neither eate bread, nor drinke wine, or any other liquor that could make them drinken. That is to ſay, any mingled drinke, whereof much is made in the Eaſt countries, for there they haue excellent fruites, inſomuch that they make drinke of Dates and of ſuch lyke thinges: and all the compounded drinkes which they make, they call by one common name, Sicera. Nowe Moſes ſayth that there was no ſuch kinde of drinke vſed among the people: but that the water which iſſued out of the Rock flowed out euery where, and accompanied them by the way, in ſuch ſorte that they were compaſſed about with the maruaylous goodnes of God, by reaſon whereof they were driuen of neceſſitie to acknowledge that hee had ſtretched foorth his hande,as if he ſhoulde haue put the meate into their mouthes . That was the meaning of Moſes. And this ſerued to make them to haue the better vnderſtanding of the groſſe brutiſhnes which was in them , in that they gaue not God his due glorie . In deede when the earth bringeth foorth corne for our foode, the ſame ought to ſuffice to make vs to perceiue that God ſheweth himſelfe a father to vs. But becauſe wee bee accuſtomed to it, our heartes are hardened by it , and wee ſee that men bee not prouoked to yeelde thankes vnto God , when thinges followe all after one common rate. For this cauſe ought this circumſtance to bee well weyed, according to this ſaying of Moſes which wee haue ſeene heeretofore, Deut.8.17. When thou art come into the lande: albeit that thou ſhalt there eate bread; yet when thou haſt tilled the earth, and that it hath yeelded thee her encreaſe ; remember that thou waſt nouriſhed with Manna, and ſay not ; It is mine owne skill or mine owne hande that hath gotten mee this foode. Looke thou beare ſtill in mynde that thy God nouriſhed thee after a ſtrange manner for the ſpace of fourtie yeares, to the ende it ſhoulde remayne with thee for a perpetuall remembrance, and that thou ſhouldeſt acknowledge it thus: The ſame God that fedde mee in the wildernes , is hee that hath giuen mee this lande, and which maketh it to yeelde fruite, that I may bee nouriſhed thereby. Let vs marke well therefore howe it is not without cauſe, that Moſes ſayeth: Thou haſt eaten no bread, nor drunke wine nor other drinke , and yet waſt thou fedde . Nowe a man woulde thinke at the firſt ſight, that it were impoſſible for a man to liue without ordinarie foode , becauſe wee woulde alwayes tye the grace and power of GOD to theſe naturall meanes , wherewith hee is ſerued . It ſeemeth to vs that God cannot worke , but according to our vnderſtanding, and experience. But on the contrary ſide it is ſayde here, that the people hauing not a morſell of bread to eate, did not fayle for all that to liue in wilderneſſe. And why? For God hath meanes incomprehenſible whereby to ſuſteyne his creatures, as hee ſhewed manifeſtly at that tyme. In ſo much that if neede required, God would rather turne the ſtones into bread, than forſake his people. Alſo he could as well feede them with milke as with bread. To bee ſhort, let vs marke , that the power which proceedeth from the Spirite of GOD is the onely thing that mayntaineth and preſerueth vs in our ſtate : Pſal.104.30 as it is ſayde in the hundred and fourth Pſalme . Is not bread a dead or inſenſible thing ? Howe then coulde wee receiue life thereby, but that it is Gods pleaſure? Thus doeth Moſes here put the people in mynde of the miracle of the Manna, in ſuch ſort as hee had reported it afore . For if the people had incontinently founde Manna in the wilderneſſe, they woulde haue thought that the place had brought it foorth : but they pyned a whyle, and murmured againſt God. Then came the Manna, a verie vncouth and ſtrange thing. Whereby the people were conuinced, that God had regard of their neceſſitie. And when the Manna was fallen, euery man gathered his quantitie, and they diſtributed it all among them, ſo as nothing remayned, neither wanted there a grayne of the wonted meaſure. Whereby it appeareth, that the feeding of ſeuen hundred thouſande perſons with the Manna, yea and that in ſuch certeine & foreappoynted meaſure as if a man ſhoulde ſay, euery man ſhall haue as much as hee needeth, came not of haphazarde. On the other ſide, there fell none vppon the Sabboth day, but on the day before fell double quantitie . Wee ſee therefore that God diſtributed his Manna, like as when a mans children come about their father for their foode, and hee giueth euery of them his pittance in due meaſure and proportion. Againe , if they keepe the Manna beyonde the Saboth day , it rotted: ſo as they coulde not keepe it longer than was appoynted by God, to receiue thereof any ſuſtenance and nouriſhment. Wee ſee then that God vttered his power ſo many wayes , as the people ought not to haue douted, but that they were fedde by myracle, and beyonde the common courſe of nature. That is the thing which Moſes declareth heere, in ſaying, Thou diddeſt not eate any bread.

But let vs conſider well the reaſon which hee addeth here, That thou mighteſt knowe that I am the Lorde thy God. Here the people bee reprooued not onely of ouerſhameful leawdneſſe and ſtubbornneſſe, but alſo of vtter vnthankfulnes. If God vtter his heauenly power , ſo as it ſhewe it ſelfe apparant vnto vs ; wee bee touched and mooued with feare, to yeelde him reuerence: but yet by the way wee may alledge that hee maketh vs afrayde, and that wee bee aſtoniſhed at his glory, which is the cauſe why wee are not able to yeeld him the honor that he deſerueth: but when God ioyneth both in one , that is to ſay, when on the one ſide hee maketh vs to vnderſtand his infinite and ineſtimable power, and on the other ſide draweth vs vnto him gently & with fatherly goodneſſe , thereby ſhewing and witneſſing the loue that he beareth vnto vs: then is there no more excuſe, we bee dubble condemned. For (as I ſayde afore) the glorie of God, ought to make vs to ſtoope, and to yeelde our ſelues pliable vnto him ; and his goodnes ought to allure vs vnto him. So that vnleſſe we be too much blockiſh, we muſt needs be throughly mooued to loue our God. Now then if there be neither loue nor feare in vs after that God hath miniſtred al meanes & occaſions of them both vnto vs, is it not an vtter condemning of vs? That is the thing which Moſes meant, ſaying, It is a wonder that you do not otherwiſe knowe your God; ẏ is to ſay, That I am the Lord who haue ſhewed my ſelfe to bee your father & redeemer, in that I haue taken you into my keeping and protection, and haue not fayled you in any thing.

Nowe this that is heere ſpoken of Manna, wee muſt apply to all the benefites of Gods hande. What then is the thing which he intendeth in ſhewing himſelf thus bountiful towards vs? On the one ſide hee woulde that wee ſhould acknowledge him to bee our onely God, and that hee hath in himſelfe the fulneſſe of all good things, and that hee is our father, and that wee ſhoulde not gadde here and there as men commonly doe, who ſwaruing aſide and fleeting too and fro, doe dayly forge to themſelues newe gods. They will eaſily confeſſe that there is one ſoueraigne GOD; but yet for all that, they cannot fynde in their heartes to reſt wholly vppon him, they hang alwayes in dout and wauering, with what is this God? What maner of one is hee? Yee ſee here howe the intent of our God is to withdrawe vs from all outleaping imaginations, and to plant in vs a welgrounded and ſettled determination, that wee might ſay, O Lorde, thou art hee which made both heauen and earth; thou haſt all thinges in thy power, and vnder thy dominion; it is to thee that all honour is due; vnto thee belongeth all power. Thus much for that poynt.

Nowe muſt wee proceede to the ſecond; which is, that wee ſo acknowledge him to bee our father that, wee aſſure our ſelues of his loue, and that hee hath care of our ſaluation. For if wee bee at no further poynt, than to acknowledge him to bee God; it doeth but leaue vs alwayes in feare: and in verie deede the maieſtie of God doeth of it ſelfe terrifie vs: inſomuch that when as wee ſhoulde drawe neere vnto him, wee deuiſe to flee away, vntill the time that hee doeth aſſure vs of his fatherly goodneſſe. The chiefe poynt therefore is, that hauing attributed all power and ſtrength vnto him, wee vnderſtande alſo that hee hath choſen and admitted vs for his people, and that hee will ſo holde vs in his cuſtodie as wee may bee able to ſay, that our life is altogether bleſſed, for ſo much as hee hath ſeperated vs from the reſt of the worlde, and giuen vs priuiledge to call vppon him, and to haue our recourſe vnto him, and to truſt aſſuredly that hee will neuer forget vs, but that hee will furniſhe vs with all thinges that bee requiſite not onely for this earthly life, but alſo for our euerlaſting ſaluation. That then is the true knowledge of God; and if wee proceede not to that poynt, then are wee deafe, blynde, and ſenſeleſſe. Let vs euermore conclude, that vntill wee haue learned to honour our God; to ſubmitte our ſelues wholly vnto him; to doe homage to his maieſtie; and to repoſe all our contentment and reſt in his gracious goodneſſe and fatherly loue; ſo as wee ſtay our ſelues altogether thereuppon, aſſuring our ſelues that our ſaluation is ſure in him: if wee bee not at that poynt, it is a token that wee knowe nothing, and that wee bee ſtill miſerable beaſtes. Wee may well ſay this and that; but to what ende? All is but confuſion. That is the thing which wee haue to remember concerning this Text.

Nowe, that this doctrine might bee of the more authoritie, Moſes ſpeaketh in the name of GOD, howbeit that it is hee himſelfe that ſpeaketh; wherein there ſeemeth ſome contrarietie and looſeneſſe of matter. For hee ſayeth, I haue lead you through the Wilderneſſe, wee haue diſcomfited Sehon king of Heſebon, and Og king of Bazan. Thus doeth Moſes followe this ſentence, as it were by a threed, and ſayeth: I haue nouriſhed you in the wilderneſſe, and yet it was GOD that did it. Meant he to vſurpe the honour that partayned to GOD alone when hee ſayeth, We did diſcomfite thoſe kings? Surely the matter is all one in that Moſes ſpeaketh in his owne perſon, and in the meane while bringeth in GOD ſpeaking alſo: this doeth rather giue vs a profitable admonition, to wit, that although GOD ſpeake to vs by the mouthes of mortall men, whome hee ordayneth for that purpoſe; yet muſt not wee therefore diminiſh the authoritie of his worde. Let vs therefore honour God, and yeeld obedience to his worde, when it is declared vnto vs by men, as if wee ſawe him preſent among vs. That is the thing which Moſes meant. In very deede, hee did acknowledge himſelfe to bee a frayle man, and hee exempted not himſelfe from the reſt of Adams children, hee was a member of the Church. But yet for all that, foraſmuch as hee was ordeyned to bee a miniſter of GOD, and was to carry the worde in his name: hee meant to authoriſe the woorde, to the ende that it ſhoulde not bee lightly regarded, nor deſpiſed, vnder pretence that hee which ſpeaketh it is a creature. The thing then in effect, which wee haue to beare in mynde touching this place, is that when wee reade the thinges that were written by Moſes, and by the Prophets, and Apoſtles, thereby wee vnderſtande that GOD did rayſe vp men to bee as inſtrumentes and woorking tooles of his holy Spirite: and yet notwithſtanding that hee will not haue our faith turned away from him vnder that pretence, but rather that wee ſhoulde take holde of his power and maieſtie by his worde, and to yeelde due obedience thereunto. Thus ſhoulde wee practiſe this place.

Nowe after this, Moſes addeth; That their garmentes and apparell were not worne with oldneſſe, nor their ſhoes appaired for the ſpace of fourtie yeres. This ſerueth to aggrauate the peoples vnthankfulneſſe, to the ende they ſhoulde acknowledge themſelues the more guiltie, for not hauing acknowledged the goodneſſe of GOD which had appeared ſo many wayes. Let vs then conſider well, that the more GOD doeth multiply his benefites towardes vs, and the greater diuerſitie that there is of them, hee vſing it as a meane to inſtructe vs after many faſhions: ſo much the greater and more heynous is the offence, if wee profite not thereby.

True it is, that notwithſtanding, although God giue vs a taſte of his goodneſſe and power, but in ſome one only thing, yet is that ynough to condemne vs, if wee bee not edified thereby. But when GOD multiplyeth his goodneſſe by vttering his power to our eyes, to our eares, to our handes, and to our feete, ſo as the faulte is onely in the hardneſſe of our heartes, that wee bee not exerciſed in his benefites; it maketh our ſinne ſo much the greater. Wherefore let vs beare well in mynde the meaning of Moſes, that wee may the better doe our endeuour to conſider howe many wayes God hath made vs beholding vnto him, and howe greate the diuerſitie of his gracious doings is towards vs, as in deede the number of them is infinite. Let this (I ſay) the more inforce vs to ſharpen our wittes, that wee bee not dulheaded. Whileſt God ſheweth himſelfe to bee neere vs, let vs not goe farre from him, vnder colour that wee bee turned away alreadie: but let vs gather our wittes to vs, and conſider wel howe he worketh towardes vs. And notwithſtanding that our garmentes at this day bee not preſerued after that miraculous manner; yet let vs not omit to confeſſe alwayes that wee be cloathed through the free fauour of GOD, and that if hee did not furniſh vs with woll and all other thinges that ſerue to couer vs withall, there woulde bee ſuch a want, as wee ſhoulde dye of penurie and wretchedneſſe, and there woulde bee no meane to helpe it. Let vs acknowledge this (I ſay) and let vs profit our ſelues better thereby, than wee are wont to do.

Nowe Moſes addeth more ouer, that when the people came into the lande which was promiſed them, then Og king of Bazan, and Sehon king of Heſebon came foorth and gaue them battell, and were diſcomfited by the people. Moſes doeth heere againe lay foorth the goodneſſe of God, ſuch as hee had ſhewed it to that people. Yet therewithall hee reprooueth them ſtill for their leawdneſſe, and vnthankfulneſſe. This meeting of them came to paſſe contrary to the expectation of the people: for they did not looke that Og and Sehon ſhoulde haue ſhewed themſelues enimies: but rather that they woulde haue ſuffered the people to paſſe. Theſe then were newe enemies that prepared themſelues on the ſoudeine; whereat the people became abaſhed. And in very deede they had deſerued to bee quite deſtroyed: for there was too ſhameful diſtruſt to bee ſeene in them. When worde was brought them that it behooued them to goe to battell; beholde they were diſcomfited before they came at their enemies; & they conſidered not the power of this promiſe, namely, I will fight for you, you ſhall ſtande ſtill, and winne the victorie by my power. Although that God had offered to bee their captayne and guyde in the warre, and had giuen them ſo good proofe aforehande, as they ought not to haue douted at all: yet were they in ſuch perplexitie, that all was forlorne and paſt hope of recouerie with them.

Exod.23.20
Numb.14.9

Nowe we knowe that if men winne one battell, their heartes bee commonly puft vp, and they take better courage to goe forwarde: and that contrariwiſe, if they bee repulſed, then their heartes quayle. To the ende therefore that the Iewes ſhoulde not bee at that poynt, it behooued God to prouide a remedie for it, and in deede ſo did hee of his ineſtimable goodneſſe. Inſomuch that Moſes nowe vpbrayding them with it, ſayeth, That ouer and beſides that God had fedde them fourtie yeares in the wilderneſſe, without bread or wine; hee had alſo fought againſt their enimies; and it was the handy woorke of God, that they had vanquiſhed the two kinges, which came foorth againſt them, and had conquered their countryes, and ſettled there the two trybes of Ruben and Gad and the halfe Trybe of Manaſſes. By meanes whereof one quarter of their people or thereaboutes were prouyded of a ſufficient portion to dwell vppon. Sith it is ſo, ought they not to haue beene wakened, though they had beene aſleepe afore? Ought not this victorie to haue giuen them both courage and ſkill howe to honour their God, who had ſo ſhewed him ſelfe towardes them, and to haue cauſed them to put their truſt in him, ſeeing his grace had beene ſo viſible? But ſeeing they continue ſtill in their ſtubbornneſſe, doeth it not appeare that they bee vtterly paſt hope of recouerie? Therefore as nowe wee ſee the meaning of Moſes. And heereuppon let vs learne, that wee muſt acknowledge the goodneſſe of God, not onely in that hee doeth preſerue and nouriſh vs; but alſo in that he doeth ſet himſelfe againſt our enemies, and ſuffereth vs not to bee made a pray. When wee be in this wiſe defended by God, and that hee is our buckler and our fortreſſe; wee ought to magnifie his mightie power in that behalfe, and to acknowledge him to bee our God and father, and to yeelde him the prayſe that is due vnto him.

True it is that wee haue no ſuch victories as Moſes ſpeaketh of: howbeit, if we did wel conſider the hatred that a great many beare toward vs, and how eager they be to deuoure vs and ſwallowe vs vp: wee coulde not but confeſſe that they bee brydled by ſome ſecrete working of GOD, ſeeing wee bee preſerued all this whyle, euen without the power of man, and without any vanquiſhing of them with our owne handes. This is a marueylous goodneſſe; which it woulde behooue vs to perceiue, and which wee doe very ſlenderly acknowledge. Nowe there are alſo ghoſtly enimies, againſt whome wee bee defended. For what ſhoulde become of vs, if GOD ſhoulde not fight againſt Sathan, and againſt all the powers of hell? There needeth no greate fighting againſt vs; (as wee ſee too much by experience) any one temptation bee it neuer ſo light, maketh vs by and by to ſlip away.

And what woulde then become of vs when wee bee aſſayled on all ſides, and when the diuell inforceth him ſelfe to the vttermoſt to entrappe vs? If G O D did not helpe vs then, what woulde become of vs? Now then, let vs haue our wittes better wakened than wee haue had them heeretofore, that wee may perfectly perceiue howe many wayes G O D ſheweth him ſelfe to bee our protectour, and that it bee not caſt in our teethe, that wee bee deafe and blynde, and vtterly bereft of diſcretion and reaſon.

Nowe in the ende Moſes addeth; Therefore keepe the wordes of this couenant, to doe them, that thou maiſt proſper: and that in all things which thou doeſt, all may goe well with thee. Here wee perceiue, firſt that which was more largely ſpoken of yeſterday: to wit, that whereas Moſes had declared vnto the people, that God had not giuen them eyes, nor eares, nor reaſon: his ſo dooing was not to make them careleſſe, or to rocke them aſleepe, or to diminiſh the faulte whereof they were guiltie, but rather to driue them to ſeeke remedie where it was to be found. After that manner therefore muſt wee expound the doctrine that is contained in the holy ſcripture touching the fauour which God ſheweth vs, in that hee vouchſafeth to enlighten vs, & to refourme our heartes to the obeying of him, that hee may drawe vs vnto him. True it is that many ſcorners will profite but little by this doctrine, and that they will rather take occaſion by it to blaſpheme God, and to ſay: Very well, if I cannot doe aught that is auaylable, let God blame himſelfe. For ſeeing that hee hath not giuen mee the grace to doe better, what ſhall I doe? If I inforce my ſelfe to no purpoſe: to whome ſhoulde the fault bee imputed? There bee very many dogges, that doe thus barke againſt God. There bee others that fall faſt a ſleepe in their recheleſſeneſſe, ſaying: Seeing it is ſo, I will keepe on my courſe ſtill. If God liſt to amende mee, let him doe it: I can doe nothing, it is but labour loſt for mee to goe about it. Thus doe the wicked falſely abuſe the doctrine of God.

Moreouer there bee ſome that haue their eares ſo tickeliſh, that they cannot abide that wee ſhoulde ſyncerely and plainly preache that thing which is manifeſtly declared in the Scriptures; to wit, that it is the peculiar office of God, to inlighten vs, to giue vs eyes and reaſon, and to drawe vs vnto him: and that otherwiſe wee bee ſo vntowarde, that wee cannot applye our eares, or eyes to any thing elſe than to euill, but are holden in the bondage of Sathan, Epheſ.2.1. 2.Cor.3.5. ſo as wee bee not able to ſtirre one finger, nor to haue one good thought, vnleſſe it bee giuen vs from aboue. When wee ſpeake thus, there bee ſome that are ouer dayntie, which woulde fayne that this doctrine were buryed. And wherefore is it, that they profite ſo little thereby, and that they doe thus kicke againſt the Spirit of God? Is it not wiſedome ynough for vs to declare that which wee muſt vnderſtande by the holy Scripture? We heare what ſpeach God vſeth; namely, that in man there is no goodneſſe, nor vnderſtanding of the trueth; that hee is ſo corrupted through ſinne, that all the light which wee ſuppoſe our ſelues to haue is but meere ignorance: that our luſtes bee rebellious againſt God, that wee bee ſo dull, as we vnderſtande not what is profitable for our ſaluation; but doe drawe cleane backewarde. Let vs ſpeake ſimply on that manner, ſeeing that God doeth ſo teach vs. But yet let vs vnderſtande, to what ende this doctrine muſt bee referred. It is not to the ende that men ſhoulde paſſe their boundes, or not conſider what they are; & that they ſhoulde be paſt ſhame & mocke God, as though they were not guiltie of euil: but rather that knowing themſelues to bee men, (that is to ſay wretched creatures, vnprofitable to any good, and that this ſerueth not to make them careleſſe ſo as euerie man might ſay, I can doe nothing, let God worke if he wil) they ſhould flee to him for refuge, knowing that it is his proper office, to remedie our ſinnes, and defaultes. And therefore Saint Paule ſayeth, Let vs followe our ſaluation, euen with Phil.2.12. feare and carefulneſſe. And why? Becauſe God giueth the will, and the power to performe according to his owne free goodneſſe. Loe howe Saint Paule ſayeth, that it belongeth to G O D to reforme our heartes, that wee may will well: for of ourſelues we are not able to attaine thereunto, but are altogether giuen to euill, vntill G O D doe prepare vs. Haue wee once a good will? That is not all, for G O D muſt alſo giue vs the power to doe it. His doing therof then is, not for that he is bound thereunto, not for that we on our part be readie thereto, or haue any diſpoſition or deſert in vs: but of his owne free goodneſſe. Thereupon Saint Paule ſayeth, O is it meete that euerie man ſhould take his eaſe, and bee careleſſe? Nay, clean contrariwiſe he exhorteth vs to performe our ſaluation with feare and carefulneſſe. And ſeeing that wee can doe nothing, but it belongeth to God to giue vs the good that we want: lette the ſame teache vs to ſtoope, and to call vppon our G O D, and to ſeeke all our welfare in him. For otherwiſe, in what caſe were wee? Wee ſhoulde bee quickly ſurpriſed of Satan. That then is the thing which Moſes meaneth in that hee addeth for a concluſion, Keepe this commaundement. And whence then proceedeth this concluſion? Euen of this, that God had not yet giuen thẽ eyes and eares, and that hee had not giuen them an heart to vnderſtande. Moſes maketh an argument thereupon, and telleth the people that they muſt bethinke themſelues to returne vnto God, and to giue ouer them ſelues vnto him; and then ſhoulde they bee wel aſſured that God woulde ſo worke, that as many as ſought him in lowlineſſe, ſhould bee gouerned by his holy Spirite.

Moreouer, let vs mark wel, ẏ where it is ſayd, Thou ſhalt keepe the wordes of this couenant for to doe thẽ: Gods ſo ſaying vnto vs is not to ẏ intent we ſhoulde but only be talkers of the things which wee haue learned in his ſchoole, but alſo that wee ſhoulde endeuour to practiſe the doctrine which wee haue heard. Therefore, let not our reſorting to heare the worde bee to learne onely to talke thereof: but let vs alſo vnderſtande, that it muſt refourme our life, ſo as wee may ſhewe by our deedes that wee haue not loſt our time, and that the labour alſo which is taken for to teache vs, hath not beene beſtowed in waſte. After that manner ought wee to keepe the wordes of this couenant. And hee ſayeth moreouer, All the wordes, to the intent wee ſhoulde put the more indeuour thereunto. For wee take ſome worde at a glaunce, and thinke that to bee ſufficient. But God will haue vs to giue ſo attentiue eare, as nothing may eſcape vs; and in verie deede there is nothing ſuperfluous in his doctrine. Is it meete then that when God doeth teach vs, wee ſhoulde haue our eares otherwiſe occupyed, or wandering hither and thither? The thing which we haue to remember (as hath beene declared more at large alreadie) is not that God woulde haue vs to learne but ſome little piece, and to bee able to talke of it, and ſo to let it ſlippe away againe: but that wee ſhoulde in all poyntes and in all reſpects be wel aduiſed to yeeld him obedience. True it is, that this ſhall neuer bee doone perfectly, ſo long as wee bee in this worlde. Hee doeth no more but ſhewe vs the ende whereunto it behoooueth vs to tende. Let vs enforce our ſelues thereunto as much as is poſſible for vs; and if God doe ſupply our infirmities, wee bee ſo much the more bounde vnto him, for that hee beareth with vs. But yet howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, let vs not flatter our ſelues, nor fall aſleepe, vnder colour that wee bee weake yea and vtterly vnprofitable; but rather let that prouoke vs to goe farther, ſpecially ſeeing wee knowe, that GOD hath not ſet downe one piece of his lawe for one man, and another for another, but will haue vs all to bee all of one faith.

As touching this worde where it is ſayde, That thou maiſt proſper, or elſe that thou maiſt goe aright in all that thou doeſt. For this phraſe of ſpeeche ſignifieth two things, as is to bee ſeene through all other textes of the Scripture. For ſometime it ſignifieth to walke wiſely, or to behaue a mannes ſelfe diſcretely; and ſome times it ſignifieth to proſper: and both theſe may bee verie well agreeing to that which Moſes treateth of in this place. For it was firſt of all declared heere aboue, that when men will needes bee wiſe in their owne conceites, and forge vnto themſelues any newe rules to liue by, then they bee blynde wretches, and doe nothing but wander from the right way. In deede there is a ſhewe of reaſon when men giue themſelues ouer to their owne brayne, and ſaye, I fynde it good. They may well pleaſe themſelues, and alſo pretende ſome proofe of the pelting traſhe which they haue inuented; according as Saint Paul ſayeth, that the traditions of men haue Col,2,23. in them a kinde of wiſedome, yea, and a kynde of gloriouſneſſe, which is counted wiſedome in the opinion of the worlde; and yet euery whit of it is but meere deceyt. For whatſoeuer is counted high and excellent in the ſight of men, is abhomination in heauen, as it is ſayde Luke 16,15. in Luke: and ſo alſo hath Ieſus Chriſt the ſoueraigne Iudge pronounced ſentence thereof. Seeing then that the caſe ſtandeth ſo: let vs conſider that wee cannot walke wiſely, nor our life bee well ordered, vnleſſe it bee wholly and throughly conformable to the will of our God, ſo as wee gad not in and out at all aduenture, nor imagine that wee may doe what wee liſt, but onely giue eare to that which God ſayeth, and holde vs to the ſame, without ſwaruing eyther to the right hande or to the left. This I ſaye is our wiſedome and our reaſon: namely, that wee yeeld our ſelues teachable vnto God, and attempt not any thing of our owne motion and raſhneſſe: but holde our ſelues contented to obey Gods ordinance. And thereof alſo commeth all manner of proſperitie. For although men beare themſelues in hande, that they gayne much by following their owne imaginations and deuiſes; and that God alſo doe often times permit them to haue aduancement and furtherance for a time, of purpoſe to blinde them: yet doeth it fall out, that our end is euermore accurſed, when wee followe our owne deuyces, and giue the raynes of libertie to our luſtes.

God (as I haue ſayde afore) doeth in deede ſuffer the backeſlyders to haue ſucceſſe in their doings; but ſurely they ſee not howe it is the iuſt vengeance of God, and that Sathan doeth carrye them away, becauſe they flatter themſelues, whereuppon when they haue all things at will, they deſpiſe GOD and become vnrefourmable. I confeſſe it commeth ſo to paſſe: but woe to them which for a time haue any ſuch proſperitie: for their laughter muſt needes be turned to weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, as it is in like wiſe accurſed before God. Luk.6,28. Will wee then haue a true and a continuall happineſſe, and that God bleſſe all our labours and all that wee goe about? Let vs then continue in that which is ſpoken in this place, namely to ſubmit our ſelues wholly vnto God, and to attempt nothing but that which hee giueth vs leaue to doe. For when the worlde deemeth vs moſt miſerable, and our caſe ſeemes to goe altogither backewarde, and that GOD tryeth our patience many wayes, ſo as wee bee at the poynt to creepe out of the way into holes: then doth God make it manifeſt that there is none other happineſſe but to ſticke vnto him, and to yeelde obedience vnto his worde. This is the thing that Moſes meant, according to that which wee ſawe heere before, namely, that our Lorde promiſed his bleſſing to the Deut.28,1. people, if they holde them ſelues vnder the yoke that hee had layde vppon their necke.
Let vs therefore marke it well, that Satan muſt needes ſcatter vs, as often as wee thinke to bee of abilitie of our ſelues. For when wee ſhake off our God, and prouoke his wrath; then muſt hee make it apparant vnto vs,that all happineſſe lyeth onely in him; and then when wee be gone away from him, there remayneth nothing but al manner of miſerie; and although hee ſhewe it vs not at the firſt daſh, yet ſhall it appeare in the end. Let vs therefore giue place to our faith, that wee may alwayes ſticke faſt to that which is declared heere.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes,beſeeching him to vouchſafe to touch vs more and more to the quicke; that being beaten downe with true repentance,wee may wholy repaire vnto him, ſeeking to bee gouerned by his holy ſpirite: and that hee ſo refourme vs as we may no more liue after our wicked affectiōs, but that all manner gainſtryuing may bee quite diſplaced in vs: and that therewithall he make vs to feele the power of his grace, ſo as wee may ſtay vs altogither vpon the ſame, and not ceaſe to call vppon him, as vpon our father & ſauiour,in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, albeit that wee bee vnworthie,becauſe there are ſo many things in vs, to make vs as ſtraungers vnto him. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace,not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth,&c.

The CLXVI.Sermon which is the third vpon the nine and twentith Chapter.

9 You ſhall therefore keepe the words of this couenant & do them,that thou mayſt proſper in all that thou haſt to doe.

10 You be all ſtanding at this day before the face of the Lord your God,your heades of your Trybes,your Elders, your captaines, and all the men of Iſraell:

11 Alſo your children, your wiues,and thy ſtranger which is in thy campe,euē from the clyuer of thy wood,to the drawer of thy water.

12 That thou mighteſt enter into the couenant of the Lorde thy God,& into his othe,the which the Lord thy God couenanteth with thee this day.

13 That hee may eſtabliſh thee this day to bee his people, and he to bee thy God, according as hee hath ſpoken vnto thee,and as he hath ſworne to thy fathers Abraham,Iſaac & Iacob.

14 I make not this couenant and this othe with you onely:

15 But alſo with him that is heere preſent with vs this day before the Lorde our God: and in likewiſe with him that is not heere with vs this day.

16 For you know that wee dwelled in the lande of Egypt, and that wee haue paſſed through the middeſt of the people that wee haue gone by.

17 And you haue ſeene their abhominations & their images of wood & ſtone, of Siluer & gold,which were amongſt them.

18 That there ſhoulde not bee among you either man or woman,houſholde or Trybe that would this day turne away his heart from the Lorde our God,to ſerue the gods of thoſe people: and that there bee not among you any roote to bring foorth gall and wormewood.

WE haue declared heeretofore that Moſes in this place did not handle a cōmon doctrine: but that hee recited the ſolemne couenant ỹ was made the ſecond time when the people were in the lande of Moab. And that was, becauſe that all they which were at mount Horeb,were dead in the wilderneſſe. God therfore intending that the memorie of that ſolemne couenant which he had made,ſhould not be forgotten,cōmanded ỹ the people ſhould be bound again,& that the ſame ſhould be made throughly knowen,ſo as their poſteritie might vnderſtād that they were a holy people, as wee ſee that Ioſua did at his death. And then was the third ratification.For this cauſe it is ſayde, That they be there in the preſence of God. True it is,that as oft as the people came into the ſanctuarie to offer ſacrifice, God ſhewed them a token of his maieſtie, Ioſ.24.25.

ieſtie, whereby they were aſſured that they ſought him not in vaine, foraſmuch as his power was neere at hande vnto them. But Moſes taketh this word in another ſenſe, becauſe there had bin at that time as it were a ſolemne couenant, and a more familiar & certain ſetting forth of Gods glorie. In effect he ſignifieth, that it behoueth them to bring a certain vprightnes and ſoundnes of hart in entering into couenant with God to ſerue & honor him. It is no ieſting matter (ſaith he,) you haue not to deale with a mortall man: thinke not ẏ this thing vaniſheth into ẏ aire. For it is not ſome notary ẏ is to take your promiſe, neither is it ſome worldly ſolemnitie or ceremony wherewith you nowe deale: but it is God himſelfe which receiueth the bond which you enter into, & for his part he is faithfull, he wil not diſappoint them whom he reckeneth for his people. Therefore be wel aduiſed ẏ you bring not with you any diſloyalty or hypocriſie: but rather ſee that ye tremble before him which is heere preſent to receiue the proteſtation ẏ you make vnto him. Nowe we ſee what Moſes meaneth. It remaineth ẏ we apply this ſentence to our owne vſe. It is true that God doth not euery day paſſe ſuch couenant as that was. But yet ſo often as we be aſſembled in the name of our Matt. 18,20. Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, he is in the middeſt of vs, as he hath ſayde: and when the goſpell is preached vnto vs, it is aſmuch as if he ſpake to vs in his own perſon: and it is our duetie to be anſwerable againe that we ſeeke nothing but to be his, and to giue ouer ourſelues vnto him. Therfore if there be any counterfaiting, let vs not thinke to hide it; it muſt needes come to reckening. For whoſoeuer cometh not to him with right ſoundneſſe, doeth plainely mocke the ſonne of God. Wherefore lette vs conſider well that wee muſt not be double minded when wee come to a ſermon, leaſt Ieſus Chriſt blame vs for falſifying our faith and promiſe, by our wicked a buſing of his worde and by turning of a thing of ſuch holineſſe and maieſtie to a ieſt and ſcoffe. For when he calleth vs to be members of his bodie, and would haue vs to doe him homage, it is an excellent benefite, and ſuch a one as can not be ſufficiently eſteemed. And therefore ſo much the more diligent ought we to be to ſubdue ourſelues vnto him. To be ſhort, as often as wee goe to the Church, if we ſteppe but one ſtep thitherwarde, whenſoeuer the bell calleth vs: it ought to come to our remembraunce, that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt commeth thither himſelfe to receiue the obedience which we yeelde vnto him, and that wee come hither to make our muſters before him, thereby to ſhewe that wee be his people, yea and his verie body. Nowe as it importeth an infinite reioycing, when our Lorde Ieſus is neere vnto vs: ſo ought wee alſo to tremble before his royall maieſtie, which was giuen him of God his father, and to reſorte thither with a true and right meaning heart, as I haue tolde you afore. And Moſes ſpeaketh expreſſely both of men, women, litle children, gouernours, the Elders of the people, all the chiefe of the people, and the handie craftmen, euen from them that clyued the wood to them that carryed water. Alſo among them he comprehended the ſtraungers, which were vncircumciſed and dwelled amongeſt the people: and hee ſayeth that purpoſely to the intent that the great ones ſhoulde not thinke themſelues exempted from the common ſort. For the greateſt honour that kinges and princes haue, is to bee of the bodie of the Church, if they conſider it well. But certainely the Pompes of the worlde doe ſo blinde them that they woulde bee diuided from the reſt of men, and woulde haue a worlde by themſelues; ſo as they will not in any wiſe bowe to ſubmitte themſelues vnto God. Neuertheleſſe it is expreſſely ſhewed heere, that euerie high thing muſt ſtoope: and that when God vttereth himſelfe, then euen the higheſt ought to vnderſtande that they muſt ſhewe the way to others, and goe afore to prouoke them by their example. Thus much concerning that which Moſes ſpeaketh of Princes and Gouernours. And in likewiſe when Ioell exhorteth the people to Ioel.1.13. bewayle and lament their ſinnes, and to condemne themſelues, hee beginneth with them. Albeit that at the firſt ſight it may ſeeme to bee an vnſeemely thing, and to import a certaine ſhame that the great ones ſhoulde come to acknowledge themſelues offenders before GOD: yet becauſe that oftentimes they bee moſt faultie, the prophete ſayeth, that they muſt beginne the daunſe, and that the litle ones muſt followe their trace, when they ſee that there is none exempted, no not euen of them that bee in any authoritie. Let vs therefore vnderſtande, that Moſes in this place obſerued great order, in ſaying that the heades, and Rulers, and the greateſt of the people, were there to binde themſelues vnto GOD, that there myght bee no greateneſſe in this worlde which ſhoulde not ſtoope vnto his maieſtie.

And hee addeth, the women and children, that the people might knowe, howe there was no perſon which ſhoulde not be comprehended in that couenaunt. And foraſmuch as GOD did this fauour to their litle children to receiue them into the number of his people, it was meet that they ſhould be taught the Lawe of GOD as ſoone as they came to the age of vnderſtanding, to the intent they might knowe that they were that bleſſed ofſpring which GOD hadde adopted and choſen out of all the world. Deut.6.2. And heereuppon Moſes exhorteth the menne to haue care of their families, and to conſider that ſeeing all were dedicated vnto GOD, all ought to be referred to that ende, and it behooued men to yeelde him his due, and not to diſappoint him of his right: To bee ſhorte, husbandes were taught by this woorde to take paynes to guyde their wiues and children in ſuch order, as GOD might bee honoured in all the houſe, and that there might be one common agreement in the ſame. Yea, and hee ſayth that the verie ſtraungers which were vncircumciſed were to reſort thyther, notwithſtanding that they hadde not the marke of ſaluation. And wherefore? Becauſe God was to be honored in the Lande of Chanaan which he gaue to his people for an heritage. Albeeit then, that (to ſpeake properly) theſe ſtraungers were not of the bodie of the Church, yet behoued it them alſo to be bounde. To what end? Becauſe it was not meete that they ſhould haue leaue or libertie to mocke GOD, to vnhallow his Religion, and to peruert the order which he had appointed. That in effect was the meaning of Moſes.

Nowe muſt wee apply the ſame to our owne vſe. For we be neuer aſſembled or come together in the name of GOD, but we make proteſtation that wee be of his flocke. It is not enough that euerie man come thither for himſelfe: but the great ones muſt vnderſtande that they are to ſhewe the way to their inferiours, and vnderlinges. And they muſt conſider that they bee bounde with a ſtraiter bonde becauſe GOD hath ſet them on high to the intent they ſhould be as Lamps to giue light vnto others. And therefore if they doe not endeuour and enforce themſelues to diſcharge their dueties in that behalfe, it is certaine that they be doubble guiltie. Againe, euery man ought to bethinke him of his houſholde and family. They that will haue their wiues quiet and obedient vnto them, ought much rather to be diligent to cauſe them to ſerue GOD, and to take ſuch paynes ſo to rule their children, as God may be the chiefe father, husbande, and maſter of the houſe. That is the thing whereof we be admoniſhed heere. And if we doe not ſo, then looke how often we come into the Church, ſo manie witneſſinges haue we to reprooue and condemne vs before God, becauſe wee doe not appeare in his preſence with ſuch humilitie as is requiſite: but haue wickedly broken couenant with him.

And Moſes ſpeaketh expreſly of ſtraungers, to the intent we ſhould vnderſtande that when God hath giuen libertie to a Countrey, and ſtabliſhed the certaine order of his ſeruice there, no abhomination muſt bee committed in that place, by the inhabitours thereof. For if they ſay, my ſeruaunt holdeth not this religion: I graunt it lieth not in vs to conuert him to God at the firſt day: yet notwithſtanding, that it ſhoulde bee lawefull for him to ſkorne GOD and his worde, and to vſe ſuperſtitious wickedneſſe, and to bee diſobedient to the common rule; that is too great and vntollerable a diſorder. And therefore it is ſhewed vs heere in this Text, that if we couet to be ſerued of them that haue not yet the knowledge of GOD, we muſt keepe them in awe, and not ſuffer the name of God to be blaſphemed amongeſt vs, what ſoeuer excuſe be pretended. Thus much in effect haue we to beare in minde concerning theſe wordes of Moſes.

Nowe he ſpeaketh alſo of a Couenaunt and an othe, and ſheweth that the ſame were mutually giuen and taken betwixt GOD and the Iewes. In deede this matter hath beene partly handled heeretofore. But yet wee muſt remember, that when God maketh vs to paſſe any ſolemne bande with him; that firſt of all he bindeth himſelfe vnto vs. And it is a thing that ought to mollifie our heartes, though they were as harde as ſtones. What are wee that our Lorde ſhoulde ſtoope ſo lowe, as to enter into Couenaunt with vs, promiſing to bee our father and Sauiour, and to bee as it were a man that made a bargaine of a gift? God in deede requireth euerie of vs to conſecrate himſelfe vnto him, and to forſake all manner of libertie, and to become his ſubiectes, and to continue quiet vnder his gouernance; but ere he require this, he maketh a gift of himſelfe vnto vs. That is a matter which ought to rauiſh vs in ſuch wiſe, as wee ſhould make no difficultie fully to dedicate ourſelues to our GOD, ſeeing that hee himſelfe allureth vs thereunto by his owne example, and doeth guyde vs thither. And wee perceiue the ſame yet further as often as the worde of GOD is preached vnto vs: for that is the meſſage of Reconciliation (as Sainte Paule ſayeth) and God is come neere vnto vs, 2.Cor.5.18. to be our leader. Ieſus Chriſt ſayeth that hee was ſent vnto vs, to haue care of our ſaluation and to holde vs in his keeping and protection, and alſo to dwell in vs, that wee might liue in him. Seeing it is ſo, is it not a brutiſh blockiſhneſſe, if we come not with pure and right meaning affection, to giue ouer our ſelues vnto our GOD, who hath giuen vs the bleſſing and priuiledge to become our heritage, ſhewing thereby that he would bee poſſeſſed of vs? So then lette vs vnderſtande, that there is no excuſe for vs, if when wee come to heere the doctrine of the goſpell, we runne euerie of vs aſtray after his owne luſtes and affections, and behaue ourſelues diſorderly in our conuerſation, whereas in verie deede we ſhoulde conſider, that when we come from a ſermon, we bring ſuch a marke as can not be blotted out; that is to wit, that before GOD and in the preſence of his onely ſonne, we haue profeſſed to bee a holy people vnto him, and to be ſeparated from all manner of defilementes of this worlde: and that although it be not ſo tolde vs in expreſſe wordes, yet the order that GOD hath ſet in his church doeth of it ſelfe importe the ſame. Albeit therefore that thoſe wordes bee not vttered by mouth, yet doeth GOD holde vs faſt tyed to that bonde: namely, that wee ſhould be his heritage, and that he ſhould enioy vs quietly, as them whom hee hath taken to himſelfe to be of his houſhoulde. If it be demaunded, howe it is poſſible that men ſhoulde diſcharge themſelues of ſuch promiſe; it is eaſily aunſwered: namely, that we promiſe not any thing to our GOD as preſuming vppon our owne power, but receiue the grace which he offereth vnto vs, and thereuppon haue boldeneſſe and libertie to promiſe that we will be his people. And why ſo? For when GOD calleth vs vnto him, it is not to the ende that we ſhould bring vnto him that which we haue of nature, for that is altogether euill: but becauſe he receiueth vs with this condition, that hee will gouerne vs by his holy Spirite, and holde vs ſo in awe, as the rebelliouſnes of our fleſh ſhall be alayd by his grace, and wee ſo ſtrengthened as we may be able to withſtand all manner of temptations and encounters, and that he will ſo imprint his lawes in our heartes, according to his owne ſaying, as hee will cauſe Ier.31.33. vs to walke in his feare, by giuing vs the Spirite of holyneſſe, righteouſneſſe, and trueth. Loe after what manner GOD calleth vs vnto him.

Moreouer hee preſently addeth a promiſe, that he will ſtill beare with vs in our weakeneſſe, and in our ſinnes, ſo wee trauell ſtill towardes him. Inſomuch that although there be manie thinges amiſſe in vs, and wee come not to him with ſuch a perfection as is requiſite: yet will he handle vs with fatherly gentleneſſe, in ſuch wiſe as our ſinnes ſhall not bee imputed vnto vs. When we haue theſe two pointes, we may freely promiſe vnto GOD that we will be his people. And why? Becauſe wee ſtaye not vppon our owne freewill, neither preſume we to haue ſuch perfection, as we enter into account with him, to ſay, we be not beholding vnto him: but we preſuppoſe that he is euer mercifull vnto vs, to forgiue vs our ſinnes, and that he will ſuccour our infirmities and imperfections, holding vs faſt by his holy Spirite. Thus did the people of olde time make their othe. And ſo, wee ſee it is no point of raſhneſſe for vs to vowe vnto GOD in promiſing to ſerue him, ſo we haue an eye to that which hee ſetteth downe vnto vs on his part.

Moreouer we muſt remember, that GOD ſpeaketh firſt and wee doe followe. If a man ſhoulde beginne and putte foorth himſelfe to ſay, I promiſe my GOD to ſerue him in all pureneſſe of life, it were too greate an aduauncing of himſelfe. And why? For (as I haue already ſayde) there is nothing in vs but vtter corruption. And although GOD haue reformed vs, yet are we continually hindered from diſcharging vs of our duetie, ſo as wee doe not the tenth parte thereof, I meane euen them that haue profited beſt, which are moſt holy, and as it were litle Angelles. Moreouer when GOD hath once begunne, and hath ſayde vnto vs: No, I knowe you can doe nothing, and that you be creatures deſtitute of all goodneſſe, and that there is nothing in you but naughtineſſe and rebellion; howebeit foraſmuch as I accept you to be of my flocke, I promiſe to gouerne you with my Spirite. If we receiue that promiſe with aſſured faith, and accept the offer which GOD maketh vnto vs, wee may then ſay, Wel Lorde we come hither, not perſuming anie thing vppon our owne power, but beſeeching thee to gouerne vs: our onely deſire is that thou ſhouldeſt holde vs as captiues to make vs to foreſake our owne luſtes and affections, with all the frowardeneſſe and wickedneſſe of our owne nature. Nowe then we ſee that this othe is lawfull, and that there is no raſhneſſe nor preſumption in men.

The ſeconde point alſo is in like wiſe worthy to be well marked; that is to witte, that wee ought alwayes to confeſſe, that if GOD liſted to examine vs with extremitie, notwithſtanding that he haue giuen vs his grace, and ſtrengthened vs againſt Sathan and all the temptations of the worlde, yet ſhould wee be alwayes in his daunger, yea euen to our condemnation, were it not that hee did beare with vs. So then in making this promiſe, wee doe euermore remember that GOD will not enter into account with vs, to iudge vs according to our deſertes; but will vſe his infinite goodneſſe towarde vs, and haue pitie on our infirmities. Thus much as concerning the othe. In the Popedome, when Monkes, Nunnes, and Prieſts make their vowes, they ſweare to abſtaine from mariage, wherein they make open warre againſt GOD, and defie him. And why? Becauſe they take that vppon them which is not graunted them. They ſuppoſe that they ſhal be able to forebeare the remedie of mariage, and yet they can not tell whether GOD hath called them thereunto, or no: they haue not one worde of promiſe; God hath neuer required ſuch thinges of them. Therefore is it a diueliſhe arrogancie, and we ſee howe GOD hath puniſhed it. But it is a farre other matter, when we make no promiſe vnto GOD, but of that which he commaundeth, and which hee alloweth by his worde. Againe, wee goe not about it with opinion to bring it to paſſe by our owne power and abilitie; but becauſe hee hath tolde vs that hee will helpe our infirmities: forſomuch as wee bee euermore grounded vppon his free goodneſſe, whereof we may aſſure ourſelues in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Thus muſt we make our ſolemne othe before GOD. As in deede wee bee alreadie bounde vnto him in Baptiſme, vpon ſuch condition as he maketh vs his promiſe, and wee for our parte muſt make good the ſame when wee come to the age of knoweledge. Thus yee ſee howe our Lorde continueth firme and conſtant to gouerne vs as his people, and to holde vs in his keeping to the ende: and alſo that wee in like caſe ſhall behaue our ſelues quietly towardes him, ſo as hee may wholly enioy vs. That is the thing in effect which we haue to beare in mind concerning this text of Moſes.

Nowe hee ioyneth therewithall, that the people muſt enter into this couenaunt, that they may be adopted as the people of GOD. This worde Enter betokeneth that all men be of one condition, and that inſomuch as they be the children of Adam, they are all ſtraungers from GOD, and confuſedly mingled together: and that God drawing his Church to him, ſhouleth it out in ſuch ſorte, that it is as it were a newe worlde. True it is that we muſt dwell heere beneath amongeſt the vnbeleeuers: but yet neuertheleſſe if we be the children of God, after wee bee once ioyned vnto him, we muſt withdraw ourſelues from ſuch as hee forſaketh, and who alſo turn their backs vpon him. The thing the which Moſes ment chiefly by this worde Enter, is that we muſt be well aduiſed that wee reſt not vppon our firſt nature, if wee intende to bee taken for Gods children: but that wee muſt reſorte vnto him, not on our feete and legges, but with the heart carried out of the impedimentes of this worlde, in ſuch wiſe as wee faile not to dwell in the kingdome of heauen, as fellowes with the Angels and with all the ſaintes, notwithſtanding that we dwell in the middeſt of this world. Marke that for one point.

Nowe heerewithall, Moſes doeth giue the people to vnderſtande, that this couenaunt muſt be receiued with feruent affection, ſeeing that GOD did it not, but for the welfare of them that were there aſſembled. He ſayeth that the onely intent of GOD was, that Abrahams children ſhoulde bee his people, and that hee would holde them for his Church. Is there any thing more to bee deſired than that? It is ſayde in the three and thirtith Pſalme, Bleſſed is the people whoſe GOD is the euerlaſting God. That is all our felicitie and all our ioye. The onely thing wherein we may glorie, is that God ſheweth himſelfe to be our protectour, and that hee receiueth vs vnder the couering of his winges. Nowe if he offer himſelfe thereunto, and doe freely allure vs vnto him, requiring nothing but that we ſhould be his houſholde folke: ought we not to bee inflamed with ſo vehement deſire, that we ſhoulde forgette the worlde, and that nothing ſhoulde hinder vs from comming vnto him? Yes truely. The thing then which wee haue to remember concerning this Texte, is that wee bee dubble guyltie, when we will not bee prouoked to ſubmitte ourſelues to our GOD, ſeeing he ſeeketh neither profit nor aduauntage to himſelfe, nor wee are able to yeelde him any; but he would that we ſhoulde be his people for our owne welfare, and he hath no reſpect but to his owne goodneſſe and infinite mercie, by reaſon whereof, ſeeing vs to be curſed and forelorne, he accepteth vs to the inheritaunce of Saluation. Seeing then that our Lorde vſeth ſuch louing kindeneſſe towards vs, and powreth forth the treaſures of his goodneſſe vppon vs: bee not wee too leaude, if wee come not to him with all our heartes?

Moſes addeth moreouer, that GOD doeth this, for none other reſpect, but becauſe hee hadde ſo promiſed afore, And that he hadde erſt ſworne it to the holy Patriarkes, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob. Heere in effect Moſes meant to take away and to aboliſh all manner of imaginations, which the Iewes might conceiue of their owne deſertes and worthineſſe: for men are commonly giuen to beare themſelues in hande that GOD is much beholding to them; and that they haue the forehande of him, and that they were alreadie diſpoſed, and that he findeth in their perſons ſome thing to like of, or to loue them for. Forſomuch therefore as men are wonted to deceiue themſelues after that manner, by ſuppoſing that GOD hath founde them better than others when hee choſe them: heere Moſes cutteth off all temptations of Sathan, and ſheweth that GOD did not chooſe the Iewes, for that they hadde more vertue and nobleneſſe or worthyneſſe in them, than all the reſt of the worlde: but that his chooſing of them was altogether grounded vppon his owne free goodneſſe, becauſe he hadde ſo promiſed. And the ſame is common vnto vs all. And therefore lette vs learne, that if GOD doe noweadayes come neerer vnto vs than to a greate manie of other nations; it is not becauſe wee bee more worthie, or more able to receiue it than they be, which are deſtitute of his grace: but becauſe it is his good pleaſure ſo to do. Now therefore, let vs learne to put away all manner of pride and preſumption. When wee ſee that the Goſpell is preached vnto vs at this day, and that we haue ſome order in the Church: it is an ineſtimable benefite. But wherefore is it giuen vnto vs? It is not becauſe wee haue obtayned it by our owne trauayle, nor becauſe wee haue preuented the grace of GOD through our ſeruiceableneſſe; but for that it was his wil to ſhewe himſelfe kinde hearted towarde vs after this manner. Thus much haue we yet to beare in minde concerning this text.

Nowe finally Moſes addeth. Remember yourſelues (ſayeth he) for you haue ſeene the abhominations of Egypt, and alſo the Idolatry that is among all the heathen through whome you haue gone: therefore be not deceiued, neither lette there be either man or woman, houſhoulde or Tribe among you, that will turne away or ſlide backe, and forſake the euerlaſting your GOD, to giue ouer himſelfe vnto Idolles. Heere Moſes, to confirme the people in the obedience of faith, and to holde them vnder the yoke of good doctrine, doeth vſe an argument which at the firſt ſight might ſeeme ſtraunge: for wee bee eaſily thruſt out of the right way, when wee ſee the worlde corrupted and ouerthwart. Albeit that we haue ſome good motion, and be diſpoſed to ſerue GOD: yet notwithſtanding, as ſoone as any ſtumblingblocke comes in our way, by and by it maketh vs to turne heade, as we ſee examples thereof euery day: inſomuch that the man which is well inſtructed, and brought to a good point, runneth after the mockers of GOD, as ſoone as hee ſeeth them. Another which hath taſted of the trueth of the goſpell, beholdeth ſome fooliſhe toye, and ſome hypocrite ſeduceth him ſo as he is chaunged. Such lightneſſe and vnſtedfaſtneſſe doe wee ſee in many folke: and yet doeth Moſes take the ſame as a confirmation to make folke the better reſolued to ſerue GOD: as if he ſhould ſay, My friendes, you haue the lawe which is certaine and infallible vnto you, for it is the trueth of GOD which can not lye. Seeing that GOD hath reueiled himſelfe vnto you, it is reaſon good that you ſhould obſerue your faith and loyaltie towarde him. But if you ſay, Why ſo? Other people deale not after this manner; wee ſee many faſhions through the worlde, euerie nation hath his God by himſelfe; euerie man hath a religion after his owne fantaſie. Well might you be aſtoniſhed at theſe thinges (ſayeth Moſes) and well might you be offended at it, if it were newe vnto you. But you haue ſeene the abhominations of the Egyptians, you haue ſeene howe fooliſhly the heathen doe worſhippe their Idolles; and therefore if you be nowe moued and offended through the ſame, what excuſe is there? For Goddes meaning was to arme you and to furniſh you afore hande againſt theſe temptations, to the end you ſhould not be in daunger to ſlide backe. We haue a good and a profitable leſſon to gather out of this text, to witte, that the more we knowe ſuperſtition and Idolatrie, ſo much the more muſt wee eſchewe the ſame. And euen ſo it is of all other thinges that are repugnaunt to the will of GOD, namely, that we may be ſeduced by them by the ſodaine beholding of them, for want of knowing them aforehande: for wee haue not the diſcretion to keepe ourſelues from them; but are ſurpriſed for want of foreſight, by reaſon whereof wee periſh, and Satan doth foorthwith trap vs in his ginnes and ſnares. Let vs therefore marke, that when we once knowe the corruptions that bee contrarie to the ſeruice of GOD, and to the doctrine that is contayned in his woorde, wee muſt take ſo much the ſurer holde, that wee be not any whitte moued, but goe on forewarde ſtedfaſtly, following the way whereunto GOD hath called vs. As for example; If wee haue once knowen the wretchedneſſe that is among the Papiſtes, wherein wee ourſelues alſo haue beene plunged in time paſt, or if we haue ſeene the mockeries of GOD, which are there vſed, and the blaſphemies, and all the reſt of the traſh which the Papiſtes call the ſeruice of GOD: we can not but perceiue that they be the verie inuentions of the deuill, to turne vs away from the obedience of our GOD, to darken his maieſtie, to cauſe him to bee mocked, and to blind the wretched worlde. Wee haue beene ſufficiently warned thereof, yea and we haue hadde the experience thereof. Nowe if any of vs doe hence foorth turne away, and yeelde himſelfe againe to ſuch abhominations, is he not ſomuch the more vnfaithfull towardes GOD? See you not howe his wickedneſſe is ſo much the greater, ſeeing hee doth it not through ignoraunce, nor as a thing that is ſtraunge vnto him, but as one that is altogether ſaped in it? Let vs therefore vnderſtande that when GOD hath once made vs to perceiue the filthyneſſe and abhominations which are among the Idolaters, the ſame ought to ſettle vs the better, to obey him and to perſeuere in his holy calling. And I haue tolde you howe it is after the ſame manner in other vices. When GOD ſheweth vs any ſhamefulneſſe, as to bee giuen ouer to whooredome, or giueth vs examples of ſuch as are diſſolutely giuen to ſwearing, drunkenneſſe, or ſuch like thinges, and that theſe thinges bee ſo vilanous that they make vs aſhamed: if we bee ouercome of them, is not our damnation doubled? Yes ſurely. It is not therefore without cauſe, that Moſes ſayeth heere, You haue ſeene. For thereby hee ſheweth that wee may deſpiſe all that the worlde can doe; and that although the misbeleeuers bee more in number than wee, and doe vaunt themſelues to haue all the ſway, as concerning the worlde, ſo as wee bee but a litle handefull of people, and they triumph ouer vs: yet wee may defie them, becauſe wee doe knowe what difference there is betwixt the pure doctrine of the Goſpell, and all the abhominations and Idolatries that Sathan hath brought into the worlde: inſomuch that hauing the trueth of GOD once manifeſted vnto vs, we ought to ſtay vppon the ſame, we ought neuer to be ſhaken for anie thing that can happen vnto vs. Loe to what purpoſe this admonition ought to ſerue vs at this day. Nowe therefore when we looke vppon al the whole worlde, beholding the horrible diuiſions that be in the Popedome on the one ſide, and howe Mahomet the deceiuer hath ſeduced all his ſect, and thirdely howe blinde the wretched Iewes are: thereby we ought to be the better aſſured, that ſeeing our GOD hath called vs vnto him: and familiarly vttered his fauour towardes vs (according as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt doeth proteſt that he will call vs his friendes and not his ſeruauntes, becauſe the ſecretes of the kingdome of heauen are reuealed vnto vs by the Goſpell): we ought thereby to learne to apply the ſame to the certainetie of our fayth, and not to regarde though the faithleſſe doe ſooth themſelues and boaſt of their abhominations, becauſe we knowe well that GOD condemneth them altogether, and that wee ourſelues may be iudges thereof, foraſmuch as we haue the worde, whereby the worlde muſt bee iudged.

Iohn.15.15.

In dooing heereof, Moſes keepeth heere a certaine manner of proceeding which is worthey to bee noted, ſaying, That neither man, nor woman, houſe nor tribe, ought to turne away or goe to ſerue ſtraunge Goddes. Nowe he doeth vs to witte, that when miſchiefe is begunne, and a breache made, the deuill will finde meanes, to ſpreade his poyſon farther, if it be not preuented and remedyed in dewe time and place. When ſome one man ſteppeth vppe to peruert the pure religion, it ſeemeth at the firſt to be a matter of nothing: but if it be let ſlippe, that one man will leade a whole houſe, and that houſe will leade the Tribe, and ſo at the length the whole people is peruerted. So much the more vigilaunt therefore ſhoulde wee bee, ſpecially ſeeing that the Spirite of GOD doeth ſtirre vs vppe wee ought to bee moued to keepe good watch in this behalfe, for we cannot bee too diligent therein. Nowe then let vs not foreſlowe the redreſſe of any manner of corruption bee it neuer ſo ſmall. When wee ſee a wicked man that goeth about to infect the flocke, let him not be ſuffered: for if wee ſuffer him, the corruption will foorthwith ſpreade it ſelfe both into ſmal and greate. After one man followeth a whole houſe, and after a houſe goeth a whole kinred, and woulde GOD there were not ſo notable examples thereof. But what? Albeit that GOD doe ſhewe vs this by his worde, and although experience ought to make vs wiſe; yet is it not regarded. For men doe euermore beare with ſome euill or other, and ſuffer it to ſlippe. And why? It is not yet common (ſay they,) it is not yet hurtfull. No: but they foreſee not the daunger. Neuertheleſſe there is a daunger, which I pray GOD wee feele not in the ende too much to our coſt. So much the more therefore ought we to marke well this doctrine, where Moſes ſayeth not at the firſt daſhe, Looke that all the people ſwarue not, or that one Tribe giue not ouer it ſelfe to the ſuperſtitions and Idolatry of the heathen: but he beginneth at one man alone, and then ſetteth downe the woman, and after proceedeth to the whole houſe, and conſequently to all the people. For if there be but one ſerpent, he poyſoneth all thinges out of hande with his onely byting. And if Serpents can alſo infect the ayre with their verie breath: ſurely when men are poyſoned by Sathan, they carrie abroade ſo much the more venemous corruption: inſomuch that if anie bodie come nygh them be it neuer ſo litle, it is a wonder if they be not infected and marred with the very breath of them. Seeing then that wee haue made a couenaunt with our GOD according as hee hath gathered vs into his flocke, and doth dayly make it manifeſt to our eyes ẏ we be his church; let vs continue in that obedience, and let euerie of vs firſt of all watch ouer himſelfe, according as is ſeene heereafore, where it is ſayde, Take heed to your ſoules: let vs take good heed, Deut.4.9. for euery man is commanded of God to watch ouer his owne ſoule. But yet thereuppon wee muſt yet goe further, namely, to haue care of our neighbours, that euerie man helpe to amende them that haue doone amiſſe, without any bolſtering or bearing with the euill committed. Otherwiſe it is a wonder to ſee howe that after one man hath once infected his wife or familie, the corruption will ſpread it ſelfe ouer a whole people, in ſuch wiſe as the miſchiefe can not bee holpen any more becauſe it hath gotten ſo farre.

And Moſes doeth purpoſely vſe a ſimilitude, which is worthy to bee well weyed, where hee ſayeth; that there be not founde among you any roote that bringeth foorth woormwoode and gall. Whereby he warneth vs, that as often as Sathan ſendeth foorth his vnderlinges to turne vs away from GOD, and wicked people goe about to bring Religion into contempt, and to bring to paſſe that all thinges may be ſo turned vpſide downe and mingled together, as there may be nothing any where but vngodlyneſſe: it is all one as if there were ſome ſecrete roote, which afterwarde will ſprout foorth, and wee muſt needes be poyſoned with the fruite which it ſhall yeelde. Nowe therefore let vs in good time plucke it vppe. We ſee whereto this ſimilitude tendeth. Let vs adde thereto the exhortation which the Apoſtle maketh in the Epiſtle to the Hebrues; for he hath reſpect to this text Hebr.12.15. and expoundeth it, and applyeth it to our inſtruction. Foraſmuch (ſayeth he) as the deſpiſers of GOD, which goe about to ſeduce the people, and to turne them out of the right way, be bitter rootes, we muſt not looke ẏ they ſhall yeelde foorth good fruite. For we can not eaſily plucke vppe an euill weede, when it is ouerſpred ſo as it hath choaked and corrupted the good ſeede, becauſe it was not taken in time. Lette vs therefore bee diligent and carefull to plucke vp euill rootes: and when wee ſee any bitter weede, although it beare no fruite, yet let it be looked vnto in due time. For GOD worketh a great miracle, when hee deliuereth his people, at ſuch time as they be careleſſe. And woulde GOD that the examples thereof were not ſo common in the worlde as wee ſee them. For then would not men giue ſo much libertie to the wicked, nor ſuffer them to preuaile ſo mightily. When they haue infected al; then men ſigh and lament, but in the meane while they ſeeke no meane to prouide for it. So then let vs marke well, that (as the Apoſtle telleth vs) wee muſt not bee careleſſe and ſlowe in this behalfe: but as ſoone as we ſee any leaudediſpoſed folke which obey not the direction of GOD, ne yeelde any reuerence to his worde: let them be cutte off. If we ſee them ſow abroad wicked matters as cockle or darnell, to make men to ſwarue which were in the good way; let vs reſiſt them with all our power, and let them ẏ be in authoritie bende all their force and diligence thereunto, and let euery man in likewiſe apply himſelfe to further the ſame, ſo as we may be the true ſeede of GOD, and continue in the puritie of his Goſpell, and bring him foorth ſuch fruite, as he may be glorified throughout all our life.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, beſeeching him to make vs ſo to feele them more and more, as wee may bee touched with true repentaunce, and we come vnto him, not onely to obtaine foregiueneſſe of the ſinnes that wee haue committed, but alſo to bee gouerned by his holy Spirite, and to bee kept in ſuch ſorte by him, that albeit Sathan fight againſt vs, yet neuertheleſſe wee may continue in the ſeruice of him which hath once called vs, and purchaſed vs for himſelfe. And therfore let vs al ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the ix. of April. 1556.

The CLxvii. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the nine & twentith Chapter.

that there bee not among you any roote that bringeth foorth Gall and woormewood:

19 And ſo it come to paſſe that ſome man hearing the woordes of this curſe, doe bleſſe himſelfe in his heart, ſaying: I ſhall haue peace, notwithſtanding that I walke after the purpoſe of mine owne heart, and ſo put drunkenneſſe vnto thirſt.

20 The Lorde will not agree to forgiue him: for then the wrath and Ielozie of the Lord will kindle againſt that man, and heape vpon him all the Curſes that are written in this booke.

21 And the Lorde wil wype out the name of him from vnder the heauen, and the Lorde will ſhoole him out from all the Trybes of Iſraell to miſcheefe, according to all the Curſes of the Couenaunt that is written in the booke of this Lawe.

VEe beganne yeſterday to declare, wherefore Moſes dyd put foorth this ſimilitude of the euill roote, which bringeth forth bitterneſſe and gal. For we do not perceiue at the firſt ſight, when the diuel beginneth to worke in vs, vntill wee be corrupted and marred, yea and that the thinges bee paſt remedie, which at the firſt might haue bin taken away. Therefore wee cannot be too circumſpect in keeping ourſelues, ſeeing that of nature wee bee inclined to euill, and we bee ſo fraile, that ere wee bee aware, the diuell taketh poſſeſſion, and then euery man infecteth his neighbour, and ſo the corruption is ſpred throughout all. Heere hee ſheweth the principall daunger that men ought to beware of; which is, that they become not hard hearted againſt the threateninges of GOD. For it muſt needs be that we are altogether ſenſeleſſe, when wee feele no more any remorſe or griefe of conſcience, but rather doe ſpyte God through diueliſh pride. For men to ouerſhoote themſelues, it is too ordinarie a matter; to be ſlowe when they are driuen and pricked foreward, is yet a common fault; againe, not to beleeue good counſell at the firſt, is a thing to bee ſeene dayly. But if a man become a ſcorner and take the bridle in the teeth to dally with God, perſwading himſelfe that all the threatenings, which are layde before him, bee nothing, and that all is but a fable whatſoeuer is ſayde concerning the iudgement of GOD, ſo as hee taketh leaue to doe what hee liſteth, and will bee ordered by no meanes, but followeth his owne ſwindge lyke a horſe that will not bee tamed, and reſiſteth all that may bee doone vnto him; when a man ouerſhooteth himſelfe ſo farre, it muſt needes be that hee is like a deſperate creature. Thus yee ſee whereof Moſes admoniſheth the people in this place. Let a man beware (ſayeth hee) that when hee heareth the curſes which are ſet foorth in the Lawe, hee ſay not? Well, yet ſhall I not fayle to haue peace ſtill although I giue my ſelfe ouer to all mine owne wayes, and followe my luſtes. In deede GOD ſaieth that I ſhall bee accurſed, but I ſee it not, I will abide the hazard come what will: in the meane while I will not vexe my ſelfe with melancholy, I will make meerie, come what come will. When men ieſt thus deſperately, they bee vndoone, and they become altogether vnreformable.

Nowe firſt of all let vs marke howe it is ſayde heere, that when wee haue heard the curſes that are contayned in the Lawe, it is a token of a ſpitefull and bitter minde to ſay; Tuſh I care not a whit what God ſpeaketh. Albeit that we were not taught by any doctrine: yet haue wee a witneſſe within vs which ſpeaketh vnto vs, namely our owne conſcience, whereby euerie of vs is reprooued, and driuen to vnderſtand that God is our iudge, yea, euen when wee bee abſolued by men, as they bee which eſcape by bribes, preſentes, fauour, ſleightes and ſuttelties; who being abſolued by men, faile not to beare their condemnation ſtill about them in their owne hearts. But if when God ſheweth vnto vs that we muſt come to an account, and wakeneth vs vp, by confirming and ratifying that which wee doe alreadie knowe and perceiue, concerning the difference betwixt good and euill: if wee then continue ſtill hardhearted; is it not to bee ſayd that wee bee as good as bewitched by Sathan, and that hee hath bereft vs of all vnderſtanding and reaſon? To bee ſhorte, let vs learne to walke in feare and carefulneſſe, whenſoeuer our Lorde ſpeaketh vnto vs, and quickeneth vs vp by good warnings and admoniſhmentes. Let vs beware that wee ſtand not ſtubbornly againſt him: for wee ſee what they gaine in the ende which bee ſo cankerhearted againſt GOD. Therewithall let vs call to minde that which I haue ſayde alreadie; namely that the hygheſt poynt of all wickedneſſe is when men bleſſe themſelues in their heartes, that is to ſay, when they beare themſelues in hand, ẏ all ſhal goe well with them notwithſtanding that God doe threaten to bee their enemie, and to make them to feele his wrath. And this is written more at large by the Prophet Eſay. For there GOD complayneth of ſuch as ſcorned the Prophetes; for there were in thoſe dayes the lyke ſcorners that are to bee ſeene in theſe dayes. Tuſh (ſay they) let vs make good cheere, wee ſhall die to morrowe. Iſa.22.13. They had made that ſaying a common prouerb. Therefore when the Prophetes perceiued that all things were ſo far out of order as was horrible to ſee, and that iniquitie was become lyke a waterfloud, ſo as men kindled the wrath of God more and more: they dyd not ceaſe to crie: Wo, wo, it is impoſſible that GOD ſhould forbeare vs or ſuffer vs any longer: he hath vſed ſo long patience, that now wee muſt needes periſh all of vs. They hearde nothing but dreadfull threatenings. When the Prophet ſpake to them, it was not to qualifie the plagues, but as it were to ſay, you doe not yet heare the hundredth part of the puniſhmentes that ſhall come vpon you: and for ſo much as you make none account thereof, but ſhew ſuch hardneſſe of heart and ſtubbornneſſe againſt GOD and his Prophetes, you muſt bee all confounded. Theſe Galantes ſcoffed at ſuch threateninges, ſaying: Loe, wee muſt dye to morrow, let vs therefore make good cheere to day. Loe at what poynt they were. Would GOD that ſuch ſcorning of GOD and his worde were not yet ſtill in the world. But our Lorde addeth, ſaying, I haue called you to ſackcloth and Aſhes: I required nothing but your repentaunce and amendment, Iſa.22.12. that yee might obtaine mercie. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, I am deſirous to ſoften the curſed hardneſſe and ſtubbornneſſe of your heartes; and you hold on ſtill, and ſcoffe out all thinges. But as truely as I am God (ſayth hee) this ſinne of yours ſhall neuer bee blotted out. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, neuer thinke mee to bee GOD; nor neuer take mee to bee the Iudge of the worlde, if euer this ſinne of yours bee forgiuen you. It is an offence not pardonable, when men doe ſo harden themſelues againſt mee. Soothly, it is a threatening that ſhould make vs to tremble, and cauſe our hayre to ſtand on end, when GOD ſweareth by his name, and proteſteth that he will be no more knowen for God, if he puniſh not thoſe ſcorners with all extremitie, which will not bow their neckes when hee would haue them to feele their ſinnes, that they might repent.

This ſentence anſwereth to the Text of Moſes where he ſayeth, Beware that none of you hauing hearde the curſes which bee ſet downe heere, doe bleſſe himſelfe in his heart, and that he ſay not: God will eaſily forgiue mee: and thereupon ſoadeth himſelfe with hope of eaſe, notwithſtanding that GOD denounce warre againſt him. Now therefore as ſoone as GOD ſummoneth vs to his iudgement, let vs learne to enter into our ſelues, and let euerie one of vs make his owne inditement, and let vs looke aforehand a farre off at the curſes whereof hee ſpeaketh. Albeit that they doe not appeare at the firſt, yet let vs behold them by faith, like as it is ſaid, That Noe ſawe the floud aforehand when all was at reſt, Gen. 6.3 and when men were moſt drowned in their delightes: for the world was faire and pleaſant, and it ſeemed that all ſhould goe well. But Noe in the meane whyle ſtretched out his ſight aboue a hundred yeeres before him; euen ſixe ſcore yeeres aforehand did hee beholde that which God had ſpoken. And euen ſo muſt wee doe. Let vs not tarie till GOD ſmite vpon vs with mayne ſtrokes: but as ſoone as we haue offended him, let vs by and by looke into his lawe what our ſtate and condition is. And forſomuch as wee ſee there how God declareth that he will puniſh the deſpiſers of his Maieſtie, and all ſuch as ſtriue againſt his worde; threatening ſpecially all adulterers and whooremongers, all drunkardes and blaſphemers, and condemning all extortion, deceyte, periurie and enuie: let vs beware that none of vs promiſe himſelfe peace and reſt, whyleſt he ſeeth that God exhorteth to repentaunce. For it muſt needes come to paſſe, (as he ſayeth in another place,) that when they ſay, Peace and all is ſafe, then ſhall they 1.Theſſ.5. bee ſuddenly confounded. Certainely it is a monſtruous matter and againſt nature, that men can thinke themſelues bleſſed, when they heare that GOD doeth curſe them. And heereby wee ſee howe frowarde wee are, if GOD reſtraine vs not: yea and wee ſee howe it is a common and an ordinarie faulte. For GODS threateninges bee not ſecrete, they ſound continually, and wee haue our eares beaten with them; and yet who is hee that is mooued at them? True it is that with our mouthes wee vtter not the woordes that are ſet downe heere: but yet wee neuer haue any ſuch obedience, neyther are wee euer ſo beaten downe with our ſinnes, as to bee afrayde of GODS threateninges: Nay, wee rather defye him and all his power; and to our ſeeming, all the afflictions wherewith wee bee threatened are nothing, vntill wee feele them. So much the more therefore ought wee bee warned to looke to our ſelues, or elſe wee ſhall haue our eyes and our ſenſes ſo blynded, that wee ſhall not vnderſtande any thing of all that is tolde vs. Wherefore let vs benefite our ſelues by the leſſon that Salomon giueth vs, where hee ſayeth, Bleſſed is the man that is afrayde in his heart; Prou.28.14 to the intent wee bee not deſirous to cheere vp our ſelues, as it were in deſpite of God.

Alſo wee haue heereuppon to marke that which is ſayd of the vndertaking or double dealing of the heart. This word comprehendeth all thinges that men forge of their owne fantaſie. Soothly the imagination of man is a dreadfull dungeon; and when wee be once plunged into it, there is no way to get out agayne; and yet there is none of vs all but hee ſeeketh to followe the imaginations of his owne hearte. Seeing therefore that on the one ſide, when a man giueth himſelfe lybertie to doe whatſoeuer hee hath deuiſed in his owne mynde, hee plundgeth himſelfe as in the gulfe of hell, and yet neuertheleſſe euery one of vs is drawen and driuen that way: let vs haue ſo much the better conſideration of this that is ſpoken heere. Nowe Moſes intendeth to make men aſhamed, by ſetting before them the preſumings of their hearts; Deut.30.11. together with the Rule that God hath giuen them. Wee cannot doe amiſſe in following the will of God, as heereafter wee ſhall ſee more at length: it is a ready way; and hee doeth euermore reache vs his hande, wee doe ſee whither hee calleth vs. The way is certayne and infallible, when we obey GOD. Nowe if wee notwithſtanding, doe wittingly lyke better to blinde our ſelues with our owne vaine fantaſies, and to intangle our ſelues in them, ſo as wee wote not which way to turne, but wee bee carryed hither and thither, and one miſcheefe haleth an other, without ende or meaſure; muſt it not needes bee, that wee bee too much beewitched? So much the more therefore behooueth it vs to weye well this woorde of Moſes where he ſpeaketh of the vndertakinges of the heart.

Moreouer, men followe the deuiſes of their owne heartes in two manners; the one is when they forge vnto thẽſelues a Religion after their own lyking, and thereupon wil needs ſerue God after their owne fantaſie; or elſe when they ſooth themſelues in their ſinnes, although they haue them laide open to their faces. The Idolaters thinke not that they doe yll, when they bring their owne pelting traſh vnto God; as for example when they ſet vp a puppet and kneele downe before it, they thinke that GOD is well honoured. Agayne as wee ſee amongeſt the Papiſtes, howe they trotte on Pilgrimage, and cauſe Maſſe to bee ſung, and babble before an Aultar, and carie Candelles, and faſt ſome certaine dayes; when the Idolaters doe thus torment themſelues in vaine, it ſeemeth to them that all is well, and that it is acceptable to GOD, and that he doeth them wrong, if hee take it not in good part. And yet in the meane whyle they bee but inuentions of their owne braine, ſuch as God vtterly miſlyketh and condemneth. And therefore let vs marke well that Moſes in this place meant chiefely to plucke men away from this kinde of madneſſe, which is in all Idolaters, in that they would ſerue God after their owne faſhion, hauing no reſpect to that which he hath commaunded by his worde. Albeit then that at the firſt they doe not perceiue their leawdneſſe; yet is it not to bee ſayd that they be cleare, neither can it ſerue them for an excuſe. Marke that for one point.

Nowe if they bee to bee condemned, which thinke themſelues to doe their duetie, and haue a good intent, as they terme it: what ſhall become of ſuch as weetingly prouoke the wrath of God? They knowe well it is nought, and that it ſhall not ſcape vnpuniſhed, and yet neuertheleſſe they ceaſe not to harden their heartes. And wherefore? For their luſt doeth driue them thereto, which boyleth ſo in them as they muſt needes accompliſh that which they haue imagined. Now when men do thus harden themſelues againſt God, notwithſtanding that their conſcience doeth reproue them, and they knowe that they doe yll: what is to bee ſaide to it? Let vs learne therefore to behaue our ſelues well in theſe two pointes, and generally let vs not fight againſt GOD; but when our heart draweth vs eyther one way or other, let vs vnderſtand that all that euer proceedeth from our ſelues, is contrarie to the rule that our Lord hath deliuered vs: and let vs knowe that there is none other meane to diſcerne what is good and what is euill, but by ſubmitting our ſelues to the doctrine by the which our Lord holdeth all our ſenſes, thoughtes and affections captiue. That is the effect of the matter which we haue to beare away in this place.

Nowe Moſes addeth another ſimilitude, ſaying, That ſuch folke doe mingle drunkenneſſe and wickedneſſe together. The wordes import as much as if it were ſayd, that they do mingle drunkennes and thirſt together: but wee will take it as it is here ſet downe. In deede this place hath bin expounded diuerſe wayes: in ſo much that ſome to play the fine headed fellowes, haue ſaid that by the phraſe which hath yͤ word Thirſt or Thirſtie, Moſes meant that part of the ſoule, which yeeldeth it ſelfe to be gouerned by reaſon, for as much as it is deſirous of knowledge and ſeeketh after it: and yet neuertheleſſe doeth intermeddle with the other which maketh hir drunken with hir owne voluptuouſnes and delightes, and hath neither meaſure nor ſtay of it ſelfe. But theſe be vaine ſpeculations which we muſt let alone: neither had I ſpoken of them, but to yͤ ende yͭ none ſhold deceiue themſelues w̃ them. Let vs come to the playne meaning of Moſes. We haue ſeene heere afore the matter which he treateth of in this place; and no doubt, but this ſerueth as an expoſition, for the better declaring and confirming of that which we haue ſeene alreadie. By the Thirſtie therefore or by Thirſt, hee meaneth the appetite of man which is alwayes hungrie: and I meane not the appetite of eating and drinking, but the appetite of all our luſtes. Yee ſee then howe man in his owne nature is as it were thirſtie, ſo as wee bee alwayes ſharpe ſet, and can not bee ſatisfied by any maner of meanes; for as ſoone as we haue beene tempted with one wiſhe, by and by wee come to another, and there is no man but he is vexed with diuerſe chaunges and ſortes of thirſtineſſe. For albeit that vices raigne more in ſome than in other ſome;yet notwithſtanding the man that is giuen to couetouſneſſe miſſeth not to haue other luſtes, in ſo much that couetouſnes is not 1.Tim.6.10. without cauſe counted the roote of all miſchief. Likewiſe a whoremonger is caried away by his affections, and wicked luſtes,and yet hath he other vices alſo therewithall. When we haue well examined the nature of man, it will bee founde that Moſes could not better compare them than to ſuch as bee thirſtie. And why ſo? For they are neuer at reſt, they bee neuer contented, they are alwayes ſharpe ſet, and they bee euermore eagre of their deſires. Hee ſpeaketh it expreſly in the Feminine gender and ſayeth, Shee that is thirſtie, bycauſe the preſent caſe concerneth the luſt of man. Hee putteth it in the perſon of a woman, but yet neuertheleſſe we ſee what hee meaneth. And wherefore doeth hee put in Drunkenneſſe? Bycauſe men be ſo farre out of order, that they ſeeme to haue no diſcretion at all: and when they bee once a little diſguiſed, anon they become ſtarke drunken, in ſo much that they ſeeke prouocations to drinke ſtill, and to guzzle wine,and to ſwill it in more and more. Ye ſee that when a man is once out of the way, he layeth on drinke ſtill, and the more he drinketh ŷ more he may(as they ſay)and experience ſheweth it. Now then, when man is accuſtomed and throughly nuſled in drunkenneſſe, hee becommeth a wineſacke, ſo that although hee powre in neuer ſo much wyne, yet is he neuer filled, but doeth ſtill gulp it vp without ende of drinking. Wee ſee theſe great drunkardes, how all men woonder at them, and it is a maruailous matter where they beſtowe the drinke which they take in. It ſeemeth vnpoſſible that any ſtomacke ſhould holde it. Againe wee ſee that they are paſt all ſhame, and at all their venting places doe caſt out the wyne which they had taken in. And be they once emptie, they be as readie to drinke againe as euer they were: and when they ſauour not the wine, then muſt they haue new deuiſes to procure appetite. If ŷ wyne miſlike them,though they be ready to burſt,yet muſt they eate ſome ſtraunge meate, as either a Carbonado,or the verie ſnuffe of a Candle, or a pickled hering, and I wote not what elſe; ſo that to all ſeeming they meane rather to murther themſelues,than to haue any honeſtie in them.

Nowe let vs looke to the courſe of the Text, and wee ſhall finde that this ſimilitude is ſo fit, that Moſes coulde not haue ſet foorth the luſtes of men better than by comparing them to men ouerſurfeited with drinke: for it is certaine that wee ſhall neuer bee ſo well ſtayed in our affections, but that we finde this in them, I meane vntill God hath reformed vs by his holy ſpirit. In deede we ſee ſome haue more honeſtie in them, and which leade not a diſſolute life, neither in whoredome, nor in drunkenneſſe, nor in ſwearing,nor in theft, nor in any hurtfull thing. Well then, in theſe there is ſome ſhewe of vertue,but yet it is impoſſible that a man ſhould not be vncleane in his heart,vntill God doe gouerne him: for our nature muſt needes bee euermore ſinnefull: and that which is ſayde in Geneſis muſt Gen.6.5. needes be accompliſhed in vs: namely that all that euer the heart of man doeth imagine,is froward and wicked. Now ſeeing it is ſo, Moſes telleth vs heere,that it is ouer much for vs to haue this curſed inclination by nature; and therefore wee muſt fight againſt our luſtes: like as when a ſicke man ſees himſelfe out of temper,he muſt thinke that if he fulfill his owne fantaſie,he ſhall bring himſelfe to a hotte and continuall ague, and ſo kill himſelfe. Hee muſt therefore reſtraine himſelfe. And why? For his deſire is diſorderly. Euen ſo it is with vs: and ſo muſt wee fight againſt our luſtes and affections; and it is a difficult combat. Let vs labour therein by all the meanes wee can, and yet ſhall we not ſo much preuaile, but that ſomewhat will bee ſtill amiſſe. Now if in ſtead of repreſſing our luſtes & of holding them ſtraite curbed, wee flatter our ſelues and nouriſh them: is it not a wilfull throwing of our ſelues into deſtruction? I knowe a vice that doeth raigne in mee, and I am to fight againſt it: that is my right exerciſe, vnto the which God hath called mee. Nowe I conſpire with my naturall inclination, which is wicked; I ſee it is a diſeaſe that will kill me; vnleſſe I prouide for it and keepe good order: and yet neuertheleſſe I will as it were compact with the ſickeneſſe, and followe myne owne appetite: what is to bee ſayde to it? The greateſt miſchiefe of all is this, that Moſes ſetteth downe heere: namely that men bee not content to foſter their luſtes, and to foade themſelues with vaine flatteries,but they do alſo caſt themſelues to the ſpoyle lyke madde men, and become drunken to bereaue themſelues of diſcretion; yea they become verie beaſtes, to the intent they may haue no more feeling of their euill; they caſt away all ſhame, to become like vnto brute beaſtes: they haue no griefe of conſcience, and they proceede ſo farre as to bleare out their tongues againſt all manner of admonitions that bee giuen them. When men come to that poynt, it is a right adding of drunkenneſſe vnto thirſt. But nowe let vs learne, that when our Lorde ſheweth vs our faultes, it is to the ende, that euerie of vs ſhoulde enforce and ſtraine himſelfe to correct his wicked luſtes,and beware that we maintaine them not. But aboue all thinges let vs take heede that wee tempt not GOD, ne make warre vppon him openly, ne proceede to adde drunkenneſſe vnto thirſt, that is to ſay, that wee adde not beaſtly diſtemperance to our owne wicked inclination. It is too much that wee ſhould bee allured by our deſires, and luſtes; but to become ſo drunken and beaſtly in them, as to haue no conſideration at all of them;and to bee ſaped in our naughtineſſe that we fall to ſeeking of monſtrous thinges after the manner of drunkardes: Alas, whereto tendeth it? Is it not an vtter defacing of GODS image in vs, as much as wee can? And yet is it too much ſeene in the worlde; for they that flatter themſelues in common vices, doe fall in the ende into ſo haynous and great enormities, as it ſeemeth, that they would confound heauen & earth together.

When a man hath a long while made none account of God, and is become drunken in his filthineſſe; what will he doe after he is ſo beſotted? He will paſſe the boundes euen of naturall honeſtie, in ſo much that the verie beaſtes do hold their luſtes in order: but man, not knowing at all what he is, transfigureth himſelfe: and that is it that Saint Paule meaneth in ſaying, that when men haue deſpiſed GOD, they fall into many Ro.1,24.25. concupiſcences, and they muſt needes forget themſelues, and throwe themſelues headlong into ſo ſhamefull enormities, as a man cannot tell how to woorke them greater reproche than they doe to themſelues. Wherefore let vs bee afrayde of ſuch vengeaunce, and let vs alwayes be mindefull of this drunkenneſſe whereof Moſes ſpeaketh in this place, that wee may beware of it.

Then he addeth, That GOD will neuer bee mercifull to ſuch a man: but his wrath ſhall kindle againſt him, and his indignation ſhall bee mooued at him, all the curſes contained in the Booke of the Lawe ſhall bee heaped vppon him and reſt vpon him, and hee ſhall bee cut off from the Tribes of Iſrael to his vndooing. This is the ſame thing which I alleaged erewhyle out of the Prophet Eſay, where God Eſa.22.14. ſweareth, that hee will neuer forgiue ſuch people, as haue ſo abuſed his patience, and made a ieſt and a ſcoffe of the warninges that he gaue them. As much alſo doeth Moſes ſay thereof here, though in another phraſe. God (ſayth hee) will neuer forgiue ſuch a man. Heereby we are admoniſhed, that although wee haue offended God, yet there is place to obtayne mercie and forgiueneſſe, ſo we be not hard hearted, but doe lament, ſpecially when we be admoniſhed, and when men ſhewe vs more plainely that we muſt repaire to the goodneſſe of God. When wee deale ſo, then there is a conuenient helpe alreadie prepared for vs. But contrariewiſe, if wee continue in our ſtubbornneſſe, and for the hauing of more libertie, doe proceede to wilfull ſtubbornneſſe againſt all counſaile, and become deafe to all the threateninges of the Scripture, bearing our ſelues in hande that there is no iudge in heauen: when wee deale ſo, let vs not thinke that our Lord wil ſuffer ſuch ſtouteneſſe, for it is too diueliſh. Needes muſt men haue vtterly forgotten what they are, when they can ſo prouoke their Iudge. GOD therefore wil neuer forgiue ſuch a man. Now then, are we called to repentance? Let euerie of vs bow downe our neckes, and bee touched with ſuch a feare of Goddes iudgement, as may holde vs in awe, and make vs to repaire to him when he calleth vs, whyle wee haue time, and whyle the gate is open let vs enter, for if GOD doe once ſhutte it, wee may knocke, and wee may Gen.27.34. wayle and howle as Eſau did: but it is too late. To bee ſhort, Moſes telleth vs, that whyleſt wee haue meane and acceſſe to returne vnto him to obtaine grace, wee ought to ſteppe to it without mocking of his woorde: and that when wee bee exhorted by it to conſider our ſinnes, wee ought to beware that wee make a right confeſſion of them, and not reſemble other men which are ſo dull that they haue no vnderſtanding of the vengeance of God wherewith they are beſet.

Moſes ſayeth farther, That the wrath of GOD ſhall kindle, and his indignation ſhall bee mooued againſt ſuch a man. Whereby hee ſignifieth, that GOD will neuer pacifie his wrath againſt any of thoſe that doe ſo abuſe his fatherly gentleneſſe, and haue hoorded vp the treaſure whereof Saint Paule ſpeaketh in the ſecond Chapter to the Romanes in the time of GODS long Rom.2.5. ſufferaunce. For certeſſe Gods ſparing of vs, is to giue vs leaſure to come to repentaunce. Hee wayteth for vs, and if wee make no account of returning vnto him, ſpecially when he doeth prouoke vs, but doe yet woorſe: is it not good reaſon that hee turne our wilfull ſtubbornneſſe backe vppon our owne heades? Yes: For wee doe but heape vp ſo much the greater curſedneſſe vppon our ſelues. Vppon whom ſhall it light, but vpon vs, in ſuch ſort as wee ſhall be altogether ouerwhelmed? When a man doeth thus increaſe his leawdneſſe, and ſcorneth God, and beſides all the other ſinnes which hee hath committed, outrageth ſo farre as to ſay, I will not giue ouer mine owne pleaſure, bearing himſelfe in hand that Gods hand cannot touch him, but that hee hath a couenaunt with Hell and death, as ſayeth the Prophet Eſay; when Eſa.28.15. we be at that poynt, is it not, as if we ſhould draw ſome mountaine or houſe vppon vs to ouerwhelme vs withall? Let vs learne then that our Lorde doeth here vtter forth a ſpeciall wrath againſt all them that will not bee mooued by his word, but continue vtterly vnreformable. His wrath (ſaieth he) ſhall be kindled againſt them, and his indignation ſhall be ſtirred vp.

And for the better expreſſing thereof hee ſaieth: That the curſes of the Lawe ſhall lie vppon him. He had ſayd afore, all this ſhall cleaue vnto Deut.28.21. thee. And here it is ſayde, that they ſhall reſt. Purpoſely is this word ſet downe, bycauſe men doe euer thinke to eſcape and to outrunne the puniſhments of God: as when a dogge feeleth a ſtripe with a cudgell, hee ſhaketh his eares; and would faine ſcape, but the blowe doubleth, and he is cudgelled well and throughly, and yet hee ſeeketh ſtill to flie away: Euen ſo it is with vs. Therefore if God puniſh vs, there is none other helpe but to ſtoope, and to lament by conſidering our ſinnes. But in ſteede of this we thinke to go quite by remouing from our ſtanding. That is the cauſe, why men bee toſſed with vnreſt, when God doeth viſite them, and they perceiue that they haue offended him: they torment themſelues, ſuppoſing that it ſhall auayle them much; whereas it is neuertheleſſe to their confuſion. Therefore ſaieth Moſes, that the curſes which be contained in the Lawe ſhal reſt vpon vs. Let vs not thinke then to caſt them behinde vs, neither let vs thinke to eſcape, whē we play the madde bedlems and kicke againſt him. That is but a folly; they muſt of neceſſitie lye vppon vs, yea in ſuch wiſe as wee ſhall not feele any eaſe. That is in effect the thing which we haue to beare in minde concerning this place.

Deut.28.15 Afterwarde he ſayeth yet farther, That ſuch a man ſhall bee raſed out from vnder the heauens, and his name alſo. Nowe GOD ſpeaketh not of one curſe onely: but ſaieth that when a man is not humbled throughly by one puniſhment, there ſhall come a whole doſen vppon him. Nay the number ſhall not bee certaine, but (as wee haue often ſaid heretofore) the number ſhall bee infinite, as we ſhall ſee againe in the xxxii. Chapter, that God hath incredible meanes to tame thoſe that are ſo ſtubborne againſt him. And now for a concluſion he ſaieth, that the name of ſuch a man ſhall be raſed out from vnder heauen. As if he ſhould ſay, God will roote him out from the number of his creatures, ſo as hee ſhall bee no more reckoned among men. Indeede the principall matter which wee ſhoulde deſire, is not to haue a name vnder heauen, but to haue our Luk.10.20. names written aboue in the booke of lyfe. Neuertheleſſe, Moſes in this phraſe of ſpeech, comprehendeth alſo the eternall damnation. And why? For wee knowe that our Lorde did at that time vtter foorth his goodneſſe and loue towardes the Iewes, by earthly benefites: and contrariwiſe his wrath alſo by temporall puniſhments. Moſes therefore in ſaying heere, that God will wype out the name of ſuch a man from vnder heauẽ; meant according to the ſame rule, that GOD would no more reckon him in the number of his creatures. Nowe if wee bee not woorthie to bee counted heere beneath for the creatures of God, nor to liue amongſt horſes and Aſſes: howe ſhall wee bee partakers of the glorie of heauen, to bee companions with the Angels, in the immortalitie which is prepared for all the faithfull and for all Gods children? We ſee how the meaning of Moſes is that God will ſo raſe vs out of the roll of lyfe and ſaluation, as wee ſhall not be counted woorthy to beare the place of his creatures, but this curſe ſhall appeare vppon vs euen by the thinges of this world.

And thereupon he ſayth, That ſuch a man ſhall bee cutte off from the tribes of Iſrael to his vndooing. Whereby it is ſhewed vnto vs, firſt that God had ſeparated that people to bee preſerued. And it is a doctrine that appertaineth to all the faithfull. In deede we haue a ſpeciall myrrour therof in the Iewes: for wee ſee that when the firſt borne of Egypt were ſlaine, the Angell touched not the houſes which were marked with the Exo.12.23. blood of the Paſchall Lambe, but it was Gods will that they ſhoulde bee free from ſuch vengeance. Although then that as long as wee liue in this world, we bee inuironed with all maner of miſeries, whereunto this humaine life is ſubiect, and that all the diſeaſes which can happen vnto men, be threatninges of death, and that wee be likewiſe ſubiect to all the miſchaunces that can happen vnto vs, by ayre, water, fyre, earth, and the heauens; which doe all ſerue to bring vs to ruine and confuſion: although ſay I that as concerning the humaine ſtate, wee differ not from them that be afflicted to the vttermoſt; yet neuertheleſſe our Lord preſerueth vs and ſhouleth vs out, as if he ſhould gather vs into a corner by our ſelues. Well may wee bee mingled among thoſe whom God hath caſt off: but yet beholdeth he vs alwayes with mercie. This is in effect that which wee haue to remember concerning this place: and it doeth import an ineſtimable comfort. For albeit that we bee ſubiect to all the myſeries of the world, yet doeth God ſo preſerue vs, that of a ſpeciall priuiledge, wee bee ſafe by his meanes bycauſe he is neere vs: ſo as the miſchiefe is euer put off by his hand which is preſent with vs, and eyther wee bee exempted from it, or at the leaſt, he giueth it ſuch iſſue, as wee haue cauſe to reioyce, and to giue him thankes for that he hath ſo preſerued vs. Thus much for one point.

But yet for all that let vs beware that we abuſe not that goodneſſe of God; for if we doe, when we be gathered to be as of his houſhold, hee can very well cut vs off againe; as it is fittely ſayde, that ſuch a man ſhalbe cut off from among the Tribes of Iſraell: to ſhewe that it is not ynough for vs to be receiued into Gods Church, but that we muſt continue in his obedience vnto the ende, to the intent that hee may continue his grace towarde vs, yea and to continue it in ſuch ſort, as we may bee of that Iſraell, whereof God ſpeaketh by Ezechiell, to witte, that wee may be in his ſecret Roll. For there bee many that bee enrolled before men, which neuertheleſſe be reiected of God. And therefore hee ſpeaketh purpoſely of his ſecret Roll, where they bee written that be his people indeede. That is it that Paule ſpeaketh vnto Timothie, that they bee letters encloſed vp. 2.Tim.2.19 God (ſaith hee) knoweth them that be his: and that is a decree which ſtandeth ſteadfaſt. Therfore let vs learne ſo to yeeld our ſelues obedient to our God, praying him, that lyke as he hath vouchſafed to draw vs vnto him, he will alſo purſue it, and increaſe his bleſſings: and that when we be once graffed into the ſtocke of Abraham, to be his children by faith; wee may alwaies hold on ſtil in the courſe of our adoption, that in the ende God may acknowledge vs for his children, and we bee made partakers of the glorie which is prepared for vs, ſeeing that in this worlde and in this ſhort life wee haue inioyed bleſſings, by the which hee maketh vs alreadie to taſte of his loue.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the face of our good God, acknowledging our faultes, and beſeeching him that we may bee more and more caſt downe in ourſelues, to haue ſuch a horror and feeling of our ſinnes, as wee may not fayle to runne vnto him, and to flee for refuge to his mercie, that by forgiuing vs our ſinnes from day to day, he may amend vs euermore, vntill hee hath quite ridde vs of them. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Friday the x. of Aprill, 1556.

The CLXVIII. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the nine and twentith Chapter.

22 Thus will the generation to come, ſay, namelie your children which ſhall ſuccede after you and the ſtraunger which ſhall come from a farre lande, when they ſee the plagues of this lande, and the diſeaſes of it wherewith the Lord ſhall haue ſmitten it:

23 The brimſtone and ſault wherewith hee ſhall haue burned all his lande, ſo as it ſhall not bee ſowed, nor yeelde fruite, nor haue anie graſſe growing thereon, as in the ouerthrowe of Sodome and Gomorrah, Adam and Seboim, which the Lord deſtroyed in his wrath and diſpleaſure.

24 Then ſhall all Nations ſay, wherefore hath the Lorde doone this to this Lande? O how fierce is his great wrath?

25 And it ſhall bee aunſwered, becauſe they forſooke the couenaunt of the Lorde GOD of their fathers, which hee made with them, when hee brought them out of the land of Egypt.

26 For they went and ſerued other gods, and bowed themſelues before the the ſame gods whome they knewe not, neither hadde they doone them anie good.

27 Therefore is the wrath of the Lorde kindled againſt this land, to bring vpon it all the curſes written in this booke.

28 And the Lorde hath rooted them out of their lande, in wrath, anger, and great indignation, and he hath throwne them out into an other land as it appeareth at this day.

29 The ſecretes of the Lord our God be reuealed vnto vs, and to our children for euer, to the intent we ſhould do all the wordes of this law.

MOſes proceedeth here ſtill with the matter which wee beganne yeſterday, namely, to declare howe deteſtable our rebellion is vnto God, when he hath once taught vs by his worde, and can not winne vs, but wee turne heade to the contrarie. For it had beene enough to haue declared in one worde, that none ſhoulde remayne vnpuniſhed: howbeit foraſmuch as men doe not ſo quickely conſider the vengeaunce of God to be mooued therewith to the quicke, therefore Moſes addeth threateninges vpon threatnings, declaring that the puniſhmentes ſhall bee ſo greeuous, that euerie man ſhall bee abaſhed at it: according alſo as the Prophet Ieremie vſeth this phraſe of ſpeach, ſaying ẏͤ al mens eares ſhal tingle at the hearing of the ſtraunge thinges which God ſhall haue wrought in Ieruſalem & the lande of Iudah. Ier.19.3. For if God chaſtiſe vs after the common order, wee regarde it not, we take it to be but haphazard, or elſe we doe linger til ẏͤ plague be paſt; but as for ſubmitting ourſelues to God, it is no part of our care. That is ẏͤ cauſe why Moſes doeth in this place inhaunce the plagues which God woulde ſende vppon that lande, to the intent that the people might bee the better inſtructed, and euerie man looke to himſelfe, and vnderſtand that if they tempted Gods patience, they muſt needes fall into this ſo horrible extremitie. In which reſpect hee ſaith, That the generations to come, and thoſe alſo which ſhoulde reſort thither from farre countries, ſhall inquire thereof as people abaſhed. By which woordes hee doeth vs to vnderſtande, that the puniſhmentes which God woulde ſende vppon the rebelles, ſhoulde be ſtraunge, ſuch as ſhould make all folke aſtoniſhed, and amaſed at the ſight of them, and to ſay, this is a matter that hath not beene woont to be; it muſt needes be that the hande of God hath gone this way. Nowe wee ſee the meaning of Moſes. And herein wee haue to condemne our ſloweneſſe, ſeeing that God muſt be faine to deſcribe thinges vnto vs, as it were in a painted table, the cauſe whereof is for that wee bee not plyable to receyue the admoniſhmentes which hee giueth vs. We thinke our ſelues able folke: but in ſo doing wee doe all of vs beguile our ſelues with ſelfeſoothing, vntill our Lorde doe as it were beate it into our braynes by force, that if wee proceede on to offende him, wee ſhall not eſcape his hande, yea, and that wee ſhall be handled with ſuch rigour as ſhall make all them to tremble which ſee but the tracts thereof: ſo that not onely wee that receyue the ſtrokes, ſhall be confounded, but they alſo which come from farre ſhall confeſſe, that it was the vengeance of God, which was not without cauſe, and that it muſt needes bee, that wee did committe ouer greeuous and haindous offences, ſeeing that God is thus inflamed againſt vs.

Moreouer Moſes ſheweth that God will no more ſpare a whole country, than one man: leaſt they ſhould ſhroude themſelues vnder the multitudes of people that giue themſelues to wickedneſſe, and thinke thereby to ſcape the better cheape before God. It is expreſſely ſaide that Ezech.18. 4. if anie man ſinne hee ſhall be puniſhed; and if a whole lande be faultie, God will wrappe them all likewiſe into one fardell. Therefore let vs not bleare our eyes wilfully as wee ſee the Papiſtes doe, who vaunt themſelues this day, becauſe ẏ number of ſuch as are inclined to their ſuperſtitions is not ſmall, They boaſt them of their great multitude, making it their buckler againſt both God and men. And thereupon they doe deſpiſe vs, and it ſeemeth to them, that they may of good right condemne the pure and true religion. But contrariwiſe God telleth vs, that when a whole land hath forſaken the right way, that rebellion of theirs ſhal not go vnpuniſhed, albeit that the multitude of them which be faultie, be neuer ſo great. Finallie wee muſt beware that we followe not one an other to do euill: for if a blinde body doe leade the way, hee ſhal fal into the ditch, and likewiſe they that followe him: hee ſhall not exempt them by his fal. We muſt therefore vnderſtand, that when God calleth vs, wee muſt ſticke vnto his voyce, and obey it: and if all the worlde fall away, and euerie man goe aſtray, yet muſt not we ground our ſelues vpon the examples that wee ſee, as if wee woulde ſay, It is lawfull for mee, for manie haue this cuſtome. We may not make that a law, but we muſt ſtand ſtedfaſt in ẏ obedience of our God. This is the thing which we haue to remẽber concerning this place, where Moſes ſpeaketh not of euerie man particularly, but of the whole lande, vſing the compariſon of Sodome and Gomorrah, of Adama and Zeboim: according to the cõmon maner of the holy ſcripture, where the Prophets doe put men in mind of the dreadfull puniſhment which God ſent vppon thoſe cities. And indeed S. Iude ſaith in his Epi-
Iud.7. ſtle, that it is as it were a myrrour of the fire that is prepared for the wicked, ẏ wee might alwayes behold howe God is Iudge of the world. Therefore it is not without cauſe, that Moſes ſpeaketh here of Sodom & Gomorrah: as if he ſhould ſay, albeit that God do always puniſh ſin, yet the examples thereof be not alwayes ſo notable, as in that ouerthrow of Sodom & Gomorrah, and of the townes neere vnto them. For there it was his will to ſhew by one deed that he was not a partie to be dalied withall: and therefore it was his wil that the remembrance therof ſhould continue, and that euerie man ſhould walke warely. When men ſpeake of Sodom & Gomorrah, they ought to conſider that he which ouerthrew them with lightening and tempeſt, is at this day liuing in heauen, & that he hath not changed his purpoſe nor giuen ouer his office, but that his maieſtie is accompanied with his iuſtice and power. Therfore let vs not tempt him: but if hee vſe patience toward vs, let vs vnderſtand that when hee hath long delaied, we muſt come to reckening: and if the puniſhment be not now viſible vpon vs, as it was then vpon the ſaid townes, yet wil the time come that we ſhall periſhe. That in effect is the thing that Moſes ment to ſignifie in this place.

We haue here a generall inſtruction, which is, ẏ for aſmuch as God hath euermore puniſhed the worlde, it ſhoulde therefore be the more to our reproch, if wee profited not thereby, in acknowledging our ſelues ſo much the more guilty according to the ſaying of S. Paul who giueth ẏ verie ſame rule, in the tenth chapter of the firſt 1.Cor.10.6 &11. to the Corinthians, namely that when God puniſheth mens ſtubbornnes, couetouſnes, vnbeleefe, ſuperſtition, fornication, and ſuch like ſins: his ſo doing is a liuelie image of his iudgement. Let vs beware that when God teacheth vs at other mens coſt, wee profit in that ſchoole. For if we become hardhearted, it ſhall be made manifeſt vnto vs at the laſt day, that it was long of no body but of our ſelues, that wee were not reduced into the way of ſaluation, becauſe we would needs wilfully miſſe it, as if we had cõſpired with Satan, to our owne deſtruction. Therefore doth he alſo ſay, that the vengeaunce of God is wont Col.3.6.
to come vpon all misbeleeuers: as if he ſhoulde ſay, let vs not tarrie till God ſtrike vs, but ſeeing we do perceiue him to be Iudge of the world, let ẏ touch vs, & let euery of vs beſtir himſelfe to repentance. Moſes hauing ſpoken ſo, addeth this further declaration, and ſaith that they which come from far countries, & the childrẽ alſo that ſhold be born after ẏ euent of ſuch a puniſhmẽt: ſhal al inquire of it as aſtoniſhed, ſaying: What meaneth this? And now he addeth for a cõfirmation, ẏ the ſhame therof ſhal remain vpon them ẏ be ſo afflicted: wherby he ſheweth, that they ſhal not yet eſcape, after that God hath taken them out of the world, but that they ſhall beare the marke of infamie, inſomuch that euen the blind ſhal condemne them, and euery man deſpiſe thẽ euen when their carkeſſes be rotten and brought to nothing, and ẏ the remembrance of them ſhal be odious to the world. For men will ſay, It is becauſe they forgot the God of their fathers, which had brought them out of the lande of Egypt, and turned to ſtrange Gods whõ they neuer knew. That is one point which we haue to note in this place.

And by the way Moſes doth vs to vnderſtand, that if the Iewes be not pliable afore hand, it ſhal come to paſſe that afterwarde other men ſhalbe taught to beware by their great deſtruction whether they will or no. And that is well worthie to be marked. Whenſoeuer God reproueth vs, we couer our ſinnes, and although we haue no great colour ſo to doe, yet doe wee Gen.3.7. euermore take leaues to hide vs, after the example of our father Adam. To be ſhort, wee bee ſo ſhameleſſe, that wee will rather alleadge friuolous excuſes, than yeelde to condemne our ſelues. God doeth threaten vs, but we do make none account thereof; wee offende notwithſtanding, whereby we ſhewe our rebellioufneſſe. If wee be asked, Goe too, doe you perceiue the hand of God? O ſay we, I wot not wherfore I am afflicted. Thus do men euermore goe backward: and in ſteede of appeaching themſelues, they fal to diſputing and cauelling to eſcape as they may. To be ſhort, we will neuer come willingly to the acknowledging of our ſins. What doth God then, when he ſeeth vs to bee ſo vntractable? Hee teacheth others. Foraſmuch as it is but labour loſt to apply himſelfe to vs, & becauſe we be as logs of wood, hardharted and wilful in wickednes: the exãple of vs is a good inſtruction to others, which come to read ỹ it is the vengeance of God, & ſo do acknowledge it in our perſons: & in the meane while, we be ſhut out from all remedie: for wee had not the power in time and place, to receiue the correctiõ that God ſent vs. Thus ye ſee what we haue to note in this place, where Moſes ſaith: that they wil ſay: It is not a matter any whit darke nor anie more to bee doubted of, that they which bee ſtubborne hearted againſt GOD and haue vſed contention to make them ſelues innocent, may very wel wrie their mouthes: but yet will GOD ſtirre vp tongues to diſcouer their iniquities, and they muſt become a common prouerbe, and haue their doings blaſed abroad; as who ſhold ſay, god hath puniſhed thẽ on this wiſe, bicauſe they forgot him. After he had deliuered thẽ by his incredible power, and wrought ſo many wonders for their ſafetie, they laid al this vnder foote, & turned thẽſelues vnto ſtrange gods. And hereby we be taught that when God giueth vs yet meanes to returne vnto him, we muſt not draw back, ſeeing ỹ we ſhall gaine nothing thereby. And moreouer, ſith it is his wil to teach vs at other folkes coſt, let vs conſider what is happened vnto the Rom,11.21. Iewes, (according as S. Paul alſo leadeth vs thither:) for they were the adopted people of God when wee were yet but as rotten. God had left our fathers in their confuſion, when in the mean while the family of Abrahã was choſen & aduãced to ỹ heritage of ſaluation. Now then, if they being ỹ firſt borne, were ſo grieuouſly puniſhed, ſhold it not make our haires to ſtand vp on end, ſeeing ỹ in compariſon of thẽ we be as children borne before their time? In deed we haue beene graffed in their place: but yet they were ỹ naturall oliue, they were the branches proceeding of ỹ ſame roote, which was dedicated in the perſon of Abrahã. But we for our part were vnholy. Now if we ſucceed in their place, thinke we ỹ God wil ſpare vs, if we folow their iniquities? We ſee how he hath dealt ŵ them, & it is a dreadful matter. Therefore let vs learne to profit thereby, & not tary till our Lorde make vs as it were a lookingglaſſe, ỹ others may be taught by vs to our confuſion. Thus ye ſee how we ought to put this place in practiſe.

Now Moſes doeth here expreſſely accuſe the Iewes, to ỹ intent to take away from thẽ al ſtartingholes; ſaying: They forgot the God of their fathers & him that had deliuered them out of the land of Egypt, and ſet them free from that hard bondage. By ſaying, The GOD of their fathers, he meaneth that they were reuolted without cauſe: Which complaynt the Prophete Ieremie doeth alſo vſe. Go (ſaith he) ouer the ſea, goe throughout Ier,2,10. al the countries of the worlde, ſee how conſtant the heathen are, they chaunge not their Gods, & yet they be but Idols; men did deuiſe of their owne fanſies, ỹ ſuch a religion was to bee had, & they ſticke to it, ſhewing great conſtancie & ſtedfaſtnes, albeit that it haue no foundation. But I am the true God, & you haue knowen me to be ſo by experience; & yet notwithſtãding you be euermore fickle to haue ſome noueltie, you cannot bee ſtayed nor reſtrained in my ſeruice: & is not ỹ to great an vnthankfulnes? So thẽ Moſes telleth them here, that they haue forſaken the God of their fathers. Yet notwithſtanding, it is not to be inferred hereupon, that becauſe our fathers haue helde ſome euill trade of life, therefore wee muſt follow the ſame, for the Papiſtes & Turkes haue that defence common amongſt them, namely, that it is nowe a long while ſince they haue behaued themſelues after that manner. The Turkes ſay: What? It is eight hundred yeres ago ſince that Mahomet brought vs to his law, and it hath bin kept euer ſince, our fathers haue deliuered it vnto vs from hand to hande. The Papiſtes alſo doe alledge their holy Councels; and the Traditions of auncient lawes: but (as I haue alreadie touched) it is not enough for vs that our fathers haue deliuered vs ſuch a religiõ as they thought good. But Moſeſes ſpeaking here of fathers, doeth ſeparate Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, from the worlde, becauſe God did ſanctifie them. Thoſe bee the fathers that deſerued to bee of dignitie and reputation aboue worldlie men: for God did ordeyne thẽ to be followed that other men might become like vnto them. That is the thing which Moſes regarded. For in deede wee ſee that Ezechiel blamed the people for following the Ezec,20.18. lawes and righteouſneſſe of their fathers: it might ſeeme at the firſte ſhowe, that here is ſome contrarietie. God on the one ſide condemneth the Iewes, for that they followed not their fathers; and afterwarde hee condemneth them, for that they followed them too much. Yea but thoſe fathers did differ verie much. For in this place the fathers bee they whome GOD hath exalted to credite, to whome alſo hee willeth vs to ſticke; that is to ſay, the holie Patriaches: They therefore ſhoulde drawe after them all their generations that there might bee a true vnion of faith, and one accorde, to prooue that they be the children of Abrahã: but in ſteed of theſe, they folowed their baſtarde fathers, as S. Steuen telleth thẽ, ſaying,

You

Act.7.51. You haue alwaies reſiſted the holy Ghoſt, as your fathers did: and againe, bee not a ſtubborne and frowarde generation, as your fathers were, which prouoked God to wrath in the wildernes: they were full of bitterneſſe. Therefore we muſt haue this difference of fathers. And if we meane now to worſhip the true God in ſuch ſort as is requiſite, we muſt haue the holy Patriarches to guide vs; ſo as we may proteſt that we be ioyned with them in true vnitie of faith. Alſo we muſt haue the Apoſtles, which bee called the fathers of the Church. For when wee followe that rule, wee cannot faile. And therewithall let vs beware that we mingle not our ſelues with them ẏ are growen out of kind from the true fathers; as the Papiſtes doe, who ſticke ſtoutly to them. For they which were backeſliders, which forſooke the pure doctrine of the Goſpel, which alſo peruerted and corrupted the religion of our auncient fathers: thoſe be the verie fathers of the Papiſtes, which haue falſely vſurped that title. Let vs therefore beware of ſuch a mingling, without any diſcretion. Marke that for a ſpeciall point. Finally, foraſmuch as God hath at all times beene reueiled vnto them that haue ſhewed vs the way of ſaluation, let that ſuffice vs: and let it ſerue to confirme our faith, that we be not hindered in the ſubmitting of our ſelues vnto him to whome we owe all manner of obedience: nor become ſo fickleheaded as to turne from that which hath beene taught vs from the beginning: for wee haue the lawe, which beareth vs witneſſe, that the religion which we hold at this day, hath beene alwayes among the Patriarches, and that it was then ratified when the people were brought out of Egypt. And we haue the Goſpel, which is a whole and a ful confirmation vnto vs, and the finiſhing vp of the lawe, from whence we muſt drawe all thinges, if we intende that God ſhall allowe of our religion.

Nowe ſecondly GOD ſpeaketh of the deliuerance of his people, that by their owne experience they might bee conuicted of their tranſgreſſions, I haue (ſaith he) brought them out of ẏ land of Egypt. Here did they feele the grace of God, and like as it was manifeſted to them by effect, euen ſo ſhould they haue acknowledged that they were ſo much ẏ more bound vnto him. Nowe then if they turne away, are they not double faultie? Yes truely. Thereby we haue yet to marke another warning; which is, to note well the giftes and benefites which God beſtoweth on vs, that the ſame may holde vs in awe, and make vs to yeelde ourſelues ſo much the more vnto him: and not to bee wauering. Howſoeuer Satan intice vs, let vs euer holde our owne ſtill, and ſay, What? Our God thinketh it not enough to giue vs his worde, but ouer and beſides that, he maketh vs to vnderſtand ẏ power of his hande, by ſuccouring vs ſo manie wayes: we knowe that he neuer fayled thoſe that ſerue him. Nowe then ſhoulde not the ſame be ſufficient to prouoke vs alſo to ſerue him? On the otherſide, if wee doe forget the benefites which we haue receyued of God, we muſt not thinke that he will ſuffer them to be buried, he will ſurely put vs throughly in minde of them, euen to our vtter confuſion: according as we ſee how he ſpeaketh here of the Iewes.

And nowe on the contrarie part he blameth them for that, That they bee turned away after ſtraunge gods, which they haue not knowen, and which had done them no good. This is generally incident to all Idolaters. For notwithſtanding that there be a kinde of wilfull opinion in them; yet are they at no certaintie. Like as the Papiſtes, which can not ſay that they bee aſſured of their religion, all is grounded vpon a ſuppoſition. True it is, that they play the madde men: for when they bee tolde of their fooliſhneſſe, they rage and ſtorme and thinke that men do them the greateſt wrong in the worlde, when they make any gaineſaying to that which they imagine to bee good: and yet howſoeuer they fare, they haue but a ſuppoſall. For all their ſaying is, Our fathers taught vs ſo: it is the order of our holie mother the Church: this hath nowe beene receyued of olde. Verie well, ſhall God bee outfaced with that? Shall his trueth, which wee ought to admitte to bee vnfallible, bee made voyde vnleſſe wee bee grounded vppon cuſtome and authorities of men? Nay, without that, there is nothing in men but vanities and lies. Hereby then wee muſt learne not to thinke that ſtraunge which the Scripture ſpeaketh, namelie that wee muſt faſhion our ſelues after our fathers, howbeit thoſe fathers which haue followed the trueth of God and none other. To bee ſhort, wee ſhall finde that there is no certeyntie in them that followe not the lawe, & that none but the children of God can talke of it vppon knowledge, according as Saint Iohn 1.Ioh.5. ſayth in his Canonicall Epiſtle. Soothly it is not for vs to bee taught by coniectures of men, when the worde of God is laide before vs: for it is good reaſon that God ſhoulde haue ſo greate authoritie ouer vs, as that when hee ſaith the worde, we ſhoulde wholy ſticke to it, and ſeeke no farther: but yet is there alwayes a true knowledge in faith, and not a wauering opinion. Contrariwiſe, all they that ſerue GOD after their owne deuotion, doe but imagine, and ſerue gods whome they know not. The Papiſtes ſay, that the Virgin Marie is their aduocate, euerie one hath his patron, ſuch as hee hath deuiſed of his owne heade; doe they vnderſtande that GOD hath giuen them theſe offices? Haue they any Teſtimonies thereof? None; but they thinke ſo. When I goe on Pilgrimage or cauſe a maſſe to bee ſung, or founde ſuch a yeares minde: O that is goodly ſeruing of God. What? Haue you authoritie for all theſe thinges, that they be pleaſing to God, and that hee alloweth them? O no ſir, but our intent is good. Yea, but that is not enough to binde God: for hee muſt bee ſerued according to his owne will: and hee will none of all thoſe things. To bee ſhort, examine all that the Idolaters doe, and yee ſhall finde that they be rauiſhed and puffed vp with a wauering opinion. Thereupon they ſooth themſelues exceedingly: but yet are they neuer aſſured of their caſe. Therefore it is not without cauſe that Moſes reproueth the Iewes, for following the gods which they knew not. And indeede howe ſhall a man knowe that which is not: for there is no knowledge, but the truth: and there is nothing but lies in all that men doe deuiſe, without the worde of God.

Againe hee ſaith yet further that the Idoles whome they ſerued, had doone them no good. Trulie the wretched miſbeleeuers doe beare them ſelues in hande, that the Idoles whome they ſerue, haue doone them much good: as we ſee the Papiſtes doe, ſaying: Lo, wee finde it good to goe to ſuch a Saint, for there is ſuch a miracle as ſheweth that this deuotion is not vnprofitable: after which manner wee ſee the Idolaters to haue doone at all times. Iere.44.18. When we ſerued the Queene of heauē (ſay they in Ieremie) we had our fill of meate and drinke, there was plentie of all manner of good thinges. Lo howe Satan blindeth theſe wretches, and God doeth ſuffer them to bee fedde with vaine flatteries, and to pleaſe themſelues with their owne ſuperſtitions, to their condemnation. Neuertheleſſe, that which is ſpoken by the Prophet Iſay, Iſa.44.9. ſhall bee alwayes true, namely, that Idoles haue no power to doe either good nor euill: for they bee nothing. Therefore let vs learne firſt of all to ſticke vnto the word, whereby God teacheth vs, and let vs followe our fathers, that is to ſay, thoſe whome hee hath allowed and choſen, and ſet foorth for our example to the intent that wee ſhoulde imitate them. The verie point whereat wee muſt beginne, for the hauing of a pure religion, both certaine and infallible, is the ſaid doctrine: and ſecondly that we be confirmed by the gratious giftes and benefits which God beſtowed vpon the olde fathers, yea and euen by thoſe alſo whereof wee our ſelues haue had proofe in our own perſons. Let theſe things induce vs ſo much the more to giue our ſelues ouer vnto him: and therewithall let vs ſtande in awe of his threateninges, and likewiſe of his puniſhments, which we ſee executed vpon all ẏ wicked that haue forſaken him. That in effect is that which we haue to remember vppon this place.

Nowe for concluſion Moſes addeth: The ſecretes belong to the Lorde our God, and the things reueiled be for vs and our children for euer, to the end we ſhoulde doe the thinges that are written in this booke. This text is taken diuerſe wayes: Some doe expounde it, that the ſecretes of our God bee reueiled vnto vs, and to our children: and that is a verie profitable doctrine; for it is ſaide, that the lawe conteineth wonders that be incomprehenſible to men, vntill time that hee hath opened their eyes. Therefore Dauid prayeth thus, Lord Pſal.119.18. lighten me that I may beholde the wonderfull wiſedome, which is in thy lawe. And indeede, we doe neuer by our naturall wit vnderſtande that which is ſhewed by the worde of God; it exceedeth all that is in man. And that is the cauſe why this grace is ſo highlie magnified in holie Scripture, that God dealt not with any nation, as hee hath doone with the Iewes: for that hee had not reueiled vnto them the ſecretes of his woorde: but left them to walke in brutiſhneſſe Deut.4.& and ignorance. It is to a good purpoſe therefore to ſay, That the ſecretes of our God be reueiled vnto vs at this day, that folke might be the more mooued to be attentiue to the law, knowing that God hath vſed a ſpeciall goodneſſe towarde them to whome he hath ſhewed himſelfe ſo familiarlie; as wee haue alreadie ſeene in the fourth Chapter. But albeit ẏ the ſame doctrine be verie good & profitable, yet is it ſomewhat ſtrained, becauſe of ẏ words: for the text is thus, The ſecrets belong to our God: And immediatly after there is a letter ſet downe, which is as much to ſay in our language, as, And the thinges that are reueyled belong vnto vs and vnto our children. Moſes maketh heere a diſtinction, after which manner alſo it was taken by the Iewes, which reſted vpon the letter, and they did well therein. For we muſt looke diligentlie to the letter, if we wil attain to the vnderſtanding of anie text: but becauſe they did not vnderſtande the true ſenſe that was in the ſame letter, they haue forged one that is altogether ſtraunge, and haue played the beaſtes too much, for want of hauing an eye to the naturall ſenſe of Moſes. They ſay in effect, that the ſecrete Idolatries belong vnto GOD, and the apparant Idolatries belong vnto vs, and to our children; to witte, to puniſhe them. In deede it is true that God puniſheth priuie faultes, for hee reſerueth manie ſinnes to his owne puniſhing. We ſee that Idolaters do bleare out their tongues, and make a mocke, when they haue ruſhed out into all manner of naughtineſſe: for their iniquitie is not yet ripe. Yet notwithſtanding, God taketh order that ſome crime ſhall come to knowledge, and bee iuſtly puniſhed, that they which ſee it, ſhall be compelled to ſay, that it was right. This is verie true. But Moſes meant not ſo: for that were too bare a matter for this place. The thing that he meaneth in effect is this; That God hath his ſecretes to himſelfe, and that vnto vs & vnto our childrē he hath vttered his law, which is an apparant matter: as if he ſhould ſay, ẏ we muſt put a difference betweene that which is conteined in holy ſcripture, and that which GOD hath hidden from vs, of which alſo we haue neyther doctrine nor Teſtimonie. Wee muſt put a difference betweene thoſe two thinges. True it is, (as I haue ſaid) that all the doctrine of holie ſcripture ſurmounteth our capacitie, and is too high for vs, were it not that God did inlighten our mindes. Notwithſtanding, howe ſoeuer the worlde goe with vs, yet when God vttereth a thing vnto vs, then hee calleth it an open matter. Why? Becauſe hee woulde haue vs to applie our ſelues to the ſame. And thereunto hee addeth a promiſe, that they ſhall not bee diſappointed; according to this ſaying of his by his Prophete Eſay: It is not in vaine that I haue ſaide, ſeeke mee; Iſa.45.19. As if yee ſhoulde ſay; that all they which are deſirous to be inſtructed in the worde of God ſhall knowe his will by the ſame, neither will hee ſuffer them to erre, or to bee deceiued. Thus ye ſee how all thinges that God hath reueiled vnto men, are called open matters. And why? Becauſe it is not a doctrine laide vp in huckermucker, but a matter that ought to bee knowen to all men. Nowe we vnderſtande, what Moſes meant. Vnder colour that wee muſt not bee too inquiſitiue of Gods ſecretes through too much curioſitie, the worlde becommeth brutiſhe, and is well appayed to haue ſome excuſe of ignorance: the Idolaters yea euen the verieſt idiotes of them can skill to ſay, Let Gods ſecretes alone. And to what end? Verilie to the intent that men ſhould ſeeke for nothing. O, beware, we muſt not know too much. No: but what meane you by that? For as for the thinges which our Lorde hath reuealed vnto vs by his worde, it is good reaſon that they ſhoulde bee knowen, and that wee ſhoulde giue eare to them, and bee diligent to applie our indeuour to the ſame. If we paſſe our boundes, by beeing more inquiſitiue than is lawfull for vs, wee enter into a maze. Thus ſee wee as now what Moſes meant to ſay in this place, namelie that the people ſhould not foade their owne ignorance, as men are wont to doe. My friendes (ſaith hee) be well aduiſed; for the ſecret thinges belong to our God, looke what hee woulde not haue knowen, that hath hee reſerued to himſelfe. But as for the thinges that are reueiled; hee hath imparted them to vs, & to our children for euer, to the ende that we ſhoulde doe the thinges that are written in this booke. Knowe yee (ſaith hee) that the thinges which are conteyned in his lawe, are profitable for the well ruling of our liues. And agreeably hereunto alſo Saint Paul ſaith: that all the ſcripture is profitable to teach, to exhort, to reproue & to make the man of God perfect to all good workes. 2.Tim.3.16. Sith the caſe ſtandeth ſo, let vs applie the exhortation of Moſes to our owne vſe. And firſt of all let vs marke well, that none bee exempted for their ignoraunce, that is to ſay, that none ſhal haue anie excuſe which haue diſdayned to heare God when he ſpake vnto them. And why? If they ſay, theſe be ſecret matters; I aunſwere, and hath not God publiſhed them? Yes, but they be aboue our capacitie: let vs craue the ſpirite of vnderſtanding, and it ſhall bee giuen vnto vs. But howe ſoeuer it bee, let vs not ſay, I am no clerke, I haue not beene at ſchoole; for beholde, the lawe is ſet foorth to all folke both litle and great; God woulde haue vs all to bee inſtructed therein. Therefore they be apparant matters, which muſt bee knowen to vs and to our children. And wherefore? Becauſe it is for our profite. We ſhall there finde wherewith to bee edified, and wee knowe that God woulde haue our life to bee ruled thereby. Let vs therefore bee diligent, in ſuch ſorte as wee preſume not to paſſe our boundes, when wee be deſirous to be taught in the ſchoole of God. Thus much for one point.

Neuertheleſſe God reſerueth his ſecretes to himſelfe, from the which wee muſt abſteyne with all modeſtie, and ſubmit our ſelues thereunto. Wee may not therefore doe as manie fantaſticall heades doe, which couet to knowe this and that, whereof wee haue no reuelation in holy ſcripture. Wee muſt holde vs ſtill when God hath not ſpoken of an vnknowen thing and which is not conteyned in holy ſcripture. For it is the greateſt wiſedome that can bee in men, not to bee inquiſitiue of further thinges than God hath reueiled vnto them, and ſimplie to content themſelues, with ÿ which they are able to conceyue. They (ſay I) which can thus holde themſelues within their compaſſe, be farre wiſer than all they which pretende to knowe and vnderſtande all thinges: and to bee ignoraunt of nothing. Nowe we ſee it is an excellent place, in that the things which bee conteined in holy ſcripture bee called open. And on the other ſide let vs keepe our ſelues in ſobrietie and temperance, to the ende that if our mindes be toſſed with couetouſneſſe, wee may holde them as it were captiues, and not be too inquiſitiue of the ſecretes of God more than is lawfull for vs. This matter might be diſcourſed more at length but that were an endleſſe thing. It ſufficeth to haue it in a breefe ſumme, namely that as long as wee ſeeke to be inſtructed by the worde of God, wee cannot doe amiſſe. But on the otherſide, when wee will needes preſume aboue our power, then are we out of the way, we take that vppon vs which God hath reſerued to him ſelfe, the ſecrete thinges belong vnto him. And for a concluſion, let vs take an example of that which is fitteſt for this purpoſe. It is a wonderfull ſecrete of God and ſuch a one as ſurmounteth all others, that GOD hath choſen men as ſeemed good to himſelfe, and that before hee created the worlde, hee determined in his euerlaſting purpoſe, whatſoeuer hee meant to doe, chooſing and electing ſome to himſelfe, and refuſing the others. Well then, this is declared vs in holy ſcripture, and wee ought to knowe it, notwithſtanding that theſe maſtiue dogges doe barke againſt vs, as wee ſee howe theſe wretches doe murmure againſt this doctrine, yea and blaſpheme it. What ſay they? It is too obſcure a doctrine, wee vnderſtande it not. Well admitte it bee ſtraunge vnto you, yet is it not to be graunted, that it ſhoulde therefore take no place: but howſoeuer it bee, it is God that hath ſaide it, and we muſt ſticke to this ſaying. And if wee will needes knowe wherefore, as theſe pelting roges doe, who in all matters behaue themſelues ſpitefully againſt God, ſaying, I woulde knowe what is the reaſon, vnleſſe God is vniuſt. O miſerable creature, whither runneſt thou headlong? God ſheweth that wee muſt reſt vpon his holy will, and wee bee not permitted to ſeeke anie further, but are commaunded to confeſſe that hee is righteous in all that hee doeth: and that hee hath compaſſed all thinges in iuſt weight and meaſure, ſo as nothing proceedeth from him, which is not wholie ordered with infinite wiſedome and equitie. When we bee at that poynt, wee muſt ſticke to it and behaue our ſelues ſoberlie. So then by this example, wee ſee howe men ought to behaue themſelues and what mean they ought to keepe.

It is not for vs to play the doltes as the Papiſtes doe: but wee muſt vnderſtand the things which God hath reueyled vnto vs, and then we muſt in likewiſe take heede that vnder colour that God hath reueiled his ſecretes vnto vs, we ſtie not vp into the aire, ſeeking to knowe this and that, and giue ouer our ſelues to fonde queſtions. Let vs ſeeke that onely, which GOD woulde haue vs to knowe, and let vs be ignoraunt of all the reſt, yea and let vs be willingly ignorant of it, knowing that our true wiſedome is to be learned alonely in his ſchoole. And further to the intent we may turne holy ſcripture to our more profite, we muſt haue an eye to edification, and referre all thinges to the learning of our ſaluation, as we haue ſaid alreadie.

Let vs nowe fall downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, beſeeching him ſo to reforme vs, as wee may not linger vntill hee ſende foorth his horrible vengeance vppon vs, but that we may preuent it; and that foraſmuch as we haue heretofore offended him ſo many wayes, wee may returne vnto him, at the leaſt when hee prouoketh vs thereunto, ſo as hee may be merciful vnto vs for our Lorde Ieſus Chriſtes ſake; and that we may haue our eyes open to beholde the doctrine which he ſetteth before vs, and our eares vnſtopped to hearken vnto all the counſailes & corrections which he continually and inceſſantlie beſtoweth vpon vs: and that by this meanes we may be able to poſſeſſe all yͤ bleſſings which hee hath purchaſed for vs, and which hee hath prepared for his children and for all them that loue him. That it may pleaſe him to beſtowe this grace not vppon vs onely, but alſo vppon all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the xi. of April, 1556.

The CLXIX. Sermon which is the firſt vppon the thirtith Chapter.

29 The ſecretes of the Lorde &c.

The thirtith Chapter.

WHen all theſe thinges bee come vppon thee, whether it bee the bleſſing or the curſe, which I haue ſet before thee: and that thou remember them in thine heart, among all the nations, to the which the Lorde thy God ſhall haue caſt thee out,

2 And doeſt returne vnto the Lorde thy God, and obey his voyce, according to all that I commaunde thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart and with all thy ſoule:

3 Then will the Lorde thy God bring againe thy Captiues, and haue mercie vpon thee: and he will gather thee againe from all people, among whom the Lord thy God hath diſperſed thee.

4 Notwithſtanding that thou were caſt out into the fartheſt parts of yͤ hauen: from thence will the Lorde thy God gather thee, and from thence will hee fetche thee.

5 And the Lord thy God will bring thee againe to the land which thy fathers poſſeſſed: and thou ſhalt poſſeſſe it, and he will doe thee good, and cauſe thee to growe much greater than thy fathers

WE muſt remember well what was treated of yeſterday: to wit, that when GOD doeth imparte himſelfe vnto vs by his worde, wee muſt bee attentiue to receyue the doctrine that is conteyned in the ſame. For although that all that is declared vnto vs in holie Scripture, be a farre higher wiſedome than our wittes are able to attayne vnto: yet would not GOD that it ſhoulde bee kept hidden or ſecrete. Wherefore? For if we reſort vnto him with lowlineſſe, yeelding our ſelues as ſcholers, he will doe the office of a teacher, in ſuch wiſe as his will ſhal bee altogether open vnto vs, nothing of all that is profitable for our ſaluation ſhall bee darke vnto vs, ſo we ſuffer ourſelues to be inſtructed of G O D. But there bee two thinges which we muſt obſerue: the one is, that wee bee not poſſeſſed afore hande with ouerweening, as a great ſort bee, which thinke thẽſelues wiſe enough to iudge, & receiue no more of Gods worde than is to their owne liking. Let vs beware of ſuch diueliſh pride: and let vs ſubdue all our wittes to G O D. And wee muſt alſo vnderſtande, that wee ſhoulde neuer conceyue the thinges which are deliuered vnto vs in his name, and from him, vnleſſe hee himſelfe inlightened vs: for wee bee blinde wretches, and there is nothing in vs but rudeneſſe and beaſtlineſſe. G O D therefore muſt in this caſe worke by his holy ſpirite. On the other ſide, when wee reade the holy ſcripture, or come to heare the word declared vnto vs: let vs ſeeke to be edified thereby, and not goe about to ſatisfie our owne luſtes and fooliſh appetites, as manie people doe, which vnhalowe the worde of G O D: for they trouble themſelues with manie vnprofitable queſtions, and thinke that they haue doone much, when they ſhewe them ſelues ſubtill. But G O D woulde that his woorde ſhoulde profite vs, and that it ſhoulde bee expreſſed in our life. Let vs remember thoſe two pointes, and then wee ſhall ſee by experience, that our L O R D proteſteth not in vaine by his Prophete Eſay, that where hee ſaith, Seeke mee, Eſa.45.19. it is in good earneſt, and that hee will bee founde: and that when hee ſpeaketh, it is his will that wee ſhoulde vnderſtande his doctrine.

Nowe if this were ſpoken in the time of the lawe, much more reaſon is it, that it ſhoulde bee verified at this daie. For wee know that Ieſus Chriſt hath declared himſelfe vnto vs more familiarlie by his Goſpell. Therefore let vs not be afraide, that things be too obſcure for vs. For beholde our God allureth vs to profit in his ſchoole, and ſaith that it belongeth to vs and to our children, and that the things which hee hath reuealed vnto vs, are directed vnto vs, to the intent we ſhould aduiſe ourſelues to walke according to his will. This is a thing that ought to encourage vs to ſeeke God, ſo farre foorth as is lawfull for vs, according to the meaſure that he appointeth. And heerein wee ſee what the malice of the Pope and of al his is, in ſhutting out al the world from the word of God: like as at this daie they do yet ſtill exerciſe the ſame tyrannie, maintaining that the holie Scripture was made for none but Monkes, Friers, and Clergie men: ſo ſeemeth it to them. And yet haue they no care thereof. For they haue a diuinitie by themſelues, which is as it were but a brawling of beggers. As for holie Scripture they leaue it at their heeles. Albeit that they deſpiſe it, yet they take out ſome worde, as it were by peeces and gobbets, and in the meane while ſuffer not the people to enter into the kingdome of G O D. They hold the keye to keepe the gate faſt ſhutte, and like as they liſt not to enter themſelues; ſo woulde Matt.6.23. they haue all others to bee ſhutte out. They ſay it is a daungerous matter to deale with holie Scripture, that it is a noſe of waxe, that men may turne it which way they liſt, and that there bee ſo high ſecretes therein, as men may thereby enter into a bottomeleſſe pitte. In deede they haue made a playne mockerie of Gods worde; for they haue falſifyed it in ſuch wiſe, as men can ſcarcelie know the meaning thereof. If wee ſhoulde hearken vnto them, it is but a hodge podge, yet neuertheleſſe wee ſee that it is the certayne and infallible trueth of G O D.

And moreouer, albeit that the doctrine thereof bee high, and that wee are not able to attayne thereunto by our owne vnderſtanding, yet will G O D neuer fayle them, that yeelde themſelues lowelie and apte to learne. Hereby therefore wee ſee, howe the diuell reigned altogether in the Popedome, ſeeing they vnderſtoode not what Moſes meaneth in this place: namely that the doctrine of G O D which is deliuered vnto men, is not a hidden nor an obſcure matter, but open and manifeſt, and that it is the lampe which muſt giue vs light, and the true myrrour wherein wee may beholde the face of our G O D, and Pſa.109.10 whereby wee may bee transformed to the likeneſſe of his glorie: yea in verie deede, ſo wee reſorte vnto it with ſuch vnfayned zeale and affection, as I haue tolde you of. But there are but fewe that vnderſtande the thing which is heere declared: and in deede, the greater part of the worlde is not worthie thereof: for wee ſee manie that doe continuallie holde on, and bee deafe eared, in ſomuch that although G O D ſpeaketh loude and ſhirle; yet they doe wilfully deſpiſe him. Nowe then, let him that is ignoraunt bee ignoraunt ſtill; See how Saint Paul skorneth all ſuch as will needes 1.Cor.14. bee wildeheaded, and not ſubmit themſelues quietlie to the obedience of Gods worde. Goe too, ſayth hee, will you bee ignoraunt? Then bee ignoraunt. And wee ſee howe in an other place, hee ſayth, that they which woulde not beleeue the trueth nor regarde the light 2.Theſſ.2. of lyfe and ſaluation, muſt needes be caſt into horrible darkeneſſe: as we ſee many bee, which make a ieſte of G O D. When they come to heare his woorde, what reuerence yeelde they vnto it? It is rather a vayne curioſitie: G O D muſt bee fayne to puniſhe ſuch folke, and to depriue them of the fruite which all the faithfull receyue, that is to ſay, that they ſubmitte themſelues vnto him, ſeeking nothing but the profite by hearing Gods worde and beholding the force which it hath in woorking.

Now therfore when we ſee ẏ the word of God is after a ſorte vnprofitable vnto many people, 2.Cor.2.16. and alſo a ſauor of death vnto the misbeleeuing which diſdaine to be partakers of the grace that was offered them; let vs not ſtarte aſide for all that, but let vs heare our God, and in like wiſe be afrayde to bee puniſhed, for our deſpiſing of ſuch a treaſure. Let vs benefite our ſelues by the doctrine of ſaluation. As how? Euen by yeelding our ſelues quietlie vnto GOD (as I ſaid afore) to be inſtructed by him who ſheweth him ſelfe to bee a teacher of the little ones and lowlie ones: and ſeeking nothing but to bee edified through faith in the feare of his name, and in all godlineſſe that wee may bee mooued to call vppon him and labour to ſerue him. When wee be ſo minded; let vs not doubt, but that hee will vtter vnto vs that power of his which is ſhewed vnto vs in this text.

And nowe Moſes addeth a comfort to them that are afflicted, when they haue offended God and that hee vſeth rigour towarde them, and that is verie neceſſarie. For the lande of Chanaan was as a ſpeciall earneſt pennie and pawne to the Iewes, that GOD had choſen and adopted them for his people, they were ſeparated there from the reſt of the worlde, it was a lande that GOD had dedicated and reſerued to himſelfe, as if hee had ſaide, Here ſhal my name bee called vppon. The lande of Chanaan was, as it were, a mirrour of the kingdome of heauen, and of the euerlaſting inheritaunce. When the Iewes were baniſhed from that land, it was, as if GOD ſhoulde haue rooted them out of his houſe, and ſaide, I doe refuſe you, and I renounce you: and that was enough to bring them in diſpaire. On the otherſide, God promiſed to keepe them euermore with a fatherlie care, and to cauſe them to proſper continually. Therefore when they ſawe themſelues ouerwhelmed with many miſeries, yea almoſt infinite, it was a kinde of driuing of them into diſpaire, yea euen into vnmeaſurable diſpaire, as if God had forgotten them. Finally GOD ſaide that hee woulde bee their heade and their king; and that they ſhoulde be as a bodie gathered together vnto him. Nowe when they bee diſperſed vnder the Painyms and the infidels, vnder the wicked and the deſpiſers of the lawe, among people vnholie and vncleane: the raygning of ſuch kinde of people ouer the Iewes, made it ſeeme vnto them that God had forſaken them, and that his whole adopting of them was loſt; ſo as they ſhould all haue periſhed in their afflictions, vnleſſe they were comforted. And that was the thing which Moſes amed at. Hee ſheweth them, that although God be harde and rough to them for a time, yet doeth hee not faile to remember that hee had choſen them for his people, of porpoſe to vſe mercie towarde them, yea, when the time ſerueth for it: howbeit not ouerhaſtily; but after that hee had well tamed them, ſo as in ſteede of rebelling agaynſt him, they haue chaunged their minde to obey him. Nowe wee perceiue what is the meaning of Moſes; And this is the more expreſſely and largelie ſhewed vnto vs, according as the Promiſe concerning ẏ redeemer came more to light. For when God ſaide to Dauid, that the redeemer of the worlde which was promiſed vnto Abraham ſhoulde come of his ſeede, he confirmed and ratified that which we heare in this 2.Sam.7.14 Text, ſaying, If thy ſeede do fal away and forget my lawe, and goe aſtray: I will (ſaith he) viſite their iniquities, but it ſhall bee with the rodde of a man: I will puniſhe them, but it ſhall bee with meaſure, & I will neuer take away my mercie from them. This is a more large declaration of that which is ſayd here, to wit, that God muſt needes ſo puniſhe the Iewes, after hee had long ſuffered their misbehauiour. And when they had ſhewed themſelues vnreformable, hee muſt puniſhe them, howbeit in ſuch wiſe, as there ſhould yet bee reſerued ſome mercie. And wherefore? Becauſe he hath not reſpect vnto them ſimplie, but vnto him ſelfe and to his owne trueth. Nowe wee muſt note that when God made his couenaunt with Abraham, as we haue alreadie ſaide, the ſame was not for the woorthineſſe that was in that people, neither was it for their deſertes; but God grounded himſelfe vppon his owne free goodneſſe onely. Albeit that the people ſhewe themſelues vnworthie, yet notwithſtanding muſt GOD remayne alwayes firme in his purpoſe: according as Saint Paul alſo ſpeaketh, ſaying, that the calling of Rom.11.29. GOD whereby hee did chooſe the linage of Abraham and ſanctified it, is without repentaunce, and inchaungeable. It is true, that the hypocrites, (as it hath alſo beene treated of,) haue beene puniſhed according as they were woorthie, and yet Gods continuall keeping of his promiſe profited them nothing at all. And why? See here howe it came to paſſe. God had choſen the linage of Abraham; that people fell away from him, and hee puniſhed them: according as their malice did increaſe and augment, euen ſo were their puniſhments alwayes the ſorer, vntill they came euen to the extremitie, inſomuch as God ſeemed euen to haue forſaken them, and to haue cutte them off from his houſe. And when he hath doone ſo, then wrought hee after ſuch a ſorte, as there remaineth yet ſome ſeede hidden vnder the grounnde, and in time will hee make it manifeſt that hee forgetteth not what he had ſaide, namelie that in the ſeede of Abraham all nations of the earth ſhoulde bee bleſſed. Cen.22.18. Loe heere a handfull of people whom God keepeth, euen after an incomprehenſible maner. Anon after, out of this, he raiſed a great multitude of people vntill that Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe was come. Bee the wicked and the contemners of God and his lawe eſcaped thereby? No, God hath puniſhed them. But nowe muſt we benefite our ſelues by this doctrine. For albeit that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath appeared for the ſaluation of the world: yet muſt the Church remayne vntill the ende: wee haue the promiſe that cannot fayle. But in the meane while wee ſee the thankeleſneſſe which is too common in the worlde, yea and it ſo ouerfloweth the worlde, that GOD muſt needes withdrawe his goodneſſe, and exclude vs from being partakers thereof, becauſe wee haue thruſt him farre from vs. And that is the cauſe of the deſolation which is to bee ſeene ſtill in the Popedome at this day. The Papiſtes woulde ſhielde themſelues againſt GOD and his worde, by alleadging that it is vnpoſſible that God ſhould forſake his Church: yea, but in the meane while they doe not vnderſtande howe they misbehaue themſelues againſt him, and are gone away from him, and cannot ſuffer him any way to come neere them. And why? Becauſe they driue away the Goſpel from them with ſwoorde and fire, ſo as Ieſus Chriſt hath no place with them, nor acceſſe vnto them. We ſee therefore, howe GOD at the firſt bluſhe ſeemeth to roote out thoſe whome hee had called, and nothing is to bee ſeene but confuſion, as if the Church were loſt, and vtterly wyped out of the worlde. Yet notwithſtanding God keepeth his owne, hee knoweth howe to accompliſhe his promiſe; which is, that the ſtate of the Church bee euer continuing: and we ſee the markes of it. For when it was to haue bin thought that there was no more trueth in the worlde, and that the ſeruice of GOD had beene altogether brought to nought, hee did ſet vp ſome doctrine againe. In deede the number of them that beleeue the Goſpell is little: yet neuertheleſſe it is a matter that exceedeth all expectation, and it woulde neuer haue beene thought, that hee would haue wrought after that faſhion, againſt all hope: in-Pſal.126.1. ſomuch that (as it is ſaid in the Pſalme) it might bee ſaide that it is as a dreame, if a man conſider howe the Goſpell hath beene ſet vp againe. Yet notwithſtanding it falleth out that the wicked, & they that are wilfully bent to euill, gaine nothing by that which God doeth, for it is to their more confuſion: but the faithfull haue wherewith to comfort themſelues, when they ſee that God doeth chaſtice them; for they perceiue that hee doeth it not of purpoſe to forget his mercie, or for that hee meaneth not to vſe it towarde them. Loe here a ſtaffe to ſtay vs by, when God chaſtiſeth vs for our ſinnes. For one fillippe of his finger were enough to bring vs to ruine, and to throwe vs into the deepeſt doungeon of death. As ſoone as GOD doeth but blowe vppon vs, (ſaith the holy ſcripture,)

Pſal.104.29 bee a man neuer ſo freſhe and flooriſhing, by and by hee withereth and droopeth. And what then ſhall become of vs if wee bee ſmitten with his mighty hande? Muſt wee not needes bee worſe than miſerable? Here therefore wee bee admoniſhed to ſtay our ſelues vppon ſome comforte, or elſe wee ſhall bee vtterly vndoone as ſoone as God giueth vs any token of his anger. Hereby wee ſee howe profitable this doctrine is for vs, where hee ſaith, that when God ſcourgeth thee, yet hee will not forget the promiſe which he ſwore to thy fathers: and albeit that thou bee thruſt out into the vttermoſt partes of the worlde, yet neuertheleſſe the Lorde will gather thee againe into this lande which he hath promiſed thee for thine inheritance. As often therefore, as God puniſheth vs for our ſinnes, be it that ech of vs haue his priuate diſeaſe or wretchedneſſe or any other token of the wrath of God: or elſe that wee be generaly ſcourged with the plague, with warre, with hunger, or with anie other affliction; firſt let vs acknowledge our ſins, and be ſorie that we haue offended our God, and prouoked his wrath againſt vs; and heerevpon let vs alſo bee alwayes reſolued in this point, that he will not ſo puniſh vs, but hee will yet giue place to his goodneſſe and pitie, and that we ſhall finde mercie at his hande, when we condemne our ſelues, and confeſſe our offences, and beſeech him to receyue vs into fauour, not for our deſertes but in reſpect of the couenaunt which hee hath made with vs; becauſe hee hath choſen vs to bee graffed into the bodie of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And like as in olde time hee declared by circumciſion, that the Iewes were a people ſanctified vnto him, euen ſo hath hee nowe giuen vs baptiſme, whereby he marketh vs, as it were to be of his flocke, and wherein wee haue a warrant that the bloude of our Lorde Ieſus is our clenſing, ſo as wee bee thereby waſhed from all our vncleanneſſe. Hauing this, let vs come boldlie to our God, for we haue here witnes that he wil receiue vs.

But to the ende that this doctrine may bee the better vnderſtoode, let vs followe the order which is kept by Moſes. When all theſe thinges (ſaith hee) bee come vppon thee, whether it bee the bleſſing or the curſe. Hee ſetteth the bleſſing foremoſt, to ſhewe that the ende whereat GOD doeth alwayes ame, is to drawe vs vnto him by gentleneſſe, and after a gratious and a louing manner. In deede if hee ſhould deale with vs according to our kinde, hee ſhoulde bee rough vnto vs at the firſt: but hee prooueth whether hee may winne vs by faire meanes, and therefore hee doeth alwayes vtter his goodneſſe towardes vs, and maketh vs to feele it. That is the cauſe why Moſes ſaith, Thou ſhalt firſt ſee the bleſſings, and haue experience of them. And in that reſpect al- Pſal.30.
ſo is GOD called gratious, liberall, long ſuffering, and ſlowe to anger. This word therefore muſt bee well weyed: for Moſes ſheweth what the nature of GOD is towarde vs, to wit, that hee deſireth nothing but to handle vs gentlie as a father doeth his children, and that hee taketh not anie pleaſure in dealing with vs roughlie. Thus much for one point

And on the other ſide, hee meant to doe the Iewes to vnderſtand, that ſeeing they had had experience as well of the one as of the other, that is to ſay, as well of Gods fauour and of the benefites which hee had promiſed them, as alſo of his puniſhmentes and corrections: the ſame ought to giue them the more light, and confirme them the better in the thinges which they hadde hearde, and that they had not beleeued. As for example.

The Iewes were taught, that if they ſerued God and obeyed him, hee woulde keepe them as his flocke and haue a ſpeciall care of them, and as it were dandle them in his lappe, and beſtowe all his richeſſe vppon them, and finallie deale with them as they coulde wiſhe: And likewiſe they were threatened on the contrarie ſide, that if they tranſgreſſed the lawe of God, and were wilfull and frowarde againſt him, they ſhoulde be driuen to feele his hande againſt them; and like as they had fought againſt him, ſo hee alſo woulde fight againſt them, Thus yee ſee howe the threatenings are declared vnto them as well as the bleſſinges; and they cared neither for the one nor for the other, but played the brute beaſtes, and tooke leaue to deale wickedlie: inſomuch that when GOD chaſtiſed them, they regarded it not. Neuertheleſſe, in the end it muſt bring them to conſideration of themſelues, when they make compariſon after this manner; As howe? God hath verified it vnto vs, and ſhewed it as it were with his finger that he hath not ſaid in vayne vnto vs, I wil bleſſe you Deut.28.1. if you walke in mine obedience. We haue perceiued it by experience. Again, as touching the threatenings, hee hath put them in execution, and wee haue beene blockiſh for a time, but yet it behooueth vs nowe to conſider the matter. Thus ye ſee howe the bleſſinges beeing ioyned with the puniſhments ſerued the better to bring backe the Iewes vnto God: and therefore they ought to haue touched them the neerer to the quicke. And that is the thing which Moſes ment in ſaying, Gods chaſtiſing of you when you haue doone amiſſe, is not the onely way whereby hee will inſtruct you. In deede hee will puniſhe you, but that is not the onelie meane whereby hee intendeth to teach you. For he wil firſt make you to feele his goodneſſe and patience, and when you haue conſidered both twain of them, then is it time or elſe neuer to call your ſelues to rememberance, and not to continue ſtill brutiſh and ſenſeleſſe as you haue bin afore. That is the thing which we haue to mark in the firſt place.

Nowe laſtlie hee ſaith, When God hath caſt thee out among the ſtrange nations, if thou return there vnto thy hearte, (That is the worde which Moſes vſeth, but hee taketh it for remembrance) ſo as thou turne againe with al thine affection vnto the Lorde thy God to obey him, hee will then haue pitie on thee. Whereas he ſaith that the people ſhall bee driuen out of the lande, it is the vttermoſt of all the puniſhementes whereof hee had made mention afore, according to that which we haue alreadie touched, namelie that the lande of Chanaan was as it were a warrant, that GOD tooke the Iewes for the houſeholde people of his realme, of purpoſe to leade them from thence to the inheritaunce of the kingdome of heauen. Nowe on the other ſide, when the Iewes were driuen out of the ſaide Lande, they were as people aliened from God. Alas [might they ſay] what a caſe is this? For our God which ſtretched out his hande to bring vs out of the lande of Egypt, did promiſe vs therewithall that we ſhoulde poſſeſſe all the lande that hee gaue to our father Abraham, and that it was vnto vs a token and a mark of his Adoption: but now be we depriued thereof, and that is a token that hee hath vtterlie forſaken vs. Vppon this forewarning we haue to gather, that ſeeing God, (after meane puniſhmentes) did not onely promiſe and offer his mercie vnto the Iewes, but alſo euen when the rigour ſeemed extreeme, and the woundes incurable, yet hee lefte them ſome hope, howbeit not vnto all, but vnto ſuch as were reſerued for ſeede (like as wee haue ſeene here before, and is alſo treated of aſwel in the firſt chapter of Eſay as alſo in the tenth). Deut,28.6 Iſa.1.9.& 10.20. The ſame may ſerue vs to great purpoſe. For when our Lorde puniſheth vs but meanely, wee take courage to returne vnto him: but if hee continue to puniſhe vs a long while, and it ſeemeth that hee hath quite caſt vs off, and wee perceiue nothing but rigour: then wee be ſo beaten downe, that wee bee not able to open our mouth to call vppon him, and wee bee ſo caught with feare and ſorowe, that wee hadde leauer to pine away in our miſeries, than to returne vnto him. To the ende therefore that wee may fare the better by it, becauſe men bee ſo vntowarde to be brought vnto God, when hee afflicteth them roughlie: let vs marke wel what is ſaide in this place. Although that GOD doe ſmite ſtroke vppon ſtroke, although it ſeemeth that hee is determined to ouerthrowe altogether: yet notwithſtanding hee doeth ſtill call vs backe vnto him, and woulde not haue vs to bee faintehearted. And therefore let euerie man ſtirre vppe himſelfe, and although hee bee at his wittes ende as they ſay, ſo as hee woteth not where to become: yet let him not ceaſe to take hearte in conſideration of this promiſe and to ſay, No, although I were brought to the botome of the graue, yet doth my God call me backe to him, and telleth mee that ſeeing I am touched with repentaunce, he will haue mercie on mee to forgiue mee all my ſinnes. This therefore is it that wee haue to marke further in this place.

Nowe Moſes ſheweth what is true repentaunce, ſaying: If thou doe turne vnto the Lorde thy GOD with all thy minde. For euen the wickeddeſt, after God hath ouermaiſtered them, will not ſticke to ſay, wee haue doone amiſſe, and they will ſeeme to bee chaunged. But as ſoone as God giueth them anie releaſement, by and by they are worſe than euer they were before. Or if they doe not ſhewe at the firſt daſhe, that they bee rebellious againſt GOD, yet doeth their hypocriſie diſcloſe it ſelfe at the laſt, and it will appeare that there was a hidden ſore within, and that there was nothing but filthie matter. To bee ſhort, there are verie fewe, that turne themſelues to GOD, though they bee admoniſhed by neuer ſo many afflictions. Therefore hath Moſes in this place defined true repentaunce: and the ſame ought to ſerue vs for manie purpoſes. Let vs firſt of all marke, that when God doth puniſh vs we think it enough to be ſmitten with one ſtripe or twain. O, ſay wee, In deede I haue offended: but ſeeing I doe acknowledge my ſinne, ſhoulde God perſecute mee yet ſtill? Hee ſeeth yͤ I am a frayle & a wretched creature, what wold he haue more than the confeſſion of my faulte? But we looke not on the other ſide, that our heartes bee ſtill hardened in wicked affections, and that it is become of vs, (according as the Prophet complaineth) Psal.81.8. They turne vnto mee, howebeit no longer than whileſt I doe puniſhe them: for afterwarde they are worſe, or elſe they become as bad as they were afore. Seeing then that the caſe ſtandeth ſo, let vs learne, that when God, after hee hath puniſhed vs once, doeth hold on, and the plague increaſeth vppon vs; it is not without cauſe that hee doeth ſo. For hee perceiueth that there is yet a hidden naughtines in vs, like as a Phyſition perceiueth well that although a diſeaſe bee mended in outwarde apparaunce, yet the roote thereof is not quite taken away. The ſicke perſon coulde well find in his hearte to bee let a lone: but hee doeth ſtill carrie the diſeaſe about him although hee feele it not. Let vs therefore learne to yeelde our ſelues patiently to the corrections which God ſendeth vs. If they continue longer than wee woulde, and our affections cannot abide it: wee ought ſo much the more to turne vnto him, ſpecially with all our hearte as Moſes ſaith. Therefore hee ſaith by his Prophete Ieremie, Ier.4.1. If you turne, turne vnto me, ye children of Iſraell. For hee ſeeth that this worde repentaunce is abuſed by men: for it rowleth in their mouth, and euerie man maketh a kinde of cloake thereof; as wee ſee the Papiſtes doe, which call it a dooing of penaunce, when folke make croſſes, or take a croſſe vpon their backe, or beſprincle themſelues with holy water, or ſay a mea culpa, or faſt a certayne day, or trotte on pilgrimage, and doe all other ſuch abhominations. Our Lord perceiuing that theſe are al but mockeries, ſaith, It is to mee, it is to me that you muſt turne. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, Am I a little babe, that you ſhoulde bring mee bables to pleaſe me, and to make me paſtime withall? No: but knowe yee that I am the liuing GOD which ſearcheth the heartes and knoweth all the thoughtes of men; and though there be neuer ſo much doubleneſſe in you, you ſhall not be able to deceiue me. Aſſure your ſelues therefore that I am hee to whome you muſt conuert. And in that reſpect doeth Moſes ſpeake here of the whole heart. Let vs conſider then that to pacifie the wrath of God when wee haue prouoked it, euerie of vs muſt enter into himſelfe and ſo examine all our thoughtes, as wee may be no more giuen to our owne ſenſualitie; and that if we goe about to be wiſe in our conceytes, it ſhall come to nought, and God muſt haue the gouerning of vs by his worde, and ouerrule our affections, that they may bee bridled, and for aſmuch as they boile againſt God, and reſiſt him, let vs thruſt them vnder foote: for we ſhall neuer bee able to dedicate our ſelues vnto God, vntil we haue forſaken al our owne luſtes, which be contrarie vnto him. Thus you ſee how men muſt examine their heartes, to come to GOD indeede, and to haue a right and a true repentaunce, ſuch as is heere mentioned by Moſes.

And nowe he addeth afterwarde, If thou doe then call to remembrance. Wherein yet better than before, he ſheweth the fruit of the chaſtiſements which GOD doeth ſende vs. And that is alwaies to the ende to induce vs to ſuffer afflictions patiently; for we be like litle children, as yͤ Apoſtle Heb.12.11. ſaith in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. As long as a father holdeth the rodde in his hand, & ſcourgeth his childe, there is nothing but weeping & ſobbing: and euen ſo it is with vs. But if we could conſider of the ende of our afflictions, to witte, that they be a furtherance to our ſaluation, and doe ſtand vs in ſteede of medicines, (as we haue alreadie ſaid) then were we too much vnthankfull if we coulde not finde in our heartes to bowe downe our neckes to him and ſay: Lorde conuert thou vs at thy pleaſure ſeeing thou knoweſt that we haue neede thereof, and makeſt it profitable to our ſaluation, and doeſt not ſhew thy ſelfe altogether a rigorous Iudge. Moſes therfore prouoketh vs thereunto by telling vs, that although the people of Iſrael hauing beene afflicted, perceiued not at the firſt that their ſins were the cauſe why they were caſt into farre countries, and as it were rooted out of the Church, and by all likelihoode vtterly reiected of God: yet ſhoulde they at length beginne to perceiue it. And therefore let vs learne to looke alwayes vnto our GOD when he ſcourgeth vs: and if we haue forſlowed to do it, yet when he holdeth on ſtill, let vs then at leaſtwiſe remember him, ſeeing that he doth ſtill viſit vs; and let vs not be wilful ſtubborne.

But indeede this is not common to all: for there be many which continue frowarde, and are vtterly cut off from the Church, and from al hope of ſaluation. And therefore ſeeing that the world is vnreformable, Let vs looke wel about vs that we bee not compriſed in the number of thē: and when God maketh vs to feele his wrath, let vs ſo feele it: as it cauſe vs not to defie him, & to vomet our bleaſphemies as many do; but to bring vs in minde of our ſinnes, and to make vs aſhamed of them; and moreouer, that therwithall wee may bee aſſured to finde mercy in our GOD: for without that, it is impoſſible that wee ſhoulde haue anie deſire to turne vnto him. As for thoſe which thinke that God will not be mercifull vnto them, albeit that they doe acknowledge their ſinnes, yet will they ſquatte them downe in their filthineſſe, and they can neuer be deliuered or diſpatched from thē. And why ſo? Becauſe they runne away from God, neither is it poſſible to make them to come neere him; for that they haue none vnderſtanding of his fatherly goodneſſe, nor bee aſcerteyned that he is readie to receyue them vnto him. Hereby wee ſee, howe the diuell hath reigned and yet doeth reigne in the Popedome. For they talk much of repentance, but the wretched ſinners are ſtill left in doubt. In deede they giue them many plaiſters; howbeit not to purge away the inward vncleannes;but rather to qualifie,and to ſweeten the ſore on the outſide, which inwardly continueth ſtill: whereuppon they become drunken with this fooliſh opinion, of ſatiſfying God, & that thereby they deſerue and make full amendes. Thus the wretched Papiſtes doe their endeuour to reconcile themſelues to God,but with what certaintie? None at all: all is haphazard. Againe they alleage the keyes of the Church; but thoſe keyes, bee Pardons, Satiſfactions, and Indulgences, and Merites before God, but no promiſe at all. Nowe contrariwiſe wee muſt vnderſtande,that, for to haue true repentance, it is behouefull that God doe declare vnto vs his fatherly loue, and that in making our repaire to him we bee fully certified that we ſhall not be diſappointed, nor haue the gate ſhut againſt vs. How ſo? Moſes hath ſpoken obſcurely of the Redeemer, for the time was not yet come that the plaine declaration ſhould bee made thereof. At this day Ieſus Chriſt doeth call vs, and wee vnderſtand what Heb.9.15. the Apoſtle ſaieth; namely, that Gods Throne is not dreadfull and terrible vnto vs to make vs afraide: but that it is a Throne of Grace vnto vs,to the which wee may boldly approch.Nowe then let vs acknowledge the ineſtimable good which God hath doone vs, in drawing vs out of this maze of the Popedome, and in telling vs, that hee is readie to receiue vs to mercie, and to deale with vs like a father, notwithſtanding that we haue bin rebellious children towardes him. Thus did Moſes meane in this place.

Yea and for a more confirmation thereof he addeth, Although thou wert diſperſed into the vttermoſt coaſtes vnder heauen, yet the Lorde thy God will fetch thee from thence, and bring thee againe into this lande which he hath promiſed thy fathers, and there hee will increaſe thee more than euer thou waſt. Moſes doeth here ſhewe that wee muſt not miſtruſt God, albeit that there bee nothing but troubles,myſeries and calamities, ſo as wee bee vtterly forlorne.Let vs haue an eye to this comfort. For ye ſee here howe yͤ people of Iſrael was like a bodie torne in pieces, and driuen away as duſt before the winde: and yet notwithſtanding God doeth promiſe to gather them together againe. Nowe ſeeing hee hath wrought ſo with them; wee muſt vnderſtand that he will doe the like toward vs at this day, and that although we were diſperſed,he will not fayle to holde vs vnder his protection,ſo as we ſhall be gathered together againe, if Ieſus Chriſt doe the office of a Shepeheard towarde vs, and wee bee of his flocke. And hath he not in deede accompliſhed towarde vs that which is ſpoken heere? Wee muſt conſider, not onely howe God hath gathered vs in, when wee were vnder the tyrannie of the Pope; but moreouer howe he hath aſſembled vs heere in a flocke: wee muſt vnderſtand that wee bee heere vnited all together, as if wee were of one houſholde. Whereas we were diſperſed and aliened from our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, he hath now renuited vs to himſelfe. For as Paule ſaieth to the Coloſſians, his office is to gather all thinges together as well in heauen Col.1,20. as in earth. So long as we bee cut off from the vnitie of faith, and aliened from Ieſus Chriſt, wee bee like duſt driuen with the winde, and in ſuch confuſed ſtate haue wee beene, but God hath deliuered vs from it. As often therefore as wee come into extremitie, let vs vnderſtande that God woulde haue vs yet to turne vnto him, and will giue vs furtheraunce thereunto: wherefore let vs plucke vp our heartes, following the exhortation that is giuen vs heere.

And by the way Moſes ſheweth that GOD doeth it not for any recompence which he looketh for at the peoples hand, but for loue of his owne free choiſe, and for his promiſe ſake, by the which he bounde himſelfe when he ſwore vnto Abraham to giue vnto him and his that land for their inheritance. Therefore when wee turne vnto our God to aske him forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, if wee woulde haue him mooued to ſhewe vs mercie: wee muſt not come vnto him vpon preſumption of our merites; we muſt not thinke to obtaine grace by our owne ſatiſfactions,or by our good workes,or by any other meanes: but wee muſt be wholly grounded vpon this,that it hath once pleaſed him to receiue vs vnto him, and alſo declared by his dooinges, that he will holde vs for his children, ſeeing hee hath giuen vs Ieſus Chriſt; by whom wee obtayne forgiueneſſe.When wee bee once grounded vppon this free mercie, let vs not doubt, but that our Lorde is alwayes preſt and readie to receiue vs to mercie. But if wee doe ſwarue neuer ſo litle from that way, wee ſhall ſo ſtray, that in ſtead of approching vnto God, wee ſhall goe further from him. That is the thing which Moſes meant to ſignifie, in making mention of the othe,whereby God had ſworne to their fathers that he woulde giue them the lande. Likewyſe if at this day wee perceiue the Church to decreaſe,yea euen ſo farre as it may ſeeme to be nothing; let vs vnderſtande that GOD wyll multiplie it, ſeeing hee hath made that promiſe, at leaſtwiſe if wee returne vnto him according as it is heere ſpoken. And ſeeing he hath iuſtified the knowledge of his mercie in the land of Chanaan,let vs not doubt at this day,but that to bring vs into the heritage of the kingdome of heauen,he will ſhewe himſelfe much more ſtedfaſt, yea and vtter ſuch power in our behalfe, that albeit wee ſee neuer ſo many lettes, as it were to ſhutte the way of ſaluation againſt vs, from the which euen our owne ſinnes doe turne vs away; yet ſhall the goodneſſe of GOD get the vpper hand, ſo wee bereaue not our ſelues of it altogether through our owne vnthankefulneſſe.Seeing then that we doe heare ſuch exhortations, let vs enter into examination of our ſinnes,and let euerie of vs confeſſe howe many wayes hee hath offended his God, and let all of vs in generall doe the lyke with one common accord. And when wee haue mourned and ſighed for them, let vs then pray vnto our good GOD, to touche vs ſo to the quicke, that wee may not onely come and confeſſe our ſinnes with our mouthes, and with certayne ceremonyes, but alſo returne to our GOD with heart and minde, ſo as he may aſſwage our plagues, griefes and afflictions, through his infinite goodneſſe, which hee hath manifeſted vnto vs by his Goſpell, and wee turne vnto him with ſure and infallible confidence, to obtaine fauour at his hand.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good GOD, with acknowledgement of our faultes: beſeeching him to cauſe his admonitions to profite in vs more and more; and that ſeeing he hath once called vs vnto him, he ſuffer not his labour to bee loſt in afflicting vs ſo many wayes, but that wee may finally returne vnto him: and that in ſo returning wee may yeelde foorth true righteouſneſſe and ſoundneſſe, ſo as wee double not ne play the hypocrites. And that to accompliſh this thing hee make vs to feele and to acknowledge his fatherly goodneſſe, that wee may bee altogether giuen ouer thereunto, and haue our eyes and all our ſenſes ſo fixed on our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, as wee may vnderſtand that it is by his meanes that wee muſt obtaine mercie of GOD, of the which wee bee vnworthie as touching our ſelues. That it will pleaſe him to beſtowe this grace not onely vpon vs, but alſo vpon all people and nations of the earth, &c.

The CLXX. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the thirtith Chapter.

6 And the Lorde thy God will circumciſe thy heart and the heart of thy ſeede, that thou mayeſt loue the Lorde thy GOD with all thine heart and with all thy ſoule, to the ende that thou maiſt liue.

7 And the Lord thy God will lay all theſe curſes vpon thine enemies, and vpon them that hate thee, and which haue perſecuted thee.

8 Thou then ſhalt returne, and obey the voyce of the Lorde, and doe all theſe Commaundements, which I commaund thee this day.

9 The Lorde thy GOD will make thee plentifull in all the woorkes of thy hande, in the fruite of thy wombe, in the fruite of thy Cattell, and in the fruite of thy Lande to thy welfare. For the Lorde will reioyce agayne ouer thee to doe thee good, lyke as hee did reioyce ouer thy fathers.

10 If thou obey the voice of the Lord thy God, in keeping his Commandementes and his ordinaunces written in the booke of this Lawe, and returne vnto the Lorde thy GOD with all thyne hearte and with all thy Soule.

Hitherto Moſes in promyſing ẏ God would vouchſafe ſuch fauour on his people, as to bleſſe them, hath ſpoken but of the thinges which concerne this preſent lyfe, as of bodily health, of foode, of peace, and of preſeruation from their enemyes. But nowe hee ſpeaketh of a higher and a more excellent matter, to wit, that GOD will chaunge the heartes of them which before were euil and froward. And that is a farre greater thing than to giue vs onely meate and drinke, and whatſoeuer elſe is to bee deſired for the fleſh in this tranſitorie lyfe. Wee haue moreouer to gather out of this text, that whereas the holy Scripture requireth vs to doe that which God demaundeth; it is not bycauſe wee haue the power to doe it: for GOD doeth not meaſure his commaundements after our power: albeit that wee be weake, yet neuertheleſſe wee bee bound vnto him: but when he hath ſhewed vs our duetie, it belongeth to him to giue vs the grace to accompliſh it. And this text doth ſhew it vs very well: for we haue ſeene it heretofore, (and Moſes doeth yet againe confirme the ſame,) ẏ men ought to turne to God; Deut. 30. that they ought to feare him with all their heart and with al their ſoule; & that they ought to obſerue his law. Now when we heare this, we may iudge that if men will imploy themſelues, & take a good way, it is in their libertie, and they haue free choiſe to gouerne themſelues well if they liſt: and the Papiſtes in deede doe abuſe themſelues with ſuch Textes. For as ſoone as they heare that God commandeth; they do forthwith conclude that wee are able to put all in execution. But we ſee howe Moſes ſpeaketh thereof. He ſaith, Thou ſhalt keepe the commandements of the Lord thy GOD, to loue him with all thine heart and with all thy ſoule; and then he addeth, It is the Lord that will giue thee ſuch a minde, & ſuch an affection. Alſo he ſaith in another place, Deut.10.16. Circumciſe your hearts this day vnto the Lord: and now he ſaith, It is the Lord that will circumciſe thine heart. It is his very office. We ſee then, that when God giueth vs his lawe, it is not bycauſe we are able to attaine to the accompliſhment of that which is contayned in it: but it is ynough for vs to vnderſtand wherein we bee bound vnto him: and that knowing once our infirmitie, we reſort to the remedie; euen to pray him that he will ſupply our default. But they may heere reply, that Moſes meaneth not, that onely GOD ſhold altogether change men, and reforme their hearts: for this place ſeemeth to ſhew, that God will ayde men, when they haue ſome good motion, and be diſpoſed to ſerue him: and that it is ſo, he ſaith, Thou ſhalt loue the Lord thy God with all thy heart. But yet hee addeth, And the Lord wil make thee to loue him. It ſeemeth therfore that Moſes placeth ſome good diſpoſition in men, and that they doe begin on their part, and that thereuppon God helpeth them and addeth that which they want. Thus do the Papiſtes turmoyle themſelues, when men alleage vnto them whatſoeuer is ſpoken in holy Scripture concerning the grace of God; as ẏ it is he which inlighteneth our conſcience, it is hee that giueth vs the knowledge to diſcerne good from euill, it is he that giueth vs wiſedome to walke as becommeth vs, it is he that giueth vs power to reſiſt temptations, it is he that wealdeth & guideth our hearts in his obedience; it is he that giueth vs the power and vertue to continue: when men tell them any of theſe thinges, O [ſay they] it is true that men doe not all; for, ſeeing that they be weake, God muſt ayde them: but yet doeth it lye in them to guide themſelues, and to haue ſome good preparation; and moreouer it lyeth in them alſo to followe the grace of God and to receiue it; and hauing accepted it to make it to preuaile. To bee ſhort, the Papiſtes make a parting of ſtakes as if it lay in vs to ſeeke God, & then that it were in vs to put his grace in effect, in ſuch wiſe as it ſhould not be vnprofitable, and that there is alſo a certaine agreement betweene God and man, ſo as God for his part doth one peece and we doe the other, yea and the principall part. But the meaning of Moſes is nothing ſo. For he ſheweth not what belongeth to man, as in compariſon and in reſpect of God. But it is the common faſhion of the holy ſcripture, firſt to ſhew vs what is our dutie, and then to adde that although we be not able to reſort vnto God when he calleth vs, yet we muſt not be faintharted at ẏ feeling of our weakneſſe: but rather reſort vnto him that is able to helpe it, according as he hath promiſed to do it. Let vs marke wel then, that when holy Scripture ſpeaketh of that which men doe owe vnto God, wee muſt not in that caſe ſtand ſcanning of our owne power and ability: for we ſhall not faile to be euermore detters, as we haue ſaid: and yet we muſt note alſo, that the vnabilitie which is in vs, proceedeth of our fault. Yet notwithſtanding the Papiſts alleage, that it were a crueltie in God to require of vs to do more than we can. It ſeemeth indeed, that God ought to be contented; if a man doe what he can. Now then if we cannot haue a good deſire, and if we haue yet leſſe power, that 2.Cor.3.5. we cãnot ſo much as think a good thought; wherfore doth God conſtraine vs to loue him perfectly? There ſeemeth to be no vpright dealing in ẏ. But we muſt repaire to our originall ſinne, which hindereth vs ſo as we ſerue not God no not haue not the will to ſerue him. Indeede God hath imprinted a will in vs by nature, and for as much as Rom.1.20. we are mẽ, we haue a diſcretion to diſcerne good and euill, whereby we be inexcuſable: and when we ſin, it commeth not of compulſiõ, neither are we forced by other meanes; but it proceedeth of our own will and inclination. But now let vs ſee whether our wil can bend it ſelfe both the waies, and is able to chuſe either good or euill? No. For we be captiues vnder ſinne: and whence cõmeth Rom.6.17. & 7.14. this captiuitie and bondage? From the offence of Adam. Seeing therefore that the euill is in our ſelues; wee muſt not ſeeke for fonde and vnprofitable excuſes, for we ſhall win nothing thereby; but let vs ſtoope and condemn our ſelues. If God therfore require aught of vs, he doth vs no wrõg; and yet notwithſtanding, men may not reply that they be feeble and weake, for the euill ſhall euermore be imputed vnto them, & they ſhal be found guiltie thereof. But now let vs come back to the matter which we haue touched. The holy ſcripture ſetteth before vs the lawe of God as ẏ thing which we ought to follow; and that is our rule. We for our part doe draw cleane contrary. Whereto then ſerueth the law of God ſo long as it is but a dead letter, that is to ſay, ſo long as we haue but our eares beaten therewith, or ſo long as it is written but in paper & parchment, or in ſtones as this was, as it is in deede ſo long as it is but preached vnto vs? It ſerueth but to our condemnation, ſo as we be there conuicted and can no more pleade ignorance: but rather ſhew our ſelues open rebels, in that we bow not downe our neckes, to receiue the yoke which God hath ordained for vs. That is the cauſe why the lawe of God vnder Moſes did bring nothing but wrath. Therefore he ſaith ẏ it doth augment ſinne; and Rom.4.15. Rom.5.2. 2.Cor.3.7. conſequently that it is vnto vs the meſſenger of death. So then, let vs marke well, that whereas God teacheth vs what wee ought to doe; albeit ẏ the ſame doctrine ought of it ſelfe to ſerue vs to ſaluation: yet neuertheleſſe it bringeth vs nothing but condemnation, euen bicauſe of our ſin. Such is the falling out of it; but howſoeuer ẏ caſe ſtand, yet muſt the law of God alwaies condẽne vs. Now after that God hath conuicted men, & beaten downe their pride, to the intent they ſhould not preſume of themſelues; he addeth the promiſe, and ſaith: Go to, It is true ẏ your hearts be incircumciſed, it is certaine ẏ you haue blind motions, and that you be corrupted in all your nature: but I will change your heartes, I will renue your mindes, I will reforme you to my ſelfe: whereas heretofore you haue been rebellious againſt me, & there hath bin nothing in you but malice: henceforth there ſhalbe a readines to obey my lawe. God giueth that very promiſe. Whereby hee ſheweth that whatſoeuer hee commaunded vs afore, our doing thereof ſhalbe by his only power, & not in any part by our own.

In this caſe it is not for vs to father the cheefe part vppon our owne free will, no nor the one halfe neither, for God muſt haue all the prayſe without exception, and that whatſoeuer we doe, doe proceede of his woorking of it in vs, and of his reforming of our wittes, and of his changing of vs. And for that cauſe the holy Scripture 2.Cor.5.17. ſayth, that we be made newe creatures. When it ſayth ſo, doth it meane that men were earſt good? No, but that GOD doeth reforme them. And in deede if it were in vs to amende our ſoules, and to renewe them; wee ſhoulde doe more than GOD doeth. GOD hath created our bodyes and alſo our ſoules; but yet notwithſtanding, what bring wee from our mothers wombe, but all maner of curſedneſſe? For (as I haue ſayde) wee bee infected with originall ſinne. Thus doeth GOD make vs mortall men; yea, but in the meane whyle, there is this miſcheefe, namely, that wee bee aliened from him and from all goodneſſe. Nowe if men were able to deliuer themſelues out of the curſe wherein they bee, and could giue themſelues a newe power: ſhoulde not they then doe more than GOD hath doone? Nowe then whereas Moſes ſayeth in this place, The Lorde will circumciſe thy heart to loue thy GOD with all thy hearte and with all thy ſoule: hee ſheweth thereby that if wee doe amiſſe, (as we doe indeede,) wee cannot haue ſo much as any one good motion to come vnto GOD, vntill wee be altogether renewed by Gods working in vs: and therefore that we muſt not be fainthearted. Wherfore? For when he hath taught vs what we ought to doe, he giueth vs alſo the power to performe it. After hee hath taught vs by the voyce of men, hee teacheth vs alſo by his holy Spirite in our heartes; and that teaching is of efficacie; ſo as wee doe not onely knowe the good, but alſo wee haue a deſire to followe it and to giue our ſelues ouer vnto it. And Iohn.6.44. that is the cauſe why hee ſayeth that we bee drawen vnto him. And indeede Moſes ſayth not, The Lorde will circumciſe thyne heart, to the ende that thou mayſt bee able to loue him, but hee ſayth, to the ende that thou loue him. Hee ſheweth that GOD doeth not onely giue vs the power to will well, but alſo doeth throughly faſhion vs to the ſame. And that is a further point wherein the Papiſtes doe abuſe themſelues too groſſely: for when they ſpeake of the grace of the holy Spirite, they vnderſtande that GOD in deede giueth vs the power, if it ſeeme good to vs: but yet that all the ſame lyeth in our diſcretion, and that GODS woorking in vs is not in ſuch ſorte, as that both our liſting and our performing proceede both thereof. But it is too nygardely a ſpeaking of the grace of GOD, that he ſhould ſay vnto man, Well, I wil giue thee power that thou mayſt doe well, if thou wylt: but I will lay the brydle on thy necke, and when thou haſt a good will, and that of thy ſelfe, if thou haſt conſtancie and power to put it in execution: thou mayeſt well doe it, and I will helpe thee therein. If GOD ſhoulde doe ſo, what ſhoulde become of our ſaluation? For can men in ſuch frayltie as wee doe feele, and amiddeſt ſo many combattes as Sathan doeth deliuer vs, haue one onely firme and conſtant will? It is impoſſible. Moſes therefore ſayeth not, that GOD will circumciſe our heartes, to the intent wee may haue power to feare him: but hee putteth the thing in effect, to the intent that wee ſhall feare him; after which manner alſo hee ſpeaketh by his Prophetes, as well Ieremie as Ezechiel. Ier.31.33. Hee ſayeth, that hee will put his feare in our Ezec.36.26 heartes. Hee ſayeth not that hee will giue them power. And then will I make them (ſayeth hee) to walke in my commaundementes. This is it that GOD doeth attribute vnto himſelfe, to wit, that hee will ſo imprint his Lawe in our heartes, as wee ſhall haue a will agreeable vnto his: and then hee will guide and gouerne vs in ſuch ſorte as wee ſhall ouercome all temptations, and accompliſh that which hee commaundeth vs. It belongeth not to vs then, to challendge ſuch prayſe to our ſelues. Thereby wee ſee that the Papiſtes deale treacherouſly in all the doctrine of freewill: for all their whole ſeeking is to robbe GOD of all that euer the holy Scripture declareth to bee his, and which hee reſerueth to himſelfe, and to ſpoyle him of his honour, vſurping it euerie man to himſelfe. Let vs therefore beware of this diueliſh arrogancie, and let vs vnderſtande that Saint Paule hath not ſayde without cauſe, That it Phil.2.13. is GOD that woorketh in vs both the wyll and the deede. Saint Paule ſayeth not after the manner of the Papiſtes, that when God giueth vs the meane, wee may bee able to will that which is good, but hee ſayeth, that hee will put the will in vs. And then hee addeth, that GOD in likewiſe doeth woorke the matter, that is to ſay, hee accompliſheth the good woorkes in vs: and the whole is perfourmed (ſayeth hee) after his owne will. Therefore, whereas the Papiſtes ſaye that GOD hath reſpect whether wee bee able to vſe his grace well or no: and that according as euerie man behaueth and gouerneth himſelfe, GOD dealeth with him thereafter: Saint Paule ſayeth that it proceedeth altogether of GODS good pleaſure. And yet it is not therefore to bee ſayde that wee bee blockes of wood. But let vs marke well what Saint Paul concludeth, that is, that wee muſt walke in feare and warineſſe, woorking our Phil.2.12. ſaluation. What? Is it in vs to doe it? No: but hee ſheweth that wee bee inſtrumentes of GOD, and that when hee giueth vs the wyll and power to perfourme, it is bycauſe that euerie one of vs ſhoulde offer himſelfe to doe his indeuour, howbeit vnder the leading of the holy Spirit, acknowledging that all of it proceedeth from aboue: and Saint Paule ſayeth that wee muſt doe it with feare and carefulneſſe, to the intent wee bee not vnprofitable; and yet that in the meane while, there bee not any drop of preſumption in vs, to ſuppoſe that wee haue any abilitie or power of our ſelues, but that GOD bee honoured as hee deſerueth. Nowe wee ſee, what is the naturall ſenſe of this Text, where Moſes promiſeth vnto the Iewes that GOD will circumciſe their hearts. Thereby hee ſheweth that it is not ynough for men to haue the Lawe preached, and to haue their eares beaten therewith, and to vnderſtande what their duetie is: for all that will be but as a dead thing, vntill the time that God doe chaunge their heartes, and reforme them, and woorke within them; and that the affections of men and their thoughtes bee guided by the holy Ghoſt.

And by the way hee ſheweth heere the vſe of Circumciſion, which is another poynt worthie to bee marked. For the fantaſticall fellowes of our dayes, which woulde take away the Baptiſme of little children, neuer vnderſtoode the vſe of Circumciſion. It ſeemed vnto them that it was but a temporall matter, yea and a tryfling thing, and that it was not ſpirituall for the auncient fathers: in ſo much that the curſed heretike which was puniſhed in this Towne, mocked all the Sacramentes of the Lawe of Moſes. Abraham [ſayd hee] had but a ſhadowe of the heauenly lyfe; and albeit that hee was named the father of the faithfull, and it appeareth, that hee did altogether ſtay himſelfe vppon the celeſtiall heritage: yet was hee not touched therewith, neither dyd the fathers knowe GOD, but worſhipped an Angell which was there in a viſible ſhape in ſteade of GOD. Theſe bee the horrible Blaſphemies, which inſue when men doe ſo ſeparate the Lawe from the Goſpell. In deede wee haue at this day a grace which ſurpaſſeth that grace which GOD ſhewed to our fathers: but yet muſt wee not ſo bereaue, Abraham of the ſpirituall kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, as to make Circumciſion to bee but an earthly Sacrament. Therefore let vs beare well in minde, that when GOD ordayned Circumciſion, beſides that it was a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of fayth, (as Saint Rom.4.11. Paule ſayeth in the fourth Chapter to the Romanes:) it did alſo ſhewe vnto men that they ought to bee mortifyed, and renewed by regeneration to the obedience of GOD. Whereby wee may gather, that Circumciſion ſignifyed the ſame thing vnto the Iewes, which Baptiſme importeth vnto vs at this day. What haue wee in Baptiſme? That wee bee bleſſed in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; and that whereas wee haue nothing but accurſedneſſe by the heritage of Adam, wee be ſanctifyed to bee adopted into the celeſtiall heritage, ſo as God by iuſtifying vs, doeth accept them which were not earſt woorthie to bee numbred amongeſt his creatures. Againe, wee haue alſo a ſimilitude and a portraiture of death, that wee myght bee chaunged to ſerue our GOD. The ſame was likewiſe in Circumciſion: and Moſes doeth ſhewe in this place, that it was not a vayne figure. It was not a marke that GOD had ſet vppon his people, but onely to ſay, You are a choſen people, and in the meane whyle they ſhoulde haue thereby no promiſe, nor warrant of their ſaluation, nor of any thing that was ſpirituall. But contrariwyſe in ſaying that GOD will Circumciſe their heartes; hee ſheweth that this Sacrament, this viſible ſigne of Circumciſion, declared vnto them that they ought to bee chaunged, and that they ought to be a holy people vnto their GOD. And therefore let vs learne that Baptiſme at this day ſucceedeth circumciſion, like as Saint Paule ſayeth in the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians. Col.2.12. After hee hath ſhewed that Circumciſion remayneth not at this day as touching the outwarde vſe: hee ſayeth that wee bee Circumciſed, not by the hand of man, but in that wee bee buried in the Baptiſme of our Lorde Ieſus, whereby the olde man is mortifyed, that from hencefoorth the ſpirit of God may gouerne vs. Thus yee ſee what we haue to obſerue in this place, as touching the firſt poynt. Therefore let vs marke, that although the fathers which lyued vnder the Lawe were Gal.3.23. & 4.2. as little children vnder their Tutors and Ouerſeers: yet were they the children of GOD as wee are; and had the verie ſame promiſe of ſaluation, and the Sacramentes which GOD deliuered them, tended to the ſelfe ſame ende, and ſo conſequently were ſpirituall. Thus much concerning one point.

Nowe furthermore it is heere ſhewed vnto vs, that Circumciſion did not onely ſignifie vnto the Iewes, that they ſhoulde bee a holy people vnto GOD, and that they ſhoulde change the malice of their hearts: but it ſhewed alſo that God would do them the fauour to regenerate them by his holy Spirit. As at this day in Baptiſme, when the water is powred vppon the head of a little childe, it is not onely to ſignifie, that beyng come to mans age hee muſt ſerue GOD, and yet notwithſtanding is not able to doe it vnleſſe it bee giuen him from aboue: but the infant is baptiſed by the hande of another, and the hand of the Miniſter is, as it were the hand of Ieſus Chriſt, to whom onely it doeth appertaine to Baptiſe, as Saint Iohn ſayth: Wee in deede doe Baptiſe with water, but his office is to Baptiſe with the Spirit and with fyre. Therefore let vs marke it well that when the Miniſter layeth the water on the childes head, therein hee repreſenteth the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, witneſſing thereby, that our Lorde Ieſus will bee ſo gracious to as many as beleeue and are choſen of GOD his father; as to drawe them to him and to gouerne them, ſo as they ſhall become newe Creatures. And euen ſo is it with Circumciſion. Abraham in deede was circumciſed; but that was after an extraordinarie manner. But yet ordinarily it behooued men to bee circumciſed by the handes of them that were appointed thereunto: and thoſe did repreſent the perſon of God. It was therefore a teſtimonie that men of themſelues could not be circumciſed, but that it was neceſſarie that God ſhoulde put his hande thereto, and that he ſhould change them.

Seeing it is ſo, let vs marke, that in all the Sacramentes wee bring nothing of our owne, but that wee doe rather come to receiue that which is offered vnto vs in the name of GOD. The Sacraments then be not meritorious matters, that men might alledge any ſeruice that they had doone; but rather come to ſeeke that which they want. Whereby wee ſee the fooliſhneſſe that is in the Iewes: for they boaſt themſelues of Circumciſion, as if it had beene a great vertue, and woulde needes bring it in reckoning, as if God had beene beholden vnto them, bycauſe they were circumciſed. To bee ſhort, whenſoeuer deſeruing and grace came in queſtion, the Iewes pretended that they were not ſaued by the free goodneſſe and mercie of God. And wherefore? To what end ſerued yͤ circumciſion? It ſerued for a teſtimonie, for an earneſt, for a viſible ſigne, to declare yͭ it is God that doth all in vs. But theſe miſerable beaſtes vnderſtand not that. See here I pray you the vnthankfulnes of men; which hath taken place not with that nation onely, but among the chriſtians alſo, where yͤ goodnes of God hath bin vttered much more at large. Behold, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt cal-
Col.2,10. leth vs vnto him, he telleth vs that we muſt ſeeke all our welfare in him: & yet the Papiſtes haue not ceaſſed to diſtinguiſhe, and to ſeeke out a woorke, which is wrought on mans part as they terme it. They haue yeelded that the principall part of the Sacramentes is a diuine worke; but yet neuertheleſſe they ſticke not to ſay, that men doe bring thereunto ſomewhat of their owne. And no maruaile. For we ſee to what point they are come; namely that they haue chaunged the Supper of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, into a charme, and a diueliſh ſorcerie. Thus ſaide Ieſus Chriſt;
Matt.26.26 Take, Eate: he commandeth vs to receiue it: & the Papiſtes make God to beleeue, yͭ they do offer it vnto him. And further they ſtabliſh thereupon a worke of merite, euen the moſt excellent yͭ euer they could dreame of. But yet for al that we ſee how yͤ diuell hath bewitched them, ſo as they haue changed yͤ whole order of nature. For in ſted of receiuing yͤ thing with humilitie which God offered them; they haue preſumed to offer vnto him the things which they haue forged in their owne braine: & doe make themſelues beleeue, that all thoſe things are acceptable vnto him, yea and that he is very much beholding to them for ſo dooing. So much the more therefore doth it ſtand vs in hand to mark that which is ſpoken here, namely, The Lorde thy God will circumciſe thy heart. So then, ſeeing God hath ſhewed vs what Baptiſme doeth ſignifie, let vs vnderſtande howe it is our duetie to reforme vs, and to renounce our owne nature to ſerue GOD. But doe wee once knowe that? Then let vs proceede to the promiſe that is giuen vs, which is, that bycauſe wee can doe nothing, GOD ſayth that he will put to his hand, that wee may bee chaunged, and become new creatures, through his holy ſpirite. This is in effect that which wee haue to obſerue in this place.

Nowe Moſes addeth, That thou mayſt lyue, not that God dealeth with vs according to our deſeruings: but bicauſe wee be ſlouthfull, therefore he addeth this promiſe, namely, that wee ſhall be bleſſed of God: and whatſoeuer he hath ſayd to make vs to walk in his obedience, it is to ſhewe vs, that wee muſt walke in ſuch ſort, as wee prouoke not the vengeaunce of GOD againſt vs, if wee will bee bleſſed of him. It is true that hee may alwayes puniſh vs by good right: and that although hee guide vs, and that wee haue a good will to ſerue him, yet is there ſuch imperfection in vs, as wee bee euermore faultie before him: but yet hee forbeareth vs. And therefore when theſe thinges be put together, namely, that GOD maketh vs to walke according to his Lawe, and that hee doeth it to the ende that wee may lyue; it is all one as if it were ſayde, that men bereaue and ſpoyle themſelues of the grace of GOD, bycauſe they are wicked, and liue not as becommeth them. And therefore God is fayne to redreſſe it, and to drawe them vnto him, and to reforme them, and by that meane to make them to inioy all his bleſſings.

Nowe hee addeth thereunto, That hee will reioyce ouer them for good, as hee reioyced ouer their fathers. This is a manner of ſpeeche that importeth much. In deede GOD is not ſubiect to our paſſions, to reioyce after the manner of men, there is no ſuch matter in him: but hee ſpeaketh thus, for that hee coulde not ſufficiently expreſſe the loue which hee beareth to vs, but by ſuch ſimilitudes. The thing then which the holy Ghoſt meant, is that GOD holdeth vs ſo deare, and beareth vs ſuch feruent loue, that a father reioyceth not more when hee is able to aduaunce his childe, or when he can doe him good, than GOD reioyceth in vs, when hee hath occaſion to doe vs good, as who woulde ſay, that his afflicting and ſcourging of vs doeth grieue and vexe him, and that hee doeth it contrarie to his inclination. For hee requireth nothing but to finde vs alwayes diſpoſed to receyue the riches which hee hath in his hande, which alſo hee is readie to beſtowe vppon vs. And therefore doeth GOD borrowe the ſame ſimilitude of men. For (as wee haue ſayde) hee is not like vnto vs, neyther muſt wee haue ſo fond imaginations, as to thinke that hee is mooued with paſſions eyther one way or other; but to the intent to manifeſt vnto vs, howe much hee loueth vs, hee crieth alas, when he is to afflict thoſe to whome he meaneth to doe good. Alas [ſayeth hee] muſt I auenge my ſelfe Iſa.42.13.
as of myne enemyes, and reioyce mee in vexing them? Hee calleth them his enemyes, and yet hee ſpeaketh ſtill of the Iewes, whom hee had choſen: but hee preſuppoſeth that they made warre againſt him, and that therefore hee was driuen to be reuenged of them: howbeit hee declareth that it was to his griefe. Let vs therefore learne to taſte of this loue whereof the holy ſcripture ſpeaketh vnto vs; that we may be ſo rauiſhed therewith, as to deſire nothing more thã to ſubmit our ſelues to our God, which is in deede the thing that he ſhooteth at.

Wherefore is it that God forceth himſelfe to ſhewe vnto vs ſo vehement an affection? It is to mollifie the hardnes of our hearts, that we may be enflamed with an other maner of zeale than wee haue. Will we then enioy our God? Let vs giue him occaſion to doe vs good, let vs (I ſay) ſuffer him to be mercifull and liberal towards vs; when wee hinder not God to doe vs good, hee proteſteth that he is glad of it. And cōtrarywiſe, when we lay a barre in his way; ſo as he cannot vſe his gratious goodneſſe towards vs, in powring out his benefites vppon vs as hee for his Iſa.63.10. parte is ready to doe: hee ſayth, that we grieue his holie ſpirit. For after that manner ſpeaketh the Prophet Iſay. They haue grieued the ſpirite of God (ſayth hee.) Not that God is ſubiect to vexation of minde, as I haue ſayd already; but it is to ſhewe that men are ſo much the more faultie, and to cauſe them to abhorre their naughtineſſe the more, when they bee thus rebellious againſt him, and cannot ſuffer him to doe them good. Moſes dooth adde moreouer, Becauſe thou ſhalt haue hearkened to the voyce of the Lord thy God. Here hee commeth againe to the order of ſpeaking: for it is enough that hee hath tolde vs in one worde, that becauſe wee bee not able, God promiſeth to doe it. Yet neuertheleſſe hee continueth his office: and as hee was the lawegiuer ordeyned of God, ſo doeth hee require the people to walke vprightly. That is the cauſe why hee vſeth ſtill this ſpeech, ſaying: Becauſe thou ſhalt hearken to the voyce of the Lorde thy God, yea and that thy hearing ſhall bee to keepe that which is contained in the Lawe. Heereby he meaneth to ſhewe vs, howe wee ſhoulde obey God, that is to ſay, by what meane. And as touching the ende, wee haue ſeene heeretofore what it is: namely that hee requireth obedience at our handes, tō the ende hee may haue occaſion to deale with vs gently, and after a fatherly manner, and that hee deſireth nothing but to powre out his great treaſures vppon vs. It is then to our profite and ſaluation that wee ſhoulde obey him. That is the ende, and the meane is, by hearing his voyce. We muſt therefore beware that wee rebell not againſt him, nor bee deafe eared when hee ſpeaketh vnto vs, except wee meane to grieue him, as hee ſayeth in the Pſalme. Bee not rebellious as your fathers Pſal.95.9. were, which prouoked Gods ſpirite euery day. There God complaineth that hee was prouoked to wrath, when that the people grieued him, and that hee was fayne to enter into a diſliking of them. So then, let vs holde this rule that is deliuered vnto vs, whereby to enioy our GOD, that hee may cauſe vs to proſper. The meane whereof is, that whileſt hee ſpeaketh vnto vs, wee haue our eares attentiue to receiue his voyce. And Moſes doeth therewithal expreſſe what is the manner of hearing God well. For there are a great many which bring Aſſes eares with them: they can wel ynough ſay that the thinges which are ſpoken are true, like the Aſſe which can well ynough nodde with his eares. So it coſteth them nothing to ſay, It is all good, I like well of it: but yet they bee not a whit touched at their heartes, nay rather, wee ſee they deſpiſe all that is tolde them; and they ſuppoſe that God is beholding vnto them, when they haue not openly ſpoken againſt him, nor blaſphemed his doctrine. But Moſes requireth an other manner of hearing farre differing from this: namely The performing of the thinges which are conteined in the lawe. It is ſayd in an other place, that Ieſus Chriſt auoweth them to bee Luke.11.28. bleſſed which heare the worde of GOD and keepe it. And there our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſpeaketh the more groſly, to the intent we might be the better enformed: for we forget things, and we think that if we confeſſe the Law to be good, righteous, and holy, wee bee then diſcharged: But our Lorde ſaith, that wee muſt firſt heare and then keepe. And Moſes ioyneth both together, as in deede, to heare and to keepe, are thinges which ought neuer to goe a ſunder. Yea, but yet therewithall hee giueth men a perfect rule, ſo they yeelde to bee taught of him; and they ſhall not neede, (as wee haue ſeene here before) to turne either to the right Deut.5.32. hand or to the left. Therefore let vs marke that the doctrine of the lawe dooth teach vs what is good, and that thereby GOD meaneth to informe vs playnely of his will, that wee may bee pliable to bee taught, and ſubmit our ſelues obediently vnto him. They then which inuent one thing or other of their owne braine, and would doe as they liſt: doe ſhewe that they rather ſerue their owne affections, than GOD. Therefore to order our lyfe well, wee haue none other rule but that which is giuen vs from aboue, nor any other than the very ſame which is contayned in the Lawe of God. In deede men doe euermore confeſſe that nothing ought to be done which is not agreeable vnto Gods will: but yet for al that, they forge and deuiſe ſtill ſome new inuention or other. And that is becauſe they thinke that God hath not in his Lawe declared vnto vs, all that hee requireth of vs, and that hee woulde haue vs to ſtay altogether vppon that. And therefore Moſes ſendeth vs backe to that which is ſet downe heere: as if hee ſhoulde ſay, Men muſt not take vppon them to adde any thing in this behalfe vnder colour that the ſame is well pleaſing to GOD: for I tell you that whatſoeuer God requireth and alloweth, hee dooth declare it in his Lawe: content your ſelues therefore with this doctrine, and bee not wiſer than needeth, ſeeing that your GOD hath taught you perfectly. For the better confirmation hereof hee ſayth, Becauſe thou ſhalt be conuerted to the Lorde thy God, with all thy heart, and with al thy ſoule. He ſheweth here, that before wee can heare GOD, or keepe his lawe, and bee obedient vnto him: wee muſt bee conuerted vnto him. In deede hee ſpeaketh to ſuch as were already ſwarued: But yet the nature of men is ſo in generall, that euen from our mothers wombe wee bee all of vs backſlyders, and enemies to GOD, and there is nothing in vs but vtter frowardneſſe and rebellion. God therefore muſt bee faine to chaunge vs from the roote. For he ſhall neuer get good fruite out of vs, vnleſſe the roote be firſt chaunged. Now this worde Conuerſion, or Turning importeth, that, whereas man hath his backe turned vpon God, he muſt turne againe toward him with his face: and that is all one as if the ſcripture ſhould ſpeake of a change; Rom.12.2. as it is in lykewiſe ſayde that wee muſt bee renewed. Wee muſt therefore conſider, that if wee haue the witte to ſuffer our GOD to teach vs, it is a token that wee are going toward him, and that wee bee willing to ſhewe the feare, obedience, and ſubiection which wee owe vnto his Lawe: But yet wee muſt come to this poynt, of conuerting or turning back. And wherefore? For vntill men doe knowe themſelues, how can they ſo order their lyfe, as it may bee acceptable to God? Wee muſt vnderſtand that wee bee altogether vntoward, and wee muſt beginne at this poynt, that whereas we haue bin lyke ſtrayed beaſtes, we muſt come and ſubmit our ſelues to our God. And for that cauſe the Prophet Ieremie ſaith, that the thornes which bee in vs Ier.4.4. muſt bee plucked vp, and then the good ſeede ſhal haue place: as if a place were full of thornes and bryers, and euill weedes, the ſame coulde not bee ſowen, neither coulde any plough goe there to put in the good ſeede: and therefore it muſt firſt bee ſtubbed and rid cleane. And that is the cauſe alſo why the Apoſte ſetteth downe the ſame ſimilitude, according to that which Moſes meant to ſhewe in this place, inſomuch that hauing treated of the feare of God, and of obeedience to his lawe, hee dooth purpoſely ſpeake of Conuerſion, ſaying it is needefull that men ſhoulde bee chaunged. And hee ſayth, with all the heart and with all the ſoule, ſhewing that the repentance which God requireth of vs, is that wee ſhoulde ſerue him vnfainedly, according as all the Scripture declareth. For men bee giuen to hypocriſie: It is enough with them to haue a certaine faire ſhewe and outward appearance, and it ſeemeth to them that God is payed. But he regardeth not that which is faire to the eye: hee would poſſeſſe our hartes and affections, that is the principall poynt. Meane we then to direct our lyfe in ſuch ſorte as it may bee allowed of GOD? It is not ſufficient to occupie our handes, our feete, and our eyes, and to order our outwarde lyfe vnblamably, ſo as men may finde no fault therewith: but alſo our thoughtes and our affections muſt bee altogether changed, as Saint Paule Rom.12.2. alſo declareth, that the ſame is our reaſonable ſeruice. Renue your ſelues (ſaith he.) He ſpeaketh neither of hands, nor of feet, but of al your vnderſtanding & of al your ſoule: you muſt of neceſſitie be changed, if you deſire that God ſhold accept the offering which you make vnto him of your lyfe. Herein we ſee how much the Papiſtes be deceiued, when they ſpeake of repentance. For among them repentance [or as they terme it, Penaunce) is but the dooing of trifling toyes, as to goe woolwarde, to trotte on pilgrimage, to doe other gewgawes, to cauſe ſome Maſſe to bee ſayde, or to beſtowe ſome Almes. That is the thing which the Papiſtes doe comprehend vnder this woorde Penance. But the holy ſcripture ſaith that men muſt conuert, that is to ſay, bee chaunged. There is no worde of gadding hither and thither, neither is there any talking of the making of any outward countenance; but that there muſt bee this renewing. And it declareth yet farther, yͤ the ſame renewing muſt be of our hart, and not onely of our hart, but alſo of all our whole heart; as if it were ſayd, that God accepteth no fayning, but rather vtterly abhorreth it. True it is that we cannot haue à heart ſo perfect as is requiſite, it ſhall want much thereof: neuertheleſſe, wee muſt miſlyke of all fayning, and not be double minded: And wee muſt enforce our ſelues to fight againſt all our wicked affections, and not ceaſe vntill our God doe raigne ouer vs as wee ſerue him, not vppon compulſion and in outwarde ſhewe, but of a free good will, and as ſetting all our delight in his Lawe, according to that way Pſal.119.1 which Dauid ſheweth vs by his owne example.

Nowe foraſmuch as wee bee ſo farre off from this perfection, and ſo guiltie before our God, as hee may iuſtly caſt vs off altogether: let vs come and with all humilitie fall downe before him, beſeeching him that it may pleaſe him to haue pitie vpon vs, and to receiue vs to mercie in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, blotting out our faultes and offences, and not to reſpect what wee haue deſerued: But rather to vſe his infinite mercie, that wee by that meane may bee reconciled vnto him, and nothing may hinder him to make vs to feele his grace and to guide vs by his holy ſpirite in ſuch ſorte as wee may bee all wholy his, and hee poſſeſſe vs, and euermore vpholde vs, as we haue neede, vntill he hath throughly reformed vs, and vtterly ridde vs not onely from the imperfection of our fleſhe, but alſo from this mortall body it ſelfe, to bring vs into the glory of his kingdome. That it may pleaſe him to beſtowe this fauour not onely vppon vs, but in lykewiſe vppon all the people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xxj. of April, 1556.

The CLXXI. Sermon which is the third vpon the thirtith Chapter.

11 For the commaundement which I commaund thee this day, is not hidden from thee, nor farre off from thee.

12 It is not in heauen, that thou mighteſt ſay, which of vs ſhal go vp into heauen and fetch it vs, to make vs heare it that we may doe it?

13 Neither is it beyond the Sea, that thou mighteſt ſay, which of vs ſhall goe ouer the ſea, and bring it vs, that we may heare it and doe it?

14 For this worde is very nigh thee, euen in thy mouth and in thine heart, to doe it.

Deut.29.29 Heretofore in the laſt Chapter, Moſes had put a difference betwixt Gods ſecrets and the law, ſaying that if wee bee learned in Gods worde, we ſhal alwayes find ſuch doctrine as is behouefull for our ſelues and for our children. And in the ſame place hee proteſted, that God ſpeaketh not in ſuch darke manner, as men cannot vnderſtand what hee meaneth: but that he expreſſeth his wil faithfully, to the end they ſhould haue good and conuenient inſtruction to their ſaluation. Nowe continuing his purpoſe, he ſaith farther, that the Lawe which he had declared, is not a ſecret doctrine, nor farre diſtant from the people, ſo as they might reply, ſaying: Who is hee that ſhall paſſe ouer the ſea? or who is hee that ſhall mount vp aboue the clowdes? No, ſaith hee, the worde is ſet downe before thine eyes, thou haſt it in thy mouth and in thy heart: and ſo is there no place at all of excuſe through ignorance: wherefore turne that grace to your profite; otherwiſe there is nought elſe to be looked for, but dreadfull condemnation before God vpon all them that continue in their blindneſſe; for here is that true light which ſhoulde guide vs in all the courſe of our lyfe. Wee ſee what Moſes meant in this Text; euen to exhort them to whom hee had deliuered the Lawe, to be attentiue to the ſame. Now for that purpoſe, he promiſeth them that in ſo doing, they ſhoulde not ſpend their time in vaine, but that if they would apply their ſtudie to bee edified in the worde of God, they ſhoulde finde ſufficient for that purpoſe. On the contrarie ſide, he pronounceth a terrible threatning againſt all them that goe about to ſhielde thẽſelues with ignorance. For there remaineth no more excuſe after that GOD hath ſpoken. If this were ſaid in the time of the Lawe: howe much more conueniently may it bee ſayd to vs of theſe dayes? For wee are not ignorant that God hath ſhewed himſelfe vnto vs more familiarly, than to them to whom Moſes ſpake: they had onely that which remaineth vnto vs to this day. But ſince that time, God ſent his Prophets, which haue more largely expounded ẏ thinges, that were briefely and darkly mentioned in the lawe. After all this, the Lorde Chriſt our ſauiour is come into the worlde, and hath accompliſhed that which was ſpoken by the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrues: that God had ſpoken after diuers manners vnto our fathers, Hebr.1.1. but nowe laſtly, he hath ſhewed himſelfe by the mouth of his onely Sonne, giuing vs a final concluſion of all Propheſies, and euery maner of doctrine. We heare alſo how our Lorde Ieſus ſayth: that many kinges and Prophets had longed to ſee and to heare that which his diſciples Luk.10.24. ſawe and heard, and that they found not that fauour. This alſo is ſpoken vnto vs. So then let vs marke well that the reproofe which Moſes layd to the Iewes whom hee taught, ſhall turne to our dreadfull condemnation, if we profit not in the ſchoole of God, whiles he taketh the care and trauaile to teach vs. Nowe for one point wee haue to note what is ſayd here: namely, That the word is not hidden nor farre from vs, ſo as wee might ſay: who is hee that ſhall paſſe ouer the Sea? who is hee that ſhall mount vp aboue the Clowdes? By theſe wordes God ſheweth, that when his word is publiſhed, it is not in vaine, as it is alſo ſayd by his Prophet Eſay. Eſa.45.19. Wee conclude then, that the doctrine of God is not of it ſelfe ſo incomprehenſible, that wee haue not abilitie to conceiue it: but that it is a perfect light whereby wee may beholde the way of ſaluation, as hereafter ſhall be ſhewed. It is ſuch an orderly kinde of teaching, as no body but our ſelues is to bee blamed, if we be not edifyed as we ought to bee, and ſo farre forth as is neceſſarie for vs. See here then I pray you the Teſtimonie which God giueth vnto his worde: namely, how it is not a iarring that cannot bee vnderſtoode, but a playne ſpeech, to the end that men might be brought vnto him, by knowing what is meete and expedient for them, by diſcerning betwixt the good and the euill. Nowe ſeeing that God ſpeaketh thus of his worde, wee muſt not doubt to finde that which hee ſaith. For otherwiſe we ſhoulde make him a lyer: but hee ſhall be found faithfull, and our ſelues condemned of Blaſphemie. Let vs marke farther, that the promiſe which God maketh vs, is infallible, to the end that wee ſhould ſtand faſt, and not wauer with any doubt or ſcruple, if wee ſuffer our ſelues to be taught by him. Then let vs but yeelde our ſelues teachable, and ſure it is, that God for his parte, will not ſuffer vs to dwell in ſuſpence, nor our mindes to wander, and to goe on groping like blinde folke. There is full certainetie of knowledge, if wee become good ſcholers to God, and reſiſt him not as robbers. And here a man may ſee the froward vnthankfulneſſe of the Papiſtes, which would make men beleeue, that they ſhould not venture to reade the holy ſcripture, nor once be ſo hardy as to looke into it, becauſe it is ſo high and ſo deep a thing, ẏ men ſhal be forthwith caryed away into many errors and many fancies. It is very true that men doe abuſe the trueth of God: and we our ſelues doe ſee, howe they turne the trueth into lyes: But yet to impute the ſame vnto Gods word; it were a diueliſh blaſphemie. And therefore let vs learn that we muſt ſettle our ſelues wholy vppon that which is ſhewed vnto vs here. For God himſelfe dooth aſſure vs that in his worde we ſhall finde the right vnderſtanding of all thinges that are expedient for our ſaluation. Thinke we that our good God will deceiue vs? Let vs therefoee abhorre the excuſe which the Papiſtes doe holde, of purpoſe to dwel, to neſtle, yea and altogether to rotte in their ignorance, But contrariwiſe, let vs truſt and wholy reſt vpon this promiſe, knowing that God doth vs an ineſtimable good turn, whenſoeuer it pleaſeth him to ſet his worde before our eyes; and to deliuer it to bee preached in our eares. Now then, whenſoeuer God giueth vs his knowledge, let vs vnderſtand that he will not haue ſuch a treaſure to be loſt or to periſh: but that we ſhould receiue it, and turne it to our cõmoditie. But herewithal we haue to mark alſo, that vntill God haue ſpoken and taught vs in his ſchoole, we haue neither learning not wit, but are as ſtray cattell, and at a worde vtterly forlorne. It is not therefore without cauſe that Moſes ſaith: The commaundement which I giue thee, is not hidden from thee, nor farre off, ſo as thou mighteſt ſay: Who ſhall goe vp to heauen? Who ſhall paſſe ouer the Sea? or who ſhall goe downe into the deepe? Hereby he giueth vs to vnderſtand that if God doe pluck back his word, ſo as we know not what hee requireth of vs, nor haue any teſtimony of his will: then may wee well ſeeke about lyke people in perplexitie, crying alas, what ſhall we doe? Who is hee that ſhal goe vp aboue the clowdes; who is hee that ſhall goe downe into the deepe? Who is hee that ſhall paſſe the Sea? To what end? There is no other inſtruction at all, whereby God giueth vs any certaine, and infallibe direction. When we bee thus deſtitute, wee bee as loſt people, hauing neither way nor path to leade vs, we can diſcerne nothing. Howe much ſoeuer men doe attribute to their owne wiſedome, ſuppoſing themſelues diſcreete enough to rule themſelues all their lyfe long: yet are they but wretched beaſtes, vntill God haue ſhewed them his will. Thus much for one poynt.

Nowe it is farther to bee vnderſtood, that if GOD come not firſt to vs, wee haue no meane to come at him. Who is he that can giue vs winges to mount vp to heauen? Or howe ſhall wee be able to paſſe ouer the deepe? Although we had the knowledge of all ſecrets of nature: well might we trauell all the worlde from place to place, and well might we mount aloft vnto the very ſkyes: and yet in the meane while wee ſhoulde want the cheefeſt thing of all, which is to vnderſtand the trueth of God; for that ſurmounteth al the wit of man. Let vs learne therefore, that God in his infinite goodneſſe, perceauing that we haue no meane to approch vnto him: giueth vs an eaſie acceſſe thither. Yea and hee commeth downe vnto vs, to faſhion himſelfe to our rudeneſſe and infirmitie. We ſee how he dooth (as ye would ſay) ſtammer with vs: for hee ſpeaketh not in ſuch loftineſſe, as might well ſeeme agreeable to his infinite glory & maieſtie; but the phraſe of holy ſcripture is groſſe and rude; by the which God ſpeaketh to vs in ſuch plaine manner, as there remaineth no excuſe for vs, if we vnderſtand him not plainely. Seeing it is ſo, let vs vſe this maruailous goodneſſe which God hath beſtowed on vs, and let vs holde vs to the ſame: and therewithall let vs alſo acknowledge our owne ignorance, that wee may humble our ſelues: for the very cauſe why ſo fewe folke doe profite in the holy ſcripture; is their owne oueerweening, in that they be forepoſſeſſed with an imagination of their owne wiſedome and ſharpneſſe of wit: and ſo being drunken with their owne conceite, they alwayes deſpiſe the worde of GOD. Let vs therefore humble ourſelues, for wee knowe that God nameth himſelfe the teacher of the lowly and of litle ones, to the ende wee ſhoulde not come to the hearing of his worde, as people puffed vp with our owne greatneſſe, fondly ſurmiſing our ſelues to bee men of great abilitie to diſcerne: but that our whole wiſedome ſhould conſiſt in obeying him, in conſidering that ſeing hee hath ſtooped ſo lowe vnto vs, it is not for any of vs to aduaunce himſelfe. And ſeeing wee haue no winges to mount vp aloft, let vs take heede that wee attempt it not: for ſo may wee fall and breake our neckes, mount wee neuer ſo litle.

Pſal 19 [illegible]
Pſal.11 [illegible]

But let vs marke moreouer, that his promiſe dooth importe alſo a condemnation to them that haue their eares continually beaten with the worde of GOD, and yet remaine hardhearted ſtill, and receiue no profite thereof at all. In deede the Goſpell (wherein the Law of righteouſneſſe is conteyned) is preached continually: and if wee be of that ſorte which S. 2.Tim.3.7. Paul ſpeaketh of, which are alwayes learning and neuer come to the knowledge of the trueth; thinke we that wee bee excuſable before God? Surely no. It will come to paſſe that whatſoeuer we haue at any time heard of the worde of God, the ſame muſt come to reckoning and we ſhall be reproued of vnthankfulneſſe, becauſe great treaſure ſhall haue periſhed without any benefite vnto vs. Wee ſhall not haue heard that Sermon in all our lyfe, which God will not lay to our charge at the latter day: as how? How haue you profited by it? Wee haue not heard one lecture, that ſhall not bee recited vnto vs. Let vs therefore bee well aduiſed, and whileſt the Lorde is willing to teach vs, giuing vs faithfull expounders of his worde, and dealing ſo familiarly with vs: let vs for our parte bee diligent to receiue it, and embracing the doctrine that is deliuered vnto vs, let vs ſhewe our ſelues more and more conformable to the ſame: not alledging the obſcuritie and depth of it therefore, as the Papiſtes doe, which goe about to ſhield them with their ignorance, ſaying that the holy Scripture is too high and ouer deepe to bee conceiued. It is true that the holy ſcripture is too high and too deepe: but that is in reſpect that wee be wrapped in miſtie darkeneſſe. But it is the office of GOD to inlighten vs; as wee ſhall ſee hereafter. Howſoeuer the matter ſtandeth; let vs aſſure our ſelues of this, that if wee yeelde our ſelues pliable to Gods direction, he will inſtruct vs faithfully in his worde, ſo as wee ſhall feele it to bee neere vnto vs. But yet is this neuer accompliſhed in vs, vntill our Lorde inſtruct vs by his holy ſpirit, together with the preaching of his worde by the mouthes of men. And that is the cauſe why Saint Paul in the x. Chapter to the Romans ſayth, that this ſentence is to bee Rom.10.6. applyed to the Goſpel. At the firſt ſight, it woulde ſeeme that S.Paul tooke it contrary to the meaning of Moſes. And for proofe thereof, doth not Moſes in this place ſpeake of the Law? Hee ſaith: The commaundement which I ordayne for thee this day. In ſaying, this day, hee ſpeaketh of his office. Nowe his office was to bring the Lawe and to publiſh it. It is ſayd in the firſt of Iohn, that the Lawe was giuen Iohn.1.17. by Moſes, but grace and trueth were giuen by Ieſus Chriſt: It ſeemeth not then that this can in any way agree with the Goſpell. But if we marke it well; wee ſhall finde it good reaſon, that Saint Paul ſaith, that this poynt is not verifyed, vntill wee come throughly to Chriſt. And why? Let vs take Moſes to witneſſe without going any further. Wee haue ſeene here afore, that in fourtie yeeres ſpace after the ſetting forth of the Lawe, the people had profited nothing in it. The reaſon thereof is this: Deut.29. 4. For thy God hath not giuen thee an vnderſtanding heart, euen to this day. Wee haue the Lawe beaten into our eares, and yet in the meane while wee are ſtill dulheadded, and conceiue not the meaning of Gods ſpeach. This (as I haue ſayd afore) proceedeth not of any faulte ỹ is in the Law; but of our owne wretched blindneſſe: As the Sunne is as bright to the blinde, as to all other men: but yet they bee not able to receiue lyke benefit by the light thereof: Euen ſo ſtandeth the caſe with vs. (Thus much for one poynt.) Inſomuch that as long as God ſpeaketh to vs but onely by the mouthes of men: It is but loſſe of time. And wherefore? Becauſe wee are deafe, wee are blinde: wee are dulheaded; neither is it ſufficient for vs that the commaundement bee layd directly before our eyes: that wee neede not to mount aboue the clowdes; and that wee neede not to diſcend into the deepe to ſeeke for it: for it muſt bee in our mouth and in our heart. But how ſhall we haue it in our mouth and in our heart? Soothly euen by Gods putting of it there by the grace of his holy ſpirit. Saint Paul therefore preſuppoſeth this grace to proceede from God peculiarly toward his elect; that he not onely offereth himſelfe freely vnto them, (which manner of ſpeach Moſes alſo did vſe when he ſayd, God ſheweth vs his goodnes after a ſpecial maner:) Deut.4.7. but alſo imprinteth it in our hartes, making vs to vnderſtand what he ſayth, by giuing vs the ſpirit of knowledge and diſcretion: for vntill God hath ſo wrought with vs, his word lyeth ſtill hidden from vs. And we heare what he ſaith by the Prophet Eſay: I wil (ſaith God) ſpeake vnto this Eſa.28 11.& 29.11.12. people in a ſtraunge and vnknowen language: And when I ſend forth my Prophets, euery man ſhall bee aſtoniſhed ſaying; What is this? What is it that God ſayth? For I will ſpeake to them in high Dutch, of purpoſe that they ſhall not vnderſtand one iotte, and ſo ſhall all the propheſies be vnto them, as a ſealed booke: which if you offer to a learned man, hee will anſwere: I would read in it, but the booke is cloſe and ſealed vp: therefore let it be opened and I will ſee what matter is in it: Againe it ſhall bee a booke layd open, yea but as a booke offered to the vnlearned, and to little children; and they ſhall ſay, I ſee heere is a booke, a man may well perceaue the letters, but I haue not bin at ſchoole, I am not learned: I ſee well the letters, but I knowe not what they meane. Wee ſee that our Lorde ſpeaketh, and yet notwithſtanding, he is not vnderſtoode. Therefore let vs marke that Moſes preſuppoſed God to haue giuen vnderſtanding to the people. Now his giuing of it was by the meane of Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, and that not through the Lawe, but through the Goſpel. The Lawe of it ſelfe bringeth nothing but condemnation, conuerting men be- Rom.4.15. & 7.7. fore God, making forth their proces, and finding them guiltie: as wee haue heretofore alledged. The caſe beeing ſo: there is but onely one meane, whereby to bee inlightened from God, ſo as wee may attaine to the knowledge of his holy will for our ſaluation: And that is to acknowledge the grace which is offered vnto vs in his Goſpell through our Sauiour Chriſt.

It is not therefore without cauſe that Saint Paul addeth this title vnto the worde: It is (ſaith Rom.10. he) the word of faith that wee preach vnto you.

He calleth it the worde of faith, when wee not onely knowe whereto we be bound, and vnderſtand what God exacteth and requireth of vs, and what hee commandeth vs: but alſo, when wee come to him as deſtitute of all goodneſſe, beſeeching him to vouchſafe to take pitie of our want and needineſſe, and to enrich vs with his graces. When wee ſeeke God in this maner, and aske of him that which wee want: then haue wee the worde of faith, and not the word of the Lawe. For the worde of the Law ſayth, Doe this and doe that, and beware of ſuch a thing, which if thou tranſgreſſe, beholde the curſe is prepared for thee. By the worde of the Lawe wee ſee whereunto wee are bound, but wee bee not able to diſcharge it; but wee ſtand all confounded and damned. It behooueth vs therefore to haue the worde of faith, that is to ſay, to taſte of Gods promiſes, whereby hee ſheweth himſelfe ſo bountifull towarde vs through our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. When we receiue this as it is offred vnto vs in the Goſpel; then is that fulfilled which is ſpoken here; to wit, that the worde is not aboue the clowdes, that it is not in the bottome of the deepe, nor on the other ſide of the Sea: but in our mouth and in our heart. Wee haue therefore to conſider firſt of all, that God holdeth men ſufficiently guiltie, after hee hath once taught them. For as ſoone as the worde is preached, there is preſent condemnation to all them that cannot profite thereby, and there is no way for them to ſcape. And why? For God hath called vs, and wee haue not aunſwered him: he hath ſhewed vs the way, and we haue not vouchſafed to enter therein: to bee ſhorte, wee ſee that when Gods worde hath bin preached vnto vs, there is matter ſufficient to reprooue vs, and wee cannot reply vnto it. But herewithall let vs marke alſo, that as touching our parte, the worde of GOD is at it were aloft aboue the skyes, or as if it were in the bottome of the deepe, notwithſtanding that wee haue our eares continually beaten therewith. Herein wee ſee the wretchedneſſe of our nature, that though God ſpeake vnto vs with open mouth, and teach vs neuer ſo faithfully, yet doe wee continue ſtill as we were, ſo as no amendment at all is perceiued in vs, for all the long ſchooling that God hath beſtowed on vs. What is to be done then? That GOD hauing ſpoken by the mouth of men, and by the holy ſcripture, doe alſo gather vs vnto him, and make vs to feele his goodneſſe towarde vs. For it is not ſufficient for vs to vnderſtand the thinges that are ſhewed vs in the holy ſcripture: but wee muſt alſo bee touched to the quicke with them in our heartes, that wee may bee well aſſured of Gods fatherly loue towardes vs. Whē wee are once at that poynt, there is no more hyding, then is there no more darkeneſſe in the holy ſcripture: but it is a ſufficient inſtruction, inſomuch as it is good and expedient for vs. For this cauſe dooth Saint Paul ſende vs to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, ſaying, That if we beleeue with our heart to Iuſtification, and Rom.10.6. confeſſe with our mouth to ſaluation that Chriſt dyed, and that GOD rayſed him againe, then are wee in that perfection which Moſes ſpeaketh of here. Nowe it is true that Saint Paul dooth vſe in this place, the worde Hell, for the worde Deepe: which hee dooth for the fitter applying of that ſentence to his owne purpoſe, which Moſes did vſe after a general manner. Moſes ſpeaketh after the common cuſtome of men. O what is hee that can dig down into the bottome of the deepe? Who is he that can mount vp aloft aboue the skyes? Saint Paul minding to apply this to our Sauiour Chriſt, ſayth, that we need not to alledge either heauen or hell, or aught elſe that can bee imagined in this worlde; God dooth ſufficiently ſhewe himſelfe vnto vs, in that wee haue witneſſe that Ieſus Chriſt dyed and is riſen againe. For wee knowe that by the vertue of that worde, Hell is bereft of all power ouer vs; and heauen is ſet open for vs. True it is that wee muſt beginne with this ſimplicitie that Moſes ſpeaketh of. When hee ſaith that the worde is in our mouth, and in our heart; his meaning is that the being thereof in our mouth, is to the end wee ſhoulde talke of it, and ſo become learned: and that the being thereof in our heart, is to the ende wee ſhoulde vnderſtand it. But Saint Paul goeth yet farther: not that hee wreſteth and wringeth the Teſtimonie of Moſes: but hee ſheweth that the ſame is in very deed fulfilled: to wit, that wee haue power to ſpeake the worde of GOD as wee ought, and that we haue it alſo imprinted in our hearts. He ſayth then, firſt that wee muſt come vnto our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, according to this ſaying, which is ſet downe in another place, namely, that Ieſus Chriſt is the ende of the Lawe, and alſo that Rom.10.4. hee is the lyfe of it. Then we ſee that if wee meane to profite by the holy Scripture, wee muſt hye vs to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; for hee is the liuely Image of God; it is he in whome Col.1.15.& 2.3. are comprehended al the treaſures of wiſedome and vnderſtanding. Thus much concerning that poynt.

Are wee nowe come vnto Ieſus Chriſt? It behooueth vs to knowe the principall thing that is giuen vs in him, to wit, that wee bee redeemed by his death and paſſion; for he hath ſuffered the paynes that were due vnto vs, and hath borne that dreadfull vengeance of God, which belonged vnto vs, and hath thereby made vs free. That then is the benefite which wee reape by the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: and by his reſurrection hee hath purchaſed righteouſneſſe and lyfe for vs: and hath alſo opened vnto vs the kingdome of heauen, from the which wee were earſt baniſhed. Nowe firſt of all, when wee call to minde the death, and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, wee muſt needes bee deliuered from all anguiſhe and diſtreſſe of minde. For hee telleth vs (as it is ſayd here) that it is not for vs to alledge any more; Who ſhall goe downe into hell? (as we haue beene woont to doe.) Howe nowe? If all ſinners muſt be condemned before God: ſeeing that wee bee ſinners; ſurely wee bee all vndone. And who is he that can aſſure mee that hell ſhall haue no power ouer me? I feele the ſinne which doth accuſe mee, and that is all one as if I ſhoulde beholde the gulfe open readie to ſwallowe mee vp; Sathan hath gotten the maiſterie ouer me. See how men are diſmayed and plunged in continuall griefe and trouble of minde, vntill they haue receiued knowledge of the benefite that commeth by the death and paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But we knowe that our Lorde Ieſus ſuffered the ſorrowes of hell, and yet was not Act.2.24. holden priſoner of the ſame (as Sainct Peter ſheweth in the Actes:) whereby wee be well aſſured, that the bandes of death are broken, and that hell hath no more power to ſwallow vs. And why? Becauſe the Lorde Ieſus hath purchaſed vs freedome. But howe know we that? By the Goſpell. But if I ſtill ſtande in doubt whether I bee deliuered from the curſe of God; it is as much as if I ſhoulde drawe Chriſt againe from death: for hee is not deade in vaine. To what ende is it? Let vs conſider a little wherefore the onely ſonne of God yeelded himſelfe to ſuch ſhame; as to be hanged on tree, and to be as it were accurſed before God his father, (according as wee haue ſeene euen in the one and twentith Chapter of this booke,) and to bee Deut.21.23 Eſa.53.2. beaten by the hande of God, vntill hee ſeemed as vile as a Leper, as the Prophet Eſay ſaith in the 53. Chapter, that hee bare the burden of all our offences: as if he had beene a miſerable ſinner; and was enuironed with ſuch extreme ſorowe, that hee wiſt not what to ſay, but to crie Matt.27.46. out: My God my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? And thinke wee that the ſonne of God dalyed when he was ſo humbled, yea and not onely was made vtterly of no reputation, as Sainct Phil.2.7. Act.2.24. Paul ſaieth: but alſo fought with the pangues and ſorrowes of death: He offered himſelfe in the perſon of vs, as a wretched ſinner to beare that vengeance of God which was due vnto vs, ſo as (to bee ſhort) he knewe that God was bent againſt him, to thunder downe vppon him for our ſakes. Foraſmuch then as we know that Ieſus Chriſt abode ſuch incounters for our redemption: ſtande wee yet ſtill ſcanning and replying, as who woulde ſay, O I cannot tell, and howe can I bee ſure of it? Surely that were euen as much as to deny the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For it is a plaine ſcorning of all that hee hath endured and ſuffered for our ſaluation, when wee acknowledge not the fruite that doeth growe vnto vs thereby. So then the firſt point is, that hauing the Goſpel, wee haue whereuppon to reſt, ſo as wee neede not to alledge: What is he that ſhall goe downe into hel? For Ieſus Chriſt hath beene there, to the end that wee ſhoulde not come there at all: and at this day hee giueth vs witneſſe of the ſame by the Goſpel, to the intent wee ſhoulde knowe that his death hath alwayes preſent power and operation for all ſuch as flee vnto it for refuge.

Alſo there is on the other ſide, that wee haue no more cauſe to replie, Who is hee that ſhall mount vp to the heauens? Why? That is aſmuch (ſaieth Sainct Paul) as to plucke downe Chriſt from the heauenly glorie, whereunto hee is exalted. Wee ſay in an article of our faith, that Chriſt deſcended into hell. In ſo ſaying wee ought to aſſure our ſelues, that we bee nowe out of daunger, for hee entred thither to the ende that wee ſhould be free from it. We adde thereunto, that hee is alſo aſcended into heauen. And why? To the ende that wee might knowe that the gate thereof ſtandeth open for vs. We heare alſo how hee tolde his diſciples: In my fathers houſe are many manſiIohn.14.2. ons: ſignifying therby that heauen was not onely for himſelfe, but that it is a common heritage for all the faithfull, and that hee hath taken poſſeſſion thereof, as it were in our behalfe. Nowe then, we proteſt in the article of our beliefe, that the heauens at this time ſtand open for vs: and that wee ought to aſſure our ſelues to come thither, becauſe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, our heade, is gone vp thither and will not bee ſeparated from the members of his bodie. Notwithſtanding that wee haue confeſſed this: yet wee ſtand ſcanning ſtill, and are full of wauering fancies: Ah, ſay wee, I know not for all that, what ſhall become of mee, I cannot tell whether God doth recken me to be one of his children: who is he that hath bin in heauen, who is he that hath come thence againe to bring vs newes? See theſe diueliſh blaſphemies. This is not onely to ſtande in doubt of the trueth of the Goſpel, but alſo to teare Chriſt Ieſus in peeces, aſmuch as we can. O horrible outrage againſt the ſonne of God: for hee that doubteth of his ſaluation, ſheweth himſelfe to beleeue no whit of that which wee confeſſe, namely that Ieſus Chriſt hath ſoueraigne dominion both in heauen & in earth: that God gouerneth the world by him, ÿ he maketh al creatures to kneel down to do him Phil.2.10. homage: to be ſhort, wee acknowledge not that the Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is riſen againe from the deade: but to the vttermoſt of our power, we goe about to deface and to aboliſh the power of the holy Ghoſt, which ſhewed it ſelfe in his reſurrection. See nowe in what caſe wee be, if we receiue not the Teſtimonie of the Goſpell, to aſſure vs, that wee bee as it were, rapted vp into heauen, euen to enter directly into the poſſeſſion of all thoſe goods which ly hidden from vs, and are not viſible; as the Prophet Eſay Eſa.64.4. 1.Cor.2.9. ſaieth: ſuch as the heart of man is not able to conceiue. If wee ſee not an open gappe euen vnto hell; to ſpyte Sathan, to defie death, and to triumph ouer all thinges that may impeach our ſaluation: well, let vs on the one ſide conſider howe ſainct Paul ſaieth, that when wee haue receiued the Goſpell through faith, wee bee Eph.2.6. foorthwith ſet downe in the heauenly places: we bee (as yee would ſay) enthroniſhed with the Angels of Paradiſe, as alreadie raiſed vp thither by God. It is true that heere beneath, wee be as wretched wormes creeping vppon the grounde; but when wee haue once 1.Pet.1.3.4.5. the doctrine of faith, we haue the earneſt penny of our ſaluation; according as ſaint Peter ſaieth; that through faith wee may put our ſelues into the handes of God in ſuch manner, that lifting vp our eyes & minds into heauẽ, we be brought in thither, becauſe that Ieſus Chriſt our heade is there before in our behalfe, and hath there prepared the heritage which he will hold in cōmon with vs. Thus ye ſee how we muſt practiſe this point, following the exhortation of S.Paul. Moreouer wee muſt likewiſe marke howe hee ſaith; that wee muſt beleeue with the heart to iuſtification, and confeſſe with the mouth to ſaluation. I haue heretofore ſhewed you briefly the ſubſtance of our faith; howe it muſt reſt wholly vppon the death and reſurrection of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: I ſay vppon his death, becauſe that hee by his obedience, hath put away all our iniquities and tranſgreſſions: hee hath ſuffered the puniſhment that was due vnto vs, to diſcharge vs of the ſame, he hath alſo diſpatched away the curſe which lay vppon vs. So much concerning the firſt point.

Nowe concerning the ſeconde; wee muſt vnderſtande, that by his riſing againe he hath purchaſed righteouſneſſe vnto vs, and therby ſhewed himſelfe a conquerour ouer ſinne and death: and his reſurrection doeth alſo import that hee is aſcended into heauen, of purpoſe to take the poſſeſſion of that inheritance, which hee will make common vnto vs, and of the which hee will make vs partakers with himſelfe. This is the ſubſtance of our faith. Nowe it behooueth to haue this faith both in our heart and in our mouth. Truely it were to ſmall purpoſe if wee did but talke of the graces and bleſſings which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath brought vnto vs; as wee ſee a great number of bablers doe; they talke much thereof, but what are they the better for it, ſauing that it increaſeth their condemnation? It is no great matter then to haue the confeſſion of faith on the tippe of the tongue before men: for it muſt be rooted in the heart, we muſt (ſay I) haue yͤ vertue of the death and reſurrection of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt imprinted within vs, and ſainct Paul ſaieth, that that ſerueth vs for righteouſneſſe. And why? Becauſe wee knowe that wee bee reconciled to GOD, inſomuch that Chriſt hath taken our burden vppon him, ſo as wee being thereof diſcharged are become acceptable vnto God, ſo yͭ he will no more impute our ſinnes vnto vs. And why? For Chriſt ſhould haue ſuffered in vain for vs, if we ſhould nowe be called to reckening for our ſins. Thus then wee ſtand acquited through the ſatiſfaction made for vs by Chriſt Ieſus: and that is the righteouſneſſe whereof Sainct Paul ſpeaketh. For when wee receiue Ieſus Chriſt, it is certaine, that hee reneweth vs by his holy Spirit. And wee bee not onely adopted to bee the children of God by his meanes: but alſo wee receiue therewith the warrant of our Election, which is that wee bee reſerued for the inheritage of God. So then let vs vnderſtande, that there is none other meane whereby wee may attaine to righteouſneſſe, but by beleeuing with the heart.

Nowe this worde Beleeuing importeth that wee ſhoulde ſeeke in Ieſus Chriſt, for that which wee want in our ſelues. For if wee reſt vppon the Lawe, for as much as it commaundeth vs to doe that which wee ought to doe, it is nothing woorth. But if wee repaire vnto God, knowing that hee is readie to releeue our wants: that is the thing which is meant by the worde Beleeue, according to the meaning of Sainct Paul. And of a trueth, when wee doe ſo beleeue, and are ſo iuſtified: the ſame ſufficeth for our ſaluation: For iuſtification doeth of it ſelfe import life euerlaſting. Neuertheleſſe Sainct Paul doeth put ouer ſaluation to the confeſſion, doing vs to vnderſtande, that the children of GOD ought not to bee tongue tyed, but to magnifie the goodneſſe whereof they haue had triall, and euerie man to edifie his neighbour as much as in him lyeth.

Nowe then like as wee haue our heartes ſet vppon God to receiue his worde which is offered vnto vs: ſo muſt wee haue our mouth open to glorifie him, by acknowledging howe much wee are beholding vnto him. They therefore which haue through faith embraced the benefites of the death and reſurrection of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, ought to indeuour to ſet the ſame foorth, ſaying, Our GOD hath ſo powred out the ineſtimable treaſures of his goodneſſe towardes vs, as it is good reaſon that all our whole life ſhoulde bee ſpent in glorifying him, and yeelding him praiſe and thankſgiuing: according alſo as Sainct Peter in his firſt Epiſtle ſaieth: that the ſame is the 1.Pet.1.15. verie ende why we were brought out of the horrible darkeneſſe of death, to bee conueied into the kingdome of Gods light, and into the kingdome of life. S.Paul then doeth expreſly match the confeſſion of the mouth with ſaluation, not that faith being right and true is not ſufficient of it ſelfe: nor that wee doe purchaſe Saluation by ſpeaking: but to ſhewe that faith cannot bee without confeſſion. Whereby wee ſee that they which nowadayes doe renounce God by holding their peace, or keepe the knowledge of the Goſpell, as it were, buried within them; doe defraude GOD of the honour that is due vnto him, and neuer knewe what faith meant. O ſay they, I keepe my faith to my ſelfe. Yea? Then doeſt thou make the holy Ghoſt a lyer. As for thoſe that bee of the Popedome, communicating with ydolaters in al their abhominations, and being readie to turne with euerie winde: if a man tell them that it is a kinde of renouncing God, and a forſaking of him that redeemed them from death. O (ſay they) I holde my faith in my heart. It is vnpoſſible that there ſhoulde bee faith in the heart, but that confeſſion with the mouth ſhoulde preſently followe: or elſe were the holie Ghoſt a lyer, as witneſſeth Sainct Paul. And that is the thing which hee meant in ſaying; that when we haue beleeued with the heart to iuſtification, wee muſt then alſo confeſſe with our mouth, that wee haue a redeemer which hath deliuered vs from death, and opened vnto vs the kingdome of heauen, to the intent it ſhoulde nowe bee our inheritance. To bee ſhort, we ſee howe ſainct Paul agreeth very well with Moſes. For albeit that Moſes intended heere to reprooue ſuch as had hearde the lawe, and to conuict them of vnthankfulneſſe: yet hath hee ſhewed afore, that it is not ynough for vs to haue our eares beaten with the literall worde, vnleſſe that God doe alſo giue vs vnderſtanding thereof: and that doeth hee giue vs by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. It followeth then, that vnleſſe the lawe bee matched with the Goſpel; it is not neere vnto vs: For although that wee for our part bee dayly taught it, and that the worde doe dwell amongſt vs; yet ſhall we wander farre from it, and receiue no taſte of that which is vttered vnto vs. That then is the meaning of Moſes. And Sainct Paul doeth verie well agree therewith, in that he telleth vs that we muſt reſort to Ieſus Chriſt, and acknowledge what profite wee receiue by him, and to what ende hee was ſent vnto vs from God his father. And moreouer let vs acknowledge it in ſuch ſort, as wee may reſt wholly vppon his Goſpell, and ſtande contented when God hath ſpoken vnto vs; and not go about to fetch downe Ieſus Chriſt from aboue, as folke that woulde crucifie him newe againe. Let it ſuffice vs, that hee hath fully redeemed vs by that one ſacrifice wherewith hee hath made perfect ſatisfaction for all. Let it ſuffice vs that hee is aſcended into heauen, to the ende to drawe vs vnto him. And ſith we haue receiued yͤ knowledge heereof by the Goſpell; let vs make our profite of it, and beſeech God that this doctrine may firſt of all be printed in our hearts, to the ende that being iuſtified by his free goodneſſe, wee may ſtande fully aſſured vppon the redemption and ſatisfaction which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath purchaſed for vs, becauſe wee haue no righteouſneſſe in vs. And thereupon let euery of vs endeuour to glorifie God, knowing that hee hath adopted vs to the ende that he might be magnified in all our whole life, according as it is ſaide in the Prophet Eſay, The people which I haue created ſhall ſhewe forth my praiſes. Eſa.43.7.& 21.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſins, beſeeching him to make vs to feele them better than heretofore wee haue done, and that wee may attaine to the remedie; that is to ſay, the forgiueneſſe of them in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And that foraſmuch as our God ceaſeth not daily to inſtruct and to edifie vs in his word, it may pleaſe him not to ſuffer vs to bee deafe hearers of him, but rather to pearce our eares, to the ende wee may become throughly obedient vnto him, and holde vs therein; and to ſhew forth the vertue of his holy ſpirite, to the ende, that the thing which is ſaide heere may bee accompliſhed in vs: And that when we haue belieued with our heart, we may alſo confeſſe his holy name with our mouth, and our whole life may bee agreeable to the ſame confeſſion. That it may pleaſe him to deale ſo graciouſly not with vs onely, but alſo with all Nations and people vpon earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxij. of Aprill, 1556.

The CLXXII. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the thirtith Chapter.

15 See; I haue this day ſet before thee, lyfe and good, death and euill.

16 For I commaund thee this day to loue the Lorde thy GOD, and to walke in his wayes, and to keepe his commaundementes, and his ordinaunces and his iudgementes: that thou maieſt liue and increaſe, and that the Lorde thy GOD may bleſſe thee in the Lande which thou goeſt to poſſeſſe.

17 If thy heart turne away, and thou obey not, but beeſt led aſide, and boweſt thy ſelfe to other gods, and serueſt them:

18 I doe tell you this day, that you ſhall ſurely periſhe, and not prolong your dayes in the lande, into the which nowe paſſing ouer Iordan thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it.

19 I take heauen and earth this day to witneſſe againſt you, that I haue ſet before you life and death, bleſsing and curſe. Therefore chooſe life that thou maiſt liue, thou and thy ſeede, 20 By louing the Lorde thy GOD, by obeying his voyce, and by cleauing vnto him : for hee is thy life and the prolonger of thy dayes : that thou maiſt continue in the Land which the Lord hath ſworne to thy fathers, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, to giue vnto them.

WE ſawe yeſterday howe Moſes did magnifie the authoritie of the worde of God which was committed vnto him, ſaying: Seeing that God is come nere vnto vs, and hath opened his holy mouth to declare vnto vs his will, we muſt holde vs wholly thereunto, and without ſeeking any further, wee muſt not aske any more, who ſhall goe vp into heauen, or who ſhall go downe into the deepe? For wee haue ſure witneſſe and ſuch a one as cannot faile vs. Seeing that God hath ſpoken let vs followe it. He addeth here moreouer; See, I haue this day ſet before you, life and bleſſing, death and euill. Whereby hee ſheweth vs, that the worde of God, when it is taught vs, doeth carry with it ſuch vertue, and ſuch power, that we ought to holde the things which are there tolde vs, to bee as certaine, as if they were alreadie done in deede. The worde which Moſes doeth vſe in ſaying, See, as if he ſhoulde point with his finger, to make the matter viſible vnto vs, doeth import that wee muſt yeelde ſuch reuerence to the worde of God, that wee muſt eſteeme the thinges therein conteined, to be as preſent vnto vs. And the ſame is to bee applied as well to the threatenings as to the promiſes. If God doe promiſe vs any thing, it is not for vs to caſt doubts thereof, [and to ſay,] Yea, but how may it come to paſſe, ſeeing there is no likelyhood thereof? Let vs ſticke to that which hee telleth vs. Likewiſe if God doe threaten vs, wee muſt tremble and not doe as they doe which tarie for the ſtrokes, for they be ſo ouertaken vnawares, as they haue not the power to crie alas, they be ouer raught with feare, and God giueth them not the grace to returne vnto him, becauſe they coulde not finde in their hearts to doe him the honour, to ſubmit themſelues vnto him at ſuch time as he warned them a farre off that hee is their Iudge. Thus are we to practiſe this ſentence which Moſes vſeth in ſaying, That when wee heare the worde of God, hee will haue vs to reſt altogether thereon and to ſettle our wittes wholly vnto it. And this ought to ſerue vs to double purpoſe: that when as it ſhall ſeeme vnto vs, that it is but loſt time in this worlde to ſerue God, yet notwithſtanding we may not ſurceaſe to obey him, waiting for the bleſſing which hee hath promiſed vs, and aſſuring our ſelues, that wee ſhall not be deceiued becauſe he is faithfull. And likewiſe on the contrarie part, when wee be tempted to doe euill, in hope that we ſhall remaine vnpuniſhed: let vs bee holden backe with this bridle, namely, that wee cannot eſcape the wrath of God, becauſe hee hath declared that hee is the Iudge to doe vengeance for ſuch thinges. The faithfull therefore in ordering their life, muſt alwayes bee fully reſolued of this, that in ſeruing of God, they bee ſure that hee will guide them, and that their ende ſhalbe good and happie. But in the meane while the worlde ſhall ſcorne them, and they ſhall haue many temptations to turne them away; they ſhall ſee the wicked proſper, they ſhall ſee them make their triumphes; and on the otherſide they ſhall all that while ſee themſelues goe to wracke. Nowe when wee bee thus toſſed, wee muſt take our ſtay in the worde of GOD. Seeing that God hath promiſed to bleſſe vs, when wee walke according to his will: we are ſure that he will not abuſe vs; for his worde is the infallible trueth; and therefore let vs ſticke vnto it. Againe, it ſeemeth vnto vs, that we ſhoulde make mountains and work wonders, when we let looſe the bridle to our owne luſtes: Let vs feare God: for he telleth vs, that when men haue once misbehaued Gen.4.7. themſelues, their ſinne abideth ſtil at their doore and keepeth continuall watch, ſo as when they haue wandered hither and thither, and paſſed their boundes neuer ſo farre, yet they muſt come to reckening. Seeing it is ſo, let vs learne to bridle our ſelues, and not to tarrie till God execute his iudgementes vppon vs: but let vs rather preuent them through feare. Nowe wee ſee to what end Moſes hath declared, that he ſet before the eies of the people, both life and good, death and euill: verily euen to aſſure the Iewes thereof, that they might no longer ſtande in doubt. And wherefore? For there needeth nothing to carrie vs away, as wee ſee too much by experience. For it is a verie rare thing for men to reſt them vppon the promiſes of God ſteadfaſtly without wauering, they bee blinded with the thinges of the worlde: and vnleſſe God doe out of hande accompliſh the thing which hee hath ſpoken; they thinke they ſhalbe deceiued. And although they dare not accuſe God of vnfaithfulnes: yet can they not find in their hearts to doe him the honour to thinke him to be true. Againe, although God threaten vs, yet are we ſo dulheaded, ẏ euery of vs perſwadeth himſelfe ẏ he ſhal go vnpuniſhed, and ſcape ſcotfree. Seeing then ẏ there is ſuch lightnes in vs, & that we bee ſo wauering, we ought ſo much the more to put the leſſon in practiſe which is ſet downe heere.

Now as touching life and good; it is aſmuch as if he ſhould ſay, all manner of happineſſe: and likewiſe by death and euill, is ment all maner of wretchednes. Indeede this preſent life is not the full meaſure or perfection of the bleſſings which God hath promiſed vs. It is no more but a certaine taſt of them. Death alſo is but a little token of Gods wrath. The ſtate of the life to come is the perfection both of weale and woe. But Moſes ſpeaking vnto the people, that were yet holden vnder the figures and ſhadowes of the lawe, did name life, and thereunto added this worde bleſſing, to ſignifie, that the people by ſeruing of God ſhoulde bee bleſſed, euen in all manner of felicitie; and contrarywiſe that they muſt of neceſſitie looke for all manner of wretchedneſſe, if they did fall away frõ the ſeruice of God. For the better confirmation hereof, hee ſaieth, This day I commaunde thee to loue the Lorde thy God, and to keepe his commaundements, and to cleaue vnto him, that thou maieſt come to poſſeſſe the Lande which hee hath promiſed to thy fathers. Heere is a confirmation to holde the people conuicted, that they might haue no occaſion to reply any more, but be compelled to confeſſe that the Lawe of God ſerued to call them to ſaluation, if ſo bee they had obeyed him: And contrariwiſe that it ſhoulde bee vnto them a good Teſtimonie of their condemnation, ſo as they coulde not pretende any excuſe, ſeeing they were ſo well inſtructed, and yet continued hardhearted and ſtubborne ſtill. Moſes ſheweth this by the ſubſtance that is contained in this doctrine. What is it (ſaieth hee) that I haue inioyned thee? It is, that thou ſhouldeſt loue the Lorde thy God. Hath not nature left this marke imprinted in our heartes, namely, that wee bee created euen to this ende: to loue our God? Wherfore are we in this world? Wherfore doth God keepe vs heere? Is it not reaſon that he ſhould haue ſome homage of vs, and that forſomuch as wee be his creatures, wee ſhoulde haue an eye vnto him, & he bee the ſcope of our life? If it be not ſo, what order will there be? Wee ſee in this worlde very many Teſtimonies of Gods wonderful wiſedome, iuſtice, righteouſnes, and power, and he hath placed vs here beneath, to beholde al theſe thinges; and alſo he hath faſhioned vs after his owne image and likeneſſe. Gen.1.26. Now if our eyes bee blindfolded, if wee bee dulheads, if we wil not vnderſtand the things which haue bin ſhewed vnto vs, is it not a kinde of turning of all thinges vpſidowne which God hath eſtabliſhed both beneath and aboue? Yes ſurely. Ye ſee then howe it is an vtter confounding and ouerthrowing of all order, whẽ men worſhip not their God, ne ſubmit themſelues vnto him. It is not therefore without cauſe that Moſes alledgeth this reaſon, when he ment to ſhew vnto the Iewes, that it was not for thẽ to argue any more as touching that doctrine, ſeeing that the ende whereto it tended was that God ſhould be honored and haue his right. But this word loue importeth yet more. For it ought to touch men more liuely, than if he had ſpoken ſimply of feare & ſubiection. Indeede Moſes addeth by and by yͤ wee muſt obey our God, and that we muſt keepe his ſtatutes & his decrees. God then doth iuſtly require of vs a ſeruice, & we ought not to denie it him: but yet hee beginneth at loue, to the intent to draw vs vnto him after a louing manner, and not by force as if we woulde ſay, well it is ynough for vs to ſerue our God: but yet let vs goe to it with grinding our teeth, becauſe no man can exempt himſelfe from that neceſſitie. But Moſes ſheweth that the doctrine of yͤ lawe ought not only to holde vs in awe, and to bring all our ſenſes and affections in captiuitie vnder the obedience of God: but alſo that it ought to win & poſſeſſe our harts, ſo as we ſhold come of good will to offer our ſelues vnto God, to bee altogether his. Let vs therfore conſider that God doth vs a ſingular good turne, when hee beginneth at this point, namely, yͤ he will haue vs to loue him. But we be alſo exhorted to ſerue him, not by cõpulſion, as yͤ moſt part of the world doth, in whõ (as wee ſee) there is nothing but ſlauiſh feare. Therefore let vs learne ſo to gouerne all our affections as it may be our chiefe pleaſure to ſerue God. Now on the contrary part, whereas Moſes ioyneth the obedience of the law with loue, therby hee ſheweth that there may bee hypocrites which ſhall make a countenance to loue God, & will boaſt themſelues therof with full mouth: but yet the very true proofe thereof is that wee honour his maieſtie and ſubmit our ſelues to the ſame. For God hath not bounde vs to him by halues: what manner of ſuperiority hath he ouer vs? Now then like as a child loueth his father, & as a good ſubiect loueth his prince; euen ſo muſt we loue our God, that is to ſay, wee muſt beare ſuch reuerẽce towards him, as to couet nothing but to frame our ſelues to his good pleaſure in al things, ſo as he may weald vs at his wil, and bee glorified in all our life: And foraſmuch as he wil haue a triall of vs; when hee hath giuen vs his lawe and ſet vs downe the rule whereby our life ſhould be guided: if we behaue our ſelues thereafter, then doe we ſhew indeed that we loue our God aright. And therfore let vs conclude cõcerning all ſuch as pretend deuotion & holines, (of which ſort we ſee many nowadays in yͤ popedom yea & euen where the goſpel is preached, there be many that make pretence to be rauiſhed and caried away with a zeale) that all that euer they do is but ſmoke, vnleſſe our life bee anſwerable thereto, ſo as we follow the wil of our God, & indeuour to obey him by keeping his commandemẽts & ordinances. That (I ſay) is yͤ true mirror where we may behold whether we loue our God or not, and whether there be any faith & purenes in vs. And herewithall Moſes telleth the people againe, that they ſhall not loue God but to their owne profite & welfare: as if hee ſhoulde ſay, although God doe by iuſt title, require that wee ſhoulde loue him, yet doth he not that in reſpect of his owne profite or aduantage, for he can receiue nothing of vs. Howe then? He ſeeketh and procureth our welfare. For hee ſeeth verie well that we be miſerable when wee are fallen away from him: and therfore he is deſirous to win vs, not for any gaine that can therby redound to himſelfe, but to the intent that all the benefite thereof ſhoulde redound vnto vs. Nowe then what a churliſhnes is it, that men cannot finde in their heartes to ſubmit themſelues vnto God, ſpecially ſeeing that he neuertheles hath ſuch a care of their welfare, that he ſeeketh them, and taketh paines to reduce them to him, howbeit (as I ſaid afore) not for that he can be any thing bettered therby for his part, but becauſe he wold not haue them to periſh. Seeing then yͤ we know this, muſt we not needs be too too dulheded, yea ſtarke mad, if our harts be not meekened; yea & not onely meekened to ſtoope vnder the obedience of God; but alſo therewithal ſet on fire with a zeale to come vnto him, & to bende all our indeuour that way? Nowe wee perceiue in effect whereat Moſes amed in all this ſentence. And moreouer on the contrarie ſide hee doeth alſo ſet downe the threatenings; for (as I haue ſaid) hee expoundeth more at length this doctrine, which he had erſt touched in fewe wordes. See, I ſet before thee this day good and euill, life and death. Hauing ſaide ſo, hee taketh the firſt part thereof. For (ſaieth hee) I craue nothing of thee, but that thou ſhouldeſt loue the Lorde thy God, that by obeying him thou mighteſt liue and poſſeſſe the land which hee hath promiſed vnto thy fathers, which is as it were, a pawne of his loue, and the true felicitie vnto the which thou art called, for to attaine to it, that is to ſay the kingdome of heauen. Thus much concerning the firſt part.

Nowe he commeth to the ſeconde and ſaith, If thou turne away, and rebell, and beeſt caried to ſerue ſtraunge Gods: I tell thee, that thou ſhalt periſh, (ſaith hee) and thou ſhalt not eſcape the hande of the Lorde thy God. Looke not to prolong thy dayes when you ſhall haue ſo deſpiſed him which hath all goodneſſe in his owne power, and will in the end reuenge himſelfe of the diſpiſers of his worde. Nowe wee ſee the meaning of Moſes in generall. It remaineth for vs to marke the manner of ſpeech which hee vſeth. He ſaith, If thy heart looke backe not to obey, and that thou beeſt moued to obey ſtraunge Gods and to ſerue them. When hee ſaith, If thy heart turne backe, his intent is to expreſſe heere the malice of men, which couet nothing but to flee from God. For if we were not caried away by our wicked affections, it is certaine that euerie of vs woulde followe this Principle, and the ſeede which is in vs; namely, That foraſmuch as there is but one God, therefore we ought to worſhippe and ſerue him. Let men bee as wicked as they liſt, and let them ſtriue as much as they can to extinguiſh al manner of light, that they may haue no more reaſon in them: (as we ſee many doe, whoſe whole delight and indeuour is to make themſelues verie beaſtes); yet doeth this remaine ſtill engrauen in them, That there is a God which ought to be ſerued. What ſhall become of vs then, if we ſeeke him not as we ought to doe? Againe, ſee we not the worlde howe it is ſo farre out of courſe, that there is nothing but confuſion throughout all, and that thereuppon euery man goeth aſtray? Whereof commeth it (ſay I) that we bee ſo witleſſe, as to follow the wicked trade of other men, and yet bee compelled to condemne the ſame? Euen of this, that wee turne away our heartes backe; that is to ſay, that euerie of vs wrappeth himſelfe in wilfull blindneſſe, and euery of vs ſetteth himſelfe backe, notwithſtanding that we haue beene taught the contrarie. For albeit that it is true without exception, that all they which turne away from the truth, doe it of a certaine wickedneſſe: yet notwithſtanding, we bee double folde the leſſe excuſable, when wee haue bin taught by the word, ſo as God hath ſhewed himſelfe vnto vs familiarly. Therefore when we heare this ſaying of Moſes, wee muſt apply it to our vſe. For we ſee how our Lorde hath ſhewed vs the way of ſaluation by his Goſpel, wee ſee how he continueth it ſtill from day to day: what will become of vs then, if wee ſtray away? Wee ſhall not bee as the Turkes, or as the verie Papiſtes: but it ſhalbe vpbraided vs that wee haue turned our heartes backe, and that where as God had ſet vs in the good way, and reached vs his hande to guide vs: wee haue beene frowarde, and woulde not hearken to the thinges which hee tolde vs: and that all this wee haue done of wilfull malice. Yea and Moſes addeth yet an other worde, ſaying, If thou bee driuen to ſerue ſtraunge Gods. He ſheweth that men be driuen with a certaine furie or frentikeneſſe when they cannot finde in their heartes to ſubmit themſelues to God, to bee wunne vnto him by his worde. Needes then muſt there bee a dreadfull rage in this caſe, and that Sathan worketh after a horrible manner, when men bee ſo farre out of brder. Wee haue ſeene in the fourth Chapter, howe hee ſaide, Looke well to thy ſelfe, that in beholding the ſunne and the ſtars, thou be not compelled to worſhippe them and to make them ydols. Deut.4.19. There Moſes ſheweth that men woulde neuer runne out to ydolatrie, vnleſſe they had ſome outrageous prouocation within them to driue them thereunto, as if they were out of their wittes. For were men well aduiſed & ſetled in their wits, as they ought to bee: they woulde certainly come to their God. And therefore wee bee double guiltie, when hauing turned away from our GOD, and drawen backe our heartes through wilfull malice and ſtubborneneſſe, ouer and beſides that, wee haue beene caried with ſuch a raging moode, as wee cannot bee tamed, neither can any repentance take place in vs, neither will wee bee ruled by reaſon; but we behaue ourſelues like folk that are ſtraught or rather ſtarke madde. And hereby wee ought to take warning to miſtruſt all our affections, and to bridle and impriſon all our wittes, ſeeing wee bee ſo lightly withdrawen from God, and turned away to become backeſlyders. If men giue themſelues libertie, what followeth but that their heart will quickely bee turned backewarde? When wee ſhoulde walke vprightly, wee make it difficult to goe one ſtep, but if it come to backeſlyding, wee flitte away like water, there is nothing in vs but ſlipperneſſe. Therefore muſt wee holde our ſelues as captiues, knowing well that if wee haue neuer ſo little libertie, wee bee ſtraightway gone quite from our God.

Moreouer when men doe ſo beleeue their paſſions, they muſt needes become like madde beaſtes, neither reaſon nor equitie may beare ſway, there is no more vnderſtanding in them, and to bee ſhort they are become brutiſh of their owne accorde. Seeing wee bee warned of theſe thinges, let vs learne ſo to fight againſt all manner of exceſſiue luſtes, and againſt all the appetites that boyle within vs, as GOD may gouerne vs quietly, and wee bee readie to follow which way ſoeuer he calleth vs. Now after that Moſes hath ſpoken ſo, he addeth, that albeit that the people haue paſſed Iordan, and be come to the poſſeſſion of the land, yet they ſhal not enioy it for euer. Here our Lorde declareth vnto vs, yͭ if he beare with vs for a time, wee may not thereupon fall aſleepe, nor perſwade our ſelues that wee bee at peace with him, as the hypocrites do, who vnleſſe they be pinched with miſerie, and that God doe purſue them roughly, doe alwayes make their market after their owne deuiſe. Well [ſay they] God muſt needes loue mee, for I am at myne eaſe: and thereupon they flatter themſelues. And whereas they do but mocke God, they thinke that hee ſeeth it not a whit. To bee ſhort, the bleſſinges that God beſtoweth on them, they turne as it were to a ſhrowding ſheete, of purpoſe to keepe God from eſpying any whit of their life. And thus they bleare their owne eyes, & make them ſelues paſtime & good cheare, as though they ſhold neuer come to reckoning. And that is too common a fault. Now Moſes ſayth vnto them here, Albeit your God doe at this preſent time bring you into the lande which hee promiſed you, and that you paſſe ouer Iordan, where God will ſhewe his power, euen in drying vp yͤ Iordan as hee did in drying vp the read ſea, where your enimies were vanquiſhed & put to yͤ foyle; inſomuch that when you were like to haue bin ſtopped from entring into your inheritance, yet notwithſtanding al thoſe lettes were ouercome. For as much therfore as you ſee ſuch fauour of God; beware that you ſleepe not in the meane whyle, but walke in his feare; for he can as well driue you out of that land, as he doeth at this preſent bring you into it. To be ſhort, whenſoeuer we haue receiued any fauour at Gods hand, we be exhorted to vſe it in ſuch wiſe, as yͤ ſame may be an occaſion vnto vs to ſerue him, ſo as wee conceiue courage to yeeld ouer our ſelues to his obedience, for leaſt we be bereft therof againe either early or late, for playing the wylde beaſtes & for dealing ſtubbornly after that God

Deut.32,15 hath made vs fatte, according as wee ſhall ſee in the ſong of Moſes. Moſes hauing ſpoken ſo, vſeth a greater vehemencie, ſaying: This day I call heauen and earth to witneſſe, that I haue ſet before thee life and death, bleſſing and curſing. The ſame in effect was ſpoken afore, but (as I told you at a glance) Moſes meant to expreſſe yet more, to the intent that the people ſhoulde vnderſtande that he ſpake in good earneſt, and that although their hearts were of ſtone, yet ought this to ſoften them. And let vs marke firſt of al, that if the Iewes were thus harde & ſlowe, yea and ranke rebelles too; we be no better than they. For it is not in reſpect of them onely that God ſayth hee wil chaunge mens ſtonie heartes; it is a gene-
Ezec.11,19. ral promiſe. Hee ſheweth that of nature men be ſuch, namely, altogether rebellious, & that they will by no meanes be ruled. And therefore Moſes is fayne to inlarge his ſpeech, and to haue recourſe to heauen and earth. Hereby we haue matter firſt of all to pricke vs forwarde. In deede men ſuppoſe that they be able fellowes to come vnto God: but were there ſuch forwardnes in vs as wee ſurmiſe: it were ynough for God to becken to vs with the finger, and to ſay, Come. But nowe when hee is fayne to crye out, and to vſe roughneſſe, and to handle vs ſharply, yea, and (as yee woulde ſay) to coniure vs; it is a token that hee perceiueth well, that without this manner of dealing, hee coulde not drawe vs to him; but that wee woulde ſtill drawe backewarde from him. Therefore let vs learne to condemne our ſelues: and moreouer when we heare that GOD doeth prouoke vs more roughly than wee woulde, wee may not for all that bee nyce, nor grieued thereat. In deede it is meete for vs to bee tender hearted one way, that is to ſay, that wee bee not like Stithyes or Anuyles, which beate backe the ſtrokes of the hammer: but yet let vs take heede, that wee repyne not at the vehemencie which GOD vſeth towardes vs; knowing that the ſame is neceſſarie for vs. If GOD then after hee hath taught vs gently, doe exhort vs with a more quickeneſſe, yea, and threaten vs, and moreouer ſummon vs, and afterwarde frame our inditement againſt vs, let vs vnderſtande that it is neceſſarie that it ſhoulde bee ſo, and that wee ought not to bee offended thereat: for wee ſhall winne nothing by it. Yee ſhall ſee many which can fynde in their hartes that the Goſpell ſhould be preached: but after what manner? Forſooth after a deade manner, ſo as the letter ſhoulde be layed foorth, and then euery man holde what hee liſted, without any exhortation to bee made, and without vnfolding of the inwarde force thereof. Such ſcoffers as theſe are to bee ſeene, which doe flatly mocke GOD, and yet in the meane whyle will needes bee borne withall. What, ſay they? Is it a preaching of the Goſpel, when men threaten, and deale thus roughly? But in the meane whyle let vs conſider what wee be, whether it be meete that God ſhould deale with vs after our one liking. In deed, if we were pliable, ſo as our heartes did yeeld at euerie word: then weare this vehemencie ſuperfluous & vnprofitable: but ſeeing we be as ſlow as Aſſes, and alſo frantique, ſo as he cannot tame vs, nor reclaime vs vnto him; it is good reaſon that he ſhould ſpeake in an other phraſe. That is the thing which wee haue to obſerue, where Moſes doeth in this place call to heauen and earth. Yea and let vs marke, that he expreſſeth more in ſaying, heauen and earth, than if he had called all the Angels of heauen, (as hee might haue done,) and in likewiſe all the dyuels of hell, as executioners of the iuſtice of God. But it ought to make vs more aſhamed when he ſetteth before vs yͤ ſenſleſſe creatures. Now therfore when wee haue not obeyed our God, who ſhalbe our witneſſes to condemne vs? The creatures yͭ haue neyther reaſon, nor vnderſtanding, nor ſenſes. The earth knoweth not wherefore it was created, no more do the heauens; and yet doe euen they preach with a loud voyce, that their creator is to be obeyed.

To take theſe wordes of Heauen and Earth, for men & Angels: were too colde a doctrine. Moſes vndoutedly had a farther reſpect; which is, that men ſhalbe woorſe than aſhamed, if they giue not eare to God when he teacheth them. And wherefore? For it might be replyed that it was an vnreaſonable kinde of ſpeach, to cal heauen and earth to witneſſe. For they bee not of capacitie to alleage any thing. No: but let vs conſider howe the earth, hauing no vnderſtanding, doeth through a ſecret inclination obey God; ſhee openeth her bowels to nouriſh men; ſhee bringeth foorth fruite, ſhee doth her dutie in all reſpectes; yea, and ſhee doeth it in ſuch wiſe, as ſhee maketh it manifeſt vnto vs by effect, that ſhee tendeth to none other ende, but to obey her creator. And what doeth the heauen? Wee ſee howe it goeth about, and is in continuall labour: what voyages doeth the Sunne make euery day? hee fetcheth an infinite circuit. Wee ſee likewiſe howe the moone doeth the like, and ſo the reſt of the Planets. Alſo wee ſee other motions which goe a contrary courſe to theſe. To bee ſhort, the heauen doeth as it were burne in deſire to ſerue God; and yet theſe bee creatures without reaſon, without vnderſtanding. Seeing then that theſe ſhewe openly vnto vs, that the ſecrete inclination of nature doeth lead them thereto, & they neuer leaue off, but there is ſuch a conſtancie in them, that ſince the worlde was firſt created, this order hath alwayes continued ſtill: what is to bee done of vs in whome God hath imprinted his owne image, to the intent wee ſhoulde haue witte and diſcretion; telling vs in our conſciences, that wee ought to diſcerne good and euill aſunder, and prouoking vs thereto by his worde, wherby he diſcouereth himſelf vnto vs familiarly? If we for al this do draw back ſtil, & wil not receiue his yoke, nor yeeld him any obedience, muſt we not needs be worſe than monſters; and conſequently bee counted deteſtable? And on the other ſide, if after wee haue ſhewed ſome ſemblance of obedience to God, wee then become wauering, and by and by become wearie of ſeruing him, and turne away from him: ſhall wee not bee reprooued & conuicted by the continuall order of nature? Let vs marke wel then, that it is not without cauſe, that Moſes, (to make men more aſhamed) telleth thē that heauen and earth ſhalbee witneſſes againſt them, whereby they ſhalbee conuicted. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to obſerue. Now let vs come to that which hee addeth, I haue ſet before thee good and euil, bleſsing and curſing: to the intent thou ſhouldeſt liue: verily, euen by louing the Lord thy God for that he is the life and the long continuance of thy dayes. Here Moſes addeth not any new thing; but confirmeth his former matter. Whereby wee doe ſtill ſee, that we be ſo dulheaded when obedience to Godwarde commeth in talke, that it is not ynough for vs to haue the matter ſpoken briefly, & as it were by a glance: but it muſt be beaten into our heads. And therfore God neuer vſeth any ſuperfluous ſpeache: but thereafter as he ſeeth it expedient for vs, ſo doth he repete things: and becauſe he ſeeth that we haue but a ſhort memorie, hee is faine to put vs in mind of the things which we knew & haue now forgotten. Alſo for as much as he ſeeth vs to be hard of digeſtion; he is fayne to chaw the doctrine to vs aforehand, that we may bee able to digeſt it. That is the thing which Moſes doth preſently, when he ſayeth: This day I call heauen & earth to witneſſe, that I haue ſet before thee good and euill, bleſſing and the curſe. Nowe let vs returne to that that wee haue ſpoken; which is, that as often as the worde of God is declared vnto vs, wee muſt looke into the power therof, euen to ſtay our ſelues thereuppon: that after wee haue once receiued the grace which hee offereth vnto vs, wee may not dout that wee ſhalbe deceiued, being ſo ſtayed vppon the teſtimonie which hee hath deliuered to vs of his goodneſſe and loue. And likewiſe that beeing touched with dread and feare; to the intent we may preuent the threatenings, wee muſt not linger till hee put the thinges in execution, which hee hath denounced againſt vs, but we muſt goe and yeelde our ſelues vnto him, to pray him to receiue vs to his mercie and pitie. And albeit that this ſolemne proteſtation bee not made euery day, as it was here done by Moſes; yet wee muſt vnderſtande that it belongeth vnto vs at this day, to the ende that none of vs ſhoulde beguyle himſelfe.

Moreouer it is ſayde that both bleſſing and curſing are ſet before our eyes when wee haue the worde. Why ſo? For when our Lord trayneth vs vnto him, what remayneth then? Is not hee our life and the length of our dayes? Shall wee liue when wee bee parted away from God which is the fountaine of life and of all manner of happineſſe? If wee take this worde God [in our mouth] and do not vnderſtande whoſe we bee, nor what wee owe him; wee make him but an idoll, hee is but a fantaſie: as there be many which talke ynough of God, but yet they doe not thinke that they leaue him emptie of all his glorie. But it is not for vs to ſpeake after that manner of our God: wee muſt yeelde vnto him that which belongeth to his maieſtie. Beholde, our God is the fountayne of life, hee is the welſpring of vertue, of ioy, of felicitie, & of glorie. To bee briefe, the fulneſſe of all goodneſſe lyeth in him; and therefore as ſoone as wee turne away from him, wee cannot haue any droppe of thoſe things: but all manner of miſchiefe ſhall purſue vs. That is the thing which Moſes hath declared vnto vs in this place. So then by this worde God, and by his proper office, he ſheweth vs, that when we haue his word, we muſt not then any longer ſtagger, neither is there any excuſe for the misbeleeuers which do not this honor to God, to conclude & to anſwere Amen, as ſoone as he ſaith the word. And why? For it is alone as if they renounced him. And yͤ Apoſtle vſeth as it were a like reaſon, in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, where hee ſayeth: Hebr.4.12. For as much as it is the office of GOD to ſearch mennes heartes, hee hath alſo giuen the ſame power to his word, ſo as it muſt pearce our bones, and ſoake euen into the marrow and into ẏ very thoughts. He putteth downe there a likeneſſe and conformitie betwixt God and his worde. So alſo in this place Moſes telleth vs, that it is not for vs to cauill or wrangle any more, when wee haue once beene inſtructed by the worde of God. For therein hee ſheweth himſelfe what he is, there muſt wee behold his power. Nowe then, if wee intytle God to this prayſe that hee is our life, and the length of our dayes, it is certaine that wee muſt fynd the ſame in Gods worde, and thereof wee ought to bee throughly well aſſured. To be ſhort, wee ſee howe Moſes ſtandeth vppon this point, that the worde of God ought to haue ſuch honour & reuerence at our hands, as to accept it as if God himſelfe appeared vnto vs viſibly in his maieſtie, and to ſubmit our ſelues obediently thereunto, as in very deede that is the true proofe and tryall of the obedience which wee yeelde vnto him. But herewithall, wee bee alſo admoniſhed, that men deceiue themſelues, when they ſeeke either life or proſperitie any where elſe than in God. For wee foorthwith goe to Pſal.104.29 wracke as ſoone as he draweth his ſpirite from vs. Do wee then deſire to liue? Let vs abide vnder the wings of our God, and cleaue vnto him, according as it is ſayde here. True it is that in this place Moſes ſetteth forth an earthly life vnto the Iewes, and alſo the land of Chanaan, which was aſſigned vnto them for their inheritance: but yet he ſheweth that God meant by exerciſing of them in thoſe thinges to trayne them on farther. Let vs marke (I ſay) that Moſes did not meane to holde the people to this earthly life, but to make them to vnderſtande the goodnes of GOD, and to giue them ſome certaine taſte therof, by the teſtimonies which they had here beneath. Moreouer, ſeeing that it is ſo that God proteſted vnto the Iewes by the mouth of Moſes, that hee layde before their eyes both life and death, when hee willed that the lawe ſhoulde bee publiſhed: let vs vnderſtande that the ſayde life is yet better vttered vnto vs at this day. For the lawe is called the meſſenger of death, becauſe life is not there ſo largely knowen, as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt doth ſhewe it vs at this day, in that hee commeth to offer himſelfe vnto vs as the liuely image of his father, to the intent that wee ſhoulde be tranſ- Col.1.15. figured into his glorie. Let vs then marke well, that as oft as the doctrine of the Goſpell nowadayes is preached vnto vs, God ſheweth forth life vnto vs, and calleth vs in ſuch wiſe vnto him, as wee may become one with him, according to this ſaying which wee reade in the ſeuenteenth Chapter of Saint Iohn; Holy Father, I beſeech thee, that they may bee one with vs, Iohn.17.21 as thou and I are but one. Seeing then that our Lorde Ieſus hath pronounced this with his own mouth; let vs not feare but that whenſoeuer we bee called vnto him, hee doeth ioyne vs perfectly to himſelfe in glory. But yet therewithall, let vs alſo bee afrayed, leaſt for our refuſing to receiue life to inioy it; death bee giuen vnto vs. Not that that is of the nature of the Goſpell; (for wee our ſelues be the cauſe thereof) but becauſe the reprobates bee euermore conſumed by the onely ſauour of the Goſpel, through their owne malice and vnthankfulnes. Let vs bee ad- 2.Cor.2.16. uiſed to chooſe the life that is offered vnto vs, ſeeing wee neede not to ſeeke it farre off, but the matter reſteth onely in receiuing it, when it is ſet before our eyes. But as touching the cauſe, and how God gouerneth vs by his holy Spirite: that was treated of yeſterday, ſhewing that the ſame is done by his word, notwithſtanding that it is vttered vnto vs by the mouthes of men.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes: beſeeching him to make vs feele them more and more, yea, and to miſlike them, and that wee may bee ſo reformed to his obedience, as we may couet nothing but to dedicate our ſelues wholy to his ſeruice, vntill that being quite diſpatched from our olde Adam, wee bee fully reformed by his righteouſneſſe. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie GOD heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xxiij. of Aprill, 1556

The CLXXIII. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the one & thirtith Chapter.

THen Moſes went and ſpake theſe wordes vnto all Iſrael,

2 Saying vnto them, This day am I ſixe ſcore yeres olde, and I can no longer goe in and out: And the Lorde alſo hath ſayde vnto mee, Thou ſhalt not paſſe ouer this Iordan.

3 The Lorde thy God will paſſe ouer before thee: It is hee that ſhall deſtroy this people before thy face, and thou ſhalt poſſeſſe them. Ioſuah is hee that ſhall goe ouer before thy face, euen as the Lorde hath ſpoken.

4 And the Lorde will doe vnto them as hee did to Sehon and to Og the kinges of the Amorrhytes, and to their countries, the which hee hath deſtroyed.

5 And the Lorde will deliuer them before thee, to the intent you may doe vnto them according to all the commaundement which I haue commaunded you.

6 Be of good comfort, and take courage, feare not neither be diſmayed before their face: for the Lorde thy God goeth with thee, hee will not leaue thee nor forſake thee.

7 And Moſes called Ioſuah, and ſayde vnto him in the preſence of all Iſrael: bee of good comfort, and take a good heart to thee: for thou ſhalt goe in with the people into the Lande, which the Lorde hath ſworne to their fathers to giue them: and thou ſhalt diuide it vnto them for their inheritaunce.

8 And it is the Lorde that goeth before thee: it is hee that is with thee: hee will not forſake thee nor leaue thee, therefore haue no feare nor dread.

HERE it is ſhewed vs, howe Moſes was not cōtented to ſerue God & the people vnto ý which hee was apointed all the days of his life: but alſo did his endeuour, that the remembrance of the name of God might continue among the people, and alſo that all things might be gouerned accordingly, euen after his death. Alſo hee gaue them to vnderſtande, that Gods calling of him was not to the ende that the people ſhould bee ſo entreated for a certaine time: but that as the lawe was giuen for a witneſſe that God had choſen the children of Abraham; ſo hee would guyde them euen to the comming of the Redeemer, according whereunto hee went through with his calling. That is the very thing, which we haue here chiefely to obſerue, when Moſes by the commaundement of God ordayned Ioſuah to bee his ſucceſſour to gouerne the people. And therewithall hee ſheweth that hee had faithfully trauayled all his life, and that it was not for any want of good will, that hee gaue ouer the charge that was committed vnto him: but becauſe hee was altogether forworne with weakeneſſe. For if Moſes ſhoulde haue withdrawen him to bee at reſt, the people might haue beene in dout, and alſo much diſcouraged thereby: but whereas hee declareth that hee neuer ceaſſed vntill hee had finiſhed his courſe: therein hee ſheweth the way and example vnto all men, that none ought to turne heade; but that ſo long as God doeth prolong their liues, they ought to goe on foorth whither ſoeuer hee calleth them, and to bee firme and conſtant without ſwaruing aſide or changing. Moreouer hee ſheweth vs, that wee muſt not ſhrinke away for any mans death, becauſe God continueth euermore in his ſtate. And although ý they by whom he meant to be ſerued doe periſh, yet muſt not his right be thereby diminiſhed: and that is a poynt worthie to be remembred. For wee ſee what happened in that people; notwithſtanding that they had beene forewarned thereof, yet fell they away after the death of Ioſuah, and God was driuen to afflict them by the handes of their enemies to bring them backe againe. But felt they once agayne the fauour of God? By and by they fell to their olde byaſſe againe, and remembred not a whit that they were deliuered, but returned to their idolatrie againe. The booke of the Iudges is full of theſe thinges. When God had raiſed vp Samuel who was the excellenteſt of all others: yet could not they abyde him, but deſired a king, and the State was fayne to bee changed after their appetite. Wee ſee therefore that this people were ſo wretched, that they continued not any longer in the ſeruice of God, nor in the obedience of his lawe, than a man of courage and ſtoutneſſe had the gouerning of them.

1.Samuel.8.

Therefore it is ſayde here, that although Moſes was olde and ſhort lyued, yet was it not for them to looke eyther this way or that way, but to conſider that the liuing God had choſen and elected them for his people, and promiſed them to haue care of their welfare: and that ſeeing hee had taken them into his ſauegarde, hee woulde neuer forſake them, ſo they did ſticke vnto him, and were faithfull vnto him, and turned not away. And thus wee may gather a good admonition out of this place: that is to ſaye, that hauing both our eyes and our wittes faſtened vppon the worde of God, wee muſt haue a right continuance in yͤ faith,albeit that things do change as touching the worlde. In deede, if wee haue good folke to leade vs, wee bee ſo much the leſſe excuſable, if wee profite not thereby. For if God ſtretch out his hande vnto vs, and giue vs gouernours which bee as his meſſengers; edifying and gouerning vs faithfully; it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde ſtrayne our ſelues ſomuch the more: for wee haue one generall rule, to cauſe the meanes that God giueth vs to bee auaylable, euen by turning them to our profite. It is a ſingular thing, when hee giueth vs ſuch men as haue the vertue of his holy ſpirite, which alſo bee ſo endued with whatſoeuer is for our benefite, as wee may vnderſtande that hee offereth him ſelfe vnto vs in their perſons: It behooueth vs I ſay, to bee ſo much the more moued at ſuch times to ſerue God. But howſoeuer it bee, let vs content our ſelues with the doctrine; and albeit that men do dye and fayle vs, let vs neuertheleſſe vnderſtande, that God is alwayes the ſame, and that his trueth cannot change. For it is ſayde of men, that they bee but a ſhadowe; but the worde of GOD continueth for euer. And that not onely in it ſelfe, but it muſt alſo haue a rooting in vs, euen an incorruptible roote, as ſaith Saint Peter. Let vs learne therfore, that if the people of Iſrael were exhorted to continue in the faith and ſeruice of God after the death of Moſes, wee alſo muſt doe the like at this daye.

Pſa.102.12.
Eſa.41.8.
1.Pet.1.23.

And Moſes in ſo dooing doeth make it manifeſt, that hee beareth no enuie towarde Ioſuah, as many do, who ſeeke their own renown, and would not that others ſhould do any thing, for feare leaſt their owne prayſe ſhoulde bee ſtayned, and that men ſhould not talke ynough of them. Moſes had not this curſed ambition, that hee ſhoulde hinder the procurement of the peoples welfare by the aduauncing of Ioſua, but as much as in him lay hee did put him in authoritie, yea euen to perfourme a farre greater matter than was graunted to him ſelfe to doe. For God tolde him before, that hee ſhould not enter into the lande that was promiſed to the people. In deede hee ſawe it: but hee was ſhut out, becauſe hee honoured not God, when the people murmured for want of drinke. Becauſe hee did not then ſufficiently glorifie God: but was troubled and vexed in his minde, hee was depriued of that honour, and God did diſgrade him in that behalfe. And yet for all that, Moſes omitted not to take Ioſuah, and appoynted him to bee his ſucceſſour, willing him to doe his duetie in ſetting the people in poſſeſſion of their inheritance. Seeing then that wee perceiue that Moſes did willingly ſubmit himſelfe, let euery of vs learne to haue no reſpect to himſelfe, nor to vaunt himſelfe, nor to ſeeke our owne credite in this worlde, of purpoſe to bee renoumed both during our life and after our death: but let vs content our ſelues, that God doeth acknowledge, that wee were willing to ſerue him, ſo as the Church might feele the profite of our labour, and bee edified thereby.

Num.20.12
Deut.32.51.
& 52.

When wee bee at this poynt, let vs referre our ſelues to our God, and beare no enuie to thoſe whome hee rayſeth vp in our ſteed. For wee knowe, that if GOD doe not worke continually amongeſt men, the grace that hee hath put into them will quickly vaniſh; (ſuch is our frailtie:) and then all that wee haue profited ſhall bee nought woorth. Is it our deſire that GOD ſhoulde continue that which hee hath wrought by vs? It is neceſſarie then that hee haue alwayes people to ſerue him. Let euery one therfore endeuour to diſcharge his duty without enuie, and without ſpyting: let the maſter haue his honour and preheminence, and let vs bee cohelpers one to another, and doe our endeuour to ayde ſuch as wee ſee to bee acceptable to God. Thus much is here ſhewed vs by the example of Moſes.

Nowe hee ſayeth vnto the people, I am an hundred and twentie yeares olde, I can no longer goe and come: and the Lorde hath ſayde that I may not enter into this lande. Firſt of all, hee alleageth his weakeneſſe, for that hee was ſo olde, ſo bruſed and broken: that hee was no longer able to ſatiſfie ſo difficult a charge. I can not goe and come (ſayeth hee). Nowe hereof I gather that which I haue touched, namely, that whileſt Moſes was luſtie, or had in him any ſtrength at all, hee ſpared not himſelfe, knowing well that the ſame was not giuen him for himſelfe, but for the common benefite, and welfare of all the people: hee then practiſed that which Saint Paul ſpeaketh of, namely, not to liue to himſelfe. Nowe in deede wee bee not all ſo excellent as hee was: yet neuertheleſſe this rule is common to all the children of GOD, that is, that no body is created for his owne particular behoofe; but that we muſt looke to our vocation, that wee may followe it, and offer vp our ſelues in ſacrifice to God, & euery man liue and continue according to his abilitie and meaſure without ydleneſſe. And let vs not flatter our ſelues, as to ſaye, I am excuſed: for it is not for vs to take our leaue, and to giue ouer, and to diſcontinue when wee our ſelues liſt. Euery man (I ſay) muſt goe on euen to the ende, without beeing wearie: and when it ſhall pleaſe GOD to deliuer vs out of this world, then are we diſcharged, and not afore.

Rom.14.7.
2.Cor.5.13.

Rom.12.1.

Nowe when hee ſayeth that God depriueth him of going into the lande; hee alleageth a matter not honourable to him ſelfe: but doeth call to remembrance the fault that he had committed. Hee doeth not here accuſe God, neither fretteth hee at the puniſhment whereof he ſpeaketh; but he acknowlegeth his offence with meeknes. Seeing that Moſes, a man ſo excellent which was as it were an Angel amongſt mortall creatures, was contented to teſtifie his fault, and often times to rehearſe that he was not worthie to enioy the heritage which God had promiſed to Abraham, in ſo much that although hee had deliuered the people, and had doone ſo many noble actes, & had publiſhed the Lawe, and was reputed gouernor of yͤ Church of God euen vntill yͤ comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: yet notwithſtanding euen after all this,hee was not aſhamed to lay foorth his owne fault, and to declare that God would not admit him to the promiſed heritage:what ought wee to do? So then whenſoeuer God puniſheth vs, let vs not ſeeke vayne ſhiftes to couer our vncleanneſſe: but let vs rather bee well contented, that the puniſhmentes which God hath ſent vs, may profite & ſerue for inſtruction to all our neighbours. Hee ſayeth moreouer, The Lorde thy God will goe before thee,and deſtroy all theſe people before thy face, and thou ſhalt doe vnto them,as thou didſt vnto Sehon & Og kings of Bazan & of the Amorites. Here Moſes confirmeth the matter which we haue touched, to wit, that although hee be not preſent in perſon,when the people ſhould enter into the lande of Chanaan, yet was God of right to be eſteemed more than mortall men, ſo as the people ought not to bee afrayde though they ſawe not Moſes any more, nor aske, where is hee that hath led vs? Be contented(ſaith he)to haue the Lorde to goe with you. Hereby wee bee yet better warned to yeeld God his due honour,which is,to reſt in him alone,although wee bee bereft of all meanes heere beneath. In deede it is a thing to bee deſired, that wee might euer bee gouerned by ſuch rulers as are led by the Spirite of God: for it is a priuiledge and fauour, that cannot bee ſufficiently eſteemed, and it is alſo a ſigne and token that hee is amongeſt vs: Therefore it were greatly to be wiſhed. Neuertheleſſe,although wee bee depriued therof, and that God taketh them away by death, whereby his bleſſing,to the outward ſhew,is ſo much the leſſer: yet, let vs looke vp higher and by fayth behold howe he is preſent to them which ſeeke him, and that he hath his hand euermore ſtretched out to helpe them,ſo as his power ſhalbee ſtrong ynough, albeit that hee ſhewe them nothing viſibly. That is the thing which we haue to remember where Moſes ſayeth, The Lorde thy God will goe before thee. It is certaine that as touching my ſelfe I ſhal not be there any more,but ſhoulde you therefore bee diſmayed and fayntharted? What is God? Wote ye not that he hath all in his owne power? What am I? I am but a ſhadowe. Now God hath put a certaine droppe of his power in me,and you haue perceiued the experience thereof: and although the ſame haue profited you, what is it in compariſon of his helping of you with the whole fulnes of his power? Nowe then, looke that you meaſure not Gods power by a mortall man: neither bee yee ſo groſſe headed and witleſſe, as to ſay that you be diſcouraged becauſe I am no more with you, and that yee bee alreadie vanquiſhed: for that were a curſed blaſphemie. But vnderſtand,that God is not diminiſhed: when the creatures be periſhed, hee is able to rayſe others: and without rayſing vp of any at all, he is ſufficient himſelfe: for hee hath no neede to borowe from any where elſe. Now then the verie office and propertie of faith, is to reſt vs in God and to ſtaye vppon him, ſo as although all the worlde fayle vs, yet wee aſſure our ſelues that God wil worke mightily ynough, without being ayded by any other partie. Moreouer, for the better confirming of the people in hope, Moſes telleth them that they had ſeene alreadie after what maner God had wrought in his peoples behalf. You haue had(ſayeth hee) victorie againſt Og the king of Bazan, and againſt Sehon the king of the Amorrhites,and you know that God did then fight for you. (For in deede the people had beene at that time, as it were vtterly forlorne, and were driuen of force to confeſſe that the victorie came not of themſelues, but that God through his grace did vanquiſh theſe two mightie kings.) Seeing therefore that GOD hath alreadie ſhewed himſelfe a father towards you, feare not but that he will continue ſo hereafter. Thus ſhould wee bee confirmed in hope, by our former experience & feeling of the fauour and helpe of our GOD. When he hath once made vs to taſt his goodneſſe;let vs thereby bee ſo much the more aſſured. That is the thing which Moſes meant to teach vs in ſpeaking here of Sehon and Og. Now hee addeth farther, that the Iſraelites ſhoulde doe vnto all the nations whom God would deliuer into their handes, according as it is commaunded them here. It ſhoulde ſeeme at the firſt ſight, that the people ought much rather to haue vſed mercie, than ſo to haue rooted them out vtterly. But(as Deut.7.16. wee haue ſeene heretofore) God had ſayde vnto them: You ſhall ſpare none, neither litle nor great; all the race of them muſt bee rooted out: for I will not haue any of them remaine vnto you. Nowe it ſeemeth to bee a kinde of crueltie,that notwithſtanding that they yelded themſelues,and craued mercie, yet they ſhoulde neuertheleſſe be al kild. Yea,but yet for al that,ſeeing God had ſpoken it,the people were of dutie to execute it, & not to be wiſe to the contrarie, nor to gloſe vpon the worde of God, or to reply vnto it at all. Wee ſee then that when men will needes ſwim betwixt two ſtreames, and make a medly betweene the worde of God & their own fancies; they marre all. There is nothing better than to followe that which God ſheweth & cōmandeth vs. For if we take vpon vs to be too forecaſting, hee will laugh our preſumption to ſcorne,& in the ende we ſhalbe accurſed. Let vs marke then,that ſeeing it was Gods will that all thoſe people(to wit, the Chananites, Pherezites,& their like) ſhoulde bee rooted out:it was the duetie of the Iſraelites to doe that which was giuen them in charge: for there was none but GOD him ſelfe that coulde bee Iudge thereof. Yet notwithſtanding, it is certaine yͤ God dealt not exceſſiuely in puniſhing thoſe people:for hee had long time patiently wayted for their amendment;euer ſince the time of Abraham had they bin vnrefourmable; they had bin ſpared foure hundred yeres. But were they therby any whit amended? Nay, they were become worſe than euer they were:was it not reaſon then,yͤ after god had ſo lōg borne wͭ them,he Gen.15.16. ſhold lay his hand vpon them at yͤ laſt? [Yes verily;]& therfore let no bodie murmur in this behalf againſt god,as thogh his vēgeāce were too rough.And in very deed it is a wonderous thing yͤmen cannot content thẽſelues with the iuſtice of God how moderately ſoeuer he vſe it When we perceiue any ouer great iniquitie (ſpecially if it touch our ſelues, & that we receiue damage & hurt thereby) we cry vnto God: & be greeued if he beſtirre him not at the firſt daſh, & we think that he is as it were aſleepe. What ſay we? Is it poſſible that God ſhould ſuffer ſo long? If hee looke downe, how can he be ſo patient? We will needes haue God to take weapon in hande at our pleaſure: and when hee doth any execution if it like vs not, we ſay: Howe nowe? What rigorous dealing is this? God ſayth, that he is long ſuffering, full of goodneſſe, ſlowe to wrath, and inclined to mercie: howe is it then that he dealeth thus roughly with men? Nay, wee thinke that he is cruell, and we will alſo condemne him in that point. Seeing then that wee be ſo vntowarde, and that in ſteede of iudging rightly of the workes of God, we wrappe vp all in confuſion: let vs learne to like well of all his dooinges, without any gaineſaying: and when we perceiue not the cauſe; let vs make this concluſion, that howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, all that euer proceedeth of him, is rightfull, & that there is nothing in him but infinite wiſedome and vprightneſſe. And moreouer let vs alſo ſhut our eyes cloſe againſt all conceites, which may hinder vs and make vs vnable to ſerue GOD, yet let vs not range hither and thither: but let it ſuffice vs to haue the worde from his mouth, and to holde vs to that which he hath commaunded. That is the thing which we haue to gather out of this text, where Moſes telleth vs that the people of Iſraell muſt do vnto all their enemies, according as God hath commanded them.

Exod.34, 6.

Nowe thereupon he ſayth, That they ſhoulde not be diſmayed nor afraide, but that they ſhoulde bee courageous and behaue themſelues manfully. Whereupon is all this exhortation grounded? Vpon the promiſe which he made, namely, The Lord thy God will goe before thee. We muſt therefore marke that men ſhall neuer take good courage, what ſoeuer is ſayde vnto them, vnleſſe they bee aſſured of the helpe of God, and that he will be on their ſide, and giue good ſucceſſe to all their enterpriſes. It is certaine that men be too bolde to do thinges, and to attempt more than is lawfull for them: but they do euer go about it careleſly, and without diſcretion. And as a madde bedlem, notwithſtanding yͭ he bee brought lowe with his long ſicknes & feele not his own weakeneſſe: yet is he much ſtronger and rageth in ſuch wiſe, as he cannot be ruled, and worketh more trouble than if he were in perfect health: euen ſo is it with men when they haue no promiſe of God, but be chafed in their owne raſhneſſe and preſumption. They dare doe wonders: but in reſpect to doe well, we neuer take courage therin, vnleſſe we be aſſured of the will of God: and to be ſhort, we can neuer build but vpon his promiſes. We muſt therefore remember that Moſes, before he exhorteth the people to bee valiant & to behaue themſelues ſtoutly, ſayde vnto them, Thy God wil be with thee, feare them not. And why ſo? For thou art ſure that thou canſt not quaile, becauſe thy God gouerneth thee. Howbeit, foraſmuch as wee doe not at the firſt take ſure holde of the promiſes of God, neither are they ſo certainely ſettled in our heartes, as is to be wiſhed; Moſes doth alſo adde a confirmation, and ſayth: Nay, the Lord thy God will not leaue thee, neither ſhalt thou euer be forſaken of him. It was ynough that he hadde ſayde afore, Thy God will goe before thee, hee will giue thee victorie againſt all thine enemies; thou haſt alreadie had experience of his helpe: It ſhalbe alwayes the ſame: this may ſeeme to haue beene ynough. But yet that which Moſes addeth vnto it is not ſuperfluous, becauſe of the vnbeleefe of men: who notwithſtanding that God doe aſſure them, doe yet ſtill doubt and be wauering, vnleſſe they haue a newe confirmation. Whereby we perceiue that it is no light matter to giue credit to the promiſes of God, and to holde vs to them, as many do ſuppoſe, but that is becauſe they neuer tryed it. They that thinke themſelues to bee moſt faithfull, haue neuer taſted what faith is: according as we ſee a great manie fooles, which ſpeake of warre, and thinke to deuour all at one bitte, whereas in deede they neither knowe nor haue ſeene any thing. Euen ſo is it with thẽ that haue a ſpeculatiue faith: they make themſelues yͤ ableſt folk in the world, they boaſt themſelues to be as faithfull as any can be founde: but they that knowe what faith is, doe vnderſtande that there is nothing more harde, than for vs to ſtay ourſelues vppon God; and in that behalfe wee muſt bee faine to impriſon our ſenſes, and to take the bit in our mouth (as they ſay) and to enforce our ſelues; yea and that God alſo on his ſide doe worke in that behalfe, as we doe ſee that he doeth. For it is no ſuperfluous talke, when hee ſetteth his promiſes before vs, and putteth vs ſo often in minde of them. For it is a token that they beare no great ſway with vs, or rather that they enter not into our hearts to ſettle there, as were meete they ſhoulde. Thus yee ſee what Moſes meant, in ſaying, That the Lorde will neuer forſake his people.

Moreouer, vnder this worde, he ſheweth vnto vs, that Gods offering of his grace vnto vs is not for a day, but that hee will continue it vnto the end, conditionally that we alſo do receiue it with the like condition. In deede it is true that in this place he treateth but of the Land of Canaan: but we knowe that it was a pleadge of the eternall life, and of the inheritaunce that is prepared for vs in heauen. Now he ſayth expreſly, Thy God wil neuer leaue thee, neither will he euer forſake thee. Wee ſee therefore that our Lorde meaneth not to encourage vs for a day, but he meaneth that we ſhould depende vppon him to liue and to die, and that we ſhould be fully reſolued, that when he hath begonne, he will performe his worke towarde vs, and that he wil not leaue vs at the halfe way, (as they ſay). And this is to bee well noted, becauſe that although men imbrace Gods promiſes, yet are they ſometimes or other in dout, and wot not where to become: and ſpecially when any temptation commeth vpon them, then be they ſo ſcarred, that to their ſeeming, God is loth to doe them good, or elſe that he will not continue to doe them good. Seeing then that we be thus toſſed with doubtes and troubles, we haue ſo much the more neede to remember the leſſon that is here deliuered vnto vs: namely, yͤ God doth offer vs his grace, with ſuch condition as it ſhall neuer faile vs. But we ſee how this doctrine hath bin peruerted ſpecially in the popedome. They be not aſhamed to ſay, that we muſt ſtande alwayes in doubt of continuaunce to the end, and that we wote not what God intendeth to doe heereafter; inſomuch that it is a principall article of their faith which they holde in the Popedome. Neither meane I that it is the ignoraunt ſort of the ſimple people only which do ſay ſo, but that it is the reſolution of all the Monks and Freers; who affirm it to be the principal article of their faith, that men muſt ſtande alwaies in doubt whether God wil ſaue them or not. Seing then yͤ the deuil hath borne ſuch a ſway, ſomuch the more ought we to be confirmed in this doctrine, where it is ſayde, The Lord thy God will not leaue thee, neither ſhalt thou euer be forſaken of him.

Now when Moſes had thus ſpoken to the people: then hee called alſo Ioſuah and confirmed him. And moreouer in the perſon of Ioſuah, we may perceiue the thing yet better which I haue ſayd afore; namely, yͤ it ſufficeth vs not to be once certified of the grace of God; but that becauſe of our weakenes, we haue neede to be vpholden & maintained, leaſt wee fall away or ſwarue aſide. For behold, here is Ioſuah whom God had choſen to be gouernour of his people to ſet them in yͤ poſſeſſion of their promiſed inheritaunce. And yet notwithſtanding for all that he had hearde his duetie and office at the mouth of Moſes, yet was God fain to giue him new reuelations after the death of Moſes; & to vſe the like words vnto him againe. And how ſo? Was he ſo ſhort witted, that ere three dayes to an end, he had quite forgottē what had bin ſaid vnto him before God and the ſanctuarie? He was there preſent, and a ſolemne ceremonie was vſed thereabout, & was it becauſe that Ioſuah had forgotten his duetie? No: But he was a fraile man: and God knowing him to be ſo, did confirme him, and encourage him. And if this needed to bee done to Ioſuah; what needeth to be done to vs? Therefore let vs beware of the preſumption that blindeth vs, in that we thinke we neede not to ſette our mindes continually vppon the worde of God as there be many doe, which hauing hearde ſome one ſermon, do ſuppoſe that they bee clarkes good ynough, not conſidering that the thinges which they haue heard will ſoone vaniſh away, and be quite and cleane gone ere three daies to an end, vnleſſe they doe ſtill beate vpon it. So then, let vs be well aduiſed that wee exerciſe ourſelues in the promiſes of God, and when they be often laide afore vs, let vs not thinke the time to be loſt in hearing them: but let vs vnderſtand that our Lordes intent is to emprint them in vs, to the ende we ſhould ſticke vnto them, and be ſo throughly grounded in them, as Satan may neuer haue power to turne vs away, by any meanes whatſoeuer. That is a thing which we haue yet farther to remember.

Nowe let vs come to that which Moſes ſpake vnto him. Moreouer thou ſhalt go before the people (ſayeth hee) and therefore bee of good courage and behaue thyſelfe manfully. When hee ſayeth vnto him, that he ſhall goe before the people, he ſtabliſheth his authoritie in the name of GOD. Wherby he maketh it manifeſt, that it is not for men to thruſt in themſelues; accordingly alſo as the Apoſtle ſaith, yͤ no man ought to vſurpe honour vnto himſelfe, but hee yͤ is called to it muſt Hebr.5.4. vndertake and diſcharge the ſame: let vs then learne to hold vs in ſuch modeſtie & ſimplicitie, as yͤ none of vs auaunce himſelfe aboue meaſure, ne paſſe his boundes, as who would ſay, I will do this or that, not knowing whether he be appointed of God or not, but let euerie man be contented to doe that which is his charge, let a man gouerne his owne houſhoulde; and ſith he is but a priuate perſon, let him not vſurpe vppon that which is not permitted vnto him. Let the miniſter of the worde preach, and exhort, and accōpliſh his dutie, let the magiſtrate in like wiſe looke whereunto hee is called, let euerie of vs, keep his degree & his order: and let there be no confuſed mingling among vs. That is the thing which we muſt remember. Very large doctrine might be gathered out of this article, but I will not ſtande much thereuppon; for it hath beene often ſpoken of, & it is ſufficient for me to touch theſe matters in fewe wordes, for when they be once hearde, euerie man may thinke vpon them afterwarde. And greatly ſhall they haue profited in Gods ſchoole, which can holde thēſelues in quiet, and not attempt more than God hath cōmanded them, but ſimply followe their owne vocation. That is the thing which we haue to marke in this place, where Moſes ordaineth Ioſuah in his ſteede, howebeit ſpeaking, as in the perſon of God, and by his authoritie.

Moreouer he ſheweth that when God calleth vs to any charge, he doth alſo giue vs the ability to accompliſh that which he cōmandeth vs. And this is a neceſſary doctrine. What is the cauſe yͤ men be ſo feareful, that if they ſee but a ſhadow, by and by they be amazed and at their wits end how to do the thinges which they knowe to belong to their office? They ſee wel ynough wherunto God hath called them; and yet for all that they ſhrinke away their ſhoulders: and what cauſeth that? Euen that curſed diſtruſt of ours, in that we conſider not that God doth guide vs, and that he hath his hande euermore ſtretched out to helpe vs, ſo we walke ſimply, and doe our endeuour to obey him, and followe him quietly, hauing regarde to our office and calling. And ſo it is a leſſon whereof we can not be too mindful, which is ment in theſe wordes: Thy God will not forſake thee. And well ought we to put the ſame in vre. For it is a Teſtimonie, that God will neuer giue them ouer, whom hee ſetteth a worke, but that he wil giue them power, & bleſſe them, & make the ſucceſſe of their trauaile to be good and happy, if they ſtay vpon him and leane vnto him.

Hebr.3.5. 13-5. him . Yea and wee ſee that in the epiſtle to the Hebrues, the Apoſtle extendeth the ſame yet further, where he ſaith, Let your heartes be farre from couetouſneſſe, and know ye that it is written, The Lorde wil not forſake you . Whereby he ſheweth vs, that whereas we vſe ſo many wicked trades; and whereas treaſon, crueltie & malice doe leade vs into ſuch extremities, that we fling ouerthwart the feeldes, and walking in bypathes doe followe our owne diſordered luſtes: the welſpring of all theſe vices is that we put not our truſt in God; neither is it throughly wel ſealed in our heartes with any certaine aſſurednes that the Lorde is neere vnto vs, and that he will neuer forſake vs. And therefore ſeeing we haue no ſtay, but be ſo wauering & carryed away with vnquietnes, yea & ſet on fire, and our luſtes be as a thouſand fornaces continually burning within vs, becauſe we haue not our truſt in God; let vs learne to cõmit ourſelues to his prouidence, & to holde ourſelues aſſured ẏ hee will not faile vs: & then ſhall we finde the thing ẏ is tolde vs heere: namely, ẏ euerie man in his vocation may be aſſured ẏ God will be alwaies preſent with him. Is a man charged with a houſhold? Then will he be full of care, & if he haue a nũber of children, hee grudgeth, ſaying, Alas what ſhall I ſay? If I had but one or two children, I could deale as wel as they ẏ haue no charge at all: but now ẏ I haue ſo many hanging on my ſhoulders; alas what ſhall I do? True it is, ẏ a father ought in deede to take care for his children: but what manner of care ſhould ẏ be? It muſt moue him to call vpon God to haue recourſe to his helpe, to hold his family in order, that thinges go not to hauocke; it muſt cauſe him to inſtruct his children to liue in ſobrietie, and to bee contented with a litle, & not to lauiſh out ẏ which they haue: but labour that God may bleſſe thẽ. Such is the care that a father ought to haue. And this kinde of care hindereth him not to reſt vpõ God, ẏ hauing taſted this promiſe; namely, Thy God will not forſake thee, he do alwayes his dutie, and gouerne well his houſhold. And euen ſo it is of all others. Although they ſee neuer ſo great difficulties (as there be many which in their vocation, notwithſtanding ẏ they be priuate perſons, do finde thẽſelues greatly pulled backe) yet muſt they euer haue recourſe to this ankerhold; Thy God is aboue, he will guide thee, care not: ſo thou folow him, his helpe ſhall neuer faile thee. Much more reaſon is it therfore, ẏ ſuch as be in higher office and haue a heauier burthen to beare, ſhold haue recourſe to this promiſe when they ſee troubles, and many grudginges againſt thẽ, and perceiue the world inflamed with malice, & to ſay, What will our Lord ſleepe in heauen? The thing ẏ was ſpoken to Ioſuah, was it ſpokẽ only for one yere? No: but in ẏ perſon of him God meant to aſſure vs, ẏ when we walke in our dutie, and go directly to work as he hath cõmanded vs, hauing regard to obey him rather than to pleaſe the world, he is with vs and will aſſiſt vs. Seeing it is ſo, let vs march on, and not care for any thing that can happen vnto vs. This (I ſay) is the true vſe of this doctrine.

Moreouer, although we haue this aſſurance, that God will accompliſh & performe the worke that he hath begun, yet doth it not follow therfore, ẏ we alſo ſhould not inforce ourſelues. For theſe two thinges are ioyned together, namely, thy God will neuer giue thee ouer; and therfore be thou of good courage, & behaue thyſelfe valiantly. It is not ment then, ẏ God leadeth vs as it were ſleeping, and as though it were no harde matter for vs to do him ſeruice, when it pleaſeth him to imploy vs to any charge & office: No no: for we muſt labour therein, till wee pant againe, & ſometime it ſhall ſeeme vnto vs ẏ God is farre frõ vs & thinges ſhall be doutfull & diſordered, ẏ we wot not what ſhall become of vs: but then let vs cheere vp our ſelues. After ẏ maner muſt wee truſt in the prouidence of our God. And when we be ſo ſtayed thereupon, it is not meant ẏ we ſhould therfore let things fall out as they may, as wee ſee many doe, which take occaſion to waxe cold. God (ſay they) will prouide, & in the mean while they neglect their owne duetie. It is not ment that we ſhould ſhut our eyes, ſaying, God will prouide for it. Truely although all things in the world were as far out of order as could be; yet ought we to be well aſſured, howſoeuer we fare: but yet on the other ſide we muſt ſerue God after ſuch maner as he hath appointed vs to be his inſtrumentes, yea and ẏ in ſuch wiſe as if it be his will, that we muſt ſuffer much, ẏ then wee muſt haue patience & not be ouerthrowẽ nor broken therby. The thing thẽ in effect which we haue to beare in mind cõcerning this place, is ẏ we muſt labour all our life long in ſuch wiſe, as euery one may keepe himſelfe within his owne boundes & limites, and ẏ we attempt not raſhly more than God giueth vs leaue to do. And moreouer ẏ we muſt not be afraid to do, & to employ vs to thoſe things which our duty requireth, aſſuring ourſelues ẏ God is neere vnto vs, and that we ſhall feele his power at our neede, and ẏ hee will not forſake vs. When men thinke ẏ all is loſt, & doe mocke vs, & count vs as people paſt hope of recouery, let vs not dout but ẏ our Lord will accõpliſh that which is heere promiſed: and therfore let vs euermore holde on with patience, waiting for the performaunce of that which wee heare ſpoken of heere.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faults, beſeeching him to make vs to feele them more & more, and ẏ in likewiſe by acknowledging the frailety ẏ is in vs, we may ſeeke to arme vs ſo with his promiſes, as we may be fenſed vntil the end, not only to ſuſtain one cõbat or two, but alſo to fight all the daies of our life, & to remaine inuincible againſt al maner of tẽptations: And ẏ foraſmuch as it behoueth vs to depend altogether vpon him; we may be ſo ſtayed thereupon, ẏ when things do happen vnto vs contrary to our mindes as in reſpect of the world, we may not therby be abaſhed or diſmaied, but truſt that he only is as good as all other helpes, & therupõ cõmit ourſelues vnto him, endeuoring to glorifie him: and ẏ ſeeing it is his will to gouerne vs by the hand of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, we may be pliable and obedient vnto him; that being aſſured that he is our good and faithful guide,& that he will not faile vs, we may euermore take the more courage to giue ouer ourſelues, and wholly to offer our ſelues vnto him. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Friday the xxiiij. of Aprill, 1556.

The CLXXIIII. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the one & thirtith Chapter.

9 And Moſes wrate this lawe and deliuered it to the Prieſtes the ſonnes of Leuie, which bare the Arke of the couenaunt of the Lord, and to all the Elders of Iſraell.

10 And Moſes commaunded them, ſaying, At the ende of euery ſeuenth yeere, in the time of the yeere of freedome, in the feaſt of Tabernacles, 11 When all Iſraell commeth to appeare before the Lord thy God, in the place which hee ſhall chooſe: then ſhalt thou reade this Lawe before all Iſraell, in the hearing of them.

12 Thou ſhalt gather the people together, men, women, and children, and thy ſtraunger which is within thy gates, that they may heare and learne and feare the Lorde your God, and keepe all the wordes of this lawe, to doe them.

13 And that their children alſo which haue not knowen it, may heare it and learne it, ſo as they may feare the Lorde your God all the dayes that thou haſt to liue in the Lande whither thou goeſt ouer Iordan to poſſeſſe it.

14 Then the Lorde ſayde vnto Moſes, beholde, the dayes of thy death are at hande: call Ioſuah and ſtande ye at the Tabernacle of the Congregation that I may giue him his charge. And ſo Moſes and Ioſuah went, and ſtoode at the Tabernacle of the Congregation.

WE do wel confeſſe that God dealeth gratiouſly with men, when he vouchſafeth to teach them, and to ſhewe them the way of ſaluation. For we ſee well it is a moſt miſerable ſtate when men haue no teaching all their life long, but do guide themſelues at all aduentures. Nowe the caſe ſo ſtandeth that we can not holde any way that is certaine for vs, but only ẏ which God ſheweth vs: for as for the thinges which men deuiſe, in deede they thinke them good ynough, but in the meane while, albeit that they bee blinded with their owne fantaſies, yet muſt they needes euermore ſtande in dout, and God maketh it manifeſt at the laſt, that it was but vanitie and folly. If men therefore were well aduiſed, nothing ſhould be more deere vnto them, than to haue Gods trueth to guide them, which woulde be a lampe to ſhewe them the way of ſaluation. Beholde, God calleth vs, hee tarrieth not till wee come to ſeeke that which is good for vs, neither would he haue vs to fetch long windlaſſes: but he offereth himſelfe of his owne good will, aſſuring vs that we can not faile, if we will hearken to his voyce; he will giue vs ſufficient inſtruction, and he proteſteth that it ſhall not be in vaine for vs to followe that which we ſhall haue heard at his mouth. Isa.45.19. Yet notwithſtanding, wee for all this doe make ſmal account to be taught of him; euery of vs wandereth after his owne imagination: and (which worſe is) hauing hadde ſome taſt and knowledge, and hauing founde by experience that all our whole happineſſe lyeth there, and that our whole contentment and reſt ought to be ſettled in the obeying of Goddes worde; yet is there none of vs but hee turneth aſide from it, and the ſame hath beene common in all ages. Nowe therefore, to remedie this miſcheife, GOD hath vouchſafed that his woord ſhoulde bee kept by ſome meane, and that ſome certaine folke ſhoulde haue the charge to preſerue it ſafe and ſounde; that it might not periſhe. Wherein we behold the ineſtimable care that he hath of our ſaluation. Be not wee worthy to be depriued of ſuch a treaſure, ſeeing we do eſteeme it ſo litle? Yes: for our vnthankefulneſſe deſerueth the wrath of God, and that he ſhould withdrawe the thing which hee hadde beſtowed vppon vs. Yet notwithſtanding, hee ceaſeth not to drawe vs ſtill backe vnto him: and heereof wee ſee heere a goodly example in that it is ſayde that Moſes hauing written the lawe, committed it to the prieſtes the children of Leuie, which carried the Arke, and to all the Elders of Iſraell, which hadde the charge and authoritie to gouerne the people. True it is, that when GOD hath once publiſhed his worde, euerie man ought to bethinke him to receiue it, for euerie man ought to take heede to it, for himſelfe; men ought not to depende one vpon an other: neuertheleſſe there is not any man that is greatly carefull thereof. It is behoouefull therefore that GOD ſhould appoint people to watch ouer vs, whileſt we ſleepe, and to call vppon vs: and if they ſee vs readie to ſwarue aſide, they muſt reſtraine vs. This is the cauſe, why it was ſpecially requiſite that the lawe ſhould be deliuered into the handes of the Prieſtes. Firſt of all it was written; and it was ſufficient, that the people had hearde the will of God. If men had good remembraunce, and woulde not forget that which they haue learned; it were ynough I ſay, that Moſes had once declared vnto them that which was requiſite for their welfare. For hee hadde commaunded them to occupie their mindes about the ſtudie thereof both night and day, and to write the Deut.6.8. lawe vpon the poſtes of their houſes, vpon their tables, and euerie where elſe; to the intent, that whyther ſoeuer they turned their eyes, they might euer be ſtirred to thinke vppon God. Againe, they ought to haue had a care to inſtruct their children: and beſides this, the Lawe was copyed out, yea and to be kept as it were vppon Recorde of authoritie, as which proceeded altogether from the hande of God. And the reaſon was that the people did ſoone growe out of kinde. Although they hadde their eares beaten with the thinges that were contayned in the lawe; yet turned they away to ſuperſtition, and afterward euery man became dulheaded & had nothing in him but ignorance, ſo as wͭ in a while there was no knowledge of God among them. But is the lawe written? Yet is it neceſſarie that it be cõmitted as a treaſure into the hands of the Mal.2.7. Prieſtes, which be yͤ meſſengers of God, as ſaith the Prophet Malachy; Knowledge ought to dwel in their mouth; and when we haue asked counſell of thẽ, we ought to hearken vnto them to be enformed of the truth. Nowe then they are appointed to be keepers. But what came to paſſe after that God had prouided ſo well for the matter? The lawe periſhed and was loſt. And ſurely ſeeing there was ſo good order takẽ for the preſeruation thereof, that men might heare it ſpoken of, yea and yͭ at the end of euery ſeuen yeere in the feaſt of Tabernacles, in yͤ ſolemn day, the couenant of God was to be renued, & the whole law was to be repeated before all the people: it is an incredible matter yͭ the ſame was ſo ſtraitely kept, yet notwithſtanding yͭ in the meane while there was ſuch rechleſnes, yͭ the people made no reckoning to be depriued of their chief welfare. For mẽ (as we haue already ſayd) be more wretched than brute beaſts, vnleſſe they be taught by God. To what end ſerueth all the reaſon & vnderſtanding yͭ they ſuppoſe thẽſelues to haue by nature, but to their greeuouſer condemnation, vntil God hath put forth his hand to them, and haue ſhewed thẽ wherunto they muſt ſticke? But yet howſoeuer the worlde went, the children of Iſrael, yͤ bleſſed ſeede of Abrahã, the choſen people, elect & adopted of God, his inheritance and his Church, they (I ſay) vnto whõ God had done ſo great honor, whõ he had exalted vnto ſo high a dignitie, hauing heard the law publiſhed, ought euery of them to haue borne it in minde, and to haue kept it as carefully as men keepe the charters of a kingdome, or the Crowne, or other ſuch thinges. And truly in all cõpariſon, the lawe of God deſerueth well to haue the preeminence aboue al yͭ euer is in the world. But yet for all that it vaniſheth away, & in the mean ſpace the people had no great care thereof. And ſurely it is a very ſtrange caſe how it ſhold come to paſſe, cõſidering yͭ the remẽbrance therof was ſo ſolemnly kept, by reaſon wherof al the people ought to haue thought thus: How now? We loſe this good cuſtom, wherby yͤ law of god ſhold now ſound in our eares, wherby we ſhould haue yͤ remẽbrance therof renewed; whereby we ſhold be confirmed in his couenant, & whereby the ſame ſhould be ratified vnto vs by yͤ reading of the law. The people (I ſay) had no regard to any of theſe thinges. In deede they aſſembled at yͤ feaſt day, & made great cheere, but yet euery body returned home to his owne houſe, wͭout hauing regarde to theſe things, inſomuch yͭ the lawe lay as it were buried vntil the time of Ioſias, in the which it was found 2.Chr.34.14 againe. True it is yͭ at that time they were greatly abaſhed at it: but yet we ſee the rechleſnes of men in yͭ they ſpake not a word when they were depriued of ſo great a benefit. And yͭ is a token of too ſhamefull thankeleſnes. Heere haue we a lookingglaſſe, wherein we may very well behold the affectiõ of men: for we at this day be no better than the Iewes were. And in deede wee perceiue howe the world ſeeketh nought elſe but to be exempted, yͭ they might not haue their eares troubled with the law of God, nor with his word. True it is that they are aſhamed, & do abhor to ſay yͭ Gods word ſhould be deſpiſed; but yet they would make it a relique, to be worſhipped a farre off, & as a ſealed letter, ſo as men ſhould content thẽſelues with the doing of ſome honor & ceremony to it, as if they ſhould ſay, Lo, the word of God ſhalbe reuerenced, but yet it belongeth not to vs to trouble ourſelues ouermuch therewith, by applying our ſtudy thereunto. We ſee then how the world doth euermore ſhift it ſelfe from taking any ſuch knowlege of Gods word as they ought to haue. For whereof cõmeth the horrible ignorãce, which reigneth yet ſtil in may cõtries, & generally in all the popedome, but only of this, yͭ men referre thẽſelues to the Monkes & Freers, and ſuch other people, or at leaſtwiſe to the Popes Clergie for the knowledge of the holy ſcripture? For it is not for ſecular or temporall perſons (as they terme them) to deale therwith. And the ſecular prieſtes alſo (as they call them) diſcharge thẽſelues thereof & put it ouer to the Monkes: they ſay it belongeth to none but doctors of diuinity to deale with it. See how brutiſh the world was become. And yet a man would thinke it ſtrange yͭ men ſhould be ſo groſly ouerſeene, as to haue no diſcretion in ẏ behalfe, but that they ſhold be led by the muſſels like beaſts, and go aſtray after ẏ maner. How is it poſſible ẏ God ſhould ſo forſake his church,& that thinges ſhould be ſo groſſely abuſed? Let vs looke to the cauſe & fountaine of the miſchiefe. When God kindleth the light of life amongſt vs, if we ſhutte our eyes thereat,& turne our backes,or take couertes to ſleepe in, & play the ſluggardes, which ſhut their windowes, ẏ the ſun ſhould not ſhine into their eyes: if we ſeeke to ſettle after ẏ ſorte in our lees; is it not meete ẏ God ſhold withdraw all his teaching from vs? Surely it is the paymēt which the world hath receiued,becauſe ẏ where it ſhoulde haue ſought learning fit for it; it choſe rather to be ignorant, ẏ it might haue excuſe before God.And moreouer,when our Lord vouchſafed ẏ his Goſpell ſhould be preached, that the world might be inlightned by ẏ brightnes therof; men did openly rebell againſt it, & choſe to obey lyes rather than the trueth. Therefore it could not be but ẏ ſuch horrible vengeance muſt needes come vpon them.Againe we ſee the care that God hath had to preſerue his goſpel in perfect ſtate. For like as he had prouided for ẏ law, euen ſo hath he alſo done by the goſpell, which is the perfection of all learning, according as S. 2.Tim.2.2. Paul ſayth in the ſecond to Timothee. We ſee there what order he eſtabliſhed in the Church, Looke what thou haſt hearde of me (ſaith he)by many witneſſes, commit thou it ouer as a gage vnto faithfull folke, which be meete and able to teach others. There S. Paul appointed keepers of the goſpell,as God had earſt appointed ẏ Leuiticall prieſts for keepers of the lawe. Alſo hee would ẏ they ſhold be faithfull folke which ſhold be occupied & employed therein: and he would ẏ they likewiſe ſhould doe their dutie in deliuering ẏ things ouer frō hand to hand,as they had receiued thē, to ẏ intent they might not lie hidden in darkenes. Yet neuertheleſſe we ſee howe it is come to paſſe. Therefore, wee muſt marke well in this place, ẏ God hath euermore procured the ſaluation of his people,& of thoſe whom he hath choſen, & not forgotten any thing that might be a meane to keepe them vnder his obedience. Thus much for one point.

Moreouer,wheras the world hath bin alwaies wauering, & caried hither & thither, and could not ſtay nor hold it ſelfe to ẏ ſeruing of God,nor ſuffer it ſelfe to be guyded by the doctrine which is for the ſaluation thereof; & to be ſhort, wheras men play the wilde beaſts; it is not at the firſt daſh ẏ they haue ſo reſiſted God, or made countenance to diſobey him: but they haue turned away frō him by litle & litle, in ſuch ſort ẏ within ſhort time they haue falne quite & cleane away. And ſo ye ſee how men haue continued in their naughtines,& not kept the lawe ẏ was deliuered vnto thē for a rule to liue by, & for ẏ way to lead them to ſaluatiō. Seeing it is ſo,we ought to take ſo much the more heede to the things which are ſhewed vnto vs heere.What muſt then be done? It is not ynough ẏ the truth be[but only] writtē: for to what end ſhall ẏ ſerue me but to my greater condemnation? But foraſmuch as men are ſo wedded to the thinges that concerne this tranſitorie life, & think not on the heauenly treaſure; it is requiſite ẏ there ſhould be good keepers:and aboue all thinges wee muſt note ẏ there will alwaies be a ſpeciall order to retaine vs euermore in the obedience of God, ſo long as his worde is dayly ſhewed vnto vs, & that euery man hath it in his handes. And if this be not permitted,wee ſhall quickely be carried hither & thither, and there will be no ſtay in vs, vnleſſe we haue ſuch a bridle to hold vs backe. That is a thing which we haue to marke.

Nowe in ẏ meane while we ſee what charge is here cōmitted aſwel to the Leuites, as to the rulers.True it is, ẏ at this day there is no certaine kinred allotted thereto by God in his Church: for his wil is,ẏ Shepherds ſhold be choſen:which office is no heritage: but he would ẏ they ſhould be taken according as they bee knowen meete. Neuertheleſſe al Paſtors,& Elders,that is to ſay, all Officers, & ſuch as haue publike charge,muſt vnderſtande that they muſt employ thēſelues to maintaine the pure religion,& that they muſt be as keepers of the word of God, to the end that it ſhould not periſh. And albeit ẏ there is no excuſe for the reſt of the people: yet ſhall theſe feele double vengeance, if they do not, what lyeth in them,to cauſe men to continue conſtant in the pure worde of God, & to ſee that euerie body be taught, & that both great & ſmall do yeelde thēſelues thereunto. If they ſtraine not themſelues to the vttermoſt of their powers ẏ Gods trueth may continue ſounde,it is certaine that they are to account therefore.

Now as touching that which Moſes ſaith further,That he cōmandeth the children of Iſrael,that on the ſolemne day at the feaſt of the Tabernacles at the end of euery ſeuen yeere,the law ſhould be recited to all the people: it is not meant ẏ God would not haue the Iewes taught it dayly: but it was yet a ſtraiter band, & the keeping ẏ ſolemnity,(as we haue ſeene heretofore where we treated of the couenant made by Moſes)was not to the intent ẏ the Deut.27.4. people ſhould[at other times] be vnmindfull of the lawe,but to ẏ intent they ſhould be ẏ deepelyer touched therewith, & haue it the better ratified after a ſolemne maner. That is the very meaning of this place. Euery yere, yea at euery feaſt or ſolemnitie,ẏ people cōming to the tēple were to be taught in deede. The ſacrifices were not to be done as a vaine pompe;but in ſuch ſort as men might know the end & vſe of thē, ſo as euery body might vnderſtād what God he ſerued, & be put in mind of the couenant which he had made with their fathers. But yet herewithall,beſides all this,God did moreouer ad a larger confirmation thereof, by renewing the remēbrance thereof at ẏ end of ſeuen yeres, as it were by the ſolemne taking of a new oth,to the end ẏ it ſhold not vaniſh away.Let vs vnderſtand then,ẏ when men had exerciſed thēſelues frō day to day, and frō moneth to moneth, & had all their life long ſtudied in the lawe of God, & bin taught his wil; yet this ceremony was neuertheleſſe obſerued, that they did reade all thē contentes of the lawe that the people might conſider thus ẇ thēſelues;

This

Deut.29,11.

This is not a treaſure yͭ may at any time periſhe from among vs,God hath not giuē it for a time: but it is for vs & for our childrē for euermore,as we haue ſeene in yͤ 29.chap.Seeing it is ſo,let vs take heed yͭ we continue the poſſeſſion therof amōg vs, & yͭ through our own rechleſnes we be not defeated of ſo ineſtimable a benefite, which ought to be preferred aboue all yͤ riches & delectable things of this world.Now wheras he ſpeaketh of yͤ feaſt,it is ſaid, At ſuch time as al Iſrael ſhal be aſſēbled togither in the preſēce of his god. We haue heretofore often times treated of this maner of ſpeaking, & it is nowe needeleſſe to ſtande long vpon it.It is ynough for vs alwayes to remēber, yͭ God in commanding men to come & worſhip him in his holy ſanctuarie,meant that the faithful ſhould haue a certein teſtimonie,& pawne of his preſence , to the intent they ſhould the willinglyer reſort thither, & vnderſtand that ſo to do was not an vnprofitable & loſt labour . Yet notwithſtanding God ment not to hold yͤ Iewes in any groſſe imagination, as if he had been encloſed in the Arke of the couenant, or as if his eſſence had bin betwixt yͤ Cherubins : but his comming down was of purpoſe to make yͤ faithful to mount vp to heauen through faith: & that is the common maner which hee hath alwayes holden in his church.For in as much as wee are not able to approch vnto him, nor to haue any acceſſe thither becauſe of our infirmities; hee vouchſafeth to ſtoope to our litleneſſe: howbeit not to make vs to neſtle ourſelues here beneath, or to conceiue groſſe opinions, as though hee were tyed to the elements of this world: but rather yͭ by ſuch meanes, hee might raiſe our faith vp on hye.Thus were they taught in the time of the law.And euen now alſo doth he vſe the ſame maner of dealing with vs at this day. We haue at this day the Sacraments. In deede wee haue not ſo great a multitude,as the fathers had, for it were more than needed for vs , becauſe wee haue the ſubſtance of all the olde ſhadowes our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But yet for all that,God doth ſtil at this day apply himſelfe to our rudenes by his ſacraments.

Ephe.5.26. Tit.3.5.

In yͤ water of baptiſme we haue a teſtimony yͭ we be waſhed & made cleane, and that we be renued by his holy ſpirite.Now then we muſt not muſe vpon the water; but when we ſee the viſible ſigne,we muſt riſe aloft, & vnderſtand,yͭ God accompliſheth the thing in trueth, which is ſignified vnto vs by the viſible Sacrament. Euen ſo alſo it is of the Supper. Wee ſee there bread & wine, but we muſt through faith mount vp to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,who is yͤ true foode of our ſoules,that wee may be fed & ſatiſfied in him. And the ſame is called the preſence of God. And why? For it is no deceitfull matter, neither doth God intend to beguyle vs,when he declareth & witneſſeth vnto vs,yͭ we be waſhed, & fed by the vertue of his onely ſonne; but hee would that we ſhould be aſſured of it, by feeling the verie effect therof. Now when God vttereth ſuch vertue,do not we feele him preſent?Let vs note then,that God is preſent with vs when we come vnto him,being called thither, & hauing the meanes which he hath ordeined:and in like wiſe when wee be aſſembled togither,there is a preſence of our God. For our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſitteth in the middeſt of vs,becauſe wee bee his. We muſt not think that he is farre off, but that he receiueth al our requeſts,& that we be hard, & do obtaine of God his father all that is conuenient for vs. Thus ought wee to take courage. When we vſe the Sacraments, when wee come to heare yͤ word of God, when we make commō prayers, & when wee obſerue the whole order which God hath eſtabliſhed in his church:let vs be aſſured that he is with vs, & that hee aſſureth vs not in vaine,& that we make no windlaſſes as other men do,greatly tormenting themſelues in following their owne fanſies. No no; but in ſō doing our God preuenteth vs, & ſeeketh altogether to haue vs ioyned vnto him,& that hee will ſhew the ſame openly & make vs to vnderſtand it by effect. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to remember concerning the manner of ſpeach which Moſes vſeth here.

And by the way , the people are warned by this meane,to heare the law with yͤ more heede & reuerence. What is the cauſe, that when the worde of God is preached vnto vs, many in the meane while doe wander in the ayre, or bee at home with their houſhold,or elſe fall on aſleepe; and (to be ſhort) that although they doe both heare & vnderſtand, yet they bee not moued awhit; the law & the Goſpel bee vnto them as a matter of nothing: whence commeth ſuch contempt? For it is againſt nature; that our GOD ſhould ſpeake, & that the creatures which liue by his grace, & which ought to dedicate themſelues wholy vnto him, ſhould yeeld him ſo litle honor & authoritie. We do eaſily vouchſafe to heare a man, if we haue him in any eſtimation; no worde that proceedeth from his mouth ſhal fall to the ground; but we wil as it were ſuck vp whatſoeuer is ſpoken by ſo great a perſonage;in ſo much that before his words be fully pronounced,we conceiue what he meant to ſpeake. Behold, God ſpeaketh,& albeit yͭ it be by yͤ mouth of men, yet is it his will that his word ſhould be of like maieſtie with vs, as if hee himſelfe were here in perſon. But it preuaileth not : & that is becauſe we thinke not on this preſence wherof Moſes ſpeaketh in this place. Let vs marke wel then, that where it is ſayde that when the people aſſemble together, in the preſence of their god, then the law ſhalbe repeated ; it is as a preparatiue. For to the end that wee ſhould be drawne away,& carried vp from the cares of the world, & from the vaine & fond gaſings, with yͤ which we be intangled by nature: our Lorde doth here waken vs,and tel vs, that it is he that ſpeaketh,& that hee wil throughly inſtruct ſuch as wil heare him with all humilitie, and that his worde ſhall in like wiſe haue the power and force to ſearche mens heartes and to trye all their thoughtes & affections. Seeing it is ſo that we cannot eſchue the preſence of our God, and that hee ſummoneth vs before his maieſtie, and declareth that when wee heare his worde , it is to note and marke out them that obey him ; that ſo at the leaſt wiſe wee ſhoulde not bee ſo doltiſh , as not to apply our endeuour to bee taught as wee ought, nor to conceiue a feruent zeale, with ſuch meekeneſſe and aptneſſe to learne, as S. Iames requireth in vs, but that wee may haue Iames.1.21. the ſeed of life take roote in our hearts to bring foorth ſuch fruites as may bee acceptable to our God. This then is one circumſtance more which wee haue to obſerue in this place, where Moſes declareth yͭ when the people were come together after the order which GOD had ſet downe in his lawe, hee woulde bee preſent with them, and it was as an opening of the gate of heauen.

Nowe let vs come to that which hee addeth. He ſayeth, That all Iſrael ſhalbe gathered together, and that they ſhall read the law before men, women & litle children. When he ſaith, Thou ſhalt aſſemble the people, he doth againe make it manifeſt that men will neuer come at God vnleſſe they bee thruſt forward & pricked as oxen or aſſes: & that ſerueth to make vs yet more aſhamed of ſuch rechleſnes. For litle children need not to be exhorted to breake their faſt, they can very well aske their foode; the great ones alſo are deſirous ynough to be fed, euery man hath care ynough for his belly: we neede no ſolicitors to come vnto vs to ſay, And wil ye not dyne? But in yͤ meane while, behold, our ſoules ſtarue, if they want the foode which God hath ordeined for them: and yet who is he that careth for it? Who is he that commeth to ſeeke that foode? None. Therefore it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt aſſemble the people. We ſee thẽ what beaſtlineſſe there is in vs: albeit that wee think our ſelues to be very able, & that euery of vs boaſteth himſelf to be a reaſonable creature, & that we haue wit & diſcretion to gouerne our ſelues: magnifie we our ſelues neuer ſo much after yͤ maner, yet ſeeke wee nothing but to periſh in our ignorance: and we be ſo farre off from ſeeking God, that he is fain to giue vs many ſtrokes with the ſpurre to draw vs vnto him, becauſe we be ſo ill diſpoſed: yea & we ſee yͤ example hereof in our ſelues, in ſo much yͭ if there were not an houre appointed for it, how many ſhould a man finde that would haue the regard to ſay, Let vs heare the word of God, yͭ we may haue ſome teaching? Nay, euen when the houre is come, & the bell hath bin tolled, euen then ſtil the moſt part make none account therof. I ſpeake not of them which haue ſmal leiſure therunto, & which haue ſome excuſe: but of ſuch as haue eaſe & al things at wil, inſomuch as they knowe not howe to beſtow the time, they are euen wearie of it & wote not what to do, nor (as they ſay) how to driue away the time; and yet rather than they will go to the church, they will ſit downe ydly in their houſes, or elſe in the ſtreetes rather than come to heare a ſermon. It is certaine yͭ there be ſome venimous toads, which gnaſh their teeth againſt the word of God, & doe flee from it as much as they may; but there be others which come thither, they wote not wherefore, ſauing that they looke for no teaching. Others come thither for a faſhion, & becauſe there is in it a certain ceremony: but yet for all that, they be neuer yͤ better mynded nor the better diſpoſed towardes it. Now then we perceiue yͭ looke how much God calleth vpon vs to heare his word; ſo much the more ſlow we be thereunto. And alſo contrarywiſe, we ſee how our Lord reproueth our vnthãkfulnes, & yͭ we miſapply & miſuſe the good which he doth to vs, & as much as in vs lyeth, ſuffer it to periſh, vnleſſe he vſe al maner of helpes, to ſet vs forward more & more.

As touching that he ſaith, that the law ſhalbe preached & recited to men, women, & litle children: wee ſee in this place, yͭ God hath not giuen his word to a ſmal portion of people only, but would yͭ al in general ſhould be partakers of it, euen frõ the moſt vnto the leaſt; & that is a very notable leſſon. For we ſee the craftines of Sathan, how he hath laboured to depriue the greater part of the world of that benefite, vnder colour that the word of God is no cõmon matter; yͭ it is too high & too deepe; and that it is too obſcure. And moreouer they haue had this opinion, that it is not for men to enter into it, for that it is a Labyrinth to maze men withal, & men cannot faſten vpon it. Wee ſee howe theſe hypocrytes in the popedome do terrifie the people from reading the word of God. Take heede (ſay they) for it is dangerous for you to aduenture ſo farre. In very deede yͤ word of God is ſacred and holy: but what then? If the vnlearned ſorte ſhould taſte of it, they ſhould foorthwith be infected with hereſies, & their errors would be infinite, ſo as they ſhould fall into great confuſion. By this meanes men dare not once ſeeke after the will of God: but they be borne in hande, yͭ as ſoone as they enter into it, they by and by plunge themſelues into a bottomleſſe gulfe. Contrary to that, here God ſayth, yͭ when he gaue his law, it was not alonly for the Trybe of Leui, but for al yͤ people: and not for men only, but for women alſo, yea, & euen for the litle children. Let vs holde it (ſay I) for a concluſion, that whereas God hath giuen vs his lawe, and all the doctrine that is contayned therin; it is the teſtament which he hath left for vs: and thereby hath he adopted vs for his children. Nowe if wee bee not the children of God, then are wee not worthie to haue any thing in common with him: but hee calleth vs vnto him. And how ſhall we be ſure of it, if he himſelfe bee not a faithfull witneſſe vnto vs of his will? Seeing then that our Lorde certifyeth vs of our ſaluation, when he giueth vs his word: wee muſt vnderſtande that he will not ſuffer vs to ſtray, as though wee knewe not whether wee ſhoulde turne on the right hand or on the left: but that hee doth giue vs an infallible direction. Seeing then that hee vouchſafeth to doe the office of a ſchoolemaſter towardes vs; let vs indeuour to profite thereby, and let vs behaue our ſelues like good ſcholers towardes him, and let none of vs in this caſe alleage, I am no clarke. For God hath not ſpoken to the greate doctours onely, but his will was to deale foorth his worde in common both to great and ſmall, and to the moſt ignorant: and hee hath ſo tempered it to their capacities, as that all they which come to yeeld themſelues teachable, ſhall very well perceiue that our Lorde knew well what is meete for them,and they ſhalbe taught after ſuch ſort as he knoweth to be moſt conuenient for them. Now if this be verified of the lawe, much more reaſon is it that it ſhoulde at this day take effect in the time of the Goſpel.For we heare how it is ſaide by the Prophet Eſay; that in the kingdom of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt all ſhalbee taught of God. Marke the prophet Eſay, who knewe very well that God had giuen his law to al the Iewes, and that it was a good and profitable inſtruction, as well for the litle children as for the Elders. But yet for as much as hee knewe wel that God would vtter foorth his grace more largely, and ſende a newe manner of light of vnderſtanding, when as Ieſus Chriſt ſhoulde bee manifeſted vnto the world ; hee ſayth that then all the children of the church ſhould be taught of God. And we ſee that in the Popedome, where they turne away the people from reading the holy Scripture. It is a wicked blaſphemie, when men ſuffer themſelues to bee ſo blynded, and vouchſafe not to ſuffer thēſelues to be lead nor taught at Gods hands;yea & they haue proceeded to ſo diueliſh blaſphemie,as to accuſe the holy Scripture of too much darknes,as a thing of too great depth wherein men ought not to be inſtructed, for feare leſt they ſhould forthwith be poſſeſſed with many errors. When they talk on that wiſe, the iniurie tendeth to yͤ liuing God; for they accuſe him of vntrueth, notwithſtanding the proteſtation that he maketh by his Prophet Eſaye; Yea & wee ſee, howe all the whole Scripture is full of the like teſtimonies, whereby it is auowed that the holy Scripture is profitable. There needed no more but this one place of S.Paul, where hee ſayeth , That all ſcripture is profitable to inſtruct , to exhort, to diſprooue and to rebuke. Hee ſayeth not that it is profitable for three or foure rables of ſcuruie Monkes or ſhauelinges; hee ſayeth not ſo : but he ſayeth that it is profitable to make the man of God perfect. And therefore let vs not dout , but that when our Lorde deliuered his lawe hee knewe our capacitie, and applyed himſelfe in ſuch wiſe therunto, as hee teacheth vs according to our meaſure. In ſo much that if wee bee teachable , wee ſhall fynde that his doctrine was not deliuered vs in vayne, but that hee meaneth to guyde vs thereby vnto ſaluation , as it is in deede the true meane to attayne thereunto : onely let vs ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned of our G O D, and not behaue our ſelues ſtubbornely towardes him , ſeeing hee offereth himſelfe ſo freely vnto vs. And ſurely it ought to mooue vs very much, when hee ſayeth, that God will haue all, yea euen the litle children and all to bee hearers of his lawe. For he telleth vs (as Salomon alſo ſayeth in his booke of the Preacher) that men muſt not delaye to thinke vppon G O D, till they beginne to droope and bee broken with age. Yet notwithſtanding, wee ſee howe youth runneth aſtray, and that there is nothing harder than to make young folke beleeue that they muſt be bridled in, that they muſt imploy them ſelues,whileſt they be ſtrong and luſtie,and that they muſt ſo much the more apply their wittes to be inſtructed in the word of God. A man can not bring this to paſſe, but the ſtronger & luſtier they be, the more careleſſe be they. Now Moſes ſheweth in this place, that as ſoone as the litle ones begin to diſcerne betweene good and euill,they muſt learne to knowe what God created them;and then what God hath ſhewed him ſelfe to be their father; & what God they ought to ſerue,& wherein they muſt put their truſt.

Eccle.12.1.

And in very deede,at the verie ſame time, God did alreadie at yͤ eighth day, giue a marke of his free adoption;for before they knew either good or euil,God enterteined them to be of his flock, and the circumciſion ſerued to ſeale the promiſe of ſaluation which he had made in ſaying; I wil bee the G O D of thy ſeede. Seeing that children be thus entertained , and God hath made it manifeſt that they bee of his church, & houſholde people of the kingdome of heauen: is it meete that when they be come to the age of vnderſtanding, they ſhoulde holde ſcorne of him which hath preuented them with ſo great goodnes? Ought they not to know, who is their creator, and in likewiſe , who hee is that hath vouchſafed to ſhewe himſelfe to bee their father , when as hee hath receyued them for his children?

Gen.17.12.

And wee at this day haue ſo good reaſon as the Iewes had. For as ſoone as our children be born,they be caried to baptiſme.And there God doth ſhewe that hee hath already choſen them, and that his will is that they ſhould bee as of his houſholde . Therefore when an infant is thus declared to bee a member of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt,before he doth vnderſtand what yͤ grace of God or religion or any thing elſe is:ſhould he not when he commeth to age of vnderſtanding, indeuour to learne yͭ he was created of God:who hauing created him after his owne image , hath vouchſafed alſo to chooſe him to be of the number and company of his people : and hath placed him in the body of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt , to the end he ſhould be partaker of the inheritance of ſaluation ? Conſidering ſo many and ſo ineſtimable benefites receiued at Gods hand,ought he not (ſay I)to giue himſelfe wholie to him and to his ſeruice ? And if they doe it not , doe they not ſhewe themſelues too much vnthankfull in diſappoynting the grace which was then giuen vnto them? Alſo,our Lord ſheweth the zeale that ought to bee in them which bee taught by his word : namely , that ſo much as in them lyeth, they muſt not ſuffer any deſpiſers of religion to dwell amongeſt them : but rather take paines to winne the poore ignoraunt ſort , and euery man reache his hand to him that goeth aſtray , ſo as it may not bee long of vs , that all men bee not brought into the way of ſaluation , and that all of vs liue not with one accorde as wee ought to doe.

It is ſaide : The ſtraunger alſo that dwelleth with thee, ſhall in likewiſe be taught. In deede they had not the promiſe, as the childrē of Abraham had : they were not of the body of that people . But neuertheleſſe God would not haue any brutiſh people to abide there , which ſhoulde deſpiſe all religion; for it is ſuch an infection and corruption as is not to bee borne withall in the church,when ſuch folke are to bee ſeene there as knowe not whether there bee a God in heauen, or not, or which knowe not what religion they ſhoulde holde. Such are to bee ridde away, or elſe there wilbee nothing but corruption, which in the ende will marre all.

Againe,it is ſayde, The children of them which haue not heard thereof afore. It is ſhewed in this place, that when the lawe of God hath ſerued to eſtabliſh vs in his feare, and in the hope of his goodnes,and that wee our ſelues haue beene edified thereby from day to day: wee muſt not forget them that haue not yet taſted of ẏ trueth, but doe as yet goe aſtray in their errors: we muſt pitie them,and doe our indeuour, ſo much as in vs lyeth,to winne them, that God may be honoured of vs all together. That is all in effect which wee haue to beare away concerning this place. Nowe (as I haue alreadie ſayde) if the people of Iſrael were exhorted to haue ſuch a care, in the time when they had the doctrine yet more darkely than it is nowe deliuered vnto vs in the Goſpel, (for albeit that it was ſufficient for that time; yet in compariſon of the Goſpel, it was not ſo large as wee haue it now) ſith it is ſo, let vs looke well to our ſelues,and marke well,that if euer wee be bereft of this ſo precious treaſure which God hath giuen vs,ſo as it be taken from vs; it is for our owne malice, rechleſneſſe,and vnthankfulnes, becauſe wee haue deſpiſed God, and thruſt the things vnder foote which wee ſhoulde haue kept moſt carefully. And therefore let it be a warning to vs to make vs giue good heede to the heauenly doctrine when it is once taught vs,and ſet afore vs. And moreouer let vs followe the order which our Lorde hath eſtabliſhed in his Church, and not onely let euery of vs for his owne particular part and perſon followe it and indeuour to profit his owne houſholde: but alſo let vs benefite al other folk in common by exerciſing our ſelues in that which God commandeth vs. And againe,when euery of vs hath ſo conſidered of himſelfe;let vs in likewiſe bee careful of our neighbours, & doe our indeuours to winne the ignorant,& to confirme them which be alreadie brought into the good way, vntill wee bee all come to the marke that God hath ſet before vs.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faults;beſeeching him to make vs to feele them more and more,euen with ſuch repentance, as being beaten downe in our ſelues,we may ſeeke nothing but to obtein mercie of him, according as he hath promiſed vs in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: ſo as he will cauſe the deſert of his death & paſſion to be auailable, that we being waſhed from all our filthines,may be ſo gouerned by his holy Spirite,as we may deſire nothing but to giue ouer our ſelues vnto him,fighting againſt all maner of wicked luſtes & affections, & labouring more and more to bee ridde and deliuered from all things that may hinder vs from yeelding our obedience to his righteouſnes. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace,not only vnto vs, but alſo to al people & nations of the earth,&c.

On Munday the iiij.of May,1556.

The CLXXV. Sermon which is the third vpon the one & thirtith Chapter.

14 Then the Lorde ſaid vnto Moſes: Behold the dayes of thy death be at hand. Call Ioſuah,and ſtand both of you at the Tabernacle of the Congregation that I may giue him his charge. So Moſes and Ioſuah went and ſtoode at the Tabernacle of the congregation.

15 Then appeared the Lord at the Tabernacle in a clowdie pillar:and the clowdy pillar reſted vpon the doore of the Tabernacle.

16 And the Lord ſaid vnto Moſes: Beholde thou goeſt to ſleepe with thy fathers, and this people will ſtande vp and commit fornication with the ſtrange gods of the lande whereinto they goe: and will forſake mee, and breake my couenant which I haue made with them.

17 By reaſon whereof my wrath ſhall in that day be kindled againſt them,and I will forſake them and hyde my face from them,that they may be a pray. Many miſchiefes and troubles ſhall they fynde: By reaſon whereof they ſhall ſay at that day: Do not theſe miſchiefes finde mee out, becauſe my God is not with mee?

GOD hath ſuch a care of mans welfare, that hee delayeth not the remedying of a miſchiefe til the miſchiefe be come: but preuenteth it aforehand, as we haue here a faire exãple thereof. He tarried not til the people were turned away after idols; but foraſmuch as he knewe well yͭ it would ſo come to paſſe, hee vouchesafed to warn them of it, & made an aſſay to ſee whether any preſeruatiue medicine might holde it from breaking out. God therefore ordeined this ſong to the intent yͭ the people ſhoulde daily haue in their mouth a teſtimonie againſt themſelues, & yͭ they ſhould by that meanes be either reſtrayned, if it were poſſible; or elſe bee left vtterly without excuſe. And here we ſee firſt of al yͭ God did not chooſe this people for that they were more worthie or more righteous than other nations of yͤ earth. For proofe wherof, he knew very wel that they would be always inclined to euil, and not ceaſſe to ſhrinke away, but become hardharted in rebelling againſt him: & yet for all yͭ, he forbare not to deliuer them out of the land of Egypt, & to powre out all yͤ treaſures of his infinite goodnes & mercie vpon them in doing thẽ good. We haue then heere a certaine proofe, yͭ when God did chooſe the people of Iſrael, hee had no reſpect to any worthines or merites that were in them: but rather meant to glorifie his own free mercie, in ſhewing, yͭ although men be neuer ſo vnworthie to be receiued to mercie, yet doth he not therefore ceaſe to ſhew himſelfe a father towards them. But herewithal we ſee alſo (as I haue already ſayd) that god ordeineth ſuch remedies as hee knoweth to bee conuenient to bring them back into the right way, & delayeth not the releeuing of them till they haue done & are falne downe: but prouideth all the helpes aforehand which he knoweth to be meete for the leading & guiding of them, to the intent they ſhould not ſwarue nor ſtart out of the way.

Now in deede here might be a queſtion put, whether God could not haue reſtrained yͤ people of Iſrael better, if he had would; for we knowe yͭ if he liſt to reſtraine mens harts by his holy ſpirite, he is able to do it. And why then wrought he not ſo with this people? We cannot binde God to giue vs ſuch conſtancie, as yͭ we might continue in his ſeruice. And therfore we muſt not argue againſt him in this caſe, nor ſay that this ſõg was not ſufficient, & that it had bin better that God had wrought effectually by his holy ſpirite. For it was not his will; he left the people in their own frailtie. Howbeit wee muſt not ſay as ſome blaſphemers do, that God mocked them, in that hee vſed ſuch a remedie, as hee knewe to be vnſufficient: for God may wel ſtill vphold, that he hath diſcharged his office towardes men, when he hath once giuen them his worde, inſomuch yͭ although it cannot touch them to the quick, but remaineth as a dead letter vnto them: yet neuertheleſſe, they continue iuſtly condemned. But this woulde bee darke if it were not better declared. Let vs marke therefore firſt of all, that by this ſong, (according to the ſtorie therof reported by Moſes,) Gods will was that the people, (before they were fallen away and eſtranged from the way of ſaluation,) ſhoulde haue a teſtimonie againſt themſelues, as wee ſhall ſee more at length hereafter. But it ſufficeth for this preſent to touche the contentes and ſumme of this ſong: which is, that God being the creator of all the worlde, choſe the lyne of Abraham, whome hee adopted, and beſtowed vppon them all the bleſſings that were poſſible to bee wiſhed, and laſtly brought them out of the lande of Egypt, and put them in poſſeſſion of the lande which hee had promiſed them for their inheritance, and there fedde them fatly: notwithſtanding all which things, that people rebelled againſt him, (as horſes that bee too much pampered in the ſtable, and bee too fat, and therefore doe kicke againſt their maſters) and turned away after ſtrange Gods. And therefore that God being prouoked to anger, ſtirred vp ſtrange nations to chaſtice them and to puniſh them for their rebelling after that maner: howbeit that it grieued him to deale ſo roughly with them, like a father that is very ſory to vſe rigor towards his children, after which maner we ſhal ſee yͭ God ſetteth forth himſelfe like a man ſore grieued: [as if he ſhould ſay] were not this people very far ouerſeene, or had they any drop of reaſon & good vnderſtanding, to conſider their owne ende: they would not haue bin ſo turned away from me. After that manner then is the ſong, as we ſhal ſee. Now it was a cõmon ſong. God willed that it ſhould bee in euery bodies mouth both great & ſmal, to the end that euery man ſhould be daily called vpon, to walke in the feare of God. And ſo we be warned of that which may happen vnto vs. God doeth firſt declare vnto vs his curſe: and to what end, but that euery one of vs ſhould keepe himſelfe from it? Againe, he ſheweth vs the inconuenience wherinto we ſhal fall; he telleth vs that he wil reuenge our rechleſnes, & therefore let vs beware of it. For to what end doth he it, but that he woulde not haue vs to tempt him, but rather yͭ it ſhould reteine vs in his ſeruice? Ye ſee then howe the people ought to haue taken warning hereby.

But now we aske whether that ought to haue ſufficed, and whether the people had power to reſtrayne themſelues, as it is imagined that men haue free wil to chooſe good or euil. The anſwer is, that it was not ynough for GOD to put his word in their mouth, but it behoued him alſo to imprint it in their harts by his holy ſpirit. We ſee how it is ſaid farther in this place: Thou goeſt to dye, and the people after thy death will fall away, and runne a whoring after ſtrange gods. It is God yͭ ſpeaketh on this wiſe to Moſes. Now it muſt needes be yͭ he foreſaw what would come to paſſe, yea, but they wil allege yͭ Gods foreſight kepeth not men back frõ turning vnto God whẽ they liſt. In deed it is certaine yͭ the foreſight of God is not yͤ cauſe that men do either good or euil, but yet god did know very wel yͭ this people, whatſoeuer doctrine or religion they ſhould haue, would not ceaſe to be wicked & froward: he knew very wel yͭ his warning of thẽ aforehande would not ſufſice to conuert them. God knewe it welynough. Wherefore then did he not prouide for it? See here how men do take vpon them to pleade againſt God: but they muſt bee ſtopt with their preſumption. If they alleage, Wherefore is it that God, when hee ſeeth men go out of courſe, doeth not remedie it? The aunſwere therunto is this, that God is neither tyed nor bound therto; it is ynough then that they bee made thereby inexcuſable. And therefore, although God doeth knowe aforehande, that wee, becauſe of our infirmitie, ſhall not bee able to continue in his obedience; and that there wilbee ſuch malice in vs, that wee ſhall not ceaſſe to prouoke his wrath: yet is it ynough ÿ he doth inſtruct vs by his word, & that we bee accuſed & condemned by him. Yea: but in deede it lyeth not in vs to do well. Al theſe replyes be friuolous before God. For men cannot allege that the euil commeth from any where elſe [than themſelues.] Although we be enclyned to ſinne, & although we be altogether thereto giuen by nature; ſhall we ſay that it is by any conſtraint? Shall we ſay that the fault therof is not in vs? It is impoſſible. Seeing then that our mouth is ſtopt in this caſe, we muſt condemne our ſelues & humble vs before God. And albeit that his word ſerue but to make vs guiltie, & not to change our hearts from euil to good: yet neuertheleſſe, it is not ſuperfluous, neither ought we to ſay that God doeth daly, or that hee doeth mocke vs: for hee doeth the office of a teacher towarde vs, & telleth vs what his will is. Wherefore let vs deſire him, not onely to teache vs by the mouth of men, but alſo to print his worde in our heartes, and to make it preuayle, to the ende it bee not in vaine. Such requeſt muſt wee make, ſith wee ſee what is contained in the ſong of Moſes. Moreouer we muſt honor the wonderfull prouidence of God, in that it is ſayde vnto vs, that he foreſeeth what ſhall befall vnto men, & yet notwithſtanding taketh no order for the redreſſe therof, as wee woulde if hee ſhould followe our appetite. It ſeemeth a ſtraunger matter at the firſt ſight, that God ſhoulde ſay, This people wil runne a whoring, and goe and defile themſelues with ſtrange Gods. He ſayth it, and yet he giueth none other remedie but a ſong, of purpoſe that this people ſhould bee condemned by their owne mouth. And wherefore doth he not rather preuent the miſchiefe? For he might do it. But (as I haue ſaid alreadie) it is not for vs to enter into diſputation in this caſe: for ſurely all they that vſe ſuch arrogancie & boldnes, ſhall finde themſelues confounded. What muſt wee do then? We muſt ſtoope & honor the glorie of God which is incomprehenſible to vs, & ſuffer our ſelues to be gouerned by him. And whereas he knowing mens lewdnes aforehande, doth neuertheleſſe ſuffer them to rotte therein vntil he prouide for it: we muſt vnderſtand that he doth it iuſtly, though the reaſon therof be vnknowen and hidden vnto vs. Wee in deede will euer be grunting at it, vntil we be ſubdued vnto ſuch humilitie & reuerence, as to conclude that God is iuſt, & that we know not what is good for vs, except that God reueile it vnto vs. Nowe then if wee haue not this modeſtie and ſobrietie in vs, there wil alwayes ſeeme to bee ſome cauſe for vs to grunt at: But yet muſt wee euer be confounded, according as it is ſaide in the 51. Pſalme, that when men haue condemned God, yet his righteouſnes ſhall not bee a whit diminiſhed thereby, but hee will well defende it. Seeing it is ſo, let vs beware that wee enter not into ſuch boldneſſe as to reply againſt God, and to moue the queſtions which many people in the worlde at this day do mooue, like theſe maſtife dogges which ceaſe not to bark againſt God when they cannot byte him: but let vs ſtand ſilent, when it is ſayde that God doeth well knowe what ſhall come to paſſe vpon men, & neuertheleſſe beſtoweth not his grace, but vppon thoſe whome he liſteth. For it is certaine that hee toucheth with repentance whome hee will, but not al. For a great number of the people are farre out of ſquare. If wee aske howe it commeth to paſſe, that ſome haue continued in the pure religion, & haue alwayes ſerued God: vndoutedly it came of a ſpeciall grace; no man prepared himſelf to it. As touching the others which haue miſſed, & repented: if it be asked who recouered them; it is not of men that they bee conuerted, it is the ſpeciall gift of God. We ſee then how God hath wrought in ſome, to guyde them alwayes in the pureneſſe of his ſeruice; and that others haue bin receiued to mercie, albeit that they had offended; & that the ſame hath not fallen out to al indifferently. We ſee then that God beſtoweth his grace where it ſeemeth good to himſelf, and we muſt not pleade againſt it, to ſay: And why doth hee not deale egally with all, as hee doeth with ſome? Why vſeth he not like meaſure? We ſhall winne nothing by pleading ſo againſt God. Thus much wee haue to conſider concerning this place.

Pſal.51.6.

Herewithal let vs mark alſo what hath beene touched afore: to wit, that although the word of God, of it ſelfe, hath not power to reforme our harts, to lead vs vnto God, to heale our faults, & to bring vs to good: yet is it certaine ÿ we ceaſe not therfore to be condemned therby. For although the word of God be dayly preached vnto vs: yet are we neuer the better for hauing our eares beaten therewith as wee ſee a great many people are, who hauing bin inſtructed in ÿ Goſpel, become worſe therby than they were afore. And the reaſon is, becauſe ÿ the worde of God entreth not into their harts, but through ÿ grace of ÿ holy Ghoſt. And this grace is not beſtowed on all. They therfore which come to heare the worde, become ſo much the more blameworthy when they once know God, if they profite not thereby, & God muſt needes caſt them off in a leawd mind. Let vs mark then ÿ the word of God being ſpoken by a mortal man, without any further help than ÿ outward teaching therof, is not ynough: for ſo it ſhal but beat our eares: as for our harts, they ſhal not be touched therẇ. What muſt then be done? We muſt pray God to ſpeake vnto vs inwardly after a ſecrete manner, and to cauſe the voyce which ſoundeth in our eares, to enter likewiſe into our thoughtes and affections, that wee may bee touched therewith to the quicke. That is the point which we muſt come vnto. Yet neuertheleſſe we muſt not think that the word of God ſerueth to no purpoſe, whẽ we reade it in holy ſcripture, or haue it expounded vnto vs. Let vs aſſure ourſelues that it ſhall not fall to the grounde, either it muſt ſerue vs to ſaluation, or elſe we muſt receiue thereby ŷ grieuouſer condemnation. Now if we couet to haue this doctrine profitable to ſaluation, let vs pray God to write it in our heartes; and furthermore we muſt beware ŷ we be not therby ŷ more guiltie. For when wee haue heard the will of God, and be not therein throughly certified: if afterward we continue hardened in our ſtubbornes, what excuſe is there for vs then? We haue bin wont to make a buckler of ignorance, but ŷ will ſerue the turne no more. Therefore wee muſt marke, ŷ although the only word of it ſelfe can not conuert men: yet doth it ſuffice to caſt them into vtter condemnation, as thoſe which would needes defie God wilfully. It is alſo ſayd in this place, ŷ God appeared to Moſes at the Tabernacle, euen in a cloudie piller. This was not done for Moſes only; but rather for all the people. In deede it was very behoouefull ŷ Moſes ſhold be aſſured of Gods guiding. For the enterpriſe which he vndertooke to bring the people out of the lande of Egypt, was not for a mortall creature to haue done [of himſelfe.] It was needefull then ŷ they ſhould know ŷ God did auow him. And therfore it was Gods will to ratifie the cōmiſſion which he had giuen him, ŷ it might haue full authoritie among the people. After the ſame maner was it Gods wil to deale in giuing new cōmiſſion to Ioſuah, who was to ſucceede Moſes. Alſo it was his wil to cauſe this laſt ſong to be receiued without gaine ſpeaking; & to do them to vnderſtand ŷ it was not forged nor hāmered in ŷ head of a man, but ŷ it came frō heauen, and ŷ it was God that ſpake it. To the end therfore ŷ the people might be throughly aſſured of theſe thinges, he ſayth, Come thou & Ioſuah to the Tabernacle. And what is the cauſe ŷ God would not aſwell ſpeake to Moſes in his owne Tent? It was becauſe hee would haue the people to be ŷ more moued. For men are ſo ſlender witted & earthly, ŷ they haue neede to bee led vnto God by viſible ſignes. To what end ſerued ŷ Tabernacle? It was a witneſſe ŷ God dwelled amongſt his people, as wee haue ſeene heeretofore. It is certaine ŷ God filleth all places with his power & eſſence: But yet becauſe men are rude & groſſe, it behoueth thẽ to haue ſome helpes to bring them vnto him. So then, the Tabernacle ſerued to waken mens wits that they might vnderſtand, ŷ in cōming thither they came neere vnto God, as if they had beene preſent before his maieſtie. For ŷ cauſe therfore it was ſaid vnto Moſes & Ioſuah, that they ſhold come to the Tabernacle of the congregation. But that is not all. For there appeared a cloudie piller, and (as we knowe) ŷ was a double ſigne or miracle, to ſhew vnto the Iewes ŷ God was nigh Exod.13.21 Num.14.14. vnto thẽ. For in the day time there was a long thicke cloude, which was like a great piller; and in the night the cloude turned to a fire. And to what end was the piller darke, & like a cloud by day? Becauſe the fire ſhould not be ſo apparant to the people. Moreouer it was Gods will to refreſh them, as if it were ſayde, I haue my wings ſtretched out, to giue you ſhadowe, & to maintaine you vnder my protection; that if the ſonne be ouer whot by day, you ſhalbe hidden as vnder me & vnder my leading. And by night, when al is darke, I will ſerue you for a light, & you ſhalbe guided thereby: there ſhalbe continually a burning fire, to ſhewe vnto you ŷ I am waking, and that I am neuer aſleepe, & that I haue not mine eyes ſhut, but that I do foreſee for all your neceſſities. That is the cauſe why God appeared in ſuch maner to the Iewes, to wit, ŷ by day he gaue them a cloud to couer them, which was long and in forme of a great Pyller (as I haue ſaid), and by night there was a burning fire, all on a length, like vnto a train of fire ouer al ŷ people. And this fire ſerued to giue light to the people; as if God had ſhewed his hand, as who wold ſay, feare not: for I haue not forgotten you; I wot what is neceſſary for you. But yet it is ſayd ŷ when Moſes was called to the Tabernacle to receiue any great charge, then the cloud deſcended by day, like as the fire alſo did his office by night. Thus did God cauſe the cloud to deſcende of purpoſe ŷ the doore of the Tabernacle ſhould be ſhut; and that Exod.19.9. Numb.12.5. was aſmuch as if ŷ people had bin taught thus: Behold, now is Moſes to be withdrawen from all ŷ world, God ſpeaketh to him as it were mouth to mouth, it is not for vs to looke to haue him conuerſant any longer heere beneath after the maner of mortall men, there is an other reſpect to be had of him: God hath ſequeſtred him, becauſe it is his will to haue ſuch familiaritie & cōmunicatiō with him, as we may receiue ŷ which he bringeth vnto vs, as if it came from heauen. That then is the cauſe why the cloud deſcended vpon the Tabernacle. And this is not ſpoken here only, but as often as it was Gods will to authorize Moſes, and to ratifie the office which he had giuen him, to ŷ end that the people ſhold ẇ the greater reuerence receiue ŷ doctrine which proceeded from him. The ſame in likewiſe was alſo done when Moſes appointed Ioſuah in his owne place to ſucceede him. Inſomuch ŷ when God was about to ſhewe him what he had to do, the cloud appeared againe. Now theſe thinges ought to ſtande vs in ſteede at this day. For God did not meane to giue authoritie to his law, only for that time; but to the end of the world. Therfore when we reade ŷ which is ſet downe heere concerning the cloud; it is all one as if God had ſet his ſeale to the doctrine of Moſes, to the intent that we ſhould receiue it without replying or doubting, and thinke that it was not Moſes that was the chiefe author thereof: but that he was the inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt. Thus you ſee howe the ſame miracle doeth yet at this day apply it ſelfe vnto vs, and howe we ought to be edified thereby. But by the way, we ſee the malice of men, in that they which hadde ſeene ſuch a ſigne with their eyes, did yet for all that not ceaſe to play the rebels againſt Moſes. It is a great matter, that God ſhold put forth his hand as if his maieſtie deſcended from heauen, & teſtifie vnto men ẏ it was he that ſpake, & that yet notwithſtanding the people ſhould ſtil continue like wilde beaſtes, and not vouchſafe to hearken vnto him. Is there any reaſon in that? Neuertheleſſe we ſee it in the people of Iſrael. Albeit ẏ in the time of Ioſuah, there was ſome good gouernment; yet ceaſed they not to abuſe ẏ benefits which they had receiued afore time. Indeed there was no general falling away: but yet to ſay that the people did behaue thẽſelues vprightly in ẏ obedience of God, it wanted a great deale thereof. Therfore we ſee that whatſoeuer God doth, men notwithſtanding be ſo blinde & blockiſh, that they cannot find in their hearts to ſubmit thẽſelues vnto him: and if they doe, it is not with any conſtancy or ſtedfaſtnes. Sith we know this, let vs caſt downe our eyes, and pray to our God, that when he giueth vs any ſignes to confirme vs in the obedience of his word, & to edifie vs in the faith, we may haue ẏ skill to profit our ſelues thereby, ſo as he looſe not his labour, nor we ſtriue againſt his power: but that as ſoone as it ſheweth it ſelfe, wee may be moued to honour him, & to yeede vnto him his due glorie. Thus much haue we to gather vpon this place, where it is ſayd ẏ God hauing cauſed Moſes and Ioſuah to come vnto the Tabernacle, did therewithall appeare in ẏ cloud. It is out of doubt, ẏ God ſhifteth not his place: for (as we haue already ſayd) he filleth all places with his eſſence: howbeit in reſpect of men, it is ſayd that he deſcended from heauen. To what end? Becauſe that when wee perceiue his preſence, it is ſayd ẏ he is nigh vnto vs. Is it becauſe that there is any change in him?

James.1.17. No, there is not ſo much as a litle ſhadowe, as ſaieth S. Iames. But let vs conſider how fooliſh we are, and then ſhall we not find it ſtrange that the Scripture ſpeaketh in this maner, to faſhion it ſelfe to the weaknes of our vnderſtanding. We ſuppoſe that God is farre from vs, and ẏ there is a great diſtance betweene him & vs. And wherfore? Becauſe he hath told vs ẏ he is in heauen. Howbeit, it is not ment that he is there ſhut vp, we muſt not imagine ſo: but if it were ſayde that God is heere with vs, we would tye him to the earth, yea and we would tie him vp in euery corner. We ſee how men deale in that behalfe, when it is tolde them ẏ God ſheweth himſelfe in Baptiſme and in the ſupper alſo: they make Idols of thoſe viſible ſignes, & thinke that God is incloſed in them. Therefore it is ſayde that he is in heauen. But yet we muſt not imagine it to be in power onely; but wee comprehende him not in our vnderſtanding. And that is the cauſe why the holy ſcripture ſtammereth and ſtutteth after our rude maner, & ſaith that God commeth downe, as I haue ſayde: not for ẏ he ſhifteth places touching himſelfe; but it is ſayd in reſpect of vs. Wherfore let vs learne to conuert to our profit all the ſignes ẏ God hath giuen vs of his preſence, in ſuch ſort, as we may therby honor him as in his glory celeſtiall, by lifting vp our mindes aboue all the world. That is the thing which we haue to gather.

Now let vs come to ẏ which is here recited. Behold, thy dayes are come that thou ſhalt dy (ſayth God to Moſes) thou ſhalt goe ſleepe with thy fathers, & this people ſhal ariſe (ſaith he) & go a whoring after ſtrãge Gods (or elſe the Gods of the ſtrangers). When God told Moſes in this wiſe that he muſt die: we perceiue thereby that he ſtrengthened him, and that this tidinges of death was not to make him afrayd. And in deede, if we be not alwaies ready to depart the world, when it ſhall pleaſe God to fetch vs, what profit receiue we of all ẏ doctrine that is preached vnto vs? What doth God purpoſe when we be taught in his word, but to giue vs to vnderſtand ẏ he placeth vs in this world as in a paſſage, ẏ we muſt be ſtrangers heere, that our inheritance is aboue, and ẏ we muſt be newſhapen from day to day, by putting away frõ vs all our affections, & whatſoeuer elſe is of the old man, to the end we may come vnto him, vntill ẏ he hath clothed vs ẇ his heauenly glorie? Thus ye ſee how it is the purpoſe of God, to draw people from the world, & to bring thẽ vnto himſelf. But now if we be ſo giuen to this preſent life, that God muſt plucke vs away from hence as it were by force: and ẏ when his will is that we ſhall die; we be full of ſpite & rage and torment our ſelues thereat; we ſhewe well that we vnderſtande not what the word of God meaneth, and that we neuer had ſuch taſt thereof as was requiſite. Let vs therefore by the example of Moſes, be ſo diſpoſed to dye, that whenſoeuer it ſhall pleaſe our Lorde to take vs away from hence, we may be readie to goe, and to depart out of this priſon of our bodie. If it be alleadged that wee haue not ſo much profited as Moſes, and that wee bee not ſo farre forewarde as hee: it is out of doubt that God beſtowed on him a ſpecial grace, which was not cõmon to all, & is very rare to be found. For it is no ſmal matter, when it is ſayde, ẏ there neuer roſe vp a Prophet in Iſraell, ſo great nor Deut.34.10. ſo excellent as he. But yet notwithſtanding we haue the Goſpell which Moſes hadde not. Albeit that God gaue him largely of his ſpirite, more than wee haue; yet had not he the doctrine [of the Goſpell] but in ſhadowe and figure: becauſe Ieſus Chriſt was not yet manifeſted: hee had the ſacrifices of the lawe, as well as the reſt of the people. And whereas our Lorde Ieſus is come to bee our life, we know that he is now aſcended vp to heauẽ, we know that firſt he was beneath in the deepe, that is to ſay, that he ſatiſfied the wrath of God to thẽ ende to redeeme vs from eternall death. Seeing wee haue ſuch an aduauntage, what excuſe is there, if we bee afrayde when death is talked of vnto vs, and thinke that all is loſt for our part? So then, let vs marke that to bee well learned in the goſpell, it behoueth vs to knowe, aſwell what it is to die, as what it is to liue. And howe? We muſt not be tyed vnto this preſent worlde, nor make account to dwell heere for euer: but wee muſt haue the one foote vp (as they ſay) [as folke ready to goe]. Alſo wee muſt conſider howe fraile our life is, and euen in our full health wee muſt alwaies haue death before our eyes. For the performaunce whereof, let vs looke vp to the heauenly life yͭ is promiſed vnto vs, whereof alſo we haue ſo good a pawn in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. That is the way for vs not to be afraid, whenſoeuer God ſhal make vs to vnderſtand yͭ our end is nigh, and ſhew vs that he wil take vs vnto him. I ſay it ſhall neither abaſh vs nor make vs afrayde, but we ſhalbe determined to go vnto him with a good will: as no doubt but Moſes receiued that tydinges with great ioy, [as if hee ſhould haue ſayde] Wel Lorde, I haue finiſhed my courſe, I haue trauailed in yͤ world ſo long as I had power and ſtrength, and now beholde I am old & drooping, but yet ſhall I be reſtored in thy ſaluation. Seeing then yͭ it is thy will to ſequeſter me from all the troubles of this world, behold I am nowe readie: like as I haue continued in the world, ſo long as it was thy wil, euen ſo doe I nowe deſire nothing but to yeeld my ſelfe vnto thee. And for the ſame cauſe S. Paul ſayeth, that the Chriſtians Phil.1.21. turne all thinges to their owne benefite, aſwell death as life. For if we liue in this worlde, though it be in miſerie & wretchednes, ſo as we be afflicted and deſpiſed, and tormented, and ſeeme to be as people caſt away: yet doth yͤ ſame turne to our profite and aduantage. And why? For all our afflictions be bleſſed in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, becauſe God maketh them auailable to our ſaluation: according as it is ſayde in the Rom.8.28. eight to the Romanes: that the thinges which ſeeme to hinder our felicitie, are in deede giuen vs of GOD as helpes and furtheraunces thereof. When it commeth to death, we know that Chriſt Ieſus had victorie thereof, and yͭ ſeeing he is ryſen, we be aſſured yͭ foraſmuch as we be his members, and haue one common life together with him, therefore wee ſhall not periſhe. Thus doth death turne to our gaine and profite, and we haue cauſe to reioyce in all reſpectes.

Moreouer where it is ſayd, That after the death of Moſes the people will riſe, there is no doubt but yͭ this greeued Moſes. For he bare ſuch a feruent Exod.32.32. zeale to the welfare of the people, that he forgot himſelfe and ſaid, Race me out of the booke of life, and let the people bee ſaued. See heere howe Moſes was content to bee cutte off, yea, and euen to be damned ſo that God would ſaue the people; not becauſe that that was poſſible; but he was ſo rauiſhed, that hee had no care of himſelfe. Nowe therefore when he heard that the people would fall away from God, there is no doubt but his heart was mortally wounded. But what? Yet muſt hee needes heare theſe tydinges full of ſorrowe and anguiſh. Heerein we ſee how God did exerciſe him euen vnto yͤ end. We muſt not therefore ſuppoſe, that Moſes diſcharged his duetie, as it were with dallyaunce; but that he had terrible hartbyting, ſo as he was toſſed too and fro, and God gaue him alwayes dreadfull grypes of minde. But yet neuertheleſſe he did ſtill continue. And therefore when we ſee that matters fal not out as we wold, albeit that we haue faithfully laboured, and it ſeeme that our trauaile is vnprofitable, and that Sathan will throwe downe that which we haue indeuoured to ſet vp; and thinges fall out to trouble and diſorder: let it not turne vs aſide from the good way: let it not repent vs that we haue ſerued our GOD, let it content vs that our labour is acceptable vnto him: for although it be not ſo profitable vnto men as were to be wiſhed, yet haue we done ſuch a ſacrifice vnto God as he doth receiue and accept. Yea but yet if men fare litle the better thereby, wee may be ſorrie and ſigh therefore. Neuertheleſſe we haue not loſt our time, becauſe God liketh well of our dooinges. That (ſay I) is the thing whereby the miniſters of Gods worde ſhould cōfort themſelues at this day, when they ſee the worlde ſo drunken, as we ſee it is, and that in ſteede of going forwarde, the greater part goeth backewarde; and that whereas Gods worde is ſo preached vnto them, that the very walles doe ring of it: yet doe they but make a ſcoffe of it. When we ſee ſuch thinges, let vs reſort to God and ſay: Alas Lorde, thou knoweſt wherfore thou haſt employed vs hereunto, and albeit that thy doctrine be ſo ſlenderly receiued of the worlde, yet is it alwaies a ſacrifice of good ſauour vnto thee; according as Saint Paul ſayth: Beholde (ſayth he) it behooueth our preaching to be as the ſauour of death 2.Cor.2.15. to many people. They be the miſſebelieuing which be hardened againſt God: but howſoeuer they fare; that ſauour is a ſweete ſent to our God, foraſmuch as it is his will, that his Goſpell ſhould be preached vnto all creatures. And all the faithfull in generall ought to apply the ſame to their owne vſe, ſpecially when wee deale vprightly with men, and they render vs euill for good. For then it ſeemeth that the thinges which we haue indeuoured to doe for their welfare, are taken in diſdayne; and by meanes therof we cōmonly repent vs, by reaſon of our frailtie. What then? We muſt arme ourſelues with ſtedfaſtneſſe in this caſe. And although there be neuer ſo great vnthankfulneſſe in the world, yet muſt we neuer be ſorry that we haue obeyed our God. No; but the iſſue is not anſwerable to our deſire. There is no remedie. Let vs be contented that our God alloweth our obedience. So much concerning that point.

Moreouer whereas it is ſayd that the people will riſe vp: God telleth of a change, that whereas they ſhoulde holde them quiet vnder the bridle which God had giuen them, they would riſe vp proudly and ſtubbornely, & through inordinate deſire ſeeke to ſhake off the yooke which was layde vpon their necke. By the ſight heereof we may learne what our owne nature is. For it is certaine that heere God ment to ſhewe vs as in a glaſſe, what wee be, vntill ſuch time as hee hath wrought in vs. Nowe then, when we be taught in the doctrine of the Goſpel, what is our dutie, but to hold ourſelues quiet, without wrenching either hither or thither, as we be too much giuen by nature? The word of God then muſt hold vs in and ſettle vs, that we couet not newe changes euery day & euery minute of an houre: but that God may haue the obedience that is due vnto him, and wee followe that which he commandeth vs. Thus ought the word of God to preuaile in vs, to keepe vs quiet. But yet we ſee howe the children of Iſraell dealt in that behalfe, and howe they roſe vppe, that is to ſay, that they changed, and could not keepe themſelues in the obedience of God. At the ſame point are we. Therefore let vs miſtruſt all our owne conceites. When ſo euer any thought comes in our minde, or whenſoeuer we take any thing in hande; let vs euermore ſuſpect it, for feare leaſt wee ſhake off the yoke which GOD hath layde vppon our neckes, and let vs vnderſtande that God muſt guide vs to the ende. Seeing then that we be ſo wauering by nature: let vs learn to ſubmit ourſelues the better to the word of God, & not to enterpriſe thinges of our owne heades, as who would ſay, I will doe this, I will doe that: for as ſoone as we followe our owne wit, and aduiſe, we become ſtray beaſtes. There is no more then for vs to doe, but onely to liue in continuall obedience. And for ſomuch as our Lorde hath ſhewed vs howe he would haue vs to walke; let vs hold vs thereto, & not follow our tickling luſtes, to be carried too and fro by them. After that manner are we to practiſe this place, where it is ſayde, That the people would ryſe vp after the death of Moſes. True it is that wee ought to haue our hearts alwayes lifted vppe to Godwarde: but yet muſt they alſo bee brought lowe through humilitie, and we muſt not lift vp ourſelues with pride and preſumption, to caſt away that which hath beene taught vs.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes: beſeeching him to vouchſafe to receiue vs to his mercie. And foraſmuch as wee know we bee no better than theſe whom we ſee here condemned euen before they were borne, according as it is heere ſpoken of them which ſhould ſucceede after the death of Moſes: let vs pray to that good God, that ſeeing he knoweth the vices that be in vs, & that we bee not able to helpe it, vnleſſe he worke by his holy ſpirite, he will therefore clenſe vs from all wicked affections, and ſo ſubdue vs vnto him, that though we be ſtraied away by nature, yet notwithſtanding he ſuffer vs not to continue ſtill in our iniquities: but that being drawen vnto him, as he hath once called vs thereunto, we may continue conſtantly therein, and ſo perſeuere vnto the ende: and that in the meane while, hee will vpholde vs becauſe he knoweth vs to be weake, vntill hee hath fully reſtored vs by his power. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely vnto vs, but alſo vnto all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the v. of May, 1556.

The CLXXVI. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the one & thirtith Chapter.

17 Is it not becauſe my God is not with me, that theſe euils haue found me out?

18 But I will hyde my face in that day becauſe of the wickedneſſe which hee ſhall haue committed, euen for that he ſhall haue turned away to other gods.

19 Now therefore wryte this ſong for you, and teach it the children of Iſrael, putting it in their mouthes, that this ſong may be a witneſſe to mee againſt the children of Iſraell.

20 When I haue brought them into the lande which I ſware to their fathers, flowing with milke and hony: and they ſhall haue eaten and beene filled and become fatte, and haue turned away to other gods, and ſerued them, and blaſphemed mee, and broken my couenaunt.

21 And when many euils and tribulations be come vppon them: then ſhal this ſong anſwere to their face for a witneſſe: for it ſhall not be forgotten in the mouth of their ſeede: for I knowe their thoughtes, and what they doe already at this day before I haue brought them into the land for the which I haue ſworne.

THe chiefe thing that God telleth vs, to aſſure vs in this preſent life, is this, that hee hath his eye vpon vs, and that he is ſo mindefull of our welfare, that nothing ſhall want vs, becauſe he is able to prouide all thinges that bee neceſſarie for vs; and therewithall is able alſo to defende vs from all anoyaunce, inſomuch that his eye is vnto vs a buckler, a fortreſſe, and a ſhadowe to ſhroude vs vnder it. Likewiſe it is ſayde of his good will in the fifth Pſalme, that it ſhall be our ſhielde. Pſal.5.3. The thing then wherein the faithful ought to reſt and reioyce: is yͭ God looketh vpon them with compaſſion yͭ he neuer forgetteth them, that he guideth all their ſteps, and that he hath a fatherly care ouer them to remedie all their euilles. And on the contrarie ſide, the greeuouſeſt threat that God can vtter is to turne his face away from vs, and no more to vouchſafe to haue care either of vs, or of our life, but to forſake vs. For then wee are ſet open to Sathan and all maner of misfortune. And where is then our defence? For wee haue no meane to reſiſt, we ſee we be fraile and wretched creatures, there is nothing in vs. And therefore wo be to them of whom God wil haue no longer care; but forſaketh them as thoſe that belong not vnto him at all, ne be of his houſholde. And that is the thing which he ſayeth in this place, that when the people of Iſraell haue left him, hee will hide his face from them, and will be no more their father, as he had beene afore time. Nowe this is ſo ſpoken vnto the Iewes, as it ought to ſerue vs alſo for a warning at this day. Will we then haue this ſoueraigne and ineſtimable benefite, namely, that God ſhould guide vs; that our life ſhould be in his hande, and that he ſhould take vs into his keeping to vpholde vs? Then muſt we looke that we call vpon him, and as we profeſſe his name, ſo muſt we alſo ſerue him in truth 2.Tim.2,19. according to this ſaying of Saint Paul, that who ſoeuer calleth vpon the name of the Lorde, that is to ſay, whoſoeuer proteſteth to be of his people, 2.Cor.5,7. muſt depart from all iniquitie. Therefore let vs learne to ſerue our God with a pure conſcience, to reſort to him for refuge, and to put our whole truſt in him. And then are we aſſured that one hayre of our heade ſhall not fall away without his will. For if he haue care of the ſparrowes, Matt,10.29 (as our Lorde Ieſus ſayth) what will he doe by them whom he hath choſen for his children? We be not onely men created after his owne Image, but he hath alſo ſet his marke vpon vs, to the end to ſaue vs as members of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Let vs not doubt therefore, but that he wil euermore performe the duetie of a father in looking to vs. But if in the meane while we become wandering beaſtes, and euery man fall away from him; then muſt that which is pronoũced heere be accompliſhed vppon vs, namely, that God will hide his face: not becauſe that he forgetteth any thing: but he ſpeaketh in this manner after the faſhion of men, to make vs to vnderſtande that in deede he will not looke vpon vs with compaſſion, nor prouide for our life, nor ſuccor any of our neceſſities; but that he will doe ẏ cleane contrary, that is to ſay, that he will leaue vs for ſuch as we be, and ſhew vnto vs, that we be not worthy for him to encumber himſelfe any more with vs, or to buſie himſelfe about vs. Surely it is a dreadfull vengeance, when GOD hath ſo forſaken vs. Therefore let vs beware that we ſticke ſo vnto him, as there may bee an inſeparable band betwixt vs, that is to ſay, as we for our part may honour him as our father, repoſing and ſetting all our truſt in him: and he go forewarde continually in doing vs good, and as his regarde may be the couert to hide vs from al ẏ aſſaults of Sathan, from all the troubles that he deuiſeth againſt vs, and from the hurtes and anoiances of this worlde.

Now he ſayeth expreſſely, that he will bring the Iewes to that paſſe, that they ſhall confeſſe thoſe miſchiefes to bee falne vppon them, becauſe God is not amongſt them. Heere he treateth of a forced confeſſion: for hee ſpeaketh not a whit of true repentance, but onely of a remorſe which all the deſpiſers of God doe feele, for that they haue of long time beene ſtubborne, yea and ſkorned all correction. When they be pinched to the vttermoſt ẏ they can no longer hold out; then muſt they needs confeſſe ſpite of their teethes, that there is a God which is their Iudge. He ſayth that the Iewes ſhall make ſuch a confeſſion, when he hath brought them vnder foote with maine ſtrokes. Heereby we ſee ẏ he threateneth them that his puniſhing of them ſhall not be mieldly and after the cõmon maner; but that alſo he will vſe ſuch rigour, that what hardneſſe and ſtubborneſſe ſoeuer be in them, yet ſhal they be broken if they will not bowe, accordingly as I haue handled the ſame point heeretofore. Neuertheleſſe it is good for vs to bee often put in mind of it, & to bethinke vs thereof oftentimes. For men do alwayes deceiue themſelues herein, that they thinke that they ſhall by and by ſcape the hande of God, and when they haue receiued a ſtripe or twaine, they doe but ſhake their eares & thinke all is done. Therefore if wee be ſtubborne in naughtineſſe, let vs looke ſurely to bee beaten downe, vntill we be driuẽ to confeſſe that he puniſheth vs iuſtly. Nay, let vs not tarry till then. But when we heare how God proceedeth againſt ſuch as are vtterly hardhearted and will not yeeld vnto him, let vs be afraid. And as ſoone as we heare him threaten vs, or perceiue any token of his anger, let vs turne againe vnto him, and meeken our heartes, and let vs vnderſtande ẏ vntill he be appeaſed, our ſorowes muſt needes increaſe, euen to the vtter ouerwhelming of vs. That is the thing which Moſes ment in ſaying, that they which deſpiſe God and his word, ſhall feele that there is neither ende nor meaſure of their calamities, and that they ſhalbe cõſtrained to ſay, Theſe plagues are come vpon vs, becauſe God is not among vs.

And heerewithall we muſt alſo marke the experience which the people had. For (as the cõmon prouerbe ſayth) experience is the miſtres of fooles. The people had then already of long time knowen what it was to haue God dwelling amongſt them, and ẏ it brought all maner of ioy, all maner of reſt, and all maner of happines. And when ẏ God was turned from thẽ, they were driuen to conſider to their coſt, what an vnhappineſſe it was to haue him a ſtranger to thẽ. To be ſhort, heere Moſes ſheweth the diuerſitie ẏ is to be ſeene, when God doth for a time bleſſe a people, & make them to proſper: and contrariwiſe when for the miſuſing of his grace he turneth away, and ſheweth himſelfe an enemie and aduerſarie againſt them. Nowe therefore while we inioy the tokens and Teſtimonies of Gods loue, let vs learne to ſerue and feare him, that ẏ poſſeſſion thereof may continue with vs for euer. If we be ſo wicked and froward, as to skorn God when he vſeth ſuch goodneſſe towarde vs, and forbeareth vs with patience: let vs aſſure our-ſelues that he will giue ſuch glorie to his benefits as that the extreme miſeries which he will make vs to feele, ſhall force vs to ſay, Where is the Lorde that dwelled with vs afore time? Howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, Gods will was that the ſong which was deliuered to Moſes, ſhould be a witneſſe to aunſwere againſt the people. He ſayth yet againe that hee will hide his face, and that by reaſon thereof the people ſhall be a pray, and vtterly deuoured, and that there ſhalbe nothing but tokens of horrible cõfuſion in all their ſtate. The people then is ſufficiently warned and certified of Gods wrath: but yet God addeth this ſong more, to the ende that on the one ſide the people perceiuing their ſtate ſo wretched, ſhold ſay, God puniſheth me and that iuſtly. And on the other ſide, that in this ſimilitude they might behold themſelues as in a glaſſe, and that by the hauing of this ſong, they might bee put in minde of their miſdeedes and tranſgreſſions; and made to conſider that God doth the office of a Iudge, and thereby be the more moued to thinke vpon their faultes, and to humble themſelues. Now we ſee heere firſt of all, what dulneſſe there is in men: for God giueth vs no ſuperfluous thing, nay there neuer departeth word frõ his mouth which is not profitable for vs, and which ought not to ſerue vs for inſtruction. Wherefore is it then that God giueth this ſong to the people of Iſraell? It is becauſe it ſhould ſerue them for a Teſtimonie. At what time? Euen at ſuch time as they ſhould be afflicted to the vttermoſt, that they might be holden as it were on the torture, and be conſtrained to confeſſe the faultes and iniquities which they had committed. And how then? Could not the plagues which they endured, ſuffice to bring them to reaſon, and to cauſe them to turne againe vnto God, whom they had forſaken? Yes in deede, were it not that men be ſo hard hearted, that in ſeeing they perceiue not a whit, and that their wittes be as it were dulled and dead. We ſee by this then, that although our Lorde chaſtiſe men, euen with ſuch extremitie, as they muſt needes confeſſe that it is he to whom they be to aunſwere and to yeelde account, and that it is his hande that purſueth them, and that he is their enemie: yet they be ſo fooliſh that they ſettle thẽſelues in their owne imaginations, and although they knowe it, yet they bee not throughly perſwaded of it in their heartes: but let it eſcape them and by and by forget it, vnleſſe God doe put to his worde, and tell them, It is to me that you muſt haue an eye: for I do ſummõ you before my iudgement ſeate. When I do thus ſcourge you, I ſet your faults before you, I do heere make out your proceſſe for you. If God ſpake not when he ſtriketh with his hande, the ſtripes would bee vnprofitable to vs. Now we perceiue the hardheartednes that is in vs. For although it be heere ſpoken of the children of Iſrael, yet doth the holy Ghoſt vnder the example of them, tell vs what we be. Therefore let vs learne to know our ſelues better, and conſider that although it bee needefull for vs to receiue inſtructiõ concerning Gods puniſhments, leaſt we ſhould become vnreformable: yet notwithſtanding it would profit vs nothing, vnleſſe we had the word of God, whereby he draweth vs to repentance, and by the which he doeth vs to vnderſtande, that the thinges which we ſuffer muſt not be imputed to hap hazard, but we muſt vnderſtand ẏ they come frõ him. And thus muſt we reſort to the holy ſcripture, ſo often as wee be afflicted. For on ẏ one ſide, when men are ſcourged they chafe vppon the bridle, and become as doted, as if they were aſtoniſhed with the ſtroke of a hammer; they thinke not of God. True it is that when they feele thẽſelues pinched with aduerſities, they crye alas, but they doe neuer the more lift vp their eyes to ẏ hand of God, to vnderſtande him to be their Iudge. Therefore we muſt proceed thus far; that is: we muſt haue recourſe vnto Gods word; and when God ſmiteth vs on this maner, let vs take warning to ſubmit ourſelues vnto him, & not keepe vs aloofe as we are wont. Now ẏ ſame word not only will ſhewe vs ẏ it is Gods hande that ſmiteth vs; but it will alſo bring vs to examine our life. It is not ſaid in the ſcripture ẏ God puniſheth men not knowing wherefore, or ẏ he taketh pleaſure in tormenting them: but it is ſayd, that he puniſheth them for their faultes ſo as we muſt alwaies needes acknowledge his iuſtice; inſomuch ẏ if men coulde skill to profit themſelues by the afflictions ẏ are ſent them, they be all of them as medicines, and Gods intent is to ſhew himſelfe a father by warning them after ẏ maner. Moreouer they ſerue to make men inexcuſable: inſomuch ẏ all the afflictions which they ſuffer in this world, ſhalbe an augmentation of the laſt vengeance, becauſe they would not ſtoope vnder the hande of God, while he nurtured thẽ for their welfare. Thus ye ſee ẏ when we be ſcourged, we muſt reſort to the holy ſcripture, firſt of all to vnderſtand ẏ it commeth not by aduenture, but that our Lord doth thereby ſhew vnto vs ẏ we haue offended him, & that he meaneth thereby to make vs to feele our ſinnes, to the end we ſhould not be ſo ſenſeleſſe as we were before, to flatter & to hardẽ ourſelues but that we ſhould come directly vnto him, and yeelde ourſelues guilty, yea euen with ſuch miſliking of our ſins, as we ſhold hate the euil ẏ is in vs, and ſeek nothing but to be receiued vnto his gouernment, to be changed & renewed by him, ſo as wee may take no pleaſure but onely in framing ourſelues to his good pleaſure. That is the thing which Moſes meant in ſaying, ẏ although the people ſhould be conſtrained to ſay, ẏ they ſuffered thoſe ſo many plagues & miſeries, becauſe God was no more among them: yet ſhould they alſo haue a teſtimony to follow thẽ, and to holde them as at a bay, as who would ſay, Thou ſhalt not eſcape, but ſhalt know ẏ thy ſins be the cauſe of al theſe euils; although thou ſeeke ſtartingholes, yet muſt thou bee as it were pent vp, and feele ẏ God is againſt thee, & that thou ſhalt be more & more tormented, vntill thou turne againe vnto him. True it is that this is ſpoken of a witneſſe ẏ was againſt ẏ people, and ẏ it ſerueth to expreſſe ẏ ſtubbornes which was in ẏ children of Iſraell, as hereafter we ſhall ſee more at large.

And ſurely although God vouchſafe to ſhewe vs mercie, and would haue vs to heare his woord, to the intent to bring vs to repentaunce, yet muſt that woorde firſt bee a witneſſe againſt vs. As for example, wee ſhall neuer obtaine fauour of God vntill hee haue condemned vs. And wherefore? Bicauſe we be wrapped in our ſinnes, and doe ſooth and flatter our ſelues in them. Nowe ſo long as men doe thus glory in themſelues, or become careleſſe, there is no place for mercie: for they make but a ſcoffe of the goodneſſe of GOD. Yee ſee then that wee bee ſhutte out from all hope of ſaluation, vntill wee bee condemned of God. To bring this to paſſe, his word muſt diſcouer our iniquities, and all our filthineſſe, and make vs abaſhed and aſhamed, and alſo driue vs to feele the ſorrowes of death, and to ſee hell which is prepared for vs. The point then whereat God beginneth when hee meaneth to bring men to ſaluation, is that he ſtirreth vp his worde for a witneſſe to them, to make them to know that they be vtterly forlorne and damned. Is that done? Then doth God admoniſh vs, and giue vs Teſtimonie of his good will; and not onely lay vs foorth his doctrine, but alſo recite the proceſſe of all our faultes. Nowe then, let vs receiue the woord when it teſtifieth vnto vs our condemnation; that beeing drawen thereby to repentance, and altogether aſhamed of our ſelues, wee may obtaine fauour before GOD. Yet let vs vnderſtande moreouer, that when GOD doeth ſo frame our inditement, it is for our benefite: for hee maketh vs our owne Iudges, to the intent that hee himſelfe would not iudge vs, but ſurceaſſe from it. Nowe if wee will needes play the wilde beaſtes, when as GOD teſtifieth our ſinnes vnto vs; or elſe if wee goe to Gen.3,7. ſeeke for leaues to couer vs, that is to ſay, if wee will needes ſcape his iudgement by our lying and hypocriſie, and play the skoffers which make a mocke of all warninges that are giuen vnto them; or if we play the mad bedlems in deſpiſing GOD as we ſee many doe, who cannot abyde any rebukes, but doe grinde their teeth as often as they bee made to vnderſtande their ſinnes; if (I ſay) wee doe proceede ſo farre, then muſt the woorde of God ſtand ſtill in his firſt force, to wit, it muſt bee a Teſtimonie to vs of our damnation. And therefore ſeeing it is ſayde heere that the Song is a witneſſe to auow that GOD hath iuſt cauſe to puniſhe his people, and that the people ſtande conuicted thereby: let vs feare, let vs feare (I ſay) leaſt our Lorde doe with lyke extremitie purſue the proceſſe which hee hath made againſt vs, and that there bee no place of refuge to his grace after wee haue once reiected it: nay rather, as ſoone as hee ſummoneth vs, let vs learne to ſtoope, and to ſhut our mouth; and not to make any excuſe, but to ſay; Lorde, we ſee verie well, that if thou wouldeſt vſe rigour towardes vs, we were vndoone, there is no ſhift for vs but that thou muſt receiue vs lyke damned and forlorne caſtawayes as wee bee, and beſtowe thy mercie vppon vs: for all our welfare lyeth in this, that thou looke no more vpon our ſinnes to puniſh them, but that through thy free goodneſſe, thou doe take them away and blot them out. Thus ye ſee how we ought to put this place in vre, where Moſes ſayeth, that this Song ſhall be for a witneſſe to the people of Iſrael.

Hee ſheweth yet better what teſtimonie hee giueth by this Song. It is (ſayeth he) that I will bring you into the lande which I haue promiſed to your fathers, a land flowing with milke and honnie. Heereby he giueth vs to vnderſtande, that it is a fatte lande, and fruitfull of all good things in ſuch abundance, as if milke did runne therein, in ſtead of Riuers: and as if they had withall the like abundance of hony. This maner of ſpeech is very commonly vſed whenſoeuer God ſpeaketh of the land of Chanaan: and not without cauſe. For God had bleſſed it aboue all the reſt of the world; yea and no doubt, but the people found that with their comming thither, the fruitefulneſſe of that land was augmented. And ſurely it is a maruailous matter, how ſuch a huge multitude was nouriſhed in ſo ſmall a countrie. But at this day we ſee it is a land halfe barren. True it is that euen as yet there are ſome places thereof as little ſpeckes, which are very fat & abundant; but yet farre vnable to verifie that which wee reade of it here, namely that the land did flowe with milke and honie. But herein we do ſo much the better ſee that which is ſpoken in the 107. Pſalme, namely, that when God hath giuen neuer Pſal.107.34 ſo great fruitfulneſſe to a land, he can make it barrain againe, as if it were ſowed with ſalt, ſo as there ſhall be nothing but leanneſſe, nor any ſuſtenance to bee found therein. Wee perceiue then by the land of Chanaan, how it is the hand of God that giueth aboundance to a land: and likewiſe that his withdrawing of his bleſſing, cauſeth a land to become fruitleſſe and altogether barraine. And therefore doeth Moſes nowe proteſt that when the people come into ẏ land, and there be nouriſhed, filled and fatted, & then ſerue ſtraunge gods: they ſhalbee condemned ſo much the more: and then they muſt not looke for any ſtartingholes, but bee diſcouered to the whole world to their condemnation, and this preſent ſong ſhalbe as a proceſſe wherin the forme of law is obſerued; ſo as ẏ ſummons ſhalbe made firſt, & then the examinations and informations ſhalbe exhibited; and afterward ẏ malefactors being arrained and condemned by their owne mouth, ſhall receiue the ſentence of iudgement againſt them. Now wee ſee what the meaning of Moſes was.

Heereupon let vs marke that by making compariſon of the woord of GOD with the thinges which are befalen vnto vs, and which wee haue felt by experience; wee ought to be wakened, or elſe we be too brutiſh. As for example, whereas the Scripture telleth vs that God beſtoweth his richeſſe vppon men, of purpoſe to bring them backe vnto him by his gentleneſſe, and fatherly goodneſſe; and alſo that hee continueth to doe them good, of purpoſe to drawe them to repentaunce, when he ſeeth them goe aſtray: although wee had no experience thereof, yet is it certaine that the holy Scripture ought to ſuffice vs. But if wee looke into our owne ſtate, and vppon the thinges whereof God hath giuen vs experience; and conſider howe many wayes he hath ſhewed himſelfe liberall towarde vs, ſo as his goodneſſe is throughly knowen vnto vs, and we bee reſolued that it is his hand that hath fed vs: ſurely ẏ beholding of ſo many benefits which God hath beſtowed vpon vs, ought to make vs to proceed yet farther, & to conſider that although we haue offended him, and bin wicked and vnthankfull; yet is he not weary to do vs good: but doth rather ſtriue againſt our leaudnes, & ouercome it with his goodnes. When we think vpon theſe thinges, then hath ẏ ſcripture a good teſtimony of our experience, and then muſt we needs be ſo much ẏ more guiltie. That is ẏ thing which Moſes meant in this text. For hauing tolde the Iewes that this Song ſhould ſerue for a teſtimony to ſtop their mouthes ſo as they ſhould not haue any thing to reply againſt GOD, hee ſaith: for proofe heereof, I wil bring them into the land which I promiſed vnto their fathers, and there they ſhall be fedde and fatted. For ſeeing that euen after they haue taſted my goodnes ſo great towards them, they will needes turne away from mee, and follow after ſtrange gods: is it not ynough to bewray their filthynes vnto all the worlde? Muſt not all creatures be witneſſes thereto? Shal not my word thē haue good authoritie to ſay, that they be too leawd a people, & a people that are not worthy, that I ſhould euer haue giuen them one morſell of bread to eate, & much leſſe that I ſhould haue adopted and choſen them from among all the Exod.19.6. nations of the world, to be a holy people, and a 1.Pet.2.9. Royall preeſthoode? Now we perceiue the meaning of Moſes. It remaineth ẏ wee apply it to our vſe. It was meete that the Iewes after this warning peale, ſhould haue acknowledged that they came not into ẏ land of Canaan, otherwiſe than by the leading of God, and that the ſame lande was giuen them in poſſeſſion bicauſe of the Promiſe made to their father Abraham. Moreouer they ſaw, how God held them there. It is good reaſon then that they ſhould haue concluded, that (ſeeing they were depriued of ſo great a benefite, and yet God is vnchaungeable & altereth not his purpoſe) the euill came of themſelues, in that they ſuffered not God to continue his mercy toward them, but did refuſe it, & ſhut the gate againſt him. Indeede we haue not at this day a land of Canaan; we haue not ẏ which the Iewes had, to be gathered into one certaine Country. But what? We be too blind, if we vnderſtand not that what Country ſoeuer God hath giuen vs to liue in, yet it is he that doth harbour vs. And although we had neither Teſtimony nor Token of his goodneſſe as concerning this preſent life; yet there is a matter which paſſeth all this; which is, That he hath drawen vs out of the darkeneſſe of damnation wherin we were plunged: and hath brought vs to ẏ heritage of ſaluatiō. For through Eph.2.6. hope, we be already ſet aboue with Ieſus Chriſt; as S. Paul ſpeaketh in the Epiſtle to the Epheſ. Yet neuertheleſſe beſides this, God of his exceeding great goodnes, faileth not to giue vs many mo teſtimonies of his fatherly loue: for who elſe nouriſheth and feedeth vs in this world? Howe many waies doe we dayly perceiue that he hath his hand ſtretched out, yea or rather his winges, (as he ſaith in the Song) as it were to broode vs Deut.32.11. heere like little chickins? We ſee it with our eyes. Seeing then that wee haue ſo much experience of the goodneſſe of God; and againe ẏ on the other ſide, he by his ſcourging of vs doeth traine vs to the vnderſtanding of our ſinnes, and thervpon doeth offer vs his woorde wherein to beholde the articles that are layd againſt vs: muſt we not needes be too hard hearted and brutiſh, if wee bee not mooued to come vnto him with true repentance? So then, let vs learne to exerciſe our ſelues better in the rememberaunce of Gods benefites, & to acknowledge them accordingly, as he hath bound vs vnto him: and on ẏ other ſide to conſider, that if he at any time faile vs, the ſame muſt needes come of our vnthankefulnes. For as for him, he will continually proceede more and more to doe vs good, vnleſſe we hinder him, and turne away the courſe of his goodneſſe, as if a man ſhould ſtay the running of a Riuer. For the goodneſſe of God is a fountaine that neuer dryeth; it is certaine that he neuer ceaſſeth to doe vs good. Doeth he then ſcourge vs? Our ſinnes muſt needes be the cauſe thereof, bycauſe we haue prouoked his wrath. After that manner muſt wee conſider as well of Gods benefites, as of the afflictions that he ſendeth vs, ſpecially when wee bee warned by his word, as the way is here ſhewed vs.

And whereas he ſayeth, That the people after that they be filled and fedde: It ſerueth to aggrauate their vnthankefulneſſe the more. For if the people of Iſrael had bin afflicted, and that thereupon they had fallen away, [there had bin ſome colour] as oftentimes men being tempted doe fall away from GOD bycauſe they be at their wits end. And albeit that the ſame be no ſufficient excuſe, yet may it ſeeme that the fault is ſo much the leſſe. As for example, whē a man hath meanely ſerued God, and it hath not appeared that he hath dealt amiſſe, but rather that hee had a good zeale and affection: if God thereupon doe puniſh him, and he bee ſo vexed that he woteth not where to become; in ſo much that hee doe murmure, chafe, and blaſpheme God, or is induced to doe euill, men will ſay, Wel, this man, as long as GOD dealt gently with him, did ſhewe himſelfe to bee in good order: but nowe ſee what temptations doe. But when a man is bleſſed of GOD, and doeth proſper by all meanes, and it is Gods pleaſure to wynne him by gentleneſſe and goodneſſe: if thereupon hee become a rebell, and deſpiſe God, and giue ouer himſelfe to all manner of looſeneſſe, (as ſome are ſeene to do, or rather as the common manner is, that as ſoone as GOD giueth men that which they doe long for and deſire, they become drunken, and doe loſe both wit and reaſon;) if a man [ſay I] doe then ouerſhoote himſelfe after that faſhion when GOD dealeth with him ſo graciouſly: is not his ſinne ſo much the more haynous? Yes certainely.

That is the thing which Moſes meant to declare in this place;[where he ſayeth,]They ſhal come into the Lande which I haue promiſed them, there will I ſuſtaine them, there ſhall they bee filled and made fatte; and then will they turne away after ſtraunge goddes. By theſe woordes we are made to vnderſtande, that the more our Lorde maketh vs to feele his fauour and fatherly goodneſſe, the more ought we to be allured to reſt wholly vppon him that hee may poſſeſſe vs, and the more ought all our wittes and affections to bee ſtayed vppon his loue, ſo as the diuell may not finde any breach nor gap open to deceyue vs, for ſo much as G O D hath ſo wonne vs vnto himſelfe. That is the inſtruction which we muſt learne by this text, otherwiſe the complaynt that G O D maketh againſt the Iewes by his Prophet Ieremie, ſhall lyght vppon vs. My people [ſayeth he] what haue I doone to thee? Heere G O D entereth into diſputation with the people bycauſe they were ſo defiled with Idolatry and had peruerted all together. Goe to (ſaith hee) let vs nowe pleade together; my people, what haue I doone to thee that thou ſhouldeſt complaine? I haue brought thee out of the lande of Egypt, I haue ſtretched out my mightie hand to deliuer thee from thence, I haue ledde thee, and directed thee, I fedde thee in the wilderneſſe, I cauſed Manna to come from heauen, I gaue thee the foode of Angels: and when thou waſt come into the lande which I had promiſed thee, I fought againſt thine Enemies, and I gaue thee victorie againſt them all. But theſe bee not the cheefe matters: I haue moreouer giuen thee my Lawe, which is the couenant of lyfe and ſaluation, I haue giuen thee my Sacrifices, to the intent thou ſhouldeſt haue a Teſtimonie that it is not without cauſe, that I would haue you to my ſelfe. Alſo I haue made thee to finde ſo great riches of my bountie, that it is impoſſible to value the benefites which I haue beſtowed on thee: and doeſt thou nowe fall to deſpiſing me, and to breaking thy fayth, and to turning away after ſtraunge Gods? Is this the recompence that I looke for? If a man doe plant him a vine and tend it; he meaneth to eate and drinke the fruit thereof. And if the vine do yeeld a ſtrange and a bitter fruite, to choke the maiſter withall, what wil come of it? Deſerueth not ſuch a vine to be quite plucked vp? Let vs therefore bethink our ſelues, and not tarie till our Lorde accuſe vs to haue greeued his holy Spirite: but let vs turne this text to our profite. And for as much as we knowe by experience, that he is a liberall father vnto vs; let it mooue vs to ſoften our hearts, how heard ſoeuer they bee, that wee may learne to giue ouer our ſelues wholly to him. Thus ye ſee whereto this Text ought to ſerue vs where it is ſayde, I will ſet them in the Lande which I haue promyſed to their fathers, they ſhall bee nouriſhed there and made fatte, and they ſhall turne away vnto ſtraunge gods. And therefore ſeeing that G O D maintaineth vs, let vs ſuffer him alſo to guide and gouerne vs, vntil he hath brought vs to ẏ eternal inheritaunce, which he hath promiſed vs, and which we looke for.

Ier.2.5.

Iſa.63.10.

Yet moreouer hee ſaith, that this ſong ſhall aunſwere them as a witneſſe, becauſe it ſhall neuer depart from their mouth. Hereby we do ſee how it is our Lordes will ẏ his word ſhould ſerue not to ſome one vſe onely; but alſo for a continuall inſtruction euen vnto the end; & that the fathers ſhould conuey it ouer to their childrē. And the chiefe ſucceſſion which we ought to leaue to them that come after vs, is that when God hath once vttered his will vnto vs, wee muſt beware that it be not buried, ſo as none of vs bee ſo fond as to hold himſelfe contented with his owne onely knowing thereof, as though the light of ſaluation ought to die with vs: but rather that they which come after vs may inioy it alſo. And therfore when we our ſelues haue knowen God, and haue had his trueth preached among vs; wee muſt to the vttermoſt of our power indeuor, that it may continue after our death, and that our children may come to receiue ẏ doctrine which we haue followed. And if the word of God ſlip away, and men think not thereon (as it is come to paſſe in the Popedome, & as it was afore time:) it commeth of their owne leawdneſſe, and they muſt needes yeelde a reckoning for their diſanulling of ſo great a benefite. Wee ſee that the law was loſt for a time amongſt the people of Iſrael, and this ſong was out of the mouthes of both great and ſmall: but yet God at the laſt did not ſuffer the people to continue in ſuch ignoraunce; but it was his will that the Lawe was founde, and that the people came with great ſolemnitie to receiue it, and hee tolde them that they were woorthy of blame for defacing the doctryne of Saluation, and therefore hee willed them to repent. Nowe, ſeeing it is ſo; as I haue already touched, when G O D hath once taught vs his will, let vs learne (as I ſayde afore) not onely to profite therein for the preſent tyme or for the tyme of our owne life, but alſo to procure as much as in vs lyeth that our Children after our death, may ſtill enioy the ſame Religion, and that the name of G O D may euer bee had in remembraunce.

And although there be many that cannot profit themſelues thereby; yet ſhall it turne to their condemnation, and God ſhall not fayle to bee glorified. For ſurely Moſes ſpeaketh in this place, not onely of Gods elect, and of ſuch as were the true ſeede of Abraham: but alſo of ſuch as were willing to take profite by the lawe, and were not altogether reprobates. For ſeeing it was Gods will that this ſong ſhould bee in their mouthes; thereby wee ought to be ſo much the better aduertiſed, that our Lord doeth oftentimes leaue his worde to the worlde, to bee a meſſage and a teſtimonie of his loue and goodnes; howbeit not for the ſaluation of all men, but for the condemnation of the greater part. Wee ſee that euen among the Heathen there remained alwayes a remnant of the trueth: wee ſee ſuch ſentences vttered by the heathen, as it is impoſſible for a naturall man to thinke the leaſt of them which they haue alleaged. By what meanes then did they it? It was Gods dooing, who brought them ſo farre foorth to their greater condemnation; and at the laſt day they ſhall full well be brought in minde of it againe. Nowe if we haue the word of GOD, which ought to bee a much more familiar inſtruction to vs; and that God conſtraineth vs to haue our eares beaten therewith, and to bee able to talke thereof; if wee make none account thereof, but walke altogether contrarie to it, ſo as it may ſeeme that wee haue conſpired to prouoke the wrath of GOD againſt vs; Alas how dreadfull condemnation is readie for vs? Therefore let vs looke well to our ſelues, and let vs conſider that our Lorde doeth often times leaue his worde in the mouth of men, not to the intent they ſhould be inſtructed thereby to their profite;(for they be neither worthie nor capable thereof, bycauſe of their malice and rebellion,)but to the intent they ſhould haue the leſſe excuſe, at ſuch time as they muſt condemne themſelues, and when this ſentence is to bee executed vppon them, namely, Thou wicked Luke.19.22. ſeruaunt I condemne thee, yea euen by thine owne mouth. Let vs therefore take heede of that, and let vs make ſuch confeſſion of Gods trueth; as the ſame may proceede from the roote of our heart, and be a good Sacrifice, and ſo conſequently turne to our ſaluation, as Saint Rom.10.10. Paule ſayeth in the tenth Chapter to the Romanes, which was alleaged by mee, not long ſithens. Thus muſt the woorde of GOD bee alwaies in our mouth, not to condemne vs, in ſuch wiſe, as wee may ſit rucking ſtill continually in our filthineſſe: but to condemne vs in ſuch wiſe as wee may bee touched with repentaunce, and vtterly miſlike of our ſinnes, and flee vnto God to obtaine fauour at his hand: yea euen in ſuch wiſe, as he may rule and gouerne vs by his holy ſpirit, and from henceforth bee glorified in all our life.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes: beſeeching him to vouchſafe more and more to giue vs a true vnderſtanding and feeling of that which wee haue deſerued, ſo as wee may bee altogether caſt downe in our ſelues, and lay away all glorying of our ſelues, and that our whole reſorting for refuge may bee alonely to his goodneſſe: and that in the meane whyle we may ſigh vnder the burthen of our fleſh, for ſo much as wee bee ſo ouerloaden, that wee are not able to come to him with ſo pure affection, as we ought: and that he will augment the graces of his holy ſpirit, vntill he haue rid vs quite and cleane of all maner of vices and imperfections, and renewed vs after his owne image, ſo as we may forſake all thinges, to giue our ſelues vnto him: and that renouncing this preſent world, we may labour to attayne to the inheritaunce of the heauenly life. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the vj. of May, 1556.

The CLXXVII. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the one and thirtith Chapter.

22 And ſo Moſes wrate this Song the ſame day, and taught it the children of Iſraell.

23 Then hee commaunded Ioſuah the ſonne of Nun, and ſayde, bee ſtrong and of good courage: for thou ſhalt bring the Children of Iſraell, into the lande concerning the which I haue ſworne to them, and I will bee with thee.

24 And it came to paſſe that Moſes finiſhed his wryting of the woordes of this Lawe in the booke: ſo that hee made an ende.

25 Then Moſes commaunded the Leuites that bare the Arke of the Couenaunt of the Lord, ſaying:

26 Take the booke of this Lawe, and lay it in the ſide of the Arke of the Couenaunt of the Lorde your God, that it may bee a witneſſe agaynſt thee.

27 For I knowe thy ſtubbornneſſe and thy ſtiffe necke, beholde, whyle I am yet aliue with you this day, you bee Rebelles agaynſt the Lorde: how much more then will you be ſo after my death?

28 Cauſe all the Elders of your Trybes and your Rulers to come before me, that I may vtter theſe words in their hearing, and that I may call both heauen and earth to witneſſe againſt them.

29 For I knowe that after my death, you will bee corrupted and fall away from the way that I haue commaunded you. And finally euill will come vppon you, bycauſe you ſhall haue doone euill in the ſight of the Lorde, by prouoking him to anger through the workes of your handes.

30 So Moſes ſpake the words of this ſong in the eares of all the congregation of Iſraell: vntill he ended them.

Wee haue heere before already ſeene, howe Moſes exhorted Ioſuah, whome GOD gaue him to bee his ſucceſſor. And therein wee haue ſeene alſo, that he was contented to haue ſerued God during his owne lyfe time, and that hee was not grieued ỹ another was reſerued for the charge which was more excellent than that which had beene committed vnto him. For the chiefe matter was to put the children of Iſrael in poſſeſſion of the heritage that God had promiſed them. Moſes is remoued from that honor, and GOD tolde him that it was to ſhame him withall, bicauſe he had not glorifyed him, when the people ſtroue, at ſuch time as they asked water to drinke. God ſayd that Moſes behaued not himſelfe conſtant ynough at that time, and therefore hee puniſhed him, and would not that hee ſhoulde put the people in poſſeſſion of the land of Chanaan. Nowe ſee with what patience Moſes did beare this chaſtiſement which God layd vppon him: In ſo much that although Ioſuah was appointed in his place, yet hee was not a whit mooued thereat with enuie or euill will: but did rather exhort him, deſiring nothing, but that ſuch a man might be ſet vp, as ſhould maintayne and preſerue the ſtate of the Church. Hereby wee are taught, that although God doe pardon our faultes, yet neuertheleſſe if it pleaſe him to ſend vs corporall puniſhments to the intent wee ſhoulde the rather humble our ſelues, and not ſpurne againſt his power, but ſtoope to it, and yeelde our ſelues altogether obedient; ſurely it is conuenient for vs as he knoweth verie well. And therefore let vs ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned by his hand, as it is the generall rule that we muſt obſerue in al the puniſhments that God doeth ſend vs.

Num.20.10

And by the way, wee are alſo to marke, that the zeale of the honour of God and of ỹ welfare of his Church, ought to beare rule in vs: ſo as none of vs doe couet to bee in high degree, and to mount aboue his neighbours: but bee contented that God doe conduct vs by the meanes of men, and that hee chooſe ſuch inſtrumentes as it pleaſeth himſelfe. For ſo hee may alwayes haue the ſoueraintie, and the Church proſper, let vs reioyce therein, and let no man haue regarde of himſelfe. Moreouer wee are to call to rememberaunce, that when Moſes meant to encourage Ioſuah, hee aſſured him vppon the promyſe of GOD. And that is the thing which muſt bee the ſtay of all our ſtrength. For if wee will bee ſtout vppon our owne heade; GOD will ouerthrowe ſuch a raſhneſſe, lyke a fond thing as it is. What muſt then bee done? Wee muſt embrace the promiſes of GOD; and when hee hath once tolde vs that he is our defender: wee muſt not feare that wee ſhall bee forſaken of him, but bee reſolute in all thinges. And although the worlde doe offer vs many ouerthwartes to make vs to diſtruſt: yet let vs ſtande ſtedfaſt in the thing which our GOD hath tolde vs. For it is good reaſon to doe him the honour, that his woorde may bee preferred before all thinges that may turne vs away from the affiaunce that hee hath giuen vs.

Thus ſee you heere a very profitable leſſon which is, ỹ bycauſe we feele ſo many infirmities in our ſelues ỹ there needeth nothing to beate vs downe, but as ſoone as ỹ wind bloweth, we be ſhaken, or elſe doe fall altogether: we perceiuing ſuch feebleneſſe in vs, muſt receiue the remedie that is offered vs here; which is to hearken to the promiſes of our God. And for as much as hee aſſureth vs that he will neuer faile vs; let vs truſt to that ſtay: For when the winds, the Stormes, and the Tempeſtes of this preſent world come; wee ſhall neuer bee ſhaken. Ye ſee then that the ſtrength and ſtay, of the faithfull, is to reſt altogether vpon that which God hath promiſed them. And for that cauſe doeth Moſes ſay to Ioſuah, Thou ſhalt put the children of Iſraell in poſſeſſion of the land. And Moſes ſpeaketh it not at aladuenture; but to ratifie that which we haue ſeene more at large here before; namely that God had choſen Ioſuah to that office, and that hauing committed the charge vnto him, he promiſed him in likewiſe to vphold him with his mightie hande, Whereupon it is ſaide vnto him, be ſtrong, and behaue thy ſelfe manfully. So then let vs learn to fight againſt al temptations when wee haue once taſted the force of Gods promiſes. For it is a token that wee giue no credite to that which God ſpeaketh, when wee continue lyke Reedes ſhaking with euery winde, and tremble at euery trouble that commeth: ſtanding in a mamering, or ſtarting from the right way, and waxing rechleſſe in diſcharging our duetie. As often as ſuch thinges happen, wee ſhewe our weakeneſſe: and wee giue good proofe that wee beleeue not that which GOD hath ſpoken. Wee may well alleage and ſay, As for my ſelfe, I hold the promiſes of God for certaine, I doubt not but that whatſoeuer proceedeth from his mouth is an infallible trueth. Wee may well ſo ſay; but the deede it ſelfe proueth that there is nothing in vs but hypocriſie, and that wee bee not firme to go through with that which is commaunded vs, and to diſcharge our duetie in following our vocation, ne walke ſteadily when all thinges ſeeme forlorne. To be ſhort, let vs learne that faith is ioyned with ſuch power, as ought alwayes to make vs to go foreward ſtill, whitherſoeuer God calleth vs: And ſo ſhall it doe, conditionally that we bee grounded vppon his woorde. And on the contrary ſide, we muſt needes be toſſed with vnquietneſſe, and be wandering hither and thither, and trotte vp and downe without any ſtay, if we haue not the word of God to guide vs, and to be our lanterne. And it is the right payment of all them, that leane to their owne fanſies, and make fooliſhe enterpriſes, and paſſe their boundes and lymites: It is requiſite (ſay I) that our Lord ſhould beate them downe at the laſt, though they were aduaunced for a tyme. And what is the cauſe? Bycauſe (as I ſaide afore) there is no power but that which is grounded vppon the woorde of God.

But there is yet one point more, which is that euerie one of vs muſt haue reſpect whereunto hee is called, and what it is that God hath committed to his hands: for (as we ſee heere) if Ioſua had thruſt in himſelfe, without God had appointed him, what power could hee then haue had? Peraduenture for a braide or twain he might haue done wonders, as we ſee yͤ Children of this worlde doe, who in their brauerie doe as it were ſpitte fire for a whyle as they ſay, but in the end are quite confounded. And euen ſo ſhoulde it haue happened to Ioſua. But foraſmuch as hee taryed till God had ſhewed him his wil, therfore he was not diſappointed of his hope. So then, let none of vs take more vppon him than is lawfull for him: but let vs conſider what our office and calling require, and ſo let euery of vs keepe him within his degree, with all ſoberneſſe and modeſtie; and then will GOD bee our guide, according to this ſaying of his, that his Angels ſhall alwayes beare vs company, euen in Pſal.91.11. our iourneyes, ſo wee goe not aſtray. Nowe heerewithall it is declared heere, that Moſes did write this Song and all the booke of the Lawe; and that hauing written it, hee red it openly before all the people, and gaue the booke of the Lawe to the Leuites, willing them to lay it in the ſide of the Arke or Coffer of the Couenant, and telling them that it ſhould be a Teſtymonie againſt the people. Yea and once againe he accuſeth thē of rebelliō. Thou ſhalt know (ſaith he) what a one thou art. God muſt alwayes haue an action framed againſt thee and bee thy Iudge; for thou art full of Rebellion, thou wilt not bee gouerned but by ſtrong hand; If thou wouldeſt willingly ſerue thy God, hee would vſe thee after a more myeld and gentle faſhion. But what? Bycauſe thou art ſo hardened in euill, that thou wilt not by any meanes bee bowed, GOD is fayne to vſe rigour. And nowe yet once againe (ſayeth hee) I will call heauen and earth to witneſſe againſt you. That is the effect of that which is declared in this place.

Now as concerning the firſt poynt, we muſt marke that this woorde Writing doeth import, that Moſes was not the author of the Lawe nor of the ſong: but was onely the writer or recorder thereof, at the mouth of God. Nowe then, like as a clearke of an office writeth what is appoynted him; Euen ſo it is ſayd expreſſely here, that Moſes wrate the things which he receiued of God, and not any thing that was forged in his owne brayne. And this ſerueth to giue ſuch authoritie to the Lawe and to the ſong which wee ſhall ſee heereafter; as may make vs to giue eare with all reuerence, not to a mortall creature, but to the liuing GOD, whoſe will it is to haue his Maieſtie knowen there. Thus much for one poynt.

And herewithall it is ſhewed vs that our faith oweth no obedience but to him onely, neyther ought to depend vppon men, howe wiſe ſoeuer they be; but that God ought to haue the gouerning and whole Lordſhip thereof. According whereunto Saint Paule proteſteth, that he raigned not like a Lord vnder any colour ouer their 2.Cor.1.24. faith, but that he reſerued that right vnto God, to whom alone it belonged. And in verie deede if wee ſhould compare all the men liuing in the worlde with Moſes, it is certaine that we ſhould alwayes finde, that hee is the excellenteſt Prophet that GOD hath choſen of all the reſt, according as wee ſhall ſee in the ende of this Deut.34.10. ſong: and yet for all that, his ſpeaking of the law which was publiſhed by him, is not to bring vs in admiration of his perſon, that wee ſhould ſay, Truely that was an excellent man: but it is ſayde that God was ſerued by him. After what manner? Soothly euen thus, that hee did not take any thing in hand, nor put foorth any dreame or dotage of his owne, but onely wrate that which hee had receiued at the mouth of God. Seeing that this teſtimonie is deliuered concerning Moſes: what diueliſh boldneſſe and arrogancie is in them that bee farre inferiour to him: which will needes bee heard, when they bring foorth nothing but their owne fantaſies, and ſubmit not themſelues to the worde of God? And yet wee haue to marke that the charge of Moſes differed greatly from theirs which be at this day ordained Miniſters in the Church. For God gaue him his lawe; and therefore hee was fortie dayes and fortie nightes in the mountaine without meate or drinke, to the ende that his doctrine ſhoulde bee authoriſed. Nowe, this was peculiar to him, and as a ſpeciall priuiledge. Seeing it is ſo, then are we ſo much the better confirmed in that which I haue ſpoken; to wit, that it becommeth not men to enterpriſe any thing of their owne braine (as they ſay,) but that they muſt onely deliuer forth that which God cōmandeth them, and be (as it were) his inſtruments.

And heerewithall let vs marke alſo, how it is not without cauſe, that Moſes commandeth the Leuites to lay the booke of the Lawe in the ſide of the Chiſt or Arke of the couenaunt: for thereby it had the more Maieſtie, not bycauſe the Sanctuarie of it ſelfe was of more worthineſſe than other places; but bicauſe God had ordained it to yͤ vſe, and that it was his pleaſure that it ſhoulde be as a pledge, & a viſible ſigne of his preſence.

This matter hath bin alreadie treated of heretofore:& therfore we need not to ſtand vpō it any long whyle: neuertheleſſe it is requiſite to haue ẏ remembrance thereof briefely renewed vnto vs. Men of their owne nature bée ſo dull, that they can neither attaine nor indeuour to attayne vnto G O D vnleſſe they haue ſome helpes. As for vs, wee haue not nowe the figures and ſhadowes which the fathers had vnder the law. For G O D hath nowe reueyled himſelfe vnto vs more familiarly in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who is his liuely Image: but vnder the lawe, it was neceſſarie that the fathers ſhoulde haue the figures to aide them, to the intent they might bee confirmed in the fayth. And when they came to the Sanctuarie or the Tabernacle, it was a kind of offering themſelues before the face of God. There were no Images nor Puppets: for it was not their faſhion to haue anie ſuch remembrance of God, as the Papiſtes doe imagine; but there were the ten commaundementes, which were laide vp there, and God woulde that his maieſtie ſhoulde bee looked vppon in his worde. And Moſes giueth expreſſe commaundement, that the booke of the lawe which he had written, ſhoulde bee laide there in the ſide of the Cheſt of the couenaunt. And to what ende? As if God ſhoulde ſay, Here is my Teſtimonie, you muſt not receyue this doctrine as if it were framed after the deuice of man: ye muſt hold it as a thing that comes from mee: for you haue a viſible token thereof. Nowe then we ſee whereunto this ceremonie of ẏ putting vp of the booke of the lawe into the Cheſt of the couenaunt did ſerue: It was all one as if God had proteſted that hee auowed it to be his owne, and that Moſes had no further to do with it than onely that hee ſerued him as his miniſter.

Col.1,15.

Here we ſee yet againe that which we haue declared alreadie: namely, that God calleth vs altogether to himſelfe, and that hee would not haue drawen vs away one way or other to haue regarde vnto men: for ſo ſhoulde our faith bee alwayes wauering, and there woulde be no ſtay. It is his will that wee ſhoulde haue our eye vppon him alone, to yeelde our ſelues to his obedience. And therefore let vs learne to betake vs wholie to our God, if wee meane to haue a true and holie vnion in the Church. The Papiſts do prate much of the Catholike church, and of the agreement that ought to bee therein: Yea, but in the meane while there is horrible diuiſion and helliſh confuſion among them, becauſe God beareth not rule there by his word, neither is there any allowable doctrine, but they be toſſed too and fro: I meane not the common ſort onely, but euen them alſo which make the articles of fayth and frame commandements & traditions at their owne pleaſure, whereof they haue hoorded and heaped ſo manie one vpō an other, that they can ſcarſly wel tel who is the reporter of this or that, or who is the inuenter thereof, or who was the firſt maker of ſuch an order or of ſuch a tradition. Thus yee ſee how all thinges goe to confuſion and diſorder, when men direct not themſelues by the pure doctrine of G O D. And therefore let vs marke, that when our Lorde willed that the booke of the law ſhoulde be put vp in the Sanctuarie: it was as it were his Royal ſeate where he ſate himſelfe, & where hee woulde bee honoured. And thereby hee ſhewed in effect, that hee woulde not haue his Church to be gouerned after the pleaſure or liking of men: but meant to holde it in awe, and that his onely worde ſhoulde bee receiued, ſo as men ſhould looke onely vnto him, and be gathered together there. But now that wee haue our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt for our heade, and that he is appointed our Shepeheard, and telleth vs that if wee bee his ſheepe, wee muſt not onely heare his voyce, but alſo diſcerne it from the voyce of ſtraungers: I pray you ſhall there be anie excuſe, if we be ſo wauering in the aire, as we ſee the Papiſtes are, following euery man his owne deuice, or elſe buſying themſelues about the Traditions of men? Therefore let vs learne to ſubmitte our ſelues vnto God and vnto him whome he hath ſet vp in his behalfe to be our onelie gouernour: Alſo let vs learne to heare the lawe and the Goſpell in ſuch wiſe, as wee may quake at the Maieſtie of our God: and let vs come with ſuch reuerence and humilitie to the hearing of the doctrine that is deliuered out of it, as wee may not in anie wiſe replie againſt it, nor bring thither anie one droppe of our owne wiſedome, to ſay, I think it not meete; to what purpoſe is this ſpoken? But let vs without gaynesaying, receiue all that euer our Lord declareth vnto vs. Thus much for one point.

Iohn.10,4a & 5.27.

And moreouer let vs ſo ſticke to him, as our faith be not toſſed to and fro. When wee ſee diuerſitie of opinions, and that to aduaunce themſelues men doe through ambition vndertake great matters; let not that carie vs away; but let vs continue ſtill reſolued that there is none but G O D alone that will teach vs [aright,] & that hee hath doone it by his lawe, and laſtlie by the Goſpell, inſomuch that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is appointed by him to be our Teacher, and we haue expreſſe commaundement to heare him, This is my welbeloued ſonne, heare him. By the which point he doeth men to vnderſtande, that he will haue them to ſticke vnto his doctrine and to be obedient to the ſame.

Matt.3,17.

Moreouer it is ſaide, That the law ſhall bee laide vp there for a Teſtimonie againſt the people of Iſraell, It ſhoulde ſeeme at the firſt ſhewe, that the law ſerueth but to condemne men: but I haue alreadie declared yeſterday, that it is ſaide ſo as in reſpect of folkes frowardneſſe which will not be taught but by compulſion. True it is that this hardeneſſe is to bee founde in all men: for by nature wee are hardlie brought in order, we bee comberſome, the wilde beaſtes doe not eaſilie become gentle, nor ſuffer themſelues to bee tamed at our hands; but yet there is not ſo wild a beaſt to bee founde in the worlde as euerie man is, vntill our Lorde haue ſubdued the ſtubborneſſe that is in vs, and giuen vs the Spirite of meekeneſſe; and therefore our Lorde is faine to ſpeake vnto vs, and as it were to enter an action to reproooue vs. In reſpect whereof it is ſaide, that the ſpirite ſhall iudge the worlde. Iohn.16.8. There our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt treateth of the Goſpell, and ſheweth to what ende it ſhall be preached. I will (ſaith hee) ſende foorth my doctrine, and to what ende? To iudge the world. Yea but the Goſpell is a meſſage of grace and fatherly louing kindneſſe. God doth heere offer vnto vs his heart, and telleth vs that hee requireth nothing, but to bring vs to ſaluation: and wherefore then ſpeaketh hee of condemnation? It is impoſſible for him to bring vs to ſaluation, vnleſſe we bee firſt condemned. Therefore it behoooueth vs at the firſt entrie to be inforced to ſubmit our ſelues vnto God: for vntill he hath made that chaunge in vs, wee will neuer yeelde to bee gouerned by him. Yet notwithſtanding our Lorde ſo worketh in his elect, ẏ after he hath humbled them, they ſuffer themſelues to be led without any more reſiſtance; inſomuch ẏ their whole pleaſure and ioy is to bee ſubiect to God, and to frame themſelues altogether after his will. The others be ſo rebellious, that our Lord is faine to vſe continuall roughneſſe and ſharpnes againſt them. True it is that euen the faithful haue alwayes in them ſome kind of ſtriuing, ſo as they bee neuer ſo throughly reformed but that there is euer ſome replying. Yet notwithſtanding, as manie as are gouerned by the Spirite of God (as all his children bee) ſhall cheefely haue their whole deſire and affection to bee altogether ſubiect vnto God, and to doe nothing vppon their owne heade or after their owne liking. As for the others which be not reformed, it is requiſite that God ſhoulde alwaies ſtande in lawe againſt them, and vſe rigour to their condemnation. For this cauſe it is ſaide here, that the booke of the lawe ſhoulde bee a witneſſe againſt the people. Moſes meaneth not but there ſhoulde bee ſome, that ſhould profite by the law, ſo as the doctrine thereof ſhould not be a warrant vnto them of Gods goodneſſe to guide thẽ to the hope of euerlaſting life: but he treateth here of the greateſt ſort which was wicked and froward. And ẏ ſcripture vſeth ſuch a maner of ſpeech, when a people is for the moſt part wicked, ſaying, All of you. Although our Lorde knowe his owne people, and ſeparateth them from the reſt: yet forbeareth he not, to ſay, You: as though hee ſpake generally without exception. Let vs marke then, that the lawe was laid vp for a Teſtimonie againſt the people: not becauſe it doeth not conteine a witneſſe of the loue of God for mens welfare: but becauſe of ẏ peoples malice, who could not finde in their heartes to fare the better thereby, but turned the light into darkeneſſe, and conuerted their breade and meate into poiſon, and altered life into death. Alſo we ought to thinke vppon this which Paul ſpeaketh, namely that the lawe is a 2.Cor. 3. 7. miniſter of death: but he ſpeaketh there but of ẏ commandements: whereas here Moſes comprehendeth all the couenaunt that God had made, euen the couenant of the Goſpel, concerning the which we haue ſeene herebefore how Saint Paul ſaide, that the ſame perteineth not to the Deut.30.14 lawe: namelie: The word is in thy mouth and in Rom.10.6. thy heart. Alſo I haue tolde you, and wee haue had ſufficient proofe therof, that Moſes was not onely a miniſter of the law, but alſo did ſet forth the free promiſes of ſaluatiō which were grounded in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And now he doth briefely comprehende all that in a ſumme.

Neuertheles he forbeareth not to ſay, that the lawe ſhall be a witneſſe againſt the people. And why? As I ſaide afore, it commeth not of the nature of the lawe, that is to ſay of the doctrine; but of ẏ malice of that people, which could not abide, that God ſhould be their father and Sauiour. Now then, the thing which is here proteſted of the lawe, perteyneth to the Goſpel: to witte, that when the Goſpell is preached, if wee accept the meſſage which is offered vnto vs, wee haue GOD for our father, we bee aſſured of his free adoption, and we may freely cal vpon him in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Thus ye ſee howe wee ought to be rauiſhed with ioy, when God ſheweth himſelfe ſo good and gratious towardes vs. Neuerthelater, if we deſpiſe ſo great a benefite, or abuſe it as the hypocrites do; or if we be ſkorners of God, or looſe liuers; or if we be ſo wedded to this preſent worlde, that the heauenly inheritance ſeemeth nothing vnto vs: God will holde ſkorne of vs alſo, and moreouer there ſhal not one onely word be ſpoken, which ſhal not ask vengeance againſt vs at the laſt daye: God wil haue infinite witneſſes. Looke how manie ſermons haue beene made, looke howe manie lectures haue beene reade, and looke howe manie bookes haue beene printed: and they ſhal al be witneſſes to condemme vs as guiltie, and to make vs inexcuſable before God. Although then ẏ this ceremonie of hauing a booke laid vp as it were in the preſence of God, be not now obſerued: yet notwithſtanding ſeeing we haue God with vs in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and that Ieſus Chriſt hath receiued and auowed vs for his Church, and alſo authoriſed his Goſpel according as we perceiue by this ſaying of his, He ẏ heareth you, heareth me, and he ẏ refuſeth you Luk.10.16. refuſeth me; Seeing (ſay I) ẏ we be at this point; there nedeth none other proces to bee framed againſt vs. Let vs looke therfore that we withall reuerence and feare receiue the doctrine which is deliuered vnto vs in the name of our God, to the end wee bee not iudged and condemned thereby at the laſt day. According whereunto our Lord Ieſus Chriſt threatneth the Iewes in an other place, ſaying: It is not I that will condemne you, but the word which you haue heard Iohn.12.48. at my mouth ſhall be your iudge. So then, let vs take heed while our Lord allureth vs vnto him gently, and let vs goe to him: and let our whole ſeeking be to put ourſelues as ſheepe vnder the guiding of our ſheepherd: and then ſhal not the worde be a witneſſe againſt vs, nor ſerue to condemne vs: but much rather we ſhal haue in ẏ law a certaine Pawne of our ſaluation: and we ſhall ſee in the ende, that it is not a vayne doctrine. Wee ſee yet better by that which followeth, that the malice and rebellion of the people was the cauſe why Moſes vſed ſuch ſeueritie. For it is ſaide that he was verie mield and gentle: and yet howe ſpeaketh he? What maner of ſpeech doeth he vſe? I haue knowen you of long time to be very hardhearted and ſtubborne, and at this day, I perceiue not that you bee any whit amended; nay ye bee rather waxen worſe and worſe: ye bee become wilde beaſtes, euermore rebelling againſt GOD, and howe much more then will ye do ſo after my death? As if he ſhould ſay, I knowe you to be ſuch as wil neuer be good. And nowe muſt I haue recourſe to heauen and earth: for I find no ſufficient witnes among you: I muſt call the ſenſeleſſe creatures, to ſhewe that the heauens and the earth, albeit they haue neither reaſon nor vnderſtanding, ſhal appeare before GOD to crie for vengeance againſt you. In ſpeaking after this maner, Moſes might ſeem to bee the ſharpeſt, the rougheſt, and the cholorickeſt man ẏ euer was: and that was againſt his nature. But what? Hereby wee doe ſo much the better perceiue, that the people were in maner vnreformable and paſt hope of recouerie, and that there was none other way to deale with thẽ but after ſuch a faſhion. And indeede, if wee compare Moſes with God, what is al the mieldneſſe that may bee in a mortall man in reſpect of the fountaine of all goodnes? For albeit that Moſes was of a meeke ſpirit, ſo as there was nothing in him but meekenes, and that he was as mielde as the ſcripture ſpeaketh: yet notwithſtanding, all the goodneſſe which he could haue was but a little droppe of that which GOD had ſhed out vppon him by his holy ſpirite. In GOD we finde all perfection of goodnes: yet doe we ſee howe ſharpe and rough he is againſt men. And whence commeth that, but of our greeuing of him? Inſomuch that hee is faine (as ye woulde ſay,) to transforme himſelfe, becauſe we cannot finde in our heartes to ſuffer him to behaue himſelfe towardes vs, as hee woulde in following his goodnes, which is infinite and vnmeaſurable in him. So then, we ſee that the frowardnes of the people of Iſrael was horrible, ſeeing that GOD and his ſeruant Moſes, (who bare the marke of the goodnes and meekeneſſe of his holy ſpirite) were driuen to behaue themſelues ſo roughlie. And hereof wee may gather, that when GOD choſe that people, it was not (as we haue alreadie ſaide herebefore) either for deſert or worthineſſe that hee founde in them. And indeed Moſes caſteth it in their teeth [ſaying;] Shoulde you thinke that GOD is bound to you? If he haue aduanced you aboue al other nations, & giuen you anie dignitie or excellencie: ſhould you therefore boaſt your ſelfe thereof? Nay you be a ſtiffe necked people, which cannot bowe; you be (ſaith he) rebellious and froward, and therefore it is to bee concluded, that God was not mooued to chooſe you, but of his owne goodneſſe.

Nowe that we haue found ſuch frowardnes in the people of Iſrael; let vs repaire to ourſelues: for the meaning of God is to teach vs at other folkes coſt. They which be deade ſo long while ſince, be at this day ſet as it were on a ſtage, God putteth them to reproch, that they might ſerue for an inſtruction to vs. We heare that the people of Iſrael were froward & ſtubborne, and we ſee how God condemneth them, & diſcouereth their ſhame. To what ende? For our good & for our learning. Now then, ſeeing that the childrẽ of Iſrael be put to ſhame here after ſuch a ſorte, let vs learne to examine well whether there bee the like faultes in vs: and ſurelie when we haue ſerched all thinges throughly, we ſhall find that we be no leſſe faultie than they. For where is the readineſſe to ſerue our God when hee calleth vs? Wee be ſo ſlowe and ſo rechleſſe, as is pitie to ſee. Neither is there onely ſlownes and ſlackeneſſe in vs: but alſo wee ceaſe not to kicke againſt him. Howe manie wicked fanſies haue wee, which turne vs away from the ſimplicitie of faith? Howe much are wee tempted of our wicked luſtes, which ſerue to make vs to kicke againſt our God? How bee wee held down in this preſent worlde, whereas wee ſhoulde mount vp vnto heauen? Howe doe wee breake all manner of order which our Lorde hath ſet amongeſt vs for our welfare? And albeit that for a time, wee pretende ſome good deſire and inclination: yet it laſteth not, wee bee changed from it with the turning of a hande, ſo as we be caried nowe this way, nowe that way, & euerie little ouerthwart is enough to make vs miſlike of Gods worde. And haue we once conceiued ſuch miſliking, in the ende wee become like venemous Todes againſt God: and wee ſee ſo manie examples thereof as is horrible. Nowe therefore, when wee haue well looked into our ſtate, wee ſhall bee conſtrained to confeſſe that we be no better than this people. Wherefore let vs beware that the worde of God which is preached, be not a Teſtimonie againſt vs at this day. Yea and let vs not thinke it ſtraunge, though God reprooue vs ſharpelie, and ſend vs ſuch rebukes as he did to the Iewes: neither let vs ſay, with ſuch, as ſettle themſelues in their filthineſſe, Howe nowe? God pincheth vs too harde. Alas wee had neede to bee called vppon a hundred foolde more than we bee. What muſt we then doe? We muſt be more quiet towardes our God than we haue beene; ſpecially when he vſeth roughneſſe in his worde, and that our ſins bee laide open, ſo as our ſhame bee diſcouered: and that on the otherſide he threateneth vs, & ſummon vs before him, and lay there before vs the condemnation that is prepared for vs, vnles wee returne vnto him by repentaunce. Therefore whenſoeuer hee vſeth ſuch vehemencie, we muſt not kicke againſt him, but wee muſt acknowledge the ſame to be more than needefull for vs, becauſe that if hee helde vs not ſhort after that maner, he could neuer weeld vs. Thus yee ſee what we haue to remember, in that we ſee Moſes to haue been ſo vehement, as to haue vſed the tearmes of rebellion and malice, and to haue tolde the people that if they had beene ſtubborne in his life time, they woulde much more bee ſo after his deceaſe. When we ſee all this, let vs vnderſtande that our Lorde teacheth vs, that we haue neede to be ſubdued after ter that manner; for what were to bee wonne at our handes, by vſing gentleneſſe towardes vs? The matter is apparaunt. True it is that God allureth vs ſo gently, that hee may ſeeme to flatter vs as a father doeth his children: but if hee continue in ſo doing, wee fall to making heade againſt him, and to ſetting vp of our briſtles, and finally to daſhing at him with our hornes, and to ſpurning and kicking at him, ſo as it woulde pitie ones hearte to ſee it. Foraſmuch therefore as our Lorde knoweth that he coulde not holde vs in obedience, but by ſuch threateninges, rebukinges, and rigour: he faſhioneth himſelf to our nature, to the intent to ſubdue the ſtubborneſſe that is in vs. Thus ye ſee ſtill what wee haue to remember vppon that place.

Nowe it is ſaide herewithall, That Moſes willed the People to bee aſſembled together, euen of purpoſe to call Heauen and earth to witneſſe againſt them. Howbeit, foraſmuch as this hath beene expounded once alreadie; I will not ſtande vpon it anie more. Onely this ſhall ſuffice, that to make the people the more aſhamed, Moſes calleth the heauens and the earth to witneſſe, which are vnreaſonable creatures. As if he ſhold ſay, needes muſt theſe bee deteſtable people: for it is an vtter peruerting of the order of nature, when men which are created after the image of God vſe neither wit not reaſon, but become blockiſhe; inſomuch that if God ſpeake to them it is but loſt labour, and hee is fayne to haue recourſe to the creatures which are voide of vnderſtanding, as to heauen and earth. Here therefore Moſes meant to touch the children of Iſraell to the quicke, in ſaying that hee called heauen and earth agayne to witneſſe which are creatures euen without ſenſe, to the ende they ſhoulde the better know what a brutiſheneſſe it was that they would not giue eare vnto G O D, who notwithſtanding had not onely printed his image in them inaſmuch as they were men; but alſo had choſen them for his people, and giuen them his lawe to leade them a right. Nowe, although this thing bee to bee counted as a monſtrous and ouglie thing: yet is it to bee ſeene in manner euerie where. For God ſpeaketh as well in theſe dayes, as hee did by Moſes. Yea and hee hath ſhewed himſelfe more familiarly to vs, in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: and yet for all that, what manner of eares bring wee to the hearing of his worde? Wee be not onely deafe but alſo partlie madde, and partlie ſo blockiſhe that if wee were timberlogges, wee coulde not in a manner bee ſo ignoraunt as wee bee. Not without cauſe therefore is it rehearſed here againe, that Moſes had recourſe to heauen and earth, to the intent to make vs aſhamed, becauſe wee bee ſo poſſeſſed aforehande with our wicked luſtes, or with the vanities of this world, or with our owne blindneſſe; that for all that euer G O D can ſay or ſpeake vnto vs, hee cannot preuayle at all with vs. Yet notwithſtanding, it might ſeeme that this people had more modeſtie in them, than Moſes ſpeaketh of: For in the ende it is added that Moſes ſung this ſong, and put the people in minde of the thinges which they had ſeene alreadie, and moreouer threatened them that GOD woulde puniſhe them, telling them that although God did at that time ſet them in poſſeſſion of the lande which hee had promiſed them; yet ſhould they not abide anie long time in it, ere hee ſhoulde bee faine to driue them out againe, and all for their wickedneſſe. Doeth Moſes ſay ſo? They heare him well enough. And it is a woonder to ſee howe this people are painted out in that ſong: for there all their leawd dealinges are diſcouered; and yet they replie not to it any more. For if a man ſhoulde ſpeake to the people of Geneua noweadayes, as Moſes ſpake to the people of Iſraell; and reproue folkes ſinnes as they deſerue, ſhoulde hee bee receyued? If a man ſhoulde lay foorth the leawde dealinges that reigne among vs, and tel vs of our contempt of G O D and his woorde, of our ſtubbornneſſe and wicked practiſes, of our whoredome and looſeneſſe, and of ſuch other like thinges: and not onely ſpeake of the deedes that are doone nowe adayes, but alſo ſhewe other thinges that haue beene committed; and not onely ſpeake of actuall ſinnes, but alſo ſay after this manner, Ye bee of ſuch a nature as this, namely yee bee thankeleſſe towardes G O D, ſtubborne againſt him, full of crueltie, pride, malice, and al manner of iniquitie. If a man ſhoulde ſpeake al theſe thinges, I pray you howe ſhoulde hee bee hearde? O, what murmuring woulde there bee? Nay it woulde paſſe murmuring: for men would gnaſh their teeth at it, and there woulde be no ſuch patience in vs, as was in this people: for they coulde well enough endure Moſes to tell them the thinges aforeſayde. It is ſaide expreſſely, that hee rehearſed all the ſaide ſong in the hearing of all the people. And there is is yet this ſaying added more, Throughout to the ende. And why was that? Hee coulde haue ſaide well enough, that Moſes had rehearſed the ſong with a loud and cleare voyce, in the hearing of the people: but hee ſayth, that euerie whit of it was rehearſed in the eares of the people, euen from the beginning to the ending. So then, his meaning is, that the people ſtoode as dumbe, and yeelded themſelues guiltie. And therefore ſith wee ſee that notwithſtanding ſuch ſilence, and ſuch apparancie of the feare of G O D and of godlineſſe, yet G O D vttered ſo rough a ſentence: wee muſt vnderſtande, that it is not enough for vs to proteſt ceremoniouſly, that wee bee ſubiect to G O D: Inſomuch that although wee reſorte to ſermons, and haue our eares beaten continuallie with them, and call vppon G O D, and make profeſſion of our faith; yet notwithſtanding all this is nothing. In deede all theſe thinges are good and holy: but if we vſe them in way of hypocriſie, curſed bee we, and we muſt not thinke to pay G O D with ſuch kinde of Coyne. What is to bee doone then? When wee haue hearde Gods worde, let euery of vs examine himſelfe, let vs ſearch out our ſinnes, let vs be ſorie to ſee that we be not ſo forwarde as were requiſite: and beeing prouoked hereby, let vs pray God to change and reforme vs, and to bring vs home wholy to himſelfe. After that manner muſt wee deale. And moreouer, although wee haue had ſome order, and kinde of gouernment among vs for a time; yet let vs be afraid alwayes, leaſt there haue beene ſome faynedneſſe lurking vnderneath it. For we ſee what befell to the people of Iſrael: and in verie deede the thing ſhewes it ſelfe. For wee ſee that by ſtartes they ſubmitted themſelues, and there ſeemed to bee ſome feare of God in them. And yet as ſoone as any occaſion was offered, as ſoone as anie wicked deceiuer ſtepped vp; by and by they were turned away againe. Examples hereof are to bee ſeene: and God graunt we ſee them no more. Yet ought they to warne vs, that if there bee anie forme of good gouernment or behauiour among vs, ſo as the Church ſeemeth to be in good ſtate, and religion to floriſhe, and God to bee honoured: the ſight of all this muſt not make vs to thinke that that is all which we haue to do, as though a great number of vices lay not lurking vnderneath it: but wee muſt pray God to vouchſafe to make this gouernment to bee of ſuch force, as it may drawe our heartes vnto him, and euerie of vs may haue an eye to himſelfe; that when wee once knowe throughly the euill that is in vs, we may ſeeke to God to rid vs thereof: that whereas wee haue beene ſtubborne, and hardhearted aforetimes, we may no more followe that trade, but come and ſubmitte our ſelues with all meekeneſſe and mieldnes to our God, ſo as he may rule vs without any gainſtriuing.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, praying him to vouchſafe to burie them quite and cleane, and therewithall to receiue vs ſo into his protection, as we may fight againſt al the luſtes of our fleſhe, and the temptations of the worlde, vntill wee haue finiſhed our courſe: And that becauſe wee be ſo frayle of our ſelues, wee may alwayes reſort vnto him, euen vpon truſt of the promiſes which hee hath made vs, ſpecially in that hee hath promiſed to heare vs in all our petitions which wee make to him in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenlie father, &c.

On Thurſday the vij. of May, 1556.

The CLXXVIII. Sermon, which is the firſt vpon the two and thirtith Chapter.

HEarken O yee heauens, and I will ſpeake: and heare thou earth the word of my mouth.

2 My doctrine ſhall flowe as doth the rayne, and my wordes ſhal drop as the deawe, euen as the raine vpon the hearbes, and as the great raine vpon the greene graſſe.

3 For I will call vppon the name of the Lorde God: yeeld yee honour to our God.

4 The workes of the mightie God are perfect, for all his wayes are iudgement: God is true, and without wickedneſſe: he is righteous and iuſt.

IT ſhoulde ſeeme that for as much as Moſes was ordeyned to bee the teacher of the Iewes, hee ſhold chieflie haue exhorted thẽ to heare the thinges that were ſpoken to them for their inſtruction and welfare. But hee ſeemeth not to vouchſafe to direct his ſpeach to them, but rather to heauen and earth, as though hee condemned them aforehande for ſtubborne people, and not of capacitie to receiue anie good learning. Neuertheleſſe his ſo doing is not for that hee woulde not haue the ſame to ſerue their turne, that they might benefite themſelues thereby: but for that hee was faine to quicken them vp in ſuch wiſe, as it might grieue them at the heart, to ſee that God taketh them for condemned perſons aforehand; to the end that the ſame might touch and moue them the better. And ſo let vs marke; that becauſe Moſes ſawe that the people were all prepared, and he ment to teach them to bee reformed by that means; it behooued him to vſe ſuch manner of proceeding. And it is verie needfull towards thoſe that are ſtubborne, and vnwilling to learne at Gods hande; for ſuch are to bee rebuked and threatened; their leawdneſſe is to be diſcouered; and they muſt bee put to ſhame; ŷ being diſmayed, they may aduiſe themſelues to returne vnto God. And this ſheweth vs, that ſuch as haue the charge of teaching in ŷ church, ought to bee indued with wiſedome and diſcretion. For if their hearers behaue themſelues meekly, and be willing to be guided by the hande of God: it were no reaſon to thunder at them or to vſe roughneſſe againſt them. But on the cõtrarie part if there appeare anie hardnes of heart and ſtubborneſſe in them, or if it be founde by experience that it is but loſt labour to ſpeake gently to them, as when men make thẽ ſelues deafe: then behoueth it the Preacher to ſtep to them with greater vehemencie. And Moſes beganne not his gouerning of the people at the making of this ſong, but he had felt the experience of it long time afore, whereby he perceiued that it was a verie harde thing to bring to paſſe. And moreouer he regarded not onely the folke then preſent, but alſo the ages then to come. True it is that thoſe which liued in the time of Moſes, coulde not but haue their eares beaten with the thinges conteyned here: but yet was the ſame to ſerue for their children alſo. Moſes therfore foreſeeing that the Iewes might become worſe and worſe, as it is the common cuſtome of the worlde, yea and being aduertiſed thereof by Gods ſpirite; vſeth ſuch a kinde of roughneſſe as wee ſee here. And herewithal we haue to remember the thing which I haue expounded alreadie: namely that Moſes calleth Deut. 30.19 heauen and earth to witneſſe, to the intent the people ſhoulde bee the more aſhamed, ſeeing that the ſenſeleſſe creatures doe frame their inditement, and that there needeth none other condemnation before GOD. For had Moſes called the heathen and vnbeleeuers to witneſſe, it had bin ſufficient to put thoſe to ſhame whome God had choſen and adopted to bee his children, but yet woulde not that haue mooued them: for all men are of one common nature, al haue reaſon and vnderſtanding: and although they bee not al trained familiarly in Gods word, yet haue they al ſome ſeede of religion in them. Therefore the alleadging of the heathen and Cap. 32.8. vnbeleeuers (as he will alledge them afterward) had not beene of ſuch force as the vſing of this preface that heauen and earth ſhall bee his witneſſes in all ages. As if hee ſhoulde ſay; as long as there is either Sunne or Moone in the skie, as long as the earth doeth her duetie in yeelding ſuſtenaunce and foode for man: ſo long ſhall I haue good and faithfull witneſſes, that I haue ſpoken in the name of God: and yet for all that, this people continueth hardhearted ſtil. Ye ſee then that the worde ſhall continue ſtill, and although men ſtreine themſelues neuer ſo much to aboliſh this doctrine: yet notwithſtanding all creatures ſhall beare me recorde before God, that I haue ſpoken, and that he authoriſed me to ſpeake, and that he ſent me to do it. Thus we ſee now the meaning of Moſes.

And ſo wee haue to note, that they which referre this ſaying to men and Angels, reſtraine the wordes of Moſes ouer coldlie. True it is that both men and Angels might well beare witnes of the vnthankefulneſſe of the Iewes: howbeit (as I haue ſhewed alreadie) the holie Ghoſt proceedeth yet further, namely that although no man ſpeake in the mayntenance and defence of Gods cauſe againſt the Iewes: yet notwithſtanding the order of the worlde, and the onely beholding of the ſunne and Moone, & of ŷ thinges which wee ſee here beneath, will ſuffice to ſhewe that God diſcharged himſelfe of the promiſe which he had made to that people, in powring out his great treaſures vppon them: and yet that they continued ſtill in their malice & wilful ſtubborneſſe: inſomuch that whereas hee foreſawe, that they were fully bent to all euil, and woulde fall away to all manner of wickedneſſe: he warned them of it aforehande, & yet that woulde not ſerue, but euen of a malicious and ſpitefull wilfulneſſe they turned away from their God, and would not hearken to anie warning, notwithſtanding the good order which God had taken for the procuring of their ſaluation. Now let vs applie the ſame to our ſelues alſo, and let vs vnderſtand that whenſoeuer Gods worde is preached vnto vs, if we receiue it not, our refuſal muſt be grauen in heauen and earth, and all the worlde ſhall ring of it, and the ſame ſhall ſerue to confirme our inditement before God. Indeede it will ſeeme, that when wee haue deſpiſed the doctrine that is preached vnto vs, it was but loſt labour, and as a ſounde that vaniſheth in the aire: but there ſhal not one of the words that God hath ſpoken fall to the grounde, whereof we ſhall not feele the power. For needs muſt they either turne to mens ſaluation, or vtterly bereaue them of all excuſe and make them double damnable. Therefore let vs thinke wel vpon it. For as oft as God graunteth vs the fauour to be taught in his name, & by his wil: there followeth this ſeale, that heauen and earth ſhall be witneſſes againſt vs to our condẽnation, if we wil not yeeld reuerẽce to him which hath al authoritie ouer vs, in ſhewing our ſelues obedient towardes him by our willing imbracing of his word with a quiet minde.

Now Moſes hauing vſed ſuch a preface, wiſheth, that his doctrine may be like a flowing rain, ſo as it may moiſten like the drops that fall vpon the graſſe, and ſhed abroad like the dew which watereth the medowes. And why? For (ſaith he) I will call vppon the name of the Lord, I wil exhort mẽ to giue glorie vnto God. Here Moſes ſheweth, that when wee bee about to ſet foorth the praiſe of God, and to treate of his goodnes, wiſdome, and power, to the intent hee may be honoured of men as hee deſerueth, it is not for vs to vſe a common and ordinary kind of ſpeech, ſpeeche,but wee muſt ſtreine our wit and skill to the vttermoſt of our powers, that our woordes may be aunſwearable to the infinite maieſtie of God:or if they cannot attayne thereunto, (as in deede we muſt needes come farre ſhort of that,) they may at leaſtwiſe come as neere as is poſſible, and tend to that ende. When we ſpeake of worldely matters, wee may well vſe a common ſtyle,& yet if we treate of any matter of importance, we ſharpen our wittes to ſpeake after the beſt maner that we can,for(to our ſeeming) the thing is worth it. But when we come to GOD: then muſt we vſe a new and more exquiſite maner of ſpeaking:ſpecially when we will maintain his maieſtie againſt men, and ſhewe that hee is woorthy to be honoured of al men, becauſe hee hath created the worlde, and mainteineth it ſtil at this day by his power, and alſo becauſe hee feedeth and ſuſteineth men: but moſt of all for his chooſing and adopting of his people and Church,by the knowledge whereof,men ſee wel howe bountifull God is towardes them. Now then,are wee ſufficient of ourſelues to treate of ſuch thinges? Who is hee that can bee founde 2.Cor.2,15. fit for that purpoſe? If all the Angels of heauen woulde magnifie God with one melodie & one accord,could they counteruail that infinite glorie? No ſurely,they ſhould come farre ſhort of it. And what ſhall become of vs then, who be frayle creatures,and can but ſtammer, when we be to ſpeake of God but ſomuch as in a ſhadow? But there was yet one other reaſon why Moſes deſired that his doctrine might flowe like raine that moyſteneth the graſſe,and watereth the medowes. For hee conſidereth that if our Lorde giue vs not a grace which farre paſſeth the meaſure that wee haue receiued,all is to no purpoſe:For although God raiſe vp Prophets and good teachers, and gouerne their tongues by his holy ſpirite, and giue them wherwith to teach his Church faithfully:yet ſhal they not greatly edifie it.And why? Not for any default in them: but for that they ſpeak ſomtimes to ſtones, men be ſo dulheaded, and malice doeth ſo reigne in vs, that God can haue no acceſſe nor entrie in vnto vs. By means whereof Gods worde becommeth drie and barren, notwithſtanding that of it owne nature it be moiſt and haue power to wet throughly. For it falleth but vppon ſtones and Rockes,where it parcheth and is loſt out of hand.

Nowe firſt of all we be taught heere, that the chiefe thing which wee haue to doe in all our life, is to magnifie Gods name and to ſet foorth his praiſe, not onely with our mouthes, that all other men may be prouoked to praiſe him with one accord as wel as we; but alſo with our hearts that euerie man may giue himſelfe to it, and exerciſe himſelfe therein.That is the thing (ſay I) wherein men ought to occupie themſelues, if they were not miſaduiſed to turne themſelues away from ſuch indeuour.And aboue all others, they that haue the charge of preaching Gods worde, haue heere a good leſſon: to wit,that of themſelues they bee farre vnable to performe their duetie, they haue a charge that is ouer high and excellent for them, yea euen though there were farre greater ability in them without all compariſon than there is. Choſe me out the ableſt in the world; and yet muſt they be faine to acknowledge ſuch weakeneſſe in themſelues, as that they cannot ſpeake of God with ſuch maieſtie and reuerence as they ought to do, no nor once come neere it, vnleſſe God gouerne them and giue them a new ſpeech, altering and reforming their tõgues,ſo as they may not ſpeake after the manner of men, but may ſhew howe it is the holy Ghoſt that raigneth in them. Nowe if Moſes wiſhed this in reſpect that he might faile bicauſe hee was a man; if ſo great a Prophet did both know and acknowledge that hee could not magnifie God as became him: alas, much leſſe can we diſcharge our ſelues thereof. Therfore let vs acknowledge our infirmitie and reſort vnto God,praying vnto him that as he hath vouchſafed to admit vs into his ſeruice, ſo he will alſo giue vs power and abilitie to handle thoſe high myſteries to the edifying of his Church, and to ſet forth his praiſes in ſuch wiſe as he may be honored as he deſerueth.And ẏ two reaſons which I haue ſpoken of, ought to moue vs thereunto. The one is by conſidering what oddes there is betweene the infinite glorie of God, and the ſlendernes that is in vs. For what is it that cauſeth men to preſume to worke wonders, and to ſtand ſo much in their own conceits, as to think themſelues able to go through with all thinges, but that they thinke not of God as they ought. Now therfore,when we know that God doth vs the grace to vouchſafe vs to be his lieuetenants, to beare abrode his name among men, and to bring folke to the knowing of him:truly it ought to induce vs to humilitie. And when wee once know our vnſufficiency,we muſt alſo bee prouoked thereby to pray God to ſupply our want.Beſides this let vs alſo conſider what ẏ world is.For although God had giuen vs more grace than we haue:yet is the worlde ſo frowarde, that the doctrine of God can haue no entrance at all.For it belongeth alonely to God to alter mens hearts, that is to ſay,to ſoften them, that his doctrine may drop into them and become like a moiſtening ſhower watring the medowes, whereas it dryeth away vpon ſtones and Rocks.Seeing it is ſo,let vs learne to call vpon God better than we haue done,foraſmuch as our labor were vnauailable without him.

And herewithall we be all warned in general, after what ſort we ſhould receiue Gods doctrine, that is to wit,as a raine. Were a peece of lande neuer ſo well husbanded and neuer ſo well ſeeded,yet if it wanted moiſtening from heauen,to what purpoſe were it? Shoulde not all the paine that is taken about it be vnauailable? Euen ſo is it with vs:god muſt water vs dayly with his word, or elſe hee ſhall draw no nouriſhment out of vs, we wil bring forth no fruite. Sith wee know this, wee ought to bee more diligent in hearing Gods word than we be.The earth openeth her mouth in the drought of ſummer, ſo as it chinketh if it want raine: and (as we haue ſeene heretofore) ẏ heauen muſt be faine to hearken to the earth, as though the earth made requeſt and ſupplication Oſee.2,21.

when it wanteth moiſture. And ſeeing it is ſo; why perceiue we not our owne neede,& why go we not like hungrie folkes to pray God to water vs with his worde? Nay, the ſloth that is in men doeth well ſhewe, that they neuer knewe either the power or the office of Gods worde; namely that it is a dewe and a raine. Finally foraſmuch as the ſcripture telleth vs, and we our ſelues doe feele indeed that our hearts are hard, inſomuch that although God do water vs and raine downe vppon vs neuer ſo much, yet doth not any drop enter into vs, vntill hee haue touched vs to the quicke, and taken away the ſinne that is in vs: he muſt be faine to clenſe all our wicked affections, to the end that his worde may enter, ſo as there may be neither marowe, nor bone, nor thought, nor affection, nor aught elſe in vs, wherunto this word of his may not extend, that wee may feele the force thereof. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to remember vpon this place.

Nowe whereas Moſes ſaith that he will call vpon the name of the Lorde; hee meaneth not ſimplie that he will but onely pray, as indeede that manner of ſpeech is ſo taken in many places: [as for example] I will call vppon the name of Pſal.18,4. God, that is to ſay, I will flee to him for refuge: but the ſcripture oftentimes taketh the calling vpon Gods name, for the ſpreading thereof abroade, that it may bee knowen in all places. According hereunto, Moſes ſaith that he wil cal vpon the name of the Lord; that is to ſay, that in this place he will not treate of common things, ſuch as belong to this tranſitorie life, nor ſuch as concerne the corruptible matters of this world: but that he will mount aboue al the creatures, becauſe hee will haue God to bee knowen, worſhipped, and honored of all men, and ſpecially of the people whome hee choſe to bee his flocke, whom he marked out to bee of his owne houſhold and Church, whom he woulde haue to honor him as he is worthie. And that doeth hee ſhewe immediatly in ſaying, Giue glorie to our God. Heere Moſes ſheweth to what end and intent he would call vppon God; his meaning was not that he himſelfe alone would call vpon God, but to exhort all thoſe whom hee had charge of, to ſubmit themſelues to God, and vppon the knowing of him, to yeelde him his due right. Wee ſee howe God is defrauded by men: they robbe him and bereaue him of his honour. And although we haue an infinite number of other vices in vs, and bee blameworthie innumerable wayes: yet the greateſt euill that is in vs, is this trecherie of ours, that to the vttermeſt of our power, wee darken yea and vtterly deface the glory of our God. And yet the verie cauſe why wee were created, is that we ſhoulde giue him his owne, and yeelde him the honour that belongeth vnto him. In this reſpect therefore doeth Moſes tell vs that Gods name muſt bee publiſhed, that al men may indeuour to glorifie him as hee deſerueth. And heere wee ſee alſo to what ende Gods worde is dayly preached vnto vs, and beaten into our eares. It is not to the ende wee ſhoulde but confeſſe the thinges to bee true which are vttered, and in the meane while goe away ſo colde as though wee were no whit moued at the doctrine which wee haue hearde: but that wee ſhoulde bee all of vs inflamed to glorifie our God, and not take his worde to an vncertaine vſe, (for that were a defiling thereof:) but heere the holy Ghoſt ſheweth vs to what ende God will haue his name knowen in this worlde; namely that his praiſe may bee giuen vnto him, according as it is ſaide in the Pſalme, Lorde, after as thy name is in Pſal.48.10. the worlde, ſo alſo be thy praiſes. Yee ſee then howe that when folke reſort to Sermons, they ought to diſpoſe themſelues to the receiuing of the thinges which are tolde them concerning God; that knowing him to be ſuch a one as hee is, they may giue themſelues wholly to the glorifying of him, and that when we haue heard the doctrine whereby God ſheweth himſelfe decked with his moſt excellent vertues, we may bee prouoked thereby to conſider thus with our ſelues: I ſee it is my duetie to inforce my ſelfe to the glorifying of my God. That then is the thing in effect, which we haue to remember vpon this place, where Moſes ſaith that he will call vppon the name of the Lord.

Afterwarde hee exhorteth thoſe whoſe Prophet hee was, to yeelde glorie vnto God. And he ſheweth therewithall, that God will not bee praiſed and commended at our handes without cauſe why: but that wee haue matter to inforce vs thereunto, though no man exhorted vs to it. His ſaying is, The working of the mightie is perfect or whole. By this title which he giueth vnto God, hee meaneth to ſhewe, that God requireth not that we ſhould knowe but onely his being, ſo as wee ſhould ſtand gaſing at him without the liuely knowledge of his power. True it is that the woorde which Moſes vſeth doeth ſignifie properly a Rocke. But the very meaning thereof is, that when wee ſpeake of God, or heare him ſpoken of; it muſt not be alonly to feede ſome fond and idle imaginations, but to make vs vnderſtand that his power is preſent with vs, and that it is ſpread abroad euery where, ſo as wee may reſt vpon him, and well perceiue that we be gouerned by his hand, and ſo knitte vnto him, that we liue in him, and that without him we ſhould periſh, and the worlde bee brought to nought in the twinckling of an eye. Therefore as for them that treat of ſuttle deuices concerning Gods being, and in the meane while doe not edifie men in the faith and feare of him, ne cauſe them to vnderſtande his power: they bee but lightheaded and rouing teachers: they vſe not the ſpeech of the holy Ghoſt. Wherfore let vs mark wel, how Moſes hath ſhewed vs here, not onely ẏ there is a God, but alſo ẏ wee ought to take hold of his power, as which is ſpread abroade euerywhere, filling the whole worlde, inſomuch that euen wee our ſelues are partakers thereof.

Nowe it is ſaide, that Gods woorking is perfect or whole. And afterward he addeth, that God is faithfull, there is no fault to bee founde in him, there is no vnrighteouſneſſe in him, his wayes are ſtraight, hee is iuſt and ſoothfaſt. And whereto ſerue all theſe thinges? For it might ſeeme that all theſe words were needeleſſe, becauſe the wickedeſt folkes that are, wil confeſſe God to be righteous, and that it were too horrible a blaſphemie to accuſe God of vnrighteouſneſſe. It ſhould ſeeme, that in this place Moſes treateth not of any great matter, when hee ſaieth that Gods workes are perfect, that hee is righteous, that he is faithfull, and that there is no fault to be founde in him. But if wee looke vppon the vnthankfulneſſe of men, wee ſhall eaſily perceiue that Moſes doth not without cauſe in this place maintaine Gods trueth, righteouſneſſe and wiſedome, and all that hee deſerueth to be glorified for. True it is that men will not bee ſo bolde as to belke out their blaſphemies with full mouth, to accuſe God: but yet they wil goe about indirectly to deface the commendation of his goodneſſe, power, and wiſedome, and of all that euer is in him. Firſt of all wee ſee howe men content themſelues with Gods doings. They can wellynough ſay that his workes are perfect and faultleſſe: but in the mean while, which are thoſe works? We muſt come to the ordering of the whole world. The holy ſcripture telleth vs that there is not that thing done here below, which is not diſpoſed by the ordinance & hand of God. Nowe wee ſee a great number of ſtraunge things, inſomuch as wee be abaſhed to ſee howe things fall out cleane contrarie to our expectation and deſire, as we thinke. When wee thinke to take our eaſe; beholde, a ſtorme commeth. When wee thinke to feede our ſelues fatte; beholde, God cutteth our pittance ſhort. When we thinke to liue in peace and reſte; beholde, by and by there commeth ſome warre or ſtrife. To be ſhort, both priuately and generally we be toſſed vp and downe among a number of whirlewinds. Yet for al this, we muſt glorifie god, aſſuring our ſelues that his afflicting, his exerciſing, his humbling, his remouing, and his toſſing of vs to & fro after that faſhion, is not without cauſe. Men therefore muſt ſuffer themſelues to be gouerned after that manner by the hande of God, and they muſt glorifie his prouidence, although they haue not their owne deſires and likings. But what ſhall wee doe? Doe wee neuer finde fault with any of Gods doings? Whence come ſo many murmurings? Whence come ſo manie cries and Lamentations, but of this, that men cannot finde in their hearts to frame themſelues to Gods will? What meaneth this? Howe goes the worlde with vs? Men torment themſelues. True it is that if we aske them, How now? Will ye goe to law with God? Thinke yee to get the vpper hande of him? They will ſay it is no part of their thought. But yet muſt wee needes grant, that Gods will is to trie vs after that faſhion, by the diſorder of things in this world, or elſe we muſt needes denie both his iuſtice, and his vprightneſſe, and vtterly bereaue him of all power, and make him an ydol, as all theſe raſcals do which denie Gods prouidence: For they will needes ſhut him vp in heauen, as though he had no regarde of the worlde, ne ordered not all the things that are here beneath. Nowe when men do ſo make an ydoll of God, it is a double blaſpheming of him. And although we attribute vnto him the gouernment and dominion of the world: yet muſt wee not looke to ſee a reaſon of all his doings, or to finde the cauſe why they ſhould be rightfull; and yet muſt we with all lowlines confeſſe them to be faultleſſe. And ſo when we haue once learned this leſſon yͤ Gods workes are perfect; we ſhal haue profited greatly, not only for one day, but alſo for all our life long.

But ſome fantaſticall perſons miſunderſtanding this text, haue troubled themſelues greatly, without reaſon. For they fall to ſcanning; with howe can Moſes ſay that Gods workes are perfect, conſidering the great number of defaultes which are to bee ſeene in this worlde? For one is blinke eyed, another is lame, the thirde is croopleſhouldred, another hath but one hand and another wants a legge. Alſo we ſee trees wherein there is much amiſſe: and to be ſhort, we ſee diuerſe creatures which want their perfection in many things. And how is it then ſaid, that Gods works are perfect? Such reaſoning is too beaſtly. For the meaning of Moſes is no more but this, that we muſt glorifie God in all his doings, confeſſing that all thinges are ordered by good reaſon, and by wonderfull righteouſneſſe and wiſedome; and that when we haue ſearched them throughly, wee ſhall finde that men ſhalbe confounded euen in the thinges which they woulde needs incounter & ſet themſelues againſt. To be ſhort we muſt apply hereunto the doctrine of S. Paul (which he alleadgeth to another purpoſe, but yet it wil ſerue wel to this text) namely that

1.Cor.1.25.

Gods fooliſhneſſe is wiſer than all the wiſedome of the world. S. Paul ſpeaketh there indeede of the Goſpel: but yet is that ſaying verie true in generall. For when thinges go out of order and cleane arſiuerſie, and we perceiue not wherefore God dealeth after that faſhion, but (to our ſeeming) hee dealeth vnaduiſedly: we muſt vnderſtand that in the things which to vs ſeeme folly, that is to ſay, wherin Gods wiſedome appeareth not, there is wiſedome ynough to confounde vs, and therefore wee muſt not turne againe with preſumption and ouerweening, to replie; This ſeemes not good to me: but we muſt ſtoope, and imbrace Gods doings quietly. And herein we ſee yͤ rage of theſe raſcals, which babble nowadayes againſt all thinges that exceede their capacitie. If a man ſpeake of Gods eternall election, & ſay he hath choſen whom he thought good through his owne freebeſtowed goodnes, and alſo that he reiecteth whom hee liſteth: and moreouer, that he diſpoſeth al things that are done in yͤ worlde, and holdeth the reines of the bridle ſecretely, (ſo as although men ouerſhoote themſelues in their naughtineſſe, and that the diuell alſo doe ſtrein himſelf to make a hotchpotch of al things as it were in ſpite of God: yet notwithſtanding God ouerruleth al, cauſing euen the diuel himſelfe in deſpite of his teeth, to execute the things that he hath decreed; and that men (bee they neuer ſo ſtubborn againſt him,) cannot but do that which he hath determined:) Theſe raſcals glorying in themſelues do ſay; O, I conceiue not that. And thou beaſt, what art thou? If all the greateſt doctors of yͤ world ſhold lay their heads together, they coulde not attaine to the vnderſtanding thereof. And I make no reckening of ſome hypocrits which diſguiſe themſelues, and counterfait themſelues to be doctors in deſpite of nature: but if yͤ Angels of heauen ſhold come, yet ſhould they be faine to reuerence the wonderfull ſecrets of God. Wee ſee howe the Cherubins are deſcribed vnto vs in Eſay, namely how they ſtretch out their winges to hide their faces, becauſe they be not able to comprehende the infinite maieſtie of God. And yet for al that, vnder pretence that our braine conceiueth not the full meaſure of the things which the ſcripture telleth vs concerning God; wee reiect it. Thus we ſee yet better, how it is not for nought that Moſes ſaide that the workes of the mightie are perfect, but [that it ſerueth] to make vs to tremble before the maieſtie of God, and by acknowledging that he is almightie, to refraine frõ incountring him by ſaying, Why doth he ſo? Or why willeth he this or that? Nay let vs ſimply confeſſe that his works are perfect, namely in wiſedome, in righteouſnes, and in goodnes, ſo as there is no fault to be founde in any of al his workes. Eſa.6.2.

Now hee addeth, that all his wayes are righteouſneſſe, that God is true, without wickedneſſe, iuſt, and vpright. Whereas he ſaieth that all his wayes are righteouſnes, it is a more larger expounding of that which he had ſaid afore. For by a ſimilitude this worde Way, is taken for all manner of doings. And heerein Moſes ſheweth vs, that it is not ynough to haue glorified God in ſome part or portion, but that wee muſt confeſſe without exception, that hee is the welſpring of all wiſedome, of all power, of all goodneſſe, and of all iuſtice. We ſhall ſee ſome which will be contented to glorifie God, ſo long as things fall out to their lyking: but if God deale with them to their miſliking, they alter their ſpeech, and ſpit out their venim againſt him. See howe men woulde part ſtakes with God, reſeruing to themſelues the libertie (or rather the diueliſh malapeartneſſe) to freate and fume at God when hee doeth not as they woulde wiſh, and as ſeemeth good to their opinion. For this cauſe Moſes ſaieth, that all Gods wayes are righteouſnes, that is to ſay, that although God as now remoue things eft at one ſide and eft a tother, and wee ſee great backturnings and chaunges, and he ſeemeth to be minded to turn yͤ worlde vpſidedowne: yet notwithſtanding he for his part knoweth why he doeth ſo. True it is that we ſhalbe abaſhed at it, and the rudeneſſe and frailty of our vnderſtanding ſuffereth vs not to conceiue Gods wonderfull counſailes: they bee too deepe a gulfe for vs: but yet doth God alwayes keepe a meaſurable and euen hande in all his doings. Then is it not any one or two deedes wherein GOD ſheweth his righteouſneſſe, but in the whole gouernement of the worlde. Lo to what point we muſt come.

Moreouer Moſes doth expreſly call him true. And that is to bee referred to the doctrine, to the ende that men ſhould learne to receiue that which is ſaide and ſet downe vnto them in the name of God. And indeede, vntill ſuch time as we knowe God to bee true, we can neuer taſt of his righteouſneſſe nor of his goodneſſe: or if we haue any taſt thereof, yet can we not be ſure and fully reſolued of it. For proofe hereof, we neuer vnderſtande Gods iuſtice, wiſedome, goodneſſe, or any other of his vertues, but by his worde. True it is that wee haue experience of them: and God ſheweth himſelfe ſufficiently both aboue and beneath, that hee might bee glorified at our handes, at leaſtwiſe if wee had eyes and eares to ſee and heare. But what? Such is our ſlothfulneſſe, that we wote not howe to benefite our ſelues by the great number of the recordes wherein God maketh his glorie to ſhine forth. His worde therefore muſt goe ioyntly with it: for if wee bee not taught at his mouth, wee ſhall neuer attaine vnto him, no nor come any thing neere him. But if wee doubt of Gods worde, and haue but an opinion of it, as who woulde ſay the thinges that are conteined in it haue ſome reaſon, but yet wee doe but coniecture ſo: what a thing were it? What certaintie ſhoulde wee haue of God or of any of all his vertues, for the which hee is to bee glorified? Wee ſhall bee always in a mammering. And ſo wee ſee of what importance this ſaying is, where Moſes termeth God True. For hee woulde haue vs to learne to yeelde ſuch authoritie to his worde, as it may benefite vs, and that as ſoone as wee heare God ſpeake, wee ſhoulde bee fully reſolued and perſwaded, that wee ſhall not bee diſappointed in following all that hee ſaieth to vs, and in beleeuing the ſame. By this meane then wee may conſider all Gods workes, ſo as wee ſhall haue a lampe to guide vs and to giue vs light, that wee may not runne reeling in continuall doubtfulneſſe. But foraſmuch as Gods worde is the infallible trueth to vs, wee ſhall haue a ſtayed iudgement concerning the thinges that are ſaide vnto vs, and wee ſhall truſt in God, not as the heatheniſh ſort doe, who bee ſhaken from it out of hande, becauſe there is no ſteadineſſe of faith in them: but wee ſhall haue a good ſtaffe to ſtande by, ſo as Gods trueth ſhall fence vs againſt all diſtruſt, againſt all grudging and againſt all thinges that may turne vs from the glorifying of him. And therewithall wee ſhall alſo haue a good foundation of our ſaluation, when wee once knowe that God is True. For if wee imbrace not the thinges that God doeth, what will become of vs? There is nothing but damnation in men, and the more they truſt in themſelues, the more muſt they needes bee confounded. Then can wee not conceiue any hope of ſaluation, vnleſſe wee bee well aſſured that God foadeth vs not with wordes without effect: but that wee knowe him to bee faithfull and truſtie, ſo as if wee haue but a worde of his mouth, it is as good as if our ſaluation were already ſhewed.

And thereuppon hee ſaieth further, that there is no wickedneſſe in him, [but] that hee is iuſt and faithfull. It ſhold ſeeme yͭ Moſes ſpeaketh too coldly of God in this place, in ſaying, There is no wickedneſſe in him. For who doubts of that? Nay, it is to cut off all the wicked imaginations that men deuiſe, when they be not helde in awe ſo as they may yeeld to conclude that God is faithfull, good, and iuſt, yea and voide of vnfaithfulneſſe. And who accuſeth him thereof? But yet wee ſee howe that euen the holy Prophets were driuen to reſiſt thoſe temptations. Ier. 12.1. Lorde I knowe that thou art iuſt, ſaieth Ieremie. Abac. 1.13. As much doeth Abacucke, and they crie out ſo of purpoſe to ſhewe that they bee troubled with many incumberanees, when they ſee things ſo out of order in the worlde. There then wee ſee howe they had eaſily beene caried away to blaſpheme God, and to deeme ſome vnrighteouſneſſe to bee in him, if they had not beene reſtrained. And ſo wee ſee; that it is not without cauſe, that Moſes ſaieth heere: that God is true & without wickedneſſe. There is nothing in him (ſaieth hee) but the ſame is praiſe worthie; inſomuch that when wee ſpeake of his trueth and righteouſneſſe, we muſt exclude all wiſedome & power of man. And to be ſhort, he muſt be praiſed without exception and not after the common manner of men. And that is the cauſe that when Gods word is ſpoken of in the Pſalme, it is Pſal. 12.7. ſaide to be like ſiluer tried ſeuentimes in the fire after it hath beene molten and all the droſſe of it taken quite and cleane from it. At the firſt ſight this ſimilitude may ſeeme to vs to bee but colde. But let vs looke a little vppon our ſelues, and we ſhall finde that our wits doe tickle vs inceſſantly; inſomuch that when wee haue confeſſed God (yea euen without diſſimulation) to be true: yet when wee come to his promiſes, euermore we will haue ſome reply, and we will neuer be contented in our minds, nor well at reſt. For we haue a leawdnes which holdeth vs back, and hindereth vs that wee cannot glorifie God as becommeth vs. So then let vs marke, that Moſes doth not heere without cauſe exclude all iniquitie: to the ende that when we ſpeake of God and of any of all his vertues, wee ſhoulde doe it with ſuch reuerence and admiration, as wee may not onely not accuſe him of any vnfaithfulneſſe, and confeſſe that wee perceiue not any vice in him: but alſo be throughly perſwaded and reſolued, that there is ſuch perfection in him, as that there remaineth no more for vs to doe, but onely to worſhip him, yea euen though we conceiue not the highneſſe that is hidden from vs.

Nowe let vs caſt our ſelues downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to take from vs al hardneſſe and ſtubbornnes, and to frame vs to the obeying of him, that the preaching of his worde vnto vs may not bee in vaine, but that it may profite vs, ſo as wee may become good ground, and ſerue in ſuch wiſe to the glorie of our God, as that the labour and paine which he ſhall haue beſtowed vpon vs, may not be in vaine, but that all may redounde to the full eſtabliſhing of his kingdom. And moreouer that ſeeing it pleaſeth him that our ſaluation ſhould be matched with his glorie, he will alſo ſo further the ſame, as wee may bee incouraged by that meanes to giue our ſelues more and more vnto him. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth &c.

On Friday the viij. of May, 1556.

The CLXXIX. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the two & thirtith Chapter.

5 They haue corrupted themſelues before him by their ſinne: euen they that are not his children, but a froward and wicked generation.

6 Doeſt thou reward the Lorde ſo, O thou fooliſh and vnwiſe generation? Is not he thy father, and thine owner, is it not hee that hath made thee and faſhioned thee?

7 Remember the time paſt, conſider the yeares of ſo many generations. Aske thy father, and hee will ſhewe thee: inquire of thine elders, and they will tell thee.

Yeſterday wee ſawe why Moſes ſpeaketh here expreſly of Gods truth. For men had neede to be aſſured of Gods promiſes, that they may holde themſelues to them and reſt vpon them: and alſo to know that his worde is the rule of all perfection, that they may receiue it with all reuerence. And it is ſaide expreſly, that there is no vnrighteouſneſſe in him, to the ende that men ſhould learne, not to meaſure him by their owne ſcantling as they be wont to doe. For in aſmuch as we comprehend not Gods iuſtice, wee drawe it downe to ours, by meanes whereof wee abace his maieſty too much. Therfore if we will yeelde God his due honor, we muſt ſeparate him frō all his creatures: wee muſt not imagine aught of him after our owne fancie, nor compare him to mortall men: for in ſo doing wee ſhall diminiſh his glory too much. But now Moſes addeth, that the children of Iſrael had corrupted themſelues towards him. Nowe if we ioyne theſe two ſayings together, to wit, That God is true, iuſt, and vpright, ſo as his workes are perfect, and alſo that the people of Iſrael were marde out of hande: thereby wee ſhall the better ſee howe deteſtable that people was for their vnthankfulneſſe. For Gods trueth and righteouſneſſe ſhine forth the brighter, in that they could not holde themſelues to him. Beholde, God choſe the children of Abraham. But let vs ſee what he was. To bee ſhort, had the children of Iſrael ſticked to him, and continued in the vnion which hee hadde appointed and called them vnto, it had beene to their higheſt welfare, yea and their whole happineſſe and glorie. But they turned from God and fell away from him; and therfore muſt it not needs be that they were mad, and caryed away with a diueliſh rage, accordingly as he ſaith Ier.2.13. in Ieremy, They haue forſaké me, euen me who am the fountaine of liuing water? Nowe then wee ſee better the meaning of Moſes, for hee ſhewed heretofore the goodneſſe, iuſtice, and righteouſneſſe of God, to the ende that the people ſhoulde haue the leſſe excuſe, and their ſin be knowen to be the more heynous, in that they coulde not abide that God ſhoulde holde them ſtill for his inheritance. But (as I haue ſaid alreadie) if we be ſeparated from God, we bee as it were in the bottome of the dungeon of all miſchiefe; whereas if we be knit vnto him, wee can want nothing. Seeing then that the caſe ſtandeth ſo with men when they cut themſelues off, yea & baniſh themſelues out of Gods kingdome after he hath gathered them to him, and ſhewed himſelf willing to take them to be of his houſholde: worthily bee they to be condemned for folk voide of wit and reaſon, and their vnthankfulnes is too too deteſtable.

And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſpeaketh ſo roughly, ſaying: They haue marred themſelues towards him: yea but they were ſuch as be no more his children. It is certaine that God had choſen Abrahams linage, with condition to bee father to them all. And therefore hee ſaieth by Ezec,16.20. his Prophet Ezechiel, that the children which came of them, were begotten vnto him. True it is that all men in generall are called Gods children: but yet that title belongeth alonely by priuiledge to thoſe that be of his church. Let vs marke well then, that in reſpect of adoption, the children of Iſrael ought to haue beene held and auowed for the children of God. But it is ſaide here, that they were not ſo: for they were growen out of kinde, accordingly alſo as God complaineth by his Prophet that their fathers dealt vnfaithfully with him, for they had begotten ſtrange children, yͤ is to ſay, they had ſo corrupted themſelues, yͤ there was no more ſoundneſſe in them, neither belonged they at all to the houſe of Abraham, but had ſo wrapped themſelues in the wickedneſſe of their forefathers, that God ſawe not any thing in them belonging vnto him. Nowe then we ſee, to what purpoſe Moſes ſaide that they had marred themſelues, meaning thoſe that are not Gods children, whom he blameth for their depriuing and diſappointing of themſelues through their own malice, of the ineſtimable benefite and honour which God had beſtowed vppon them. For what a thing is it that wee may bee ſo bolde as to call vppon God, as our Father, and reſort vnto him familiarly, and to be receiued as his children? And euen ſo was it with the lynage of Abraham: but they continued not in the poſſeſſion thereof. Who was to bee blamed for that? It was becauſe they yeelded not to God the honor due to their father, as he himſelfe complaineth by his Prophet Malachie, ſaying: If I be your father, Mal.1.6. where is the honour which yee owe vnto me? But all their ſeeking was to hold themſelues aloofe from God. Ye ſee then how they renounced that manner of kinred, which God had ſet among them; and therefore it is not without cauſe that Moſes vpbraideth them, that they were become ſtraungers. True it is that they vaunt themſelues to be Gods children: but by Eſa.53.7. what right? Only by ſtabliſhing yͤ fleſhly kinred. And we ſee alſo how the Prophet Ezechiel ſaith vnto them, What? Are you of the linage of Iſrael? Ezech.36.3. Hence yee harlots birds. Was not your father a Chananite, and your mother a Iebuſite? Nowe it is certaine that as touching the fleſhe, they came not of yͤ people of Chanaan, nor yet of the Iebuſites: but the Prophet doeth them to vnderſtande, that they had no more to doe with the holy linage, but had cut themſelues off from it as rotten members.

Nowe let vs nowadayes bee well aduiſed, and ſeeing that God hauing called vs to him, hath giuen vs the marke of his free beſtowed adoption, that is to ſay baptiſme, wherby he doth vs to wit that wee bee reckened for members of Ieſus Chriſt, and be as it were graffed into his bodie: let vs bee well aduiſed I ſay, that wee boaſt not thereof in vaine. For if wee deſpiſe God in liuing vndiſcreetely, and falſifie the faith that we haue plighted vnto him: let vs not thinke that he is ſo bounde vnto vs, but that hee may forſake vs, and that for al our boaſting of our ſelues to be his children, he will tell vs plainely (as wee heare in this place,) that wee belong not vnto him at all, but that wee bee vtter ſtraungers vnto him. For (as ſaieth Sainct Paul) all that come of Abrahams linage are not accounted his Rom.9.7.8. ſeede, that is to ſay, they bee not ſpirituall children. To be ſhort, will we haue God to auowe vs for his children? Let vs beware that wee walke in his feare and loue. At a worde, let vs take him for our father, and ſhewe it by our deedes: and then ſhall wee be acknowledged to bee his children. But if hee ſee vs growe out of kinde, hee muſt needes tell vs that ſeeing wee haue not kept our faith and troath towardes him, hee will haue no company with vs. For what a bondage were it, if God ſhoulde take vs for his children, and in the meane while be ſcorned & miſuſed among vs, ſo as his grace ſhoulde bee troden vnder foote, and his holy name defiled? Should God then mingle himſelfe with our filth and vncleaneſſe, when wee be ſo full of vnbeliefe? No: For then ſhould hee renounce his owne nature, which is vnpoſſible.

Now it is ſayd here, They marred themſelues towardes him. The worde that Moſes vſeth, betokeneth to deſtroy, corrupt, or marre. And ſome expounde it, that the children of Iſrael did not any harme vnto God in their turning away vnto wickedneſſe: as in very deede hee ſhoulde receiue no harme at all, though wee were all become ſtraungers vnto him. Can wee aduantage him any whit? What benefit ſhall hee receiue at our handes? When men turne away from God, hee is neither hindered nor furthered thereby; for hee continueth euermore at one ſtay, without increaſing or diminiſhing. This then was a reproofe which Moſes gaue to the whole people, as if he ſhould ſay, Go to, you haue followed your owne luſtes, you haue made no reckoning of your God, and what will be the ende of it? In deede hee will forſake you, but his ſo doing is not for any harme that hee ſhall haue receiued by it: What paſſeth hee for that? Shall not all turne to your owne confuſion? This leſſon deſerueth to bee wel marked: For it is good to humble men, by making them to vnderſtand that God may euer forbeare them well enough, and that his ſeeking of them is for their benefite and welfare, without regarde of himſelfe. But wee may take this ſaying of Moſes more playnely, that they had marred themſelues towardes him, becauſe their true ſoundnes had bin to haue liued in obedience towardes the Lawe. That is the meane wherby men may abide in their ſtate, I meane them whom God hath called to him. And I ſpeake not of the corrupted ſtate as it is in Adam, and as wee bring it from our mothers wombe: but of our ſtate when God hath repayred vs after his owne image. That is the meane for vs to perſiſt, namely by holding our ſelues to the pureneſſe of his worde, without ſwaruing to the right hand or to the left. But if we leaue the doctrine of God, by and by we be corrupted and mard. Therefore when men turne away from the pure and playne worde of God; it is an infecting and corrupting of themſelues, ſuch as alwayes leadeth them to death.

And hee expreſly addeth: in their ſpottes. This ſaying importeth a reproch lykewiſe; inſomuch as it might bee ſayd, that they had caſt themſelues wilfully into leawdneſſe, of purpoſe to ſhame themſelues. Now wee knowe how it is ſayd in Exodus, that God was (as yee would ſay) the honor of his people. For when wee be vnder the protection of our God, there is as a royall Crowne vppon our head: and it is a greater honor, than if wee had all the dignities in the worlde. And for the ſame cauſe alſo dooth Moſes ſay, that this people became ſhameleſſe in giuing themſelues to idolatrie and ſuperſtition, and diſcouered their owne filthyneſſe as a man that ſheweth his owne ſhame. So then, it may well bee taken that the people ouerthrew themſelues in their vncleanneſſe, becauſe they did caſt themſelues into reproche and infamie, by forſaking their God, yea euen that God of theirs whome onely they were bound to glorify. But by the way by this worde Spottes or vncleanes, Moſes meant all the wicked luſtes which cauſed the people to ouerſhoote themſelues. As if he ſhoulde ſay, Beholde, your God had ſhewed you the faſhiō and mean to make your ſelues cleane, that you might haue bin a holy people. For the Lawe ſerued to haue withdrawen you from all the defilementes of the world; ſo as by keeping of that rule, ye ſhould haue continued vnder his obedience. And what haue yee done now? Yee haue vnhallowed the Law of God, yea euen lyke as a Swine ſhould wallowe himſelfe in the myre and dyrt. The thing then which you haue gayned by forſaking your God, is that your luſtes haue ſo caryed you away, ẏ you haue gone and plunged your ſelues in doung, yea euen with the vtter renouncing of the honor which God had beſtowed vppon you.

Exod.32.28
Pſal.47 5.

Hee addeth That they were a frowarde and curſed generation. And it ſerueth to expreſſe yet better, that although God had preuented them with his grace, & giuen them occaſion to continew ſtill with him: yet they coulde not haue that ſtedfaſtneſſe. And what ſhould a man ſay, ſeeing them ſo vnconſtant, but that they were a frowarde generation? For if other men to whome God ſhewed not the lyke grace, were to be condemned iuſtly, if they ſhoulde haue dealt ſo wickedly: are not thoſe dubble guiltie which being adopted by God, and being ayded and ſuccoured ſo many wayes by him, had neuertheleſſe ſo farre ouerſhot themſelues, as to forſake him and diſclaime him vtterly? And therefore let vs marke that Moſes beholding the ouergreat vnthankfulneſſe of that people, did ſo aggrauate their offence in reſpect thereof, that hee vtterly diſgradeth them in this place. Nowe muſt we apply this to ourſelues. For according as God hath vttered the treaſures of his goodneſſe towardes vs, ſo much the more be wee bound and beholden vnto him. And if we falſify our faith, curſed are we: for our enormitie is the more accurſed, and our iniquitie is the greeuouſer both before the Angels, and before all mortal creatures. And therefore let vs ſo walke in the feare of our Lorde, ſith it hath pleaſed him to take vs for his inheritance, that wee take not vppon vs that title in vaine, leaſt wee become lyke vnto them which are falne away from him.

Heereuppon Moſes maketh an other complaint more ſharpe and bitter. Thou fooliſh people, (ſayth he) wilt thou needes requite the Lorde ſo? Here Moſes toucheth the vnthankfulnes of the people as it were with his finger, vnder the word Requite. For he falleth to vpbraiding them with the benefites which God had beſtowed vppon the children of Abraham. But as God is no nigard, ſo dooth hee neuer caſt vs in the teeth with the benefites which we haue receiued at his hand, vnleſſe hee be inforced thereto by our abuſing of them, for that hee ſeeth them vnhallowed and defiled by our leawdneſſe, accordingly alſo as Saint Iames ſpeaketh thereof, ſaying that God giueth all thinges bountifully, and that he is of ſuch liberalitie, that he neuer ceaſeth to giue, yea euen without vpbraiding. Hee is not lyke mortall men which haue a certaine repining in their giuing, or which grudge when a man commeth to them the ſecond time, ſaying, What? Ought not that which I haue done for you already to ſuffice you? God (ſaith hee) is none ſuch. For the more that wee be bound vnto him, the more is he willing to increace his gratious giftes dayly. Yea, but when hee ſeeth them misbeſtowed, & that we turne them cleane contrarie to his intent & purpoſe: then holdeth he his hand, thẽ reſtraineth he the good that he had done vnto vs, then blameth he vs, and putteth vs in minde of them to make vs aſhamed. And therefore let vs looke well vppon this text [where it is ſaid,] Thou fooliſh & witleſſe people, doeſt thou requite thy God thus? Accordingly alſo as hee ſayth by his Prophet Ieremie, er.2.5. My people what haue I done to you, ſaith hee? If thou haſt any thing to ſay againſt me, alledge it, and thou ſhalt finde that I haue not failed at any time, to giue thee cauſe to followe me and to cleaue vnto me. For I haue powred all good thinges vppon thee, and yet notwithſtanding thou haſt bin ſo beaſtly as to forſake me. Let vs mark I ſay that here Moſes ſpeaketh not of Gods common giftes, which hee beſtoweth vppon all men indifferently: but of the ſpeciall giftes, which the people of Iſraell had receiued aboue all other nations. If GOD liſt to vpbraid all mankinde in generall, he may wel doe it if he ſay no more but, Who is he that created and ſhaped you? Who is he that hath giuen you wit and reaſon? Who is hee that maketh the Sunne to ſhine vppon you, and the earth to yeelde you fruite? God therefore hath largely wherewith to vpbraide all men for the good which he hath done them, to ſhewe that they be too too blame worthie, if they doe not honor and ſerue him. For euen the very knowledge and light which God giueth vnto vs, dooth vs to vnderſtand, that we liue at his coſt, that wee be guided by his power, and that it is hee which dooth both clothe and feede vs: to the intent that his ſo dooing ſhould make vs to put our truſt in him, and to commit the whole ſtate of our lyfe vnto him, thereby to ſhewe that hee is our ſoueraine, and that we be vnder his gouernment; and therefore that wee be to be condemned whẽ we rebel againſt him. So then, God might well vpbraid all men in cõmon: but here hee ſpeaketh to thoſe whome he had adopted. And ẏ is the cauſe why he treateth peculiarly of the benefites which he had done to them as to his Church and peculiar children.

But before wee come to that point, let vs marke how Moſes in this place dooth iuſtly call them fooliſh and witleſſe people. True it is that all men may well bee condemned of folly lykewiſe, when they ſerue not God. For if wee haue any vnderſtanding, ought wee not of right to imploy it to the knowing of him who hath created and formed vs? Can men boaſt themſelues to bee wiſe, if they knowe not who hath ſet them in the worlde, or who mainteineth and preſerueth them? If on the other ſide they haue any reaſon, is it not a raging madneſſ, when they knowe not the principall point of their whole lyfe? Now foraſmuch as God came neere to the people of Iſraell, it muſt needes bee that they were bewitched, ſeeing they were not touched with ſo many and ſo euident recordes of Gods goodneſſe: I ſay it was more than beaſtly blockiſhneſſe. For as for the heathen and infidels, in deede they be vnexcuſable in that they knew not God, who ſheweth himſelfe to them in the whole creation of the world. But as for the Iewes, who had the Lawe, and had ſeene ſo many miracles, and finally had bin conuerſant with the Lorde, who came downe to them, (I ſpeake after the manner of the holy ſcripture, for wee know that God ſhifteth not from place to place, but is infinite and filleth all places,) and applyed himſelfe to their rudeneſſe, inſomuch as he verifyed the thing which he ſo often proteſteth, namely, I will dwell among you and abide with Exod.25.8. you: [they were much more vnexcuſable.] And therefore, when notwithſtanding all this, they turned away from him and forgat him, yea and ſpited him as though they had conſpired together to prouoke his vengeance by doing againſt him all the outrages that they coulde: muſt it not needes bee an horrible ignorance, yea and a very brutiſhneſſe, vtterly voyd of all witte and reaſon? Wherefore let vs marke, that our true wiſedome is to honor God. And in that re- Prou.28.26 ſpect is it ſayd, The fooliſh man dwelleth in his owne heart, and hath no lyfe in him. True it is that the heathen folke thought themſelues fine witted and of abilitie, when they deſpiſed God and thought to beguile him by their ſuttleties, as wee ſee theſe courtiers & all the braue laddes of the worlde doe nowadayes, and as wee ſee theſe fineheaded fellowes doe, which ſkoffe at all religion. To their owne ſeeming they bee men of great wiſedome, at leaſtwiſe when they haue digged ſo deepe, that (in their owne opinion) God cannot ſpy them out. Yet notwithſtanding, we may wel call them fooles, and not without cauſe dooth the holy Ghoſt terme them ſo. For why? Our very wiſedome Prou.1.7. and the chiefe point thereof, is to feare GOD, ſaith the holy ſcripture. And in deede, euen nature ought to teach vs that. For what is a man, when hee knowes not whether hee was ſhaped by haphazard, whether there bee a God that created him, or if he be as a blinde wretch, not knowing who is his God, that hee may worſhip him and make an oblation and ſacrifice of his lyfe vnto him? Muſt it not needes bee that a man is worſe than all the brute beaſtes in the worlde, when hee is become ſo brutiſhe, or rather falne into ſuch blockiſhneſſe? Yes verily. Then let vs beare in minde the wordes that Moſes vſeth here, and let vs wey them as they be worthie, that wee may apply our indeuour to the ſeruing of our God, knowing that the hauing of that poynt is our true wiſedome, and that all other thinges are but appendantes, and that by and by wee runne aſtray as ſoone as wee haue left the pure doctrine: Inſomuch that although the whole worlde commend vs, and clap their handes at vs, and wee ſeeme to bee excellent in all reſpectes: yet in very deede wee be witleſſe, and it were better for vs a thowſand times to be frantike, yea and ſtarke mad, than to haue wit and reaſon (to all lykelihood) after that ſort, and to be without any knowledge of our God.

But now let vs come to the contentes of the accuſation and proces that Moſes maketh here: Is not he thy father (ſaith he) which poſſeſſeth thee? Hath not hee made thee? Is it not he that hath ſhaped thee? Whereas he calleth God the father of the children of Abraham; I haue tolde you already that his calling of thẽ ſo, is but in reſpect of adoption, becauſe they had bin choſen to be Gods flocke & his Church. True it is that foraſmuch as we beare the image of God, wee bee his children euen by nature. But foraſmuch as wee be confounded in Adam, and Gods image was defaced in vs: we deſerue not that title, wee be vtterly bereft thereof. Therefore we muſt be faine to begin againe at this point, namely at his calling of vs back againe vnto him, ſo that although we were cut off from his houſhold, yet hee reacheth vs his hand, and of his own mercie taketh vs to be of his houſhold againe. This did hee to the linage of Abraham. For of his own freegoodnes Gen.17.7. he made him this promiſe, I wil be thy God and the God of thy ſeede after thee. Thus ye ſee by what title the Iewes might clayme God for their father. It was not for that they were better worthy of it than other men, it was not for that they had atteined ſuch nobilitie by their deſerts, or for that they had purchaſed it by their owne policie, or for that they had gotten it by any other way or mean [of their own:] but for yͤ God had called them to it, as we haue ſeene heretofore. And ſo much the leſſe excuſe had they, whẽ they turned away from him, and lifted vp their hornes againſt him. For it is an ineſtimable benefite for vs to haue God to our father. Becauſe that therein we be made fellowes with the Angels, who are lykewiſe called the childrẽ of God, in reſpect that they be members of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Seeing that God hath called vs to the fellowſhip of the Angels, to be their brethren & companions; what a leawdneſſe were it to make our ſelues vnderlinges to the diuels, & to ſubmit our ſelues vnto their bondes and tyranny? What a dealing were it that I being made a companiõ to the Angels of heauen, ſhould take the diuel for my Lord & king? What a choyce were that? Were I not worſe than mad? So then, let vs mark well, that when as Moſes dooth here call God the father of the Iſraelites, it is to inhaunce their vnthankfulneſſe the more, and to ſhewe their leawdneſſe the playnlyer. [As if he ſhould ſay,] Conſider your former ſtate. For God had aduaũced you wonderfully high, and you haue wilfully caſt your ſelues downe to the bottom of hell. After which maner he vpbraideth the king of Babi-
Eſa,14.12. lon, that he had bin as the morning ſtarre: and now behold (ſaith he) thou art in the bottom of Pſal.82,6. hell. True it is alſo that God calleth kinges his children, & lykewiſe all Princes and Magiſtrats. But if we compare them with the childrẽ of the Church, and with the flocke of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: ſurely Gods calling of vs to the knowing of him, and his marking of vs out to aly himſelfe vnto vs, dooth farre ſurmount all the kingdomes and Empyres of the world. And therefore it is certaine that when men turne away from their aliance with God; it is all one as if they forſooke heauen to goe to the bottome of hell. For (as I haue ſayd afore) they cannot away with the company of the Angels, but will needes goe to ſubmit themſelues in bondage to the diuels.

And according hereunto Moſes addeth, that God had poſſeſſed that people, as he termeth them his heritage. Whereby he doth vs to vnderſtand (as he will declare afterward) that God meant to haue held that people as his owne houſhold, ſuffering the reſt of the world to wander away & to become ſtraungers vnto him, whereas his wil was to haue the people of Iſraell as people familiar and well acquainted with himſelfe. According whereunto he addeth, It is he that hath created thee, it is he that hath ſhaped thee. And this creation is not the ſame that belongeth to all men and to all the childrẽ of Adam: but it is the ſame that is ſpoken of in the hundreth Pſalme. It is he that made vs, and not we our ſelues). And it is a Pſal.100.3. very common ſpeech in the holy ſcripture, to ſay that God hath created and faſhioned his Church. This is a people whom I my ſelfe haue created, and they ſhall ſet forth my prayſe ſaith Eſa,43.7. he, in the three and fourtith of Eſay. But it were needeleſſe to alledge many places, for all the ſcripture is full of them. And it is a notable point of doctrine, that God declareth vs to bee newe creatures, at ſuch time as he chooſeth vs to him- Eph.2.10. ſelfe. True it is that wee be greatly bound vnto him, for vouchſafing to ſet vs in this world. For although he had made vs but brute beaſtes, yet were it a great thing that we might bee counted the worke of his handes. But it was not his will that wee ſhoulde bee Aſſes or Horſes: it was his will that wee ſhoulde bee reaſonable creatures. This is ſo high a preheminence, that wee cannot commende it ſufficiently. Yet is that nothing, in compariſon of his calling of vs to the faith. Inſomuch that when hee telleth vs that hee will take vs to bee of his Church, hee dooth after a ſorte forget his former creating and ſayth: that he giueth vs a farre other thing than to haue bin mortal men, which is nothing in compariſon to bee of his Church. And this ſerueth to humble vs, to the intent we ſhould not thinke our ſelues to bee come to the faith by our owne power, but acknowledge the ſame to be the gift of God, leaſt we ſhold vſurpe the title of the creator, by imagining our ſelues to haue gotten faith by our owne abilitie, as the Papiſtes doe, who ſay that although they cannot doe any thing but through the grace of God, yet doe they prepare and diſpoſe themſelues thereto aforehand. Againe, they haue a kinde of concurrence, or running together, wherethrough they be as companions with GOD, ſo as they worke together with his grace, or elſe doe ſo aunſwere thereunto, that Gods grace dooth nothing but by halues. Loe at what poynt the Papiſtes are: and by that reaſon they ſhould be halfe their owne creators. For I haue declared already, (and the very truth is ſo), that it is a farre greater thing for vs to be counted of the Church, than of the common kinde of men: for it is a farre nobler creation to bee the children of God, than to be the children of Adam. Yet notwithſtanding, the Papiſtes doe chalenge the one halfe thereof to themſelues, ſaying that they diſpoſe themſelues to it by their owne freewill, and that they deſerue grace at Gods hand, and alſo that they worke together therewithall. By which reaſon, the one halfe of this creation, which is the excellenteſt, ſhall belong to men. And what a treacherie were that? Therefore when wee heare that it is God that made vs, Pſal.100.3. and not wee our ſelues; let vs not make account of our ſelues nor be puffed vp with the winde of preſumption, which ſerueth to no purpoſe but to make vs to ſwell. Let vs vnderſtand then that we haue nothing of our owne, but that all is Gods, in that it hath pleaſed him to call vs to his word, it is not we. A man might thinke it ſtraunge why it ſhould be ſayd, it is not wee that haue created our ſelues: for there is none of vs al but knoweth it and confeſſeth it. But if we haue an eye to the fond and diueliſh ouerweening wherewith men are beſotted: we ſhall ſee that this kinde of ſpeach is not ſuperfluous, but that the holy ghoſt meant to exclude all ſuch fooliſh imaginations, to the intent that men ſhould not reſerue aught to themſelues, but yeeld fully vnto God, that which is belonging vnto him. And that is the cauſe alſo why S. Paul ſaith in the ſecond Chap- Eph.2.10. ter to the Epheſians; We be his workemanſhip, for he hath created vs to good workes, namely which he hath prepared for vs before wee were borne. If men think themſelues to be ÿ founders of their owne good woorkes, yea or euen of their good thoughtes; they deceiue themſelues ſore. God had prepared all thoſe thinges aforehand in his treaſures ſaith S. Paul, and now hee hath put them into vs. And why? For we be his workmanſhip, it hath pleaſed him to faſhion vs to another vſe. Thus yee ſee how men are beaten downe, and how God ſheweth that hee himſelfe alone is to haue the honor of the diſpoſing and preparing of them. And ſo in this text whereas it is ſayd, It is hee that hath created thee and faſhioned thee: it is becauſe it is a more excellent gift, that is to wit, that God printeth his marke vppon vs, as who ſhoulde ſay that wee ſhoulde bee reckoned for his children, ſo as hee gathereth vs vnto him, and maketh vs in effect new creatures; by reaſon whereof our ſinne becommeth the more heynous, if wee deface the ſame againe, and fall to wallowing of our ſelues againe in the filth and vncleanneſſe of this worlde, as who woulde ſay it greeued vs that God had not made vs brute beaſtes at ſuch time as he tooke vs to be his children. And therefore we haue to marke, what the words import which Moſes vſeth here: For his meaning is to ſhewe, that this people was the leawdeſt and moſt deteſtable that coulde be imagined, becauſe they had forgotten ſuch gratious benefites as coulde not be ſufficiently commended. And looke what is ſayd of the Iewes, agreeth fitly to vs lykewiſe, namely that we muſt not forget Gods graces. We in theſe dayes haue receiued no leſſe than the fathers that were vnder the Lawe. For wee haue the very pledge it ſelfe, which the Iewes had not: that is to wit, our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. He is the onely ſonne of God, and is come down to vs from the boſome of the father. Hee hath yeelded vs recorde of our adoption: the gate of paradiſe is now opened vnto vs: wee may now not onely call vppon God as our father, but alſo call vnto him with full mouth, ſo as wee may cry Abba father, for that is the worde which Saint Rom.8.15. Paul vſeth expreſly. Seeing then that God hath diſcouered himſelfe more fully to vs than to the fathers that liued vnder the Lawe: Surely our fault will be the more grieuous and leſſe excuſable, if we yeelde ſo poore a recompence as is ſpoken of here. Againe, hath he not purchaſed vs to himſelf? If he poſſeſſed the people of olde time becauſe he brought them out of the land of Egypt: let vs ſee how much more he hath done now for vs than for them. True it is that Gods redeeming of the Iewes was by the power of the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: but that thing was not yet declared vnto them, they had but the figures and ſhadowes thereof. But as now we ſee that the bloud of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath bin ſhed for our redemption, and for the purchaſe of our ſaluation. And ſhall we now go trample vnder our feet the holy bloud, wherby the couenant of the ſpirituall kinred which God hath entered into with vs, is ratifyed and confirmed? And as touching the Law, how doth the Apoſtle ſpeake of it in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes? As many (ſaith he) as violated the taber- Hebr.2.2. nacle that was made by Moſes, were not ſpared, their fault was vnpardonable: and what ſhal become of vs nowadayes? Is not our leawdneſſe much more ſhamefull? Therefore let vs beare now in minde that we be Gods precious poſſeſſion, to the intent we giue not our ſelues ouer to Satan. Moreouer let vs vnderſtand, after what manner he hath created and faſhioned vs, and let vs not refuſe that grace: but ſith he hath voutſafed to reforme vs, let vs not ſteine our ſelues with reproche, by going about to deface the image & workmanſhip which he hath put into vs.

Howbeit foraſmuch as men doe by al meanes poſſible pleade ignorance, to the intent they might not come to account before God, nor be conuicted or touched for their euill doings: Moſes addeth; Aske of thy fathers, and they will teach thee what thou haſt bin: Inquire of all thine Elders, and call to minde the time that is paſt. Here Moſes meant to ſpurre forward the ſlothfulneſſe of the Iewes, becauſe they did wilfully bury the grace of God, and tooke pleaſure in the not minding of them. Now although he ſpake this to the Iewes: yet notwithſtanding, foraſmuch as the ſame vice is common & ordinarie through the whole world, and that we be too much atteinted therewith: it ſtādeth vs in hand to thinke, that the holy ghoſt directeth the lyke accuſation to vs nowadayes. For after what ſorte doe we call Gods benefites to our mind? Do we bethink vs of them euening & morning? Nay there is none of vs all which ſhutteth not his eyes againſt them, as much as he can. To be ſhort, nothing grieueth vs worſe, nothing troubleth vs more, thã to be bound vnto God. And yet is that the thing wherein all our happineſſe conſiſteth. For it is not with him as with mortall men. If we be ouermuch bound to a creature, we wil be as it were aſhamed of it. I am ſo much in ſuch a mans debt ſay wee, yͭ I wot not how to requite it. But if we conſider how liberal God hath bin to vs, it is a meane to confirme vs ſtill the more in faith, & to make vs the bolder to repayre ſtil vnto him: for he is the fountain that neuer dryeth. Thinke we that God can euer bee diminiſhed in his grace, or in any goodnes? Nay. And yet notwithſtanding, our naughtineſſe is ſuch, yͭ when God hath beſtowed neuer ſo great graces and benefites vpon vs, inſomuch that we be as good as ouerwhelmed with thẽ; al our ſeeking is to put them out of remembrance: let vs marke wel therefore, that Moſes hath not without cauſe blamed the Iewes, and that we nowadayes haue need to bee blamed after the ſame manner, and to be pricked foreward lyke Oxen and Aſſes.

As concerning the Iewes, he ſayd, Bethinke thee of the olde time, call to minde the dayes that are paſt. As if he ſhould ſay, How now ye wretches? Muſt God giue you wit and memorie, and yet you not conſider what he hath done heretofore? The wit of an Oxe or of an Aſſe extendeth no further than to the thinges yͭ are preſent: but men haue reaſon to conſider of thinges paſt and of thinges to come. For wee haue a certaine foreſight of thinges to come: we make compariſon of things paſt, experiẽce ſheweth vs how to diſpoſe things in our ſelues. Now if we apply not all this to conſider how God hath euer gouerned vs, and how he hath ſhewed himſelfe a father towardes vs, ſhall we not be guiltie of peruerting the whole order of nature? So then, not without cauſe doth Moſes ſay: Bethinke thee of the old time. And afterward he ſayth: Thou haſt witneſſes enowe: Inquire of thy Fathers, inquire of al thoſe that haue liued afore thee, & they wil tel thee newes; they wil ſhew thee, that at ſuch time as thy God diuided the nations of the world, and made yͤ partitions betweene people & people, hee had a ſpecial regard of thee, & ſhewed playnly yͭ his adopting & chooſing of thee was not in vaine. For the mark yͭ he amed at, was to dedicate thee to his ſeruice, & to reſerue thee for his owne inheritance. Now thẽ, is it not a peruerting & confounding of yͤ order which he had ſet down to be inuiolable, when thou turneſt ſo away from him? Yes: for hee had ſhouled thee out from al yͤ heathẽ, & choſen thee as it were for his own portion. That is the thing in effect which Moſes meant to ſay vnto yͤ Iewes.

And this text ought to teach vs, firſt to bee mindefull of the benefites which he hath done to our fathers, although we haue not ſeene them in our owne time. For that is a thing whereon we muſt ſet our mindes. Hath God giuen vs wit and reaſon but onely to conceiue thinges preſent & which we ſee with our eyes? Nay, our vnderſtãding muſt proceede further, yea and all muſt be referred to the honor & glory of him which hath giuen vs that vnderſtanding. And it ſtandeth vs ſo much yͤ more in hand to marke well this doctrine, becauſe we ſee men fickleheaded & giuen to all vanitie & fond ſpeculations. True it is that we would be loth to be as bruite beaſtes, and we would faine be as men of vnderſtanding: there is none of vs all, but he laboureth for it. And yet for all yͭ, what is our vnderſtanding, but an inquiring of the thinges that paſſe our capacitie? Men neuer ceaſe to be inquiſitiue of the thinges that are farre aboue their vnderſtanding, yea euen of thinges needeleſſe & vnprofitable: inſomuch as they will needes knowe what God did afore hee made the world, & ſuch other thinges. Againe, as touching ſtories, if a man occupy himſelf in thẽ, it is but to range abroad here and there, without conſideration of Gods doinges: inſomuch that God is quite forgotten, & thinges are not referred to their right and due vſe. Wee ſee then how men runne rouing, ſo as they can babble well enough of thinges paſt, that ye would take them to haue good knowledge of them. But it is but in thinges vnprofitable, & in the meane while God is let alone, & they haue no regard at all of thẽſelues. But contrariwiſe it is ſhewed here, that when we talke of matters of olde time, and enquire of thinges that haue bin done long agoe, we muſt keepe this order of proceeding, that we haue an eye vnto God, how he hath gouerned yͤ world, and alwayes ſhewed himſelfe righteous, faithfull, vpright, good, and pitifull. Firſt therefore let vs conſider that. And afterwarde let vs come vnto our ſelues: and ſith we ſee that hee hath ſeparated vs from the reſt of the worlde, & taken vs for his children without any worthines of ours, preferring vs before thoſe which were nothing inferiour to vs: (for in deede we be no better than the reſt of Adams children:) ſeeing (ſay I) ſuch goodneſſe of God towardes vs, we ought to apply our indeuour to know the ſame wel: and by inquiring of former yeres: we ought to behold Gods working, to the end he may be glorifyed at our handes, for that we haue found by experience, that we be ſo many wayes bound vnto him; and that the infinite goodneſſe which he hath ſhewed towardes vs, may prouoke and inflame vs to yeelde ous ſelues wholy to the ſeruing of him. If wee ſo doe, wee ſhall not bee blamed for the vnthankfulneſſe, for which the people of Iſraell are blamed here by Moſes. For conſequently all thoſe whome God hath called vnto him, ſhall be compriſed vnder the ſame condemnation, vnleſſe they can ſkil to benefite themſelues the better by his gratious dealinges.

But nowe let vs caſt our ſelues downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs to feele them more and more, ſo as wee may not onely condemne our ſelues with our mouthes, but alſo vtterly miſlyke of them, and turne againe vnto him with a true meaning minde, to obey him and to ſubmit our ſelues to his good wil: & that therwithal he may ſo worke in vs by his holy ſpirit, that ſith he hath vouchſafed to begin to make vs newe creatures, hee do alſo reforme vs to the full, vntill wee be throughly clothed with his righteouſneſſe, and that all our imperfections and vanities be mortified: That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people, &c.

The CLXXX. Sermon which is the third vppon the two and thirtith Chapter.

8 When the higheſt diuided to the Nations their inheritaunces: and when hee ſeparated the Sonnes of men: then did he ſet the boundes of Nations according to the number of the children of Iſrael.

9 For the Lordes portion is his owne people, and Iacob is the meteline of his inheritaunce.

10 He founde him in a deſert Lande, and in a horrible wilderneſſe where nothing was to bee heard but roaring. He led him vp and downe, and gaue him vnderſtanding, and kept him as the apple of his eye.

11 As the Eagle ſtirreth vp her neaſt, houering ouer her young ones, and ſpreading out her wings, taketh them vp, and caryeth them vpon her wings:

WE haue ſeene already heeretofore, howe the intent of Moſes in this text is, to ſhewe the children of Iſraell how greatly they bee bound vnto God, in that he loued them, and choſe them out from among all the nations of the earth, and adopted them to bee his children without any deſert of theirs, or without hauing any reſpect of their worthineſſe, only of his own meere mercie. Now hereuppon hee ſayth, That when God diſtributed the world into partes, aſſigning all Nations their Countries: hee helde ſtill this Lande for the heritage of his people. True it is that notwithſtanding this, he did as it were lend the land of Chanaan for a time to the olde inhabiters thereof, that is, to the Hethites, the Heuites, the Phereſites, the Chananites, and ſuch like. His aſſigning of that Countrie to them was not for euer, for hee reſerued it till the time that hee ſhould fetch his owne people out of Egypt. And wee muſt marke, that at that time Abraham was not yet borne, neither was there then any people of Iſrael. Howe can it then bee, that God ſhould bee prouoked by any deſert, ſeeing hee tooke the thing which as then had not any being? Yea and let vs marke alwaies, that the people which was to iſſue out of the ſtocke of Abraham, had beene no better than other nations, if God had not wrought in them. Therefore it is to bee concluded that God vttered an infinite goodneſſe towardes that people, and that his will was that they ſhould bee a looking-glaſſe of his grace, to the whole worlde. And where as Moſes ſaith, that God diuided landes to Nations, according to the number of the children of Iſrael: he maketh here a compariſon betweene the ofſpring of Abraham, and the ſeuen nations that dwelled in the Countrie, which they entred into and poſſeſſed afterwarde. Surely they were a great multitude of people, and ſeuen ſundry nations were of them: and yet our Lord preferred one lynage before them al. True it is that hee encreaſed the ſame lynage beyond the opinion of men, according to this promiſe which hee had made to his ſeruaunt Abraham, Number the ſtarres of the Skie and ſand of the Gen.15.5. Sea if thou canſt: for ſo ſhall thy ſeede be in multitude. But who wold haue thought that for one houſholds ſake, there needed ſo great a lande as that ſeuen nations ſhould haue bin driuen out of their Country, to giue place to them that were deſcended of one barren man, as the prophet Eſay telleth them, ſaying: Go ſeeke your originall, Eſa. 51.1,2. get ye to the ſtone that ye were heawen out of; for Abraham was alone, and Sara was a barren woman to her vttermoſt olde age: and yet hath God made you to iſſue out of theſe two ſtones as it were by myracle, and not by the common order of nature: knowe yee therefore that he hath wrought ſo mightily toward you, that of duetie you ought to be the more prouoked to ſerue and honour him, that his glorie may ſhine foorth in you. Yee ſee then that the meaning of Moſes in ſaying, according to the number of the children of Iſrael, is that foraſmuch as God had foreſeene that hee would adopt the ofſpring of Abraham; hee gaue the Lande of Chanaan, not to one people alone, but to ſeuen Nations in number.

And here we haue to note in the firſt place, that inaſmuch as the office of diſtributing the worlde into portions is attributed vnto God: wee ſoiourne as it were by his appointment, ſo long as wee dwell here belowe. True it is that the children of Iſrael had a peculiar ſtate: but here Moſes ſpeaketh of the whole worlde, accordingly alſo as the ſame is treated of in the Pſal.107.35 hundreth pſalme and in other places. And that ought to make vs to liue in the feare of God, whereſoeuer wee bee. For why? We be found at his coſt, & our dwelling vpon earth is not by haphazard, but where it pleaſeth him to maintaine vs. Yee ſee then how it is a profitable leſſon to teach men to liue as in the preſence of God, becauſe it is hee that hath appointed them to dwell there. But by the way we be warned alſo, not to trouble the boundes of places or the common order, but to holde our ſelues euery man to his owne, without incroching vppon other men. For why? God hath ordayned bounds in the world from the beginning. This being ſo; let euery man now abide in his owne poſſeſſion; and let not men trouble nor moleſt one another. Yet notwithſtanding we ſee how malicious men are. For ambition and couetouſneſſe haue cauſed all the boundes to bee broken which GOD had ſet in the worlde. Nembrod began firſt with Gen.10.10. ſetting vp the kingdome of Babylon: and afterward other men became deſirous to win one frõ another. Yee ſee then how men haue peruerted the order that God had ſet in the world lyke vnſatiable gulfes. But howſoeuer men haue delt, yet hath God alwayes ſo bridled them, that for all their greedineſſe they could neuer ſet ſuch confuſion, but that ſome certaine order hath remained ſtill. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, let vs marke wel, that Gods creating of men was not to caſt them here at aladuenture: but that his ordeyning and ſetling of the earth was to the ende we ſhoulde dwell therein. And truely wee knowe that the earth was couered with water, & naturally the ſea ought to be aboue the earth, ſo as al of it ſhould be ouerflowen. It is of ſpeciall vertue that wee haue any dry place whereon to ſet our foote. And who is the dooer of that? As ſoone as God commaunded the waters to Gen.1.20. withdrawe, by and by there was place for men to dwellon. Seeing then that we liue here, and that the earth dooth feed & ſuſteine vs, let vs aſſure Pſal.33.7. our ſelues that therein God ſheweth his pitie towardes vs. And therefore let vs ſerue him with the earneſter minde, & euery of vs be contented with that which he hath, without intermedling within other mens boundes. Let vs not through couetouſneſſe rake to vs the things yͭ belong not to vs: but let euery man hold himſelfe as it were locked vp, becauſe we offend God and not men when we ſeeke to incroch vppon that which hee hath not giuen vs.

Now then, ſeeing that Moſes telleth the people of Iſrael that they be bound vnto God for his allotting of their inheritance vnto them in the land of Chanaan, yea euen before Abraham was borne: there is much more reaſon that we ſhould magnify the ineſtimable goodneſſe of our God, in conſideration of the heauenly heritage which he hath promiſed and prepared for vs. For his preparing of a place for vs in heauen, was not at that time when he parted the worlde into portions: but euen before the world was created, as Epheſ.1.4. ſayth S. Paul. For before there was either heauẽ or earth, God hauing adopted vs to be his children, prepared a dwelling place for vs aboue. Sith it is ſo, we conclude that he had no reſpect of any worthines in our perſons, ne looked that wee ſhould merit or deſerue aught at his hand: but onely vſed his owne free goodneſſe. Yee ſee then how we muſt be caryed vp aboue the world as oft as we thinke vppon our ſaluation.

And the reaſon hereof is added forthwith by Moſes, namely, Becauſe they were the people of God, and his portion, and Iacob is the meteline of his inheritaunce. Thẽ if it be demaunded, why God in making partition of the world, preferred the children of Iſrael before all the reſidue, & why that one houſe was ſo deere vnto him, that he vouchſafed to appoint them a countrie certaine: If it be demaunded what moued God thereto: Moſes anſwereth, it was becauſe Iacob was his portion and the meteline of his heritage. As if he ſhould ſay, Ye poore ſoules, your God hath vſed ſuch gratious goodneſſe towardes you, as yee cannot ſay there was any thing on your owne behalf, or that ye had any vertue in you, or (at a word) that ye can dim Gods glory any whit by your owne deſerts. There was no ſuch thing; for all proceeded of his owne free adoption. What was the cauſe that the linage of Abraham became Gods inheritance, & as it were his portion? For by the worde Meteline here is betokened a part or portion. For in thoſe dayes men meaſured Landes by Metelines, & that is the cauſe why the word Cord, or Meteline is ſo often ſpoken of in the holy ſcripture, when mention is made of diſtributing or diuiding into portions. Now then if it be demaunded why yͤ people of Iſraell belonged more to God than all yͤ reſt of the worlde; or what affinitie or acquaintance there was more betweene him and them: It cannot be ſayd that they had purchaſed or procured more to themſelues, or that they were nobler than all other men, as we haue ſeene heretofore. What canſt thou ſay (ſayth Moſes in the ſeuenth chapter?) Hath God Deut.7.7. choſen thee, becauſe thou waſt a nobler, a worthier, or a more renowmed Nation than any other? No: but for the loue which he bare to thee. Therefore lyke as in that place Moſes vſed the word Loue, to ſhewe that Gods owne free goodneſſe moued him to take Abrahã & his ofſpring: ſo in this place he ſaith, Know ye that your God hath choſen you, & that it is his will to take you for his heritage. And ſo ye ſee in effect, yͭ to take away all pride and preſumption from the children of Iſraell, & to ſhew them that they could chalenge nothing to thẽſelues, Moſes bringeth them backe to the welſpring which the whole ſcripture ſheweth vs, to wit, that all the benefits and gratious giftes which God beſtoweth vpon vs, and which wee receiue at his hand, proceede of his owne meere goodneſſe, without being bounde thereto, or without inclyning thereto in reſpect of any deſerte of ours, but onely becauſe hee loueth vs, yea euen without any cauſe why that wee can alledge: for we bring nothing at all vnto him. That is the thing which we haue to beare in minde.

And if this doctrine was true as in reſpect of yͤ Land of Chanaan: what ſhal it be in reſpect of our comming to the immortalitie of the heauẽly glory? The people of Iſraell could not obteine the land of Chanaan by their owne deſeruing, but GOD was faine to loue them euen of his owne meere mercie, wherethrough hee did thẽ all the good that they receiued at his hand. Yet notwithſtanding, that land was nothing in compariſon of the immortall life. Whereas it is ſayd that wee bee reformed after the image of God, to bee partakers of his glory, and that wee bee his heires, and companions to the Angels,yea and to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: it is a far other thing than ỹ land of Canaan and the ſuſtenance that is giuẽ vs for this tranſitorie life. And therefore let vs vnderſtand that men are worſe than blinde, yea and more than mad,whẽ they thinke to attaine to ſo great a good thing by their owne deſertes. Yet notwithſtanding, we ſee how this diueliſh opinion hath reigned and had full ſcope in the world,and how the Papiſtes are ſtill at the ſame poynt at this day, that when ỹ inheriting of paradice is talked of,[they ſay]that men muſt purchace it by their own merites. And in the meane while they conſider not how the immortal lyfe is named an inheritance, becauſe it dependeth vpon Gods free adoption. Eph.1.14. And whereon is Gods free adoption grounded, but vppon his chooſing of vs before ỹ world was made; I ſay vpon his chooſing of vs, euen of vs which were forlorn as well as ỹ reſt of the whole world?For we know we be all curſed in Adam.Again,what is ỹ cauſe ỹ he chooſeth vs, who were lyke to thoſe whō hee reiecteth?What is ỹ cauſe ỹ he proceedeth yet ſtil in drawing vs vnto him? Shall wee finde the cauſe thereof in our ſelues? Alas no: but wee muſt diſcharge our ſelues of all ouerweening, and repaire to the foreſayd fountaine of his freegoodneſſe. And therefore let vs beare well in minde, that here wee bee warned, that we muſt not ſeeke the cauſe of our ſaluation in our ſelues nor of any of all the benefits which God beſtoweth vppon vs, no not euen in reſpect of this preſent lyfe: and therefore that wee can much leſſe ſeeke the cauſe or ground of the promiſed immortalitie, in our ſelues or in our owne deſerts, but ỹ we muſt magnify his meere goodneſſe in that behalfe. And ſeeing that God hath choſen vs to be his heritage, we muſt ſuffer him to poſſeſſe vs. But there is a greater reaſon in reſpect of vs than of the Iſraelites;becauſe he hath not onely reſerued vs in creating the world, but alſo purchaſed vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.Doth not this price which God hath beſtowed for our ſaluation to ỹ intent we ſhould bee his heritage, deſerue to haue vs wholy at his deuotion, and ỹ euery man ſhould ſo indeuour to dedicate himſelfe to his ſeruice,as that he might haue the dominion ouer vs?So then,let vs not play the traitors in bereauing God of the thing which he reteined to himſelf when he voutſafed to haue vs to be of his Church.Alſo let this moue vs that he will not poſſeſſe vs,but vppon condition that as we inioy him,ſo hee may inioy vs: and what an exchange is that? Conſider what we be. We be dung,filth,and vtter curſedneſſe, and yet ye ſee how God accepteth vs for his heritage, and for his part would that we ſhould poſſeſſe him. Sith it is ſo,what an vnthankfulneſſe is it, if we continue not in obeying him, that he may poſſeſſe vs?

And let vs mark further, that there is not any thing which ought to moue vs more to the ſeruing of God, than to come to the knowledge of our free election, ſo as we know that his beginning to doe vs good is not now preſently,but before we were borne, before the creating of the world,inſomuch that he tooke vs to him and adopted vs aforehand euen before that time. So much the more ought we to abhorre theſe raſcals which would haue the doctrine of Election aboliſhed: for by that meane they ouerthrowe ỹ whole groundwork of our ſaluation,as though they ſhould ſtop the ſpring from whẽce the water floweth,ſo as we may no more drink thereof. For how ſhall we know that God hath called vs to ſaluation, but for that he hath loued vs without any deſert of ours, and taken vs aforehand to himſelf,euen before ỹ world was created? Alſo how ſhall we know our ſelues to be beholden to him for all thinges, and that he is not bound vnto vs; vnleſſe we come to this poynt, that we were lyke to thoſe which peariſh,ſo as there was no difference at all betweene them and vs, ſauing ỹ hee hath marked vs out to be his, without finding any cauſe in vs why,that we were dearer to him than other men, and that he made more account of our welfare, all which thinges are grounded vppon his euerlaſting vnchaungeable purpoſe and will, the reaſon whereof is vncomprehenſible to the worlde? They therefore which go about to aboliſh this doctrine,are deadly enemies to God his glory,and to our ſaluatiō, and would (as much as in them lyeth) deface al religion.That(ſay I)is the thing which we haue to remember vpon this Text.

Hereupō Moſes ſheweth yet better, how God hath vttered his goodneſſe towards the people of Iſrael. He found him(ſaith he)in a deſert land,in a deſolate place,in a dredful wildernes,where was nothing but roring of wild beaſts.There he led him vp & down, there he nurtured him,there he kept him as the apple of his eye. If the people of Iſrael had not ſerued as ſlaues in Egypt, and trauelled through the wilderneſſe: Gods goodneſſe had not bin ſo well knowen and ſo glorious as it is at this day. For why?Whereas God tooke Abraham out of his countrie,and brought him into a ſtrange Land, and afterward gaue him a ſonne when hee was vppon the point of a hundred yeres old, & that of that one child there iſſued ſuch an infinit multitude:it might well haue bin ſayd that God had ſhewed fauor to that linage: but yet ſo blind are men in conſidering Gods goodneſſe towardes thẽ,that it would neuer haue bin perceiued how God vttered his bountifulneſſe towards ỹ ſtock, vnleſſe Iacob had gone downe into Egypt, and that the people of Iſraell had bin kept in cruell bondage, as Moſes reporteth in Exodus. Exod.1. But when they had bin held in ſuch ſlauery that the king of Egypt had commaunded all their menchildren to be ſlayne:then were they come to ỹ vttermoſt pinch. And then did God fetch them away,and make thẽ to paſſe the red ſea, hauing wrought a great number of miracles before. By meanes whereof they were after a ſort wakened, that they might the better bethinke them howe dearely God loued them & how much he ſet by them, ſeeing he vouchſafed to yeeld ſo great & ſo ſtately recordes of the goodneſſe and fauour which he bare towardes them. Moſes therefore following the ſame reaſon,ſaith here,Looke backe to your firſt originall from whence you be iſſued. Did God find you in a fat and fertile coūtrie,as though he ſhould ſay,I wil maintaine you in the ſtate wherein yee be: for it is not enough for men to haue a conuenient and eaſie dwelling place, vnleſſe I preſerue them and hold thē vnder my protectiō. You therefore ſhal be mine, and I will bee your ſafegarde. Did God finde his people in ſuch ſtate? No. And therefore Moſes ſayeth to the children of Iſrael, Conſider from whence ye came,& from whence your God hath fetched you. Were ye not in a wilderneſſe ſayeth hee? Yes; that then is the place from whence hee hath fetched you: and ſo much the more ought you to conſider the fauour which he hath ſhewed you, that yee may perceiue howe much you be bounde vnto him. Now then, ye were in a wilderneſſe: and after what ſorte? There was not one graine of Corne to feede you withall, there was not one drop of water for you to drinke, he was faine to make water to iſſue out of a dry rocke miraculouſly for you, hee made Manna to fall from heauen. Ye were in a place where yee coulde not build you one houſe, ye were there among the wild beaſts, ſo as ye muſt needes haue periſhed, and therfore a man needes not to vſe long diſcourſes to ſhew how God was bountiful vnto you. For ye were as good as in a graue by the ſpace of forty yeeres, and yet God kept you aliue after a ſtraunge faſhion & vnknowen to men. Ye were deſtitute of foode and drinke, & God furniſhed your turne. Your ſhooes, your hoſe, & your garments did not rotte all that while. Now then, ſeeing that God maintained you after that manner againſt the commō order of nature; did he not ſhew thereby what care he had of you, and what loue he bare vnto you? So then, looke that ye neuer forget ſo great benefites, ſpecially being ſo many and ſo huge in number as he hath done for you.

Nowe we ſee the meaning of Moſes in that hee ſayeth that God founde his people in a wilderneſſe, a dry and barraine ground, a deſolate place. And the ſelfeſame thing meaneth Ezechiell in his ſixteenth chapter, where he vpbraideth Ezech.16.3 the people of Iſraell with the vnthankfullneſſe which they had ſhewed. What are yee, ſayeth hee? For I tooke you comming out of the land of Egypt, as a Child borne out of time. The Child ỹ ſo commeth out of his mothers wombe, is al to berayed, and he ſhould periſh in his own filth, if he were not rid of his ſpottes and blemiſhes, and waſhed from the vncleannes which he bringeth with him. To be ſhort, he rehearſeth all the thinges that are wont to bee doone to a child that is newely borne. Againe he vſeth another ſimilitude which is, as if a man ſhould finde a wretched harlot that were ſtarke rotten and readie to fall in peeces by reaſon of her infections: Ezech.16.8. And I haue waſhed you & made you cleane, yea and I haue taken you in mariage: and doe ye not knowe that to bee a benefite? Thus we ſee that Ezechiell hath followed the ſame order which Moſes did in abaſing the Children of Iſraell, by bringing them backe to their firſt ſtate, to the intent they ſhoulde learne that Gods aduancing of them after that faſhion beyond al expectation of man, was to the end his grace might be the better knowen in them.

And now to apply this doctrine to our owne inſtruction, let vs conſider what wee be before God chooſeth vs. It is ſayd that hee found his people in a wilderneſſe. True it is that he had adopted them before that time, inſomuch that the promiſes were made vnto them before they went downe into Egypt. But it is enough that the people were there in ſo miſerable ſtate, to the end they ſhoulde perceiue that God had at that time giuen them as it were a ſecond byrth, and ſo dooth the ſcripture cuſtomably terme it. But now let vs come to our ſelues. In what caſe dooth God finde vs? In what ſtate dooth hee take vs? We bee the children of Adam, that is to ſay, curſed, and heires of euerlaſting death. There is nothing in vs but ſin, there is nothing in vs but corruption, God muſt needes reiect vs and hate vs, he muſt needes become our deadly enemy, and vtter his vengeance vppon vs. To bee ſhort, wee be in the dungeons of hell, vntill God haue reached vs his hand, and had pitie vppon vs. It is not for any man to exempt him ſelfe from this confuſion: for from the greateſt to the leaſt of vs, we be all plunged in it. Now let vs boaſt of the thinges which we haue of nature. For God findeth vs voyd of all goodneſſe, we haue not one droppe of vertue, wiſedome, or righteouſneſſe: but contrariwiſe wee be full of corruption, wee bee ready to burſt for filth and vncleaneſſe, wee bee bondſlaues to Satan, vnder the tyranny and bondage of death, and at a worde we bee plunged in hell. At that poynt are wee when God chooſeth vs, that is the poynt whereat hee beginneth our ſaluation. Now ſith it is ſo, let vs learne firſt of all to rid our ſelues of all pride. And although Satan beguile moſt men, making them to beleeue that they can deſerue at Gods hand: yet let vs aſſure our ſelues that we bee beholden to Gods free goodneſſe for all thinges. Marke that for one point. To the intent that all mouthes may bee ſtopped before GOD (as ſaieth Rom.3.19. Saint Paul) let vs ſo humble our ſelues, as that wee make not any mo allegations, as who would ſay, we haue done this or that: but let vs preach the mercie of our God, and let vs declare that he is the beginning, the ende and the increaſe of our welfare, ſo as wee drawe out of that fountaine wherewith to ſatisfy vs, without ſeeking of any peece of our ſaluation either in our ſelues or in any creature. Otherwiſe wee make our ſelues to beleeue wonders, and they ſhall ſerue to feed vs withall: but in deed it will be but deadly poyſon to make vs to burſt.

And now let vs marke well, that Moſes hauing ſayd that God found his people in a wilderneſſe, addeth that he led them vp and downe there, that hee nurtured them there, and that he kept them there as the apple of his eye. By this terme of leading vp & down, Moſes dooth the people to vnderſtand, that it was not for a day or twaine, nor for ſome ſhort time that God made them to taſte his goodnes, but that he had continued it by the ſpace of forty yeeres together. Lykewiſe, his heaping vp of theſe words together, A deſert land, a deſolate countrie, a place full of roringes, a barraine ground, is not for nought,but ſerüeth to touch the people the better to the quick, that they might call to mind what plight they had bin in before their cõming into the land of promiſe, where Gods bleſſing was powred out vpon them moſt aboundantly. And therfore the word Lead betokened as much at ẏ time as if Moſes ſhoulde haue ſaid, Ye wretched people,had God vttered his loue & goodneſſe towardes you but for one moneth, ẏ ſame ought to haue bin remembred of you for euer,ſo as you ſhould neuer haue forgotten it.But now, it is not one moneth no nor one yere,but whole fortie yeres together, that God hath held on & continued his goodneſſe towardes you: of all which time your fathers hauing not a crum of bread to eate,were miraculouſly fed with Manna from heauen; nor hauing any wine or other liquor to drink, had water giuen them out of the rocke. And as they ſhifted from place to place,

Num.20.11. GOD gaue a continuall courſe to the water,
Pſal.105.41 wherewith to refreſh themſelues and their cattell.Seeing then that God hath ſo imprinted his grace ẏ it may be wel knowen of you in the great number of good turnes which he hath done for you: you be the leſſe to be helde excuſed, if yee make not account of the glorifying of your God, who hath ſhewed himſelf ſo liberal towards you.

But we muſt alwayes marke,that the ſpeaking of theſe thinges by Moſes to ẏ Iewes is after ſuch a ſort,that his doctrine is behoueful to vs at this day. And therefore we muſt vnderſtand, ẏ God leadeth vs vp and downe in this world, to ẏ end we may haue the more leiſure to feele his fauor, if we perceiue it not ſufficiently in one day.True it is ẏ if we ſhould haue experiẽce of Gods goodnes but once in all our life, ẏ ſame ought to ſuffice vs,at leaſtwiſe if we had not our eyes blindfolded,or that we were not ſhortwitted to forget Gods doinges out of hand.If he had once giuen vs any recorde of his fatherly loue, we ought to acknowledge the ſame and to minde well ẏ leſſon,and to exerciſe our ſelues therein daylу both euen and morne. But what? Becauſe al is marred by our vanitie,and all the good ẏ God dooth for vs is by and by forgotten:therfore doth he traine vs in this flightful lyfe,and leade vs vp & downe after ſuch a faſhion, that wee be put in minde of our wretchednes many wayes. The happening of ſo many neceſſities & Gods deliuering of vs from them,is to the intent ẏ we ſhoulde beare it the better in minde;how he not onely ſuccoreth vs once or twice at our need,but alſo holdeth on with his fauor throughout,yeelding vs record by infinite wayes ẏ he is our father & taketh vs for his children. After this manner ought we to wey this word Lead,when God toſſeth & turmoyleth vs to & fro in this world,making vs to feel many things, ſo as we haue not one continual ſtate of quietnes,but are fain to walk one while one way, and another while another, & anon to go clean backe again,enduring now cold and now heate, & another time hunger, & being vexed ſometimes with noyſe of warres,ſometime with ſickneſſes,& ſomtime with other things.Now when we be ſo led vp & downe, let vs aſſure our ſelues that our Lordes meaning is to make vs to come to the knowledge of his goodneſſe.

And hereunto Moſes addeth farther, that the people were nurtured. Truely ẏ chiefe learning and inſtruction which they receiued was by the law. Yet notwithſtanding, all the warnings that God gaue them in the wilderneſſe, ſerued to nurture them. Moſes therefore ſpeaketh not here alonely of the Lawe which was vttered to the people to giue them knowledge of Gods wil:but alſo generally of all the inſtructions & warnings which God gaue them by the ſpace of forty yeeres, as when he puniſhed the idolaters, when he puni- Num.32.28.
ſhed ẏ whoremongers,and ſuch as were giuen to Numb.25.9.
their luſtes,and when hee puniſhed the rebels. Num.11.33.
For at thoſe times it behooued them to receiue Num.14.23.
newe inſtruction. Yea and all of vs muſt vnderſtand,that generally al ẏ benefites,al ẏ threates, & all the puniſhmentes which God at any time vſed towardes the childrẽ of Iſraell,were as many inſtructions to them. But we muſt marke here that it is Gods will that we ſhould learn by them ſo long as we liue in this world. For like as he executeth ẏ office of a ſchoolemaiſter towards vs, ſo wil he haue vs to play the good ſcholers vnder him,& to profit in the doctrine which he deliuereth vs. And it is a very notable point, that God will not haue vs to liue here lyke brute beaſtes without reaſon & vnderſtanding. Whereto then ought our lyfe to ſerue here,& whereto ought it to be applyed? Wherein ought men to buſie thẽſelues during ẏ time that they be here beneath? To profit in Gods ſchoole.That is ẏ end whereunto we be ſuſteyned and mainteined here. But we abuſe the life wickedly which hee giueth vs, applying it cleane contrary to his will, if we become not euery day better than other. Therefore let vs not loſe our time, but let vs imploy it according to ẏ meaning of our God. And when we riſe a mornings let vs thinke with our ſelues, God hath preſerued me hitherto to the intent I ſhould profit in his ſchoole,and therefore I muſt not forget the benefites which God beſtoweth vpon me this day,but make them meanes wherby to confeſſe my faith,that ẏ praiſe of all goodnes may be yeelded to him,& I imploy my ſelfe with ſo much ẏ better courage to the ſeruing and honouring of him, knowing ẏ he furthereth my ſaluation continually more and more, ſeeing he draweth me to him by ſo many meanes: & therwithall I muſt alſo learne to ſtand in awe of him, ẏ I may yeeld him his due reuerence. Lykewiſe when euening commeth, let vs conſider thus with our ſelues,ſeeing that God hath voutſafed to imploy me hitherto in his ſeruice, it is good reaſon that I ſhould holde on ſtill,and ẏ I ſhould not turne away from him. Therefore when wee haue reckoned all thinges well, we ſhall finde ẏ there hath not paſſed one day no nor one howre or minute wherein our God hath not giuen vs ſome inſtruction. And if we fare neuer the better by it,who is too blame for it? Then haue we here a very profitable leſſon, namely that as long as we liue in this world, we be in Gods ſchoole, & that he for his part ceaſeth not to giue vs good inſtructions and furtherances to our ſaluation. Whether he beſtow his benefites vppon vs, or chaſtice vs for our ſinnes, or ſhewe vs examples of his goodnes, or of his wrath and of his rigour in puniſhing ſuch as haue done amiſſe: all of thē are euer inſtructions for vs to fare the better by.

Now in the end Moſes addeth, that God kept that people as the apple of his eye. Here is a ſimilitude which ought well to rauiſh vs to wonder at it. For Moſes could not haue vſed a fitter ſpeech to ſhewe vs what care God hath of vs & of our ſaluation. He ſaith here that if God were a mortall man, he could not more charily keepe the apple of his eye, than he kept his people. Wee knowe it is the tendreſt part of all a mans body. If a man be ſtriken on the head, or on the hands, or on the armes, it may be borne with: but if he be but touched on the apple of his eye, al his bodie ſtarkles at it: we be as greatly grieued at it as if a man had ſtabbed vs in with a dagger. It wold not greeue vs ſo much to haue one of our armes cut off, as to haue but a phillup with ones finger vppon the eye. And it is expreſly ſayd, that God keepeth vs not onely as his arme or as his legge. True it is ẏ God hath neither armes nor legges, we muſt not imagin any ſuch thing in him: but he borroweth a figure from men, to make vs vnderſtand the thing ẏ elſe were too high for vs to reach vnto. For if hee ſhould ſpeake according to his own maieſtie, we could not conceiue him: but he ſtoopeth to vs & vſeth a maner of ſpeech that is agreeable to our rudeneſſe & infirmitie. His ſaying then is, that he will defend and preſerue vs, not as a mortall man dooth his armes or his feete, but as he would doe the apple of his eye. Wherby we learne that God vttered ſuch a charineſſe in preſeruing the people of Iſrael, that if all the gentleneſſe and louingkindenes in the world were put together, it were nothing in cōpariſon of the infinite gratious goodneſſe which hee ſhewed in that behalfe.

And this is ſayd for vs alſo. God muſt be faine Zach.2.8. to keepe vs as the apple of his eye, as he himſelf ſpeaketh thereof by the Prophet Zacharie. For Moſes maketh here a recitall: but there is a promiſe which ſerueth for all ages. And lykewiſe Pſal.17.7. alſo it is ſayde in the Pſalme according to that which Moſes had ſet downe afore, Lorde keepe vs as ẏ apple of ones eye. This prayer was penned by the holy Ghoſt for all the faithfull: and it is needefull for them, as I haue ſayd. For let vs ſee what our ſtate were without it. We be in daūger Iohn 16.11. of a thowſand deathes, not without cauſe is Satan named the prince of this world, and what power haue we to withſtand him? He hath fiery dartes againſt vs, there is not that ſtroke which he ſtriketh but it were deadly, if we were not defended and preſerued by the wonderful gratious goodnes of our God. Seeing it is ſo, it ſtandeth vs in hand to be maintayned by him, yea & to be ſo maintayned, as he ouercome al ẏ dangers ẏ may befal vs in this worlde, & alſo al ẏ aſſaults which wee may haue within our ſelues. God I ſay muſt be faine to ouercome thē all, or elſe we ſhall liue in continual doubt & anguiſh, & not know where to become euery minute of an houre. We ſhould be ſhaken with diſpayre of our ſaluation, were it not that we were thus ſhielded by God, yea euen in ſuch ſort, that if wee were to indure all that euer coulde light vppon vs in this preſent world, yet we might conclude with our ſelues, that God wil get the vpper hand howſoeuer the world go.

And here is added another ſimilitude, that is to wit, that God played the parte of an Eagle or of a Hen in ſpeaking after that manner. Now we knowe that in the holy ſcripture there is often mentiō made of Eagles. And why? Becauſe they be much commoner in that countrie than they be hereawayes: and the Prophets after Moſes time did apply themſelues to ẏ common maner of ſpeech of that country. Therefore let vs mark wel that whereas here is ſpeaking of an Eagle, it is as much as if God ſhould ſay, Go to, I haue bin as a Hen is towardes her Chickens. Here we ſee how God ſtoopeth to vs. When the caſe concerneth Gods maieſtie, we ſee how ẏ very Angels doe couer their eyes, & are not able to looke vppon it, accordingly as the Cherubins are deſcribed vnto vs by the Prophet, Eſa.6.2. namely ẏ they haue winges to couer their faces withall, becauſe they could not abide to beholde ẏ glory of God, without dazeling of their eyes. Now if the Angels of heauen cannot ſtand before the glory & maieſtie of God, but that they muſt be faine to caſt down their eylids: what ſhal wee be able to doe? And yet notwithſtanding God lykeneth himſelfe here to a Hen. And why? to the end to vpbraid vs with our vnthankfulneſſe. For he ſhould neuer need to vſe ſuch ſimilitudes, if we were not too too blockiſhe, not conſidering his gratious goodnes when he vttereth it vnto vs, inſomuch that although we haue the fruition of it, yet notwithſtanding we perceiue it not. Therefore to rid vs of this brutiſh blockiſhnes, God is faine to ſay, Ye wretched people, knowe ye not that I am towardes you as a Hen that broodeth her Chickens vnder her winges? So then, let vs marke firſt of all that here we be reproued of the ouergreat blockiſhnes which is in vs, in that we conſider not Gods benefites. That is the cauſe why God vſeth ſuch compariſons: And yet is not that any derogation at all to his glory or highnes. For his goodnes & his power are thinges ẏ agree wel together; they be no ſuch thinges as cannot abide to match one with another. God is mightie, God is dreadfull in his maieſtie, all ẏ is true: but yet is his goodnes as infinite as his power. And what importeth his goodnes? That hee ſhould be as a Hen. And therefore let vs marke, that this dealing of God muſt not diminiſhe his glory, ſo as we ſhould not worſhip him with all humilitie & reuerence: but rather touch vs to the quick, that when God (hauing beſtowed ſo many benefites vpon vs, & we thinke not vpon them but doe bury his goodnes in forgetfulnes) vpbraideth vs ẏ he hath played ẏ Clockhen towardes vs and we could not abide it: we may learn to apply all our wittes to conſider how good & gratious God is towardes vs, & that knowing him to be ſo, wee may alſo aſſure ourſelues that hee ought to bee worſhipped in his glory & maieſtie, to the ende we may be ſubiect to him and come ſhrowd our ſelues vnder his winges, to be defended by him. But this ſhalbe layd forth more at large to morrowe if God will.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes,praying him to make vs feele them better,yea in ſuch ſort, as wee may returne to him with true repentance, acknowledging the tranſgreſſions and iniquities which we haue committed,not only to obteine forgiueneſſe of them,but alſo to be maintained by him all the time of our lyfe: and that in the meane while it would pleaſe him to keepe vs to himſelf and correct all things that are contrary to his righteouſnes, and doe hinder vs from giuing our ſelues wholy to him as we ought to doe. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the ij. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXI. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the two and thirtith Chapter.

11 As the Eagle ſtirreth vp, &c.

12 So the Lord alone did leade him,and there was no ſtraunge god with him.

13 He caryed him vp to the high places of the earth, and made him to eate of the fruits of the fieldes: and he made him to ſucke Honnie out of the Rocke, and Oyle out of the hard ſtone.

14 He fed him with butter of kyne and milke of ſheepe, with fatte of Lambes and of ſheepe fed in Baſhan, and Heegoates, and with the fatte of wheate: and made thee to drinke the iuice of the moſt excellent grape.

15 But he which ought to haue beene vpright,became fatte and fell to kicking. Thou art become fatte,luſtie, and thicke. And ſo hee forſooke God his maker, and regarded not the ſtrong God of his welfare.

YEſterday we ſawe the ſimilitude which Moſes brought in to expreſſe what goodnes and gentlenes God vſed towardes the children of Iſraell: for he dealt with them as when a hen gathereth her chickens vnder her winges. We ſee thẽ howe God dooth in ſuch wiſe vtter and make knowen his infinite power to his children in the preſeruing of them, that hee ſtoopeth to them, beareth with them in reſpect of their frailetie, and (at a word)maketh himſelfe lyke a Clockhen. Now it remaineth on our ſide, yͤ we knowing our owne feebleneſſe,ſhould flee vnto God, and hide our ſelues vnder his winges, that wee may there be defended and kept ſafe. And wee muſt not bee afraid to preace vnto him, for his maieſtie ought not to be terrible to vs any more ſith we ſee he hath made himſelfe familiar with vs,& draweth vs to him by gentlenes. And ſurely it muſt needes bee that we be deſtitute of wit and reaſon,if we goe not to ſeeke him: for howe ſhall the little chicken doe, if he be not vnder his dammes wing? Much leſſe can wee continue without the protection of our God, than little chickens can doe, if they run not vnder yͤ wings of their dam which leadeth them. But in the meane while we fare little the better by this leſſon.For although we bee warned ſufficiently of our infirmities, yet doe we not ceaſe for all that to be blinded with preſumption,inſomuch as euery of vs thinketh to maintaine himſelf well enough. And by yͤ meanes we hold skorn of yͤ help of our God. Or elſe we be ſo full of diſtruſt, yͤ although he call vs to him with all the gentlenes that can be deuiſed: yet we cannot finde in our heartes to come to him, but doe alwayes ſtand in doubt of him. And that is the cauſe why our Matt.23.37 Lord Ieſus Chriſt findeth fault with the citie of Ieruſalem, that when as hee would haue gathered her chickens together, ſhe would not. Hee maketh euen a complaint of it in way of lamentation,ſaying: O Ieruſalem Ieruſalem, how often would I haue gathered thy childrẽ together, as yͤ Hen ſtretcheth out her wings to gather her yong chickens to her, & thou haſt deſpiſed that great benefite,thou haſt not voutſafed to ſhroud thy ſelfe vnder me. I haue bin deſirous to make thee to feele my power to yͤ maintaining of thee in thine eſtate.But what? Thou haſt bin faine to feele heeretofore many chaſtiſementes becauſe of thine vnthankfulnes: but the time will come yͤ thou ſhalt bee vtterly deſtroyed. Let vs beware that God haue not lyke cauſe to finde fault with vs nowadayes, and to powre out his vengeance vpon vs after he ſhal haue borne with vs a long time. For the foreſaid threatning which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt made,befel not out of hãd. God had many ways aſſayed to gather the citie of Ieruſalem vnto his obedience: and when he ſaw them ſo ſtubborne yͤ they were paſt amendment,he puniſhed them according to their deſert. Therfore let vs not tempt yͤ patience of our God, but when we ſee him ſpread out his wings to gather vs to him, let vs runne to him, & let neceſſitie driue vs thereto: For what ſhall wee doe if our Lord keepe vs not? Againe, Let not fearefulnes or douting keepe vs back from him. For what can he do more, than abace himſelfe after the maner of a clockhen, to the intent that his maieſtie ſhoulde not bee terrible to vs and ſcarre vs away?

Let vs marke further,yͤ God playeth the part of a Clockhen in all pointes,to gather vs vnder his winges.For on the one ſide he calleth vs vnto his tuition by yͤ preaching of the Goſpel, promiſing vs yͤ the power of his holy ſpirit ſhall not faile vs,but yͤ it ſhall defend vs againſt all the aſſaultes of Satan, according as it is ſayd that all the fortreſſes of hell ſhall bee able to doe no- Matt.16.18 thing to vs, if wee bee grounded vppon the faith of the Goſpell. Beſides this, wee knowe that God watcheth ouer his ſeruaunts, and that he guideth them. Therfore let vs ſticke to thoſe promiſes, and ſuffer our Lorde to vſe his kindneſſe, as he ſetteth it forth by this ſimilitude; and ſith we ſee he is willing that we ſhould come familiarly vnto him; let vs not play ẏ wild beaſts.

Nowe, it is ſaide immediatly after· that God alone ledde his people, and that there was no ſtraunge god with him. This ſerueth to condemne the wickedneſſe of the children of Iſrael, which coulde not reſt wholly vpon God; whereas hee was ſo ſufficient for them: for they had founde by experience, that they needed not to ſeeke any other. And not without cauſe is this ſet downe. For although men doe not vtterly refuſe Gods help, yet can they not content themſelues with it, but they fall to raunging and rouing and make byleapes, bearing themſelues in hand, that it wilbe good for them to match ſome other helpe with God. Lo at what point we be. For we woulde bee aſhamed to ſay that God can doe vs no good, & that we can well forbeare him. Therefore wee can finde in our hearts that he ſhal haue the firſt place and chiefe preheminence: but we cannot finde in our hearts to reſt wholly vpon him, but we fall to conceiuing of fonde imaginations, O, God is farre from vs, wee deſerue not that hee ſhould haue care of our ſaluation, and therefore it were good for vs to get vs this or that. To bee ſhort, in all ages men haue ſought occaſion to turne away from God, not by falling quite and cleane away from him, (as I ſaid) but by making a minglemangle, and by ſeeking ſtill the things which haue ſeemed beſt to their owne lyking, as though God were not ynough of himſelf alone.

In reſpect of ſuch naughtineſſe it is ſaid here, that there was no ſtraunge god with him when hee led the people through the wilderneſſe, and conueied thẽ into the Lande of promiſe. The God which had adopted Abraham, the ſame which made both heauen and earth, the ſame which afterwarde did ſet forth his lawe, euen the ſame was hee alone, and hee called not any others to his helpe. True it is that God continually vſed the ſeruice of his Angels for the welfare of his people, and for the maintenance of his Church: but yet doth it not followe that hee borrowed aught of them. Whereas it is ſaid that the Angels are Pſal.91.11. Heb.1.14. appointed to haue care of vs, it is not to ſtoppe vs from repairing right foorth vnto God, nor to darken his brightneſſe therby, that men ſhould honour him the leſſe: for the Angels are nothing as in reſpect of themſelues: And therefore the holy ſcripture termeth them the Rom.8.38. vertues or powers of God, for he vſeth them as his owne hands. Not without cauſe therefore doth Moſes ſay, that God was alone in the leading of his people, and had not any ſtraunge god with him. For we ſee how thoſe wretched folk forbare not to forge ydols to themſelues. Inſomuch ẏ although God 400. yeres before had promiſed to redeeme them, although he had performed that promiſe in very deede, although he had ſhewed himſelf to them ſo many ſundry wayes, ſo ẏ they had euery day ſome newe viſible token, and ẏ the cloude by day and the fire by night were a warrant of Gods preſence: yet notwithſtanding they forbare not to inuẽt new ſuperſtitions. And why? Becauſe that (as I ſaide afore) ſuch is our curſed inclination, that we cannot repoſe our ſelues vpon God alone, but we fal to rãging here & there, and our wits are rouing abrode to inuent ydols to our ſelues. For this cauſe doth Moſes here reproue the leawdneſſe of the children of Iſrael, which could not hold themſelues contented with God, though he gaue them ſufficient cauſe.

But now let vs applie this leſſon to our ſelues alſo. For we ſee what ẏ Prophet Eſay ſaith where he ſpeaketh of the redemption that was to bee wrought in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. It is ſaid in the 59. Chapter; that God ſought and looked about him if he coulde finde any helpe to Eſa.59.16. redeeme the worlde. Not that God was cumbered with the matter, or that he wiſt not what hee had to do: but by that figure the Prophet expreſſeth the better, that it was onely God that redeemed vs, and that he was not helped by any other. Therefore when he had ſought, he found that he ſhoulde bee faine to vſe his owne onely power. Then armed hee himſelfe with his iuſtice, hee fenced himſelfe with his owne power, and ſo finiſhed and performed the thing which hee had determined, that is to wit, the redemption of his people. Seeing then that God hath ſo purchaſed vs to himſelfe in the perſon of his ſonne, as that he had not any companion in the doing thereof, but hath vttered forth the infinite treaſures of his goodneſſe, iuſtice, and power: let vs learne to hold our ſelues wholly to him, and not to be ſo fickleheaded as to ſet vp ydols, and to runne gadding here and there, and to let our ſelues looſe to no benefite. Let vs rather conſider howe God himſelfe alone hath redeemed vs once for all, and that hencefoorth hee will haue the guiding of all his himſelfe alone, and that hee wil haue vs to ſticke to him alone. True it is that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt alſo was a leader of the people of Iſraell in the wildernes, 1.Cor.10.9 as ſheweth S. Paule in the tenth chapter of the firſt epiſtle to the Corinthians, where he ſaith that they tempted Ieſus Chriſt. And how was that? Euen becauſe he was alwaies the mediator: howbeit, that was after a darke maner. But nowadaies hee ſheweth himſelfe to vs face to face: inſomuch that if we looke there, we haue there ẏ whole fulnes of Gods maieſtie. Seeing it is ſo, that God in theſe daies diſcouereth himſelf more fully vnto vs, than he did to the Iewes in the time of the law: there wilbe ſo much the leſſe excuſe for vs, if wee abyde not faſt ſetled in him, ſo as hee alone do ſuffice vs, and we doe take our whole contentation in him. Yet notwithſtanding, wee ſee howe froward the worlde hath beene. For what a number of ydolles haue men forged euen ſince Chriſtes comming into the world? And howe haue we behaued our ſelues ſince the time of our ignoraunce? For looke howe manie Patrons and Aduocates the Papiſtes haue imagined, ſo many fellowes haue they added to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and ſo doing they ſet their minds vpon the creatures, and let the liuing God goe. Indeede they will proteſt that their intent is nothing ſo:but a man may ſee by their doings that God is not knowen there from his ſainctes,as they themſelues haue ſaide in their common prouerbe . After that manner haue we erred: and we haue alienated our ſelues(to our power)ſo farre from our God, that we haue wel deſerued to be ſhaken off at his hand.But foraſmuch as he hath ſhewed vs that it is onely hee to whom wee muſt ſticke,and foraſmuch as he offereth himſelfe ſo familiarly vnto vs, to the intent we ſhoulde ſubmit our ſelues to him:we ought now to be ſo much the more ſtedfaſt: and ſeeing wee haue ſuch aſſurance, let vs not be drawen too and fro by our vnconſtancie and lightnes,but let vs conclude that God cannot away to haue any ſtraunge gods with him, and that it behoueth vs to doe him the honour of reſting in ſuch wiſe vpon his power and goodneſſe,as it may ſuffice vs to call vpon him,and to flee to him for all our refuge.

And Moſes addeth immediatly, that God caried vp his people,(or made them to ride vp)vppon the high places of the earth, and gaue them the fruites thereof to feede them,namely the butter of Kyne, the milke of ſheepe, the fat of Muttons,of Lambes,and of Goates, the fat of Corne and the bloud of Grapes,(for ſo he termeth them:)and that he made them to eate Oyle out of the harde ſtones and honny out of the Rocks. Hereby Moſes ment to vtter howe liberall (yea euen beyonde all opinion of man) God ſhewed himſelfe towards his people. His ſpeaking of the high places of the earth,is in reſpect of the ſituation of the lande of Chanaan: for it is high in compariſon of Egypt and of the countries thereabouts.To ſay(as ſome haue imagined)that it is the middeſt and (as ye would ſay) the Nauill of the earth,is to no purpoſe . Becauſe mention is Pſal.74.12. made of the mids of the earth among the Prophetes, ſome haue ſurmiſed that God meant to bound it out,as if he had beene ſome Geometrician that ſhould haue butteled and bounded the whole world.But whereas it is ſaide,in the mids of the earth,it is meant, in the mids of the lande that is to ſay, of Iewry. Yet notwithſtanding, as I ſaide afore, the Lande of Chanaan is high,if a man haue an eye to any of all the Countries round about it.Againe,it hath many mountains and high Rockes in it, inſomuch that at the firſt ſight a man woulde take it to be barren . And therefore Moſes declareth that the people ſhold eate honnie out of the Rockes, and Oyle out of the harde ſtones: that is to ſay,that where men would think there were nothing but wildernes, there would God make Olifetrees to growe:and where men would thinke to be nothing but barrenneſſe, there they ſhoulde gather honnie,and (to be ſhort) that eueriwhere there ſhoulde bee nothing but ſweeteneſſe and abundance.

Afterwarde hee ſpeaketh of fat Sheepe,Goates and Lambes. Trueth it is that in this place is vſed the worde Baſan, which had that name, of fatneſſe: for the hill of Baſan was a goodly countrie of paſture . And this is the cauſe,why hee expreſly ſpeaketh thereof . And let vs marke that Moſes neuer came within the land of Chanaan,hee had neuer ſo vewed it that hee coulde deſcribe it,as he doth heere . Needs therefore muſt hee ſpeake,not as a man,but as one whoſe tongue is gouerned by the ſpirite of God. And heere he treateth of the thinges which the people were to finde after the deceaſe; and yet hee ſpeaketh of them as if he had ſeene them,and as though the thinges had beene done alreadie. So then we haue a plain proofe that Moſes wrate not any thing on his owne heade,but was an inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt.For he left this ſong to the children of Iſrael, and made it common among them before his death,as wee haue ſeene afore. Whereby it was apparant,that hee was taught at Gods hand all the thinges which were vnknowen vnto him as in reſpect of the fleſh: & ſurely not euen the children of Iſrael themſelues coulde vnderſtande the contentes of that ſong, vntill they had had the experience of it.But the effect ſhewed that his ſo ſpeaking was not in vaine. The thing then which Moſes(or rather the holy Ghoſt by his mouth) intended; is to put the Iewes in minde, howe liberall God had ſhewed himſelfe to them , namely by bringing them into the Lande of promiſe, and by giuing them fruitfulneſſe, that it might ſuffice to maintaine them. And no doubt but he meant here to magnifie Gods goodnes , by declaring that he paſſed the common order of nature when he had ſuch a care to ſuſtaine his people ſo welthily in that lande which a man woulde neuer haue thought able to do it. So much the more therefore ought we to abhorre theſe diueliſh heades, which haue gone about to deface Gods grace in this behalfe, ſeeing that the holy ſcripture ſtandeth thereuppon, namely that men muſt not deeme according to the common order of nature, concerning Gods mainteining of his people after that manner. As for example, that curſed heretike which was executed heere among vs; He meaneth Seruetus. was not aſhamed to write in one of his books that the land of Chanaan is indeede ſpoken of, howebeit ouer fauourablie, and that they which haue ſo ſpoken thereof,haue made vs to beleeue many things vnaduiſedly.And what cauſed him ſo to do,but that he was a worldly man and a deſpiſer of God , ſeeking by all meanes to skorne God , and to aboliſh his grace , and that men might no more knowe how to worſhip him? So then yee ſee howe Gods grace was had in contempt.But contrariwiſe,we muſt alwayes be reſolued,that God hauing once made his promiſe to his ſeruant Abraham, did therupon intend to vtter his wonderfull power , as one that had a care of his people.Yea and we muſt call to mind what was ſaide yeſterday , namely that GOD had made his partition to the former inhabiters of that countrie,(to wit of the lande of promiſe) according to the number of the children of Iſrael,for he knewe wellynough what a multitude of people he was to maintaine there. That is a cauſe why Moſes declareth here again,that the Rocks yeelded hony,and yͤ ſtones brought forth Olifes: that there was paſtureground to yeelde fat muttons,lambs & goats, & to yeeld butter,& all manner of white meate, ſo as nothing might be wanting:alſo yͭ the land yeelded yͤ fat of corne (for he vſeth that terme,)as who ſhold ſay there were lumps in the meale, and nothing but pure and fine flower of wheate, ſo as our Lorde gaue his people abundance of all things ẏ he knewe to be meete for them: and that hee gaue them the bloud of ẏ grape, that is to ſay, the grapes were ſo full, that a man might haue preſſed as it were bloude out of them. To be ſhort, he declareth that God failed not his people in any thing, but prouided them ſtore of all things neceſſarie, yea and ſhewed himſelfe ſo liberall, that hee gaue them euē more than needed. Now after as God dealeth largely vnto vs, ſo muſt wee inlarge our harts to ſerue him, that we may be fully fraught with loue towardes him. For all the benefites which we receiue of him, muſt kindle our hearts to goe vnto him. We haue in them a taſt of his goodneſſe to draw vs vnto him. Now then if wee make not Gods gracious gifts auailable to vs, ſo as we loue him for them, and bee rauiſhed with deſire to come vnto him: it is certaine that wee muſt yeelde a ſorrowfull account for it. For wee vnhallow them, and abuſe them too ſhamefully, and thereby God looſeth the things which hee had beſtowed vpon vs as his children, becauſe it is not his meaning that they ſhould haue beene caſt away as vpon dogges.

For this cauſe Moſes aggrauateth heere the malice of the people, in that he ſaieth, that after God had ſhewed himſelfe ſo liberall, foorthwith they became fatte, and being become thicke, fat, and as it were ſo brawned that they were readie to burſt with greace: they fell immediatly to defie the God which had made them, and to mocke at the ſtrength of their welfare. Here wee be taught to call our ſelues daily to account for the benefites which God hath beſtowed vppon vs. Wherefore let vs beware that we deuour not the benefites which wee haue of God, forgetting them and the giuer of them; Nay, let vs make them all as notes of remembrance to put vs in mind how much we be bound and indebted vnto him. True it is that wee can neuer bring that to paſſe, according where- Pſal.40.6. to it is ſaide in the Pſalme, that if men imploy themſelues neuer ſo much to the conſidering of Gods gracious gifts, they ſhall finde themſelues graueled, for they be mo than the hayres of our heads. Yet notwithſtanding, it behoueth vs to doe our indeuour to magnifie our God, conſidering how greatly wee be bounde vnto him, and howe many wayes hee maketh vs to feele his goodnes. That is our true ſtudie; that is ẏ thing wherein we muſt exerciſe our ſelues all the time of our life. And the chiefe ſacrifice that God requireth of vs, is thankſgiuing, which is when we honour him with the things that we haue receiued of him, according to this ſaying of the hun- Pſal.116.12. dred and ſixteenth Pſalme, What ſhall I yeeld vnto the Lorde for all the good which hee hath done vnto mee? I will take the cup of ſaluation, and call vpon his name. So then let this text bea warning and incouragement to vs, to conſider better of our Gods benefites that wee may fare the better by them. That is one point.

And moreouer, when wee once knowe that God hath bounde vs vnto him, and dayly bindeth vs in hauing a care to ſuſtaine theſe our mortall bodies which are but carions & dung, the which neuertheleſſe he feedeth with bread: let the conſideration thereof make vs to mount vp higher, and to bethinke vs howe we be day- Ioh.4.14. & 6.35. lie fedde with the grace of his ſpirite, and refreſhed with the liuing waters which wee haue of him; yea and that we be fedde with our Lord Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe who is the heauenly breade that feedeth our ſoules. Let vs conſider theſe things, and learne therby to giue ourſelues wholly to our God who ſheweth himſelf ſo bountifull and liberall a father towards vs. If we do not ſo, we haue here a horrible condemnation. For (as I haue ſaid) to the intent to ſet out the miſchiefe ſo much the more to the full in that men diſcharge not their duetie to Godwarde, being ſo preuented by his drawing of them vnto him: Moſes putteth heere as it were into a paire of ſcales, on the one ſide Gods benefits, and on the otherſide the peoples forgetfulnes, negligence & vnthankfulnes. And this is the thing that in effect wee haue to remember out of this place.

Now it behoueth vs to marke well the thing that is rehearſed heere by Moſes, namely that the Rightfull was growen fatte. His attributing of that title to the people of Iſrael, is to ſignifie whereto they were called of God: for this comprehendeth the principall end of our calling. Gods adopting of vs to bee his children, is to the ende wee ſhoulde liue righteouſly. The Iewes are called a froward and crooked generation. Such Matt.16.4. then are the vnbeleeuers vntill our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt haue brought them home to himſelfe. On the contrarie part, when God calleth vs to be of his flocke or houſholde: then he reformeth vs, and he will haue vs to holde the way of ſaluation as he ſheweth it vnto vs. And ſuch ought the children of Iſrael to haue beene, ſeeing that God had choſen them. But what? It is ſaid that after the rightfull or righteous was waxen fatte, he fell to kicking againſt his maſter. Now if this bee ſaide nowadayes, it will bee double to our ſhame: for if our Lordes ſpeaking of righteouſneſſe or vprightneſſe be to ſhewe ẏ thoſe whom he had ſanctified, defiled themſelues, and that thoſe whom he had brought into the right way, were gone aſtray: it is to condemne them the more grieuouſly. Therefore it ought to make vs the more aſhamed, whē God ſhal ſay, What are yee? For I haue adopted you to be my children, and what a lookingglaſſe and patterne haue you in me? Ye ought to reſēble your father: ye knowe my goodnes and my iuſtice, and yet are you as crooked as ſerpents. Muſt we not needs be confounded with double ſhame, when God vpbraideth vs after that ſort? So then, let vs learne to what purpoſe God hath ordained vs in vouchſafing vs the grace to gather vs vnto him. Let vs follow the vprightnes which he cōmandeth vs, & let vs not ſwarue aſide from hi[illegible] Moreouer let hym vs beware ẏ fatneſſe blind vs not, and ſo mar vs leaſt when we haue beene full fedde for a time, we growe frowarde through Gods vſing of his liberalitie towards vs. And ẏ is a very needefull point, point. For when God ſheweth himſelfe ſo liberal,and feedeth vs with abundance of all things: his ſo doing is to make vs to perceiue his goodneſſe the better. Therefore it ought to inflame vs the more, ſeeing that our Lorde handleth vs gently as though wee were his tender babes, as he himſelfe termeth vs. But wee ſee on the contrarie part,that if God deale bountifully with vs, wee play the ſtubborne and vnruly horſes. As a horſe that is ouerpampered in the ſtable wil not be ruled, but fals to kicking, and becomes ſo luſtie as if he were wilde: euen ſo is it with vs alſo: ſuch is our nature. And are wee to bee excuſed, when we ſhall haue abuſed Gods gifts after that faſhion? If it be demaunded what maketh men proude,what maketh men become wilde beaſts, ſo as they cannot away with any yoke, but are feerce and hardharted,and cannot afterward away with good inſtruction and warning, but are madde againſt God, puffed vp with pride and preſumption, ſtarke blinde, deſtitute of reaſon, and vtterly voide of modeſtie and humanitie: what is the cauſe of all this, but the good things which God hath beſtowed vppon them? And how may that bee? For it is a monſtrous thing, and a thing vtterly againſt nature. God commeth to vs,he vttereth his treaſures,hee woulde haue vs to knowe him to be as gentle and gratious a father as can be, hee maketh vs as it were cockeneyes; he could do no more to ſhewe what affection he beareth vs, except he ſhould powre out his bowels vppon vs; he interteineth vs as if it were in a Paradiſe, accordingly as it is ſaide of Pſal.36.1. all thoſe whom God hath taught, namely that he keepeth them as much at their eaſe,as if they had all the commodities that coulde be wiſhed. Seeing then ẏ God hath ſhewed himſelfe ſuch a one; what a thing is it that men ſhoulde take occaſion thereby,to kicke againſt him, and to bee proude and full of preſumption & ouerweening, ſo as they ſhoulde deſpiſe all admonitions, yea and be as it were ſtark mad againſt all doctrine? And what a horrible ſin is this? Yet do wee make a trade and cuſtome of it. Whereby we ſee howe froward our nature is, and what a bottomleſſe pit of al vices and infections is in it.

And therefore let vs beare this doctrine ſo much the better in minde,where it is ſaid that the righteous fell to kicking when he once became fat: How that although wee had earſt ſome good plaine meaning in vs,& there appeared in vs ſome willingneſſe to ſerue God:yet aſſoone as we be waxen fatte,by and by we become wilde beaſtes, as appeareth euen by experience. Howe many be there, which are treatable & liue after ſome vpright manner, ſo long as God holdeth them in meane ſtate? True it is that we ſhall ſee a number of hypocrites alſo,who as long as they haue not wherwith to ſet out themſelues,will pretend to be as lowly as is poſſible,and yet all is but hypocriſie. Again there are others which wil beare the countenance of good behauiour,and be well ruled,and liue in the feare of God: but as ſoone as they be growen fatte,by and by they play the wilde beaſts,they be ſtarke mad,they ſhew their teeth,they put out their hornes,they fall to kicking,& they fling out againſt God. This is ſeene too much. And therefore it was not for the children of Iſrael onely that Moſes ſpake ſo: but the holy Ghoſt hath ſhewed vs heere as it were the liuely picture or image of the naughtines which is in vs,and wherunto we be inclined and giuen: that is to wit,that when God hath once made vs fatte, by and by in ſteede of liuing righteouſly which is the very condition whereupon he hath choſen vs to be his children,we fall to kicking againſt him.

And to amplifie the leawdneſſe yet more, of ſuch as doe ſo abuſe Gods gratious giftes; Moſes ſaith further, Thou art become thicke and fatte, thou art as it were cumbered with thine owne fatte, thou art euen ouergrowen with fatte. And ſo he forgate(or forſooke)the God that made him,and ſkorned the ſtrong God of his welfare. Whereas Moſes ſaith here that the people became luſty,fatte & thick,as though they had bin choked with their own greace: it is in two reſpects:the one to blame them ẏ ſorer,for that in ſteed of noting & marking well Gods benefites,ẏ thereby they might haue bin the more prouoked to ſerue and honour him: they deuoured them vp without meaſure or temperance: and alſo that the quantitie of Gods benefites was ſo great, that it behighted them the greater condemnation. Let vs marke well then,that if wee forget Gods benefites, they be regiſtred vp before him to put vs to reproch. Therfore we ſhall gaine nothing by the ſhortnes of our remembraunce,nor by our forgetting of the great number of Gods benefits,no nor yet by our defacing of them as much as in vs lieth:for God forgetteth not any thing, all thinges muſt needes come to account before him. Wherefore let vs prouide for it aforehand. And as (I haue ſaid) let euery of vs looke neerely to himſelfe, & the mo commodities we haue,let vs conſider ẏ our Lord bindeth vs the more to magnifie him,& wil haue vs to receiue the cup of ſaluation at his hand, & to call vpon his name,that our mouthes may be open to ſing ſongs of praiſe vnto him. Mark that for one point. And therefore let vs aſſure ourſelues ẏ this vnthankfulnes wil make vs the more vnexcuſable,ſeeing ẏ God ſetteth here before vs ẏ benefites which he had beſtowed vpō his people,& vſeth ſuch a number of words to ſhew that nothing was forgotten which he had done for ẏ people when they had once eſtranged thēſelues from him,and ẏ his intent in ſhewing himſelf ſo liberal,was not ẏ the people ſhoulde make none account of it,but ẏ they ſhold haue born al things wel in minde. Let ẏ therfore ſerue for one point.

Againe, when our God giueth vs ſuch abundance;let vs beware that we vſe his benefits wel. For ſurely to learne to be rich,and to haue abundance,and alſo to be contented with pouertie & Phil.4.12.
want (as ſaith S.Paul) is a poynt very hard to bee attained vnto: and yet it ought to be common to al the children of God. S. Paul,in ſaying that he could skil to be poore,meaneth that hee was patient, ſo as he neither troubled nor tormēted himſelfe when God ſent him ſcarſitie and want of eaſe:for he knew that God would not fail him in the end. Ye ſee then ẏ the knowledge of Gods children,is on the one ſide to be poore. Againe on the otherſide he ſaith, that he can skill to abounde: meaning, that when God gaue him abundance and more than he needed: hee ouerſhot not himſelfe by abuſing it in ſuperfluous expenſes or in playing the looſe colt as men term it, but that he vſed it moderatly and meaſurably. Then if God giue vs more than wee neede, let vs aſſure our ſelues that in ſo doing he approcheth the neerer to vs,at leaſtwiſe if we can skill to vſe well the benefites which he hath beſtowed vpō vs,that is to ſay without vainglory,without pride,without diſorder, ſo as wee be not too much giuen to our delights, but vſe Gods benefites with meaſure and ſtayednes, and therwithall be readie to indure hunger and thirſt when it pleaſeth God, that if he giue vs abundance wee be not ſo drunken with it but that we ſtil acknowledge him to be our foſterfather. But we ſee on the contrary part howe the worlde behaueth it ſelfe in this behalfe. For what a ſort of drunkardes, what a ſort of gluttons ſhall a man ſee, which are like ſwine in a ſtie without any vnderſtanding or reaſon? They can fill their paunches wellynough,but they can no skill to lift vp their heades to heauen to honor him that findeth and maintaineth them ſo wealthily: their groynes & muſſels are euer grubbing downewarde to their feeding. Therefore let vs not reſemble them. If God giue vs wealth,let vs not pamper or pranck vp our ſelues, but rather let it bee as a ſpurre to quicken vs vp to come vnto him;the nearer that hee approcheth vnto vs,and the more that hee maketh vs to feele his goodnes;the more wholly let vs yeeld our ſelues thereto.That is the thing which we be taught in this text.

Now whereas Moſes ſaith,Hee forſooke the God which made him,and skorned the ſtrong God of his welfare: thereby hee ſheweth vs after what manner we abuſe Gods benefites,namely by ſhrinking away from him,whereas he would haue vs to bee brought neerer to him. For(as I ſaide afore)all the commodities which God giueth vs in this world ought to be as ladders whereby to climbe vp to him. And if we be wedded to the earth, it is the way to make vs turne the benefits of our God to the cleane contrarie. Therefore let vs take good heede that we prouoke him not to diſpleaſure. And whereas Moſes ſaieth, that it was God that created his people: hee meaneth it not alonely as in reſpect that he is the maker of the world,but as in reſpect that hee had choſen that people, and had made as it were a newe worlde of them. For Gods fetching of the children of Iſrael out of the lande of Egypt, his feeding of them in the wildernes, and his putting of them in poſſeſſion of the land which he had promiſed vnto them,were as a newe creating of them: He had not onely made them men, but alſo newe men. So then the making that Moſes ſpeakes of here,is not of the firſt making whereby the children of Iſrael were brought into the worlde: but of Gods reforming of them to bee his children. And it is the very ſame thing that is ment in the fourescore and fifteenth Pſalm. Now then(ſaith Moſes) will ye ſpite him which hath twice made you after that faſhion? What an vnthankfulnes were that? The like condemnation lyeth vpon vs nowadayes, if we walke not in the obedience of our God, ſeeing he hath not onelie placed vs in the worlde,but alſo called vs to the hope of the endleſſe life,reforming vs by his holy ſpirit, and calling vs to the knowledge of the Goſpell of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Sith it is ſo,let vs beware we forget it not,or that we ſhrink not away from him in any wiſe. Yea and let vs marke well the word that Moſes vſeth in ſaying that they mocked or skorned the ſtrong God of their welfare. The terme that hee vſeth commeth of a foole or thing of nothing,[as if a man would ſay,they befooled him, or they louted him.] Whereby he aggrauateth the ouergreat skornefulneſſe of that people in not honoring God as they ought to haue done. Then if wee yeelde not God his due glorie and praiſe,it is all one as if wee made no account of him,or as if wee bleared out our tongues at him in way of mockage: And that were too exceſſiue vnthankfulneſſe or rather vntolerable trecherie. Therfore let vs beware that we be not guiltie of ſuch a crime as is the deſpiſing of him which is the ſtrong holde of our welfare, that is to ſay, him vpon whom we ſtay, without whom we can by no meanes continue,which keepeth vs vnder his protection,and to be ſhort, of whom we hold our life and all that belongeth thereunto. Muſt we not needes be worſe than brute beaſtes,when we forget him? Let vs vnderſtand then that beſides the other benefites which God beſtoweth vpon vs, we be alſo ſetled vpon his power, ſo as he hath ỹ gouerning of vs,and we be after ſuch a ſort in his tuition,that we finde him alwayes the fortreſſe of our welfare, to the intent that wee holding our ſelues to him, may knowe alſo that hee is euer readie and forwarde to increaſe his gratious giftes and to multiplie them, vntill hee haue brought vs to the full perfection of our ſaluation.

Pſal 95.7.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD with acknowledgment of our faults,praying him to make vs feele them more and more,and therewithall that hauing ſhewed himſelfe ſo gratious towards vs,hee ſuffer vs not to forget his benefits,nor to abuſe the ſuſtenāce which hee giueth vs in this worlde;but that wee may be drawen further by it,namely to ſeeke the heauenly foode of our ſoules leaſt they ſhoulde ſtarue,and that our whole ſtay and contentation may be in the doctrine which is dayly deliuered vs by the Goſpel, and in the grace of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; ſo as all his ſpirituall gifts may bee applied by vs to the glorifying of our good god: that when his glorie ſhineth forth in this world, we may perfectly be partakers thereof,after wee bee rid of this mortall fleſh,and diſpatched from the tranſitorie ſtate of this earthly life. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to al people and Nations of the earth &c.

On Wedneſday the iij. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXII.Sermon which is the fifth vppon the two and thirtith Chapter.

16 They haue prouoked him with their ſtrange gods,& ſtirred him to diſpleaſure with their abhominations.

17 They haue offered ſacrifice to Deuils, and not vnto God: to gods whom they haue not knowen, to newe gods lately come vp, whom your fathers feared not.

18 Thou haſt forgotten the ſtrong God that begate thee: and beene vnmindefull of the God that ſhaped thee.

19 The Lorde ſawe it and was ſore grieued at it by reaſon of the prouocation of his ſonnes and daughters.

HEere Moſes declareth the vnthankfulneſſe of the people, in that they peruerted the ſeruice of God, hauing the lawe whereby they were taught after what manner God woulde bee honored, and being inſtructed at his hande that they ought to giue themſelues wholly to him, and not go ſeeke vnto ydols, nor borrowe any thing of the heathen and Infidels. But notwithſtanding all this, the people ceaſed not to take the bridle in their teeth, and to mingle a ſort of ſuperſtitions with the ſeruice of God. Inſomuch as it ſufficed them not to haue God to their father, but they woulde needes haue a number of other patrons, as men terme them. And this befell not onely when Moſes wrate this ſong: but alſo the holy ghoſt informed him of the things that were then to come vpon that people, and this record was of neceſſitie to bee giuen thereof. And ſo this ſong ſerued to ſhewe the tranſgreſſours of Gods lawe, that they coulde not ſcape the hande of the heauenly Iudge, ſeeing their ſinnes were knowen ſo long aforehande. For howe is it poſſible that God ſhould forget the faultes that wee haue committed, or howe is it poſſible for vs to blindfolde his eyes that he ſhould not ſee them, ſeeing he foreſawe our euill doings euen long afore we were borne, and is the iudge of them?

But heere Moſes vpbraideth the people, That they had prouoked God by ſtraunge Gods, that they had ſtirred him vp to ielouſie, and that they ſet his wrath on fire with their abhominations. Firſt wee muſt call to rememberance what hath beene ſaide as well in the fifth Chapter as in other places: namely Deut.5.9. that this worde ielouſie is attributed to God, becauſe hee will haue vs to worſhippe none but himſelfe alone: and alſo becauſe hee admitteth vs with this condition, that wee ſhoulde walke before him in all manner of pureneſſe. When a man misbehaueth himſelfe, it is all one as if a woman forſaking her husbande, ſhoulde play the harlot and giue ouer her ſelf to al leawdnes. That then is the cauſe why God termeth himſelfe iealous. Not that he is ſubiect to any paſſions; but to ſhewe that his honour is deare to him, and that he cannot away with any companion, but that if we will acquite our ſelues of the faith that we haue plighted vnto him, wee muſt yeeld ourſelues wholy vnto him, we muſt behaue ourſelues ſoundly & vncorruptly without doublenes, we muſt not ſtand debating what God we ſhould ſticke vnto, but we muſt let him haue the poſſeſſion of vs, & not make any minglemangle or corruption. And that is the cauſe why Moſes expreſly addeth the worde ſtraunge, as though a woman forgetting her ſelfe to bee vnder couert baron, or that ſhe is bounde vnto her husbande by reaſon of the faith which ſhe hath plighted vnto him: ſhoulde goe make herſelfe common to ſuch as had no intereſt in her. In the ſame taking are wee, when wee inuent newe gods to worſhip them at our owne pleaſure.

Moſes addeth their abhominations: meaning that as ſoone as wee ſteppe aſide from the liuing God, and from the doctrine whereby he woulde haue vs to bee ruled; all our life is deteſtable before him, what colour of good intent ſo euer wee ſet vppon it, as the vnbeleeuers beare themſelues euer in hande that they doe well when they corrupt the true religion with their owne fancies. They beare themſelues in hand that all ſhoulde be well: but God cleane contrarie wiſe auoweth that in thoſe doings of theirs there is nothing but curſedneſſe. And ſo let vs marke well, that God alloweth not any Religion which is not ruled by his worde, and that it ſhall be in vaine for vs to alledge that wee thought we did for the beſt, when we ſought patrons and aduocates and inuented newe gods of our owne heade. All theſe thinges may perchaunce goe for good on mens behalfe, who deceiue themſelues with their owne dotages and dreames: but yet hath GOD giuen his definitiue ſentence vpon them, which hee will not repeale.

And to aggrauate the euill, Moſes addeth that they were newe gods, gods that were ſtart vp but a while agoe, gods whom their fathers knewe not: and ſo in effect, that they had done ſacrifice; not vnto God, but vnto the diuel. When hee ſpeaketh here of newe gods, whome the fathers feared not, and which came vp but tother day: thereby God doth the children of Iſrael to vnderſtande, that they ought to haue ſticked vnto him, becauſe hee is the maker of the world, and there was none but hee onely from all euerlaſtingneſſe, and that without him there is nothing firme and ſtable. Here therefore hee reprooueth the peoples fooliſhneſſe in forging newe gods to themſelues, euen ſuch gods as had neuer beene knowen of afore. And heere wee muſt note, that Moſes termeth al things by the name of Nouelties, which are inuented by men, though the error haue continued neuer ſo long time. For it is a fondneſſe to alledge that men haue done ſo heretofore a hundred yeares ago, and that things haue beene helde and obſerued ſo beyonde all remembrance of man. For God paſſeth not for that. And why? Wee muſt goe to the euerlaſtingneſſe which hath beene before the creation of the worlde. Men then can not preiudice Gods trueth by their long poſſeſſing of their abuſes. For God will ſtill vſe ſuch ſtyle as wee ſee heere, namely, that it is all but newe ſtuffe. For in deede the ydols of whome mention is made heere, had beene worſhipped long time afore. As for example, the Egyptians boaſted themſelues to haue beene often thouſande yeares continuance before the creating of the worlde: they bare them ſelues in hande that they had their kingdome long afore the Moone was created in the skye. But what coulde all this boote them as in reſpect of their ſuperſtitions? Let vs marke well then, that the children of Iſraell, intermedling themſelues with the abuſes and corruptions of ſuch as boaſted themſelues to haue liued after that faſhion by the ſpace of fiue hundred, a thouſande, three thouſande, yea and (as I ſayde) ten thouſande yeares before the creation of the worlde, are (notwithſtanding all this) condemned of deuyſing of newe gods. Coulde not they haue replyed thus? This is not newe: for let it bee inquired, and it will bee founde that the Egyptians haue euer liued ſo: and Gods lawe may bee called newe in compariſon, at leaſtwiſe to outwarde ſeeming. But (as I ſayde afore) Moſes had an eye to Gods euerlaſtingneſſe. For if yee ſeeke there for the things that men haue deuiſed; yee ſhall finde them to bee nothing. And why ſo? For (as it is ſayde in the Pſalme) a thouſande yeares are but as one day in Gods ſight. In deede wee make great account of a thouſande yeares: but that is becauſe wee paſſe away in poſt through the worlde. For after a two or three turnes, wee bee fayne to returne from whence wee came. By reaſon of the ſhortneſſe and brittleneſſe of our life, wee make a greate matter of it if a thing haue continued fourtie or threeſcore yeares, and much more if it continue a hundred yeares. And if it holde out to a thouſande: then wee thinke wee ſhoulde neuer make any more ſticking at it, nor any more gayneſay it: but in deede all this is but mockerie, as I haue declared before.

Pſal.90.4.& 2.Pet.3.8.

And truely GOD created the worlde to the ende that his maieſtie ſhoulde bee ſeene both aboue and beneath, as in a looking glaſſe, and hee hath taught men that it is hee, to whome they ought to come. Adam knewe that. Neuertheleſſe, moſt men haue falne away to ſuperſtition, inſomuch that wee ſee that the ſeruice of GOD was imbaced euen in the life of Adam, and that it was fayne to bee reformed againe as it were by miracle. When the floude came, God cleanſed the earth newe againe. And whereas hee reſerued but one only houſholde wherein there were but eight perſons: it was a meane to bring home the worlde againe vnto him: that whereas they had all beene backeſlyders afore, and had turned away from him, they ought as then to haue come to reaſon, and to haue reformed themſelues by the thinges which they had ſeene with their eyes. But beholde, there followed a newe falling away euen in the life of Noy. His owne children forſooke the ſeruice of GOD, and forged ydols to them ſelues. Nowe this ought of reaſon to bee taken for newe. But the miſchiefe continueth ſtill, and wee ſee that ydolatrie reigned euen in the time of Abraham. Foure hundred yeares mo had paſſed at ſuch time as the lawe was giuen, yea, there were paſſed about a fiue hundred yeares ſince the time that Abraham had beene an ydolater at home with his father. Superſtition therefore had beene auncient, and was become as it were rotten. Men had weltered in it ſo long time, that they might well ſay, We in theſe dayes are not the firſt beginners thereof. No: but though an errour bee once waxen olde, yet muſt not men make a cuſtome of it, neither muſt they of a wicked cuſtome make a continuall lawe or rule. Loe howe men beguyle themſelues by ſticking too ſtiffely to things that are growen into euill cuſtome. For why? They beare them ſelues in hande, that if a thing haue beene vſed of long time, then it is lawfull for men to doe it. But an euill cuſtome is nothing elſe than an errour forgrowen. And it is ſo much the woorſe and the more to bee miſliked, becauſe God hath beene the grieuouſlyer offended by it. Wherefore let vs beware that wee drawe not thinges to a conſequence, becauſe they haue beene abuſed of long time: but let vs ſtill returne backe to the originall.

Gen.7.17.

Ioſua.24.2.

And this is a verie neceſſarie poynt for vs in theſe dayes. For the Papiſtes affirme that the thinges which wee doe, are newe, and that they were inuented but a whyle agoe. Yea, but if wee aske them a proofe of their antiquitie, what ſay they? That ſuch thinges haue beene done nowe theſe fiue hundred yeares. Truely they lye moſt commonly with full mouth. For the thing which they holde as chiefe and moſt reſolute, is not of ſo long continuance. If yee ſeek for their confeſſion, or ſhrift, about a foure hundred yeares agoe, there was no lawe at all thereof. If yee looke for their tranſubſtantiation, it is in like caſe. They make men beleeue that the breade is no more a materiall thing, but that it is God whome wee ought to worſhip. And that is ſpycke and ſpawne newe, I meane euen in accounting after the manner of men. In like caſe is it with all the reſidue. If wee looke vppon all the faſhions which they holde at this day, ſurely they bee but a renuing of the thinges that were in olde tyme, and yet there is little or no reſemblaunce in them. But let vs put the caſe it were to bee graunted them, that the forme of religion which they holde hath beene obſerued by the ſpace of a thouſande yeares or mo. What will a thouſand yeares helpe when wee come before GOD?

Pſal.90.4.& 2.Pet.3.8. They will not bee reckened for a day, no nor for a minute, as I ſayde afore. And where is then our true antiquitie? In Ieſus Chriſt who is the beginning of all thinges, and to whome all things are to bee brought backe againe: In the liuing God, by whom our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is ſent vnto vs, to make his will knowen vnto vs. There muſt wee bee grounded, if wee will haue the auncient faith. For in holding our ſelues to men, wee ſhall haue nothing but noueltie. Score wee vp neuer ſo many yeares, they will ſtande vs in no ſteede, for all paſſeth and glydeth away. But wee muſt haue him, which hath neither beginning nor ending, and his vnchangeable trueth muſt bee our rule. When wee reſt vppon that, then haue wee the auncient faith. And therefore wee at this day may well proteſt againſt the Papiſtes, Turkes, and Iewes themſelues, that they bee backeſlyders, and haue withdrawen themſelues from the true and pure religion, and that wee continue in the doctrine which hath beene followed in all ages, worſhipping the God which created vs, which gaue foorth his lawe by the hand of Moſes, and which hath vttered himſelf moſt perfectly by the Goſpel. Bring wee here any newe thing? Say wee that men muſt haue newe rules and newe faſhions inuented by men as the Papiſtes doe? For all their Religion is grounded vppon theſe poyntes, namely, that they muſt keepe the traditions of their elders, that they muſt obſerue the lawes of their mother holy Church, that the ſame muſt bee taken in equall authoritie with the holy Scripture, and that the holy Ghoſt was not giuen fully ynough to the Apoſtles, but that the perfection of thinges was reuealed afterwardes to a ſort of hypocrites and I wote not to whome elſe. Thoſe are thinges whereon the Papiſtes reſt. The Turkes are altogether Renegates. The Iewes haue peruerted the lawe, and haue no more of it but the dead letter, becauſe they 2 Cor,3,6,7 8. haue refuſed Ieſus Chriſt who is the ſoule thereof as Saint Paul termeth him. So then, wee may well proteſt, that our faith is auncient, for as much as it is grounded vppon Gods trueth, who neuer chaungeth ne varyeth, and that men haue not taught vs any thing on their owne head, but that wee haue the ſame God which hath vttered him ſelfe in all ages, and that wee followe the doctrine whereunto hee woulde haue men to holde themſelues, which likewiſe is euerlaſting. Thus much concerning the firſt poynt.

And as touching the mention that is made of the fathers, let vs marke that in this behalfe wee muſt in any wiſe vſe diſcretion, that wee take not thoſe indifferently for our fathers, which could not beget vs by the worde of God. For the Egyptians and all the Infidels of the worlde coulde welynough ſay, Our fathers liued ſo, ſo haue they taught vs, wee holde our religion of them: and ſuch ſayinges might wel bee ſet as a ſheelde to defende them. But becauſe God diſclaymed their fathers, therefore coulde that excuſe ſtande them in no ſteede. For God preſuppoſeth heere that hee had called to him both Abraham and the Patriarkes, and alſo that they had helde the true religion, which thing did put a difference betwene them and the reſt of the whole worlde.

Againe, whereas hee ſayeth, that they had worſhipped gods whome their fathers feared not: it is all one as if hee ſhoulde vpbrayd them, ſaying; What? I adopted and chooſe your fathers to bee my children, and they worſhipped mee as their God, and will you nowe forſake mee? To bee ſhort, wee muſt holde this for a generall rule, our fathers are thoſe whome God hath reputed, and aduowed to bee his children. Therefore whoſoeuer ſeeketh any other fathers than the children of God, ſhall finde nothing but baſtardie. And at that poynt are the Papiſtes. For in ſpeaking of the fathers, they conſider not that the Apoſtles and ſuch other as haue beene begotten by the pure doctrine of the Goſpel, are our true fathers: but they call hypocrites, and dreamers, yea and ſcorners of GOD which haue turned all thinges vpſide downe, their fathers. They alledge the greate Aſſes which neuer taſted any whit of the holy Scripture; ſo that if a man marke what maner of fathers they auouche, ſurely it is ſo fonde a thing, that they bee woorthie to bee laughed to ſcorne for it euen of little babes. True it is that for honours ſake they will ſay that Saint Auſtine, S. Ambroſe, and Saint Bernarde are their fathers: but if any good thing be alledged that is founde in them, they abhorre that: in ſo much that if they had them aliue at this day, they woulde burne them as well as they doe the Martyrs, whom wee ſee them handle moſt cruelly. Therefore (as I ſayde afore) it behoueth vs to walke diſcreetely in that behalfe, and to conſider who bee our true fathers that wee may followe them: namely thoſe whome God auoweth for his children, and haue begotten vs by his worde, which haue helde vs to it, and which haue taught vs it. But as ſoone as this incorruptible ſeede of ſaluation is marred; by 1.Pet.1.23, and by there is no more fatherhood. And herein wee muſt practiſe Saint Paules ſaying, which is, that all kinred proceedeth of God. Let vs Eph.3,15.
then referre all kinred vnto God, and ſo ſhall wee not bee aſhamed. But if euery man will needes followe his owne fathers without difference; hee ſhall finde that when the blynde followeth the blynde, both of them fall into the pit and breake their neckes together. At that poynt are all they which ſtande ſtiffely in their owne opinion againſt God, & leane to yͤ things which haue beene deuiſed by men. Therefore let vs bee well aduiſed, and ſeeing GOD hath graunted vs the grace to haue his goſpel planted once among vs, let vs continue in all pureneſſe, holding our ſelues wholly vnto him, that there may bee a conformitie and agreement betweene vs and thoſe that haue ſhewed vs the right way. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to remember vppon this text, where Moſes blameth the Iewes for ſtarting backe, & for deuiſing of new gods which had not beene feared among their fathers.

Yea and wee muſt bethinke vs of that which Ier.2.10. is ſayd in the ſeconde Chapter of Ieremy. Go your wayes (ſayth hee) into all the countryes afarre off, get ye ouer the ſea, ſeeke throughout al the yles, and ſee if there be any people that forſaketh their gods: yet are they no gods, they bee but ydoles and dead thinges: but you haue forſaken mee, euen mee who am the fountaine of liuing water. God ſheweth there that ydolaters are wilful in their leaſings: inſomuch that although the diuell haue ſo bewitched them that they bee voyde of diſcretion and reaſon, & cannot iudge of any thing: yet notwithſtanding they be wedded ſtill to their follies. And becauſe they thinke they do well, they holde them to it, and they can by no meanes bee turned from it. Yee ſhall ſee them as greatly bent to their willes, as may bee, and yet they haue no foundation nor proofe thereof. Now then, that we which haue knowen Gods trueth; which are ſure that it is hee which created and ſhaped vs, and which hath vttered himſelfe to vs by his lawe, by his Prophets, and by his Goſpel; that wee which haue ſuch warrant and certeintie, that wee which haue the fathers & the greate clowde of witneſſes to guyde vs (as the Apoſtle Hebr.12.1. termeth them in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes:) that wee which after the Apoſtles haue alſo had the Martyrs & thoſe which haue receiued the Goſpel with pure obediẽce, & followed the ſimplicitie thereof: that we (I ſay) ſhould yet notwithſtanding loue better the corruption, dung, & filthines brought in by men, & that we ſhould find in our hearts to haue Gods word falſifyed among vs: what a thing were that? Muſt it not needes be that wee be as it were mad, when we be o vnſtedfaſt & light mynded, as to ſtart away from that which is certaine and infallible? After that maner then muſt wee put this text in vre, to yͤ intent we be not accuſed before God, as ſekers of new gods which were not knowẽ to our fathers, & which came vp but a while agoe.

The word that Moſes vſeth here betokeneth properly to ſtand in awe, to feare, or to tremble before God. Wherby he ſheweth that Gods maieſtie ought to bee ſo dreaded of vs, yͭ we ſhould ſtoope vnto it, & be caſt down & humbled at it. Not that God would haue vs to be afrayd of it, for we can neuer ſerue him with our good will, & with a pure & free heart, if wee conceiue ſuch a feare of him as ſhal make vs to flee from him. But there are two things in the ſeruice of God, as is ſhewed vs in the Pſalme which ſhalbe ſong Pſal.5.8. anon, namely that in comming vnto God, wee muſt bee touched with a certeine feare, to yeeld him his due reuerence. That is one point. And therewithall wee muſt alſo conſider his goodnes, that wee may take courage to come vnto him, & be bold to cal vpon him, not douting but that he heareth vs, & that we ſhalbe wel accepted at his hand. Marke wel therefore what this word Feare, importeth, that wee may learne to hold our ſelues vnder the obedience of our God with ſuch awe as none of vs may take leaue to runne aſtray, as wee ſee men do, whoſe boldnes is ſuch that they fling abrode euery where, becauſe they make but a ſporte & a dalyance of God. Therefore let vs beware that wee be not ſo rude as to daly with ſo great a Lorde; but rather let vs be ſeaſoned with ſuch a feare aforehand, as may alwayes hold vs in awe: and yet notwithſtanding not cauſe vs to ceaſſe frõ worſhipping of our God, in ſuch ſort as hee may be amyable to vs, and we may preaſe boldly to him knowing well that he will receiue vs with pitie, Pſal.103.13 as a father doth his children, ſeeing hee calleth vs to him before we come.

Nowe in the ende Moſes ſayeth, that they offered ſacrifice to diuels & not vnto God. This ſaying may ſeeme rough and hard at the firſt ſight. For if a man had asked the heathen concerning their intent, they would haue ſayd by & by, We knowe there is one chiefe God: but wee haue many gods becauſe the maieſtie of God is ſpred out euery where. And therefore foraſmuch as we cannot attaine to ſo high a thing, it behooueth vs to haue meanes. That is the cauſe why they forged ſuch a multitude of gods. As for the diuels, they abhorred them. The Heathen could as will ſkill as the Papiſtes to ſay, Wee intende not to haue aught to doe with the diuels, ſauing the ſorcerers, (for there haue euer beene ſome ſuch) but I ſpeake as touching their cõmon religion: and it is certaine that all of them woulde haue proteſted, Our will is to ſerue God. But what is anſwered them heere by the mouth of Moſes, who is appoynted Iudge with full authoritie, and is as the inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt? Ye ſerue the diuel. Wee ſee then that all their excuſes ſhall ſtande them in no ſteede, and that this muſt holde to the condemnation of the whole worlde, namely, that as ſoone as men ſwarue neuer ſo litle from yͤ pure trueth, it is a ſeruing of the diuell, and the diuel hath a parte in all their doings: for God refuſeth euery whit of it. And it is a text well worthie to bee noted, to the intent that the ignorant wretches may bee wakened, and vnderſtande that in grounding themſelues vpon their owne good intentes, they doe nothing elſe but increaſe Gods vengeance vppon their heads, without amending their caſe thereby. Wherefore let vs on our ſyde vtterly abhorre all that euer is contrarie to the ſeruice of God, & make much of the fauour that hath beene ſhewed vs in his deliuering of vs from ſuch a bottomleſſe pit. We haue thought our ſelues to haue done maruellouſly well in ſeruing of ydols; we haue eſteemed it an Angels life to trot vp and down from altar to altar, and from chappel to chappel, to babble before puppets, to heare Maſſes, and to ſet our mindes vppon ſuch other gewgawes. But in the meane while, beholde, God telleth vs that wee ſerued the diuel. It is a horrible thing for vs to heare him ſay ſo. Therefore let vs looke that wee condemne our ydolatries, and bee ſory that wee haue ſo prouoked Gods wrath againſt vs. And therewithall let vs conſider the ineſtimable good which he hath done vs, in reaching vs his hande to lift vs out of the gulfe wherein wee were plunged. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vpon this Text. And therfore let vs be throughly ſettled in the pure doctrine, and in the ſimplicitie of the holy Scripture. For why? As long as wee holde that rule, wee bee ſure that GOD will allowe of the ſeruice which wee doe vnto him. But if wee mingle any thing with it of our owne fancies, or if we borrowe any thing of men; all is marde and corrupted, and the diuel is foorthwith put in poſſeſſion of all that euer wee doe, and God renounceth vs, according to this ſaying of his by the Prophet Ezechiel. Ezec.20.39 Hence (ſayeth he) I giue ouer my part, I will haue neither little nor much to doe in this caſe, I require no more of you: yee thinke to ſerue mee and your ydoles together, but I renounce you and giue you ouer quite and cleane to the diuell: for I intende not that you ſhall ſo mingle mee with your dung and filthineſſe. Thus you ſee in effect what Moſes meant to declare heere.

Nowe hee addeth, that the people forgate the God which had begotten them, and the mightie one which had created and ſhaped them. Hee vſeth ſtill the ſame worde which I haue tranſlated before, and which ſignifieth properly a Rocke. And God is ſo termed, becauſe we be preſerued, and mayntained by his power, as if a houſe were grounded and buylded vpon a rocke. Whereas hee ſayeth that the people had forgotten the God which had begotten them, it is to bereaue them of all excuſe of ignorance. For the Heathen might well haue ſayde that they had neuer taſted a whit of the true religion, and that their weltring after that manner in their owne dotages, was for want of teaching, and that it is no woonder though a blynd man ſtumble or goe aſtray in the darke. The Heathen might haue alleaged after that ſort for themſelues. But as for thoſe to whome the lawe had bin giuen, there was no ſuch ſtarting hole for them. Ioſu.24.2. Exod.3.15. & 34.1. For God had drawen their father Abraham from the ydolatrie wherein he liued, as is declared in the laſt Chapter of Ioſua. Hereupon, about a foure hundred yeres after, he put them the better in mynde againe that he was the liuing God. And afterward he did ſet down his wil euen in writing. It was his minde that it ſhould bee a preſident of authoritie whereby to knit a mutuall agreement betweene him and them, as if hee ſhoulde ſay, I wilbee your father, and bee you my children. Seeing then that the people of Iſrael were taught after that faſhion, and God vttered himſelfe ſo familiarly vnto them; what can they ſay, or what excuſe can they alledge, for their turning away to the ſuperſtitions of the Heathen, and for their peruerting of the trueth, which was ſo throughly knowen vnto them, and yet they turned it into lyes, inſomuch as they fell to the quenching of the light of ſaluation, and woulde needes goe wilfully and wittingly aſtray, ſeeking their owne deſtruction euen after that God had reached them his hande, and ſhewed them the way of ſaluation? According whereunto wee haue ſeene the proteſtation that Moſes made in the thirtith Chapter, ſaying: This is the way, walke therein. Deut.30.15 Is it not too ſhamefull a rebelliouſneſſe, when folke will ſo deſpiſe God and not ſticke vnto him? So then, it is not cauſeleſſe that they bee accuſed in this text to haue forgotten the GOD which ſhaped them. And therefore let vs marke well, that when wee haue once knowen God, the ſame ought to ſuffice to holde vs in continuall obedience towardes him, if wee were not too too vnthankfull. Nothing ought to holde vs ſo ſure as the knowing of GOD. For then may wee ſay, This is our GOD, wee haue no dout nor miſweening of him, as they haue which deceiue themſelues by following their owne imaginations, but wee haue the certaine trueth which cannot beguyle vs. Had we therefore well profited in the knowledge of GOD, ſurely it woulde ſuffice to holde vs in awe. And although wee were neuer ſo ſore turmoyled on all ſydes, ſo as the diuell did caſt neuer ſo many ſtumbling blockes in our wayes, and wee had neuer ſo many occaſions giuen to turne vs aſyde, and wee ſee neuer ſo greate diuerſitie of opinions and whatſoeuer elſe is poſſible: ſurely if wee haue profited in Gods ſchoole, and knowe him as wee ought to doe, wee ſhall neuer bee turned away from him. And that is Saint Paules meaning where hee ſayeth, Eph.4.14. that ſuch as are well grounded in the Goſpel, ſhall no more bee like little babes that wilbee allured at the ſhewing of an apple, and turne their heads this way and that way after it, and that if a man put a toye in their head, by and by they bee carryed away with it, and forget the thing which they were in loue withall a litle afore. S. Paul ſayth that if wee be well ſettled in the Goſpell, wee ſhall not bee any more ſo led by the billes, neither ſhall the diuell bee able to woorke vs ſuch illuſions, but that wee ſhall abyde vnuanquiſhable, and hee ſhall gayne nothing at our hands. For our faith ſhall be ſtedfaſt.

Alſo on the contrarie parte, if wee doe eſtrange ourſelues from GOD, after wee haue once knowen him, it betokeneth a deſperate malice in vs, it is not for vs to cloke the matter as then, for all that wee can alleage wilbee to no purpoſe. Then is it a thruſting of GOD vnder our foote, if after his ſhewing of him ſelfe vnto vs, wee corrupt the pureneſſe of his woorde in chaunging the Religion which hee hath giuen vnto vs, and in leauing the rule which it behooued vs to followe. Nowe wee ſee the meaning of Moſes. And therefore ſeeing that God hath beene ſo gracious to vs as to reueale his will vnto vs, and ſheweth vs that hee is the liuing God: let vs take heed that wee wauer not any more, ne bee Eph.4.14. any more as reedes that yeeld to euery wynde, but that wee continue ſtedfaſt in the fayth wee haue receiued by his worde, leaſt it bee caſt in our teeth that wee haue forgotten him with all the benefites which wee haue receiued at his hande.

And heere Moſes ſetteth not downe ſingly the worde God, but ſayeth, The God which begate thee, the mightie one which ſhaped thee. Here Moſes telleth the people of Iſraell, that they had good cauſe to holde him for their God, if they had not quyte and cleane forgotten the gracious goodneſſe which they had earſt founde in him by experience. And that is a thing well woorthie to bee weyed. For it is Gods will not onely to bee knowen in his beeing or in his name, but alſo to ſhewe himſelfe to vs by his deedes, ſo as wee haue true recordes of his power, goodneſſe, mercie, and iuſtice. Seeing then that God hath ſo ſhewed himſelfe to vs, what is our vnthankfulneſſe if wee knowe him not? Is it not too ſhamefull? Therefore wee muſt alwayes conſider, that God hath cauſed it to be declared vnto vs, not onely that it is hee whome wee ought to feare, and to whome wee ought to be ſubiect without any further proofe, but alſo that therewithall it is hee that hath begotten vs. And this is to bee marked yet better of vs, than it was of the men of olde time vnder the lawe. For wee haue our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt the onely ſonne, into whoſe bodie wee be graffed that we may become the ſonnes of God. Therefore the body of the tree and roote of our adoption, is that wee bee made the brethren of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For beeing begotten of God, wee bee nouriſhed and ſuſtayned by the doctrine of his Goſpel. Nowe if wee conſider what wee were before, namely, the children of Adam and heires of euerlaſting curſedneſſe: and alſo if wee haue an eye to thoſe whome God ſuffereth to runne into deſtruction, it will yeelde the greater glory to the fauour which hee ſheweth vs. Seeing then that God doeth nowe drawe vs to him to bee his owne, and to bee of his houſholde, ſhall wee fling away from him? Shall wee rather followe ydoles which wee are not acquainted with? Wee ſee then as nowe, that wheras Moſes doeth ſo grieuouſly blame the children of Iſraell, hee doeth it not without cauſe, conſidering the experience which they had had of Gods goodnes, power and iuſtice, and yet that they had made no reckoning of it.

In reſpect whereof hee ſayeth that God ſawe it and was angrie at it, euen becauſe of the misbehauiour of his ſonnes and daughters. This ſentence is a confirmation of my former ſaying. For whereas the Iewes are termed the children of God, it is not in way of honour, but rather to ſhewe that they were guiltie of ſuch vnfaithfulneſſe as to forſake their God, and to rebell againſt him, and to woorke him ſuch ſpyte, as that they had leuer chuoſe the deuil than him. Thus yee ſee howe wee ought to ioyne theſe two thinges together, namely, that God is the mightie one which begate vs, and of whom wee holde all thinges: and therewithall that hee hath receiued vs and adopted vs to be his children. But wee ſhall pay full deare for it, if wee continue not in his obedience. The thing then whereunto wee muſt come backe, is that if God cannot beare with the wickednes of the world, ne doeth forgiue the vnbeleeuers which haue ſinned without the knowledge of his wil: needes muſt wee bee dubble puniſhed, and needes muſt more horrible vengeance light vppon our heads, who haue beene faithfully inſtructed to drawe nigh vnto him, and taught that hee hath nouriſhed vs in his lappe as his owne children, and yet notwithſtanding wee haue forſaken him. And that is Saint Paules meaning where hee ſayeth, that they which haue ſinned without the lawe, ſhall periſh neuertheleſſe for all that: and that they which haue offended after warning giuen by knowledge of the lawe, ſhall haue the ſorer damnation, Rom,2.12. accordingly alſo as our Lorde Ieſus ſayeth, that the ſeruant which hath done amiſſe though it were through vnskilfulneſſe, ſhall not fayle to bee puniſhed for it: Luk.12.48. becauſe hee ought to haue inquyred his maſters will. If a ſeruaunt ſay; I wiſt it not: And knoweſt thou not that I am thy maſter? Oughteſt thou not to inquire my will? But much more ought God to haue ſuch preheminence ouer his creatures. And if they that haue offended ſo through ignorance are not excuſed, what ſhall become of vs which knowe the will of our GOD? If wee fall to ſtryuing againſt him, to ſpyte him as it were of ſet purpoſe and of prepenſed malice and frowardneſſe; if wee fall to daſhing at him with our hornes, ſo as wee ſet our ſelues againſt his righteouſneſſe and tranſgreſſe his whole doctrine: muſt not ſo greate and ſo diueliſh headdineſſe bee puniſhed much more grieuouſly? In that reſpect is it ſayde heere that God was prouoked to anger with the tranſgreſſion of his ſonnes and daughters: as who ſhoulde ſay; True it is that God is greatly offended throughout the whole worlde: but hee had reſerued a people to himſelfe, whome hee had gathered together for his owne inheritance, and euen they are growen out of kynde: and is not that a thing to moue Gods vengeance the more?

Nowe let vs apply this doctrine to our owne vſe. And ſith wee ſee howe the wretched worlde is blynded nowe adayes, let vs conſider thus with our ſelues: Well, the Papiſtes ſhall not fayle to bee condemned: And if wee condemne them, can they ſcape the hande of GOD? That is vnpoſſible. But let vs firſt of all play the Iudges towardes our ſelues; and conſider that GOD hauing called vs to bee his children, will bee knowen to be our father, and wilbe ſerued & worſhipped at our hands. And therfore whenſoeuer we happen to ouerſhoote our ſelues, and to giue ouer ẏͤ doctrine wherein we haue bin once trayned. Gods wrath muſt needs be kindled againſt vs,& without cõpariſõ much more grieuouſly than againſt the ſilly ignorant and vnbeleeuing ſort. Seeing then that we be Gods children,& he hath ſet his markes vpon vs,& neuer ceaſſeth to allure vs by gentlenes: let vs not turne away from him, but let his ſo doing prouoke vs to honor him,and to ſerue him in ſuch wiſe, as he may take pleaſure in vs, and delight to doe vs good, and continue the increaſe of his grace and benefites more & more towardes vs.

But nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes , praying him not to lay them to our charge , but to drawe vs to him continually as long as wee bee in this worlde , correcting our vyces and infirmities , and ridding vs from all the corruptnes of our fleſh,and ſtil bearing with vs till hee haue fully reformed vs according to his righteouſnes , and taken vs quyte & cleane out of this corruptible life. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father,&c.

On Thurſday the iiij. of Iune,1556.

The CLXXXIII. Sermon which is the ſixt vpon the two & thirtith Chaper.

20 So he ſayd, I will hyde my face from them, and ſee what ſhall befall them. For they bee a fickle generation,children in whome there is no ſtedfaſtnes.

21 They haue mooued mee to ielouzie by the thing that is not god , and they haue prouoked mee to diſpleaſure with their vanities.And I[likewiſe] will moue them to ielouzie by them which are no people,and by a fooliſh nation will I prouoke them to indignation.

22 For the fire is kindled in my wrath, and ſhal burne to the verie bottome of the pitte, and deuowre the lande with the fruite thereof,and burne vp the foundations of the mountaines.

WE ſawe yeſterday how God is more grieuouſly diſpleaſed, when ſuch as ought to honour and ſerue him, do forſake him, than when it is done by ſilly ignorant vnbeleeuers. And not without cauſe . For God adopteth vs with this condition ; that his glorie ſhould ſhyne forth in vs: and therefore muſt it not needes be a dubbling of the offence, when wee be a reproche to him? If a father bee deſpyſed in his owne houſe, euen by thoſe whome he hath begotten, will it not grieue him much woorſe, than if ſome one of his neighbours ſhoulde miſuſe him ? Seeing then that God hath vouchſafed to chooſe vs to be his children ; and hath done vs the honour whereof wee were not worthie : let vs beware that our conuerſation bee ſuch , as our faultes and miſdeedes may not prouoke him , nor the thing befall vs which Moſes addeth here, namely, that he will hyde away his face . Nowe by this ſaying the Scripture meaneth that when GOD hath vſed patience in bearing long with men, winking at their vyces, and ceaſſing not to doe them good , and yet ſeeth that they bee altogether ſet vppon ſtubborneſſe and vnreformable: hee giueth them ouer for ſuch as they bee.

Nowe all our welfare and happineſſe lyeth in Gods defending of vs,and in his caring for vs. For if hee forget vs and vouchſafe not to ſuccour vs , and to bee our defence , in what taking are wee ? It were better for vs to bee deſtroyed out of hande, than to linger beeing out of the protection of our God. Therefore heere is a horrible threat, and ſuch a one as ought to make vs to quake, when as it is ſayde that when GOD hath tarryed a long tyme, hee will withdrawe himſelfe for our vtter alienating of him away from vs.

Wee haue ſeene heere afore, howe GOD vſed long ſufferance and gaue not ouer his people at the firſt daſh : but yet that at length hee was fayne to ſhewe that hee will not that his goodneſſe ſhoulde bee abuſed after that faſhion , nor that men ſhoulde harden their heartes by flattering themſelues , when hee puniſheth them not out of hande.

Therefore let vs looke to ourſelues. For if wee haue offended God, although hee lift not vppe his hande to puniſhe vs for it at the firſt inſtant, yet muſt not that make vs to fall aſleepe. Let vs (I ſay) preuent the vengeaunce of our God: for if hee be patient and beare with vs, it is to winne vs by his gratious goodneſſe and Rom.2.4. gentleneſſe, as S. Paul declareth in the ſecond to the Romanes. The more then that God ſpareth vs, the more let vs take warning to turne againe vnto him, and let it make vs aſhamed that we hauing ſo good a father, haue beene ſo ſtubborne againſt him. And if wee will needes ſtill welter in our owne filthineſſe, and heape naughtineſſe vpon naughtineſſe, ſo as there is no ende nor meaſure of our tranſgreſſions: then muſt GOD be faine to execute the thing which he ſpeaketh heere by Moſes, namely; Hyde a way his face; that is to ſay, that after hee hath hadde a care of our welfare, and continued in dooing vs good; he will at length giue vs ouer, and ſhew that he is no longer bounde vnto vs, and that although hee ſpared vs for a time, it is not his intent to bolſter vs continually in our euill dooinges. Wherefore let vs bee afrayde of this threate: and ſo long as GOD maketh vs to perceiue that he beholdeth vs with pitie, let vs walke as before his eyes, as though he were euer preſent with vs, and in all our thoughtes, wordes, and deedes, let vs haue our eyes ſtill vpon him.

But by the way we haue to marke, that God hydeth not his eyes in ſuch ſort, but that hee ſeeth and marketh all mens dooings, and dealinges. But it is ſo ſayde, becauſe God ſeemeth to ſhrinke away and to haue no more care of vs, when he ſuccoureth vs not at our neede. For if aduerſitie and afflictions oppreſſe vs, and wee flee vnto God; and yet finde no eaſe, but pine away ſtill continually: it can not be but that according to our vnderſtanding, we muſt needes imagine that GOD hath quite forgotten vs, and that he regardeth vs not any more. After this maner doeth Moſes tell vs heere, that God hydeth away his face. Furthermore we muſt vnderſtande, that when GOD hath once forſaken vs, there neuer happeneth any euill vnto vs, but it commeth from him: that is to ſay, all the afflictions which wee feele are puniſhmentes from his hande. We muſt not then thinke that GOD letteth men alone at all aduenture when he puniſheth them for their offences, but rather that hee is then neere them, to make them feele his power, ſhewing himſelfe a Iudge of their wicked deedes. But as for to holde them in his tuition, or to defende them; in that behalfe he threatneth himſelfe to be abſent, that is to ſay, that they ſhall not perceiue any more Deut.32.11 that he broodeth them vnder his winges, according to the ſimilitude which he had vſed afore.

And it is ſayde expreſſely, That hee will ſee what their ende will be. Heere GOD ſpeakes after the manner of men: for hee knewe all thinges aforehande euen before the creating of the worlde, and he needeth not to be taught by time as mortall wightes doe. But foraſmuch as we can not attayne to the heigth of Gods maieſtie, hee is faine to make himſelfe like vnto vs, and all for our inſtruction and edification. It is all one therefore as if he ſhould ſay to ſuch as deſpiſed him, Goe too, yee make no account for me, I behaued my ſelfe familiarly towardes you, and you haue abuſed that grace of mine; I haue required to be ſerued and honored of you, and you haue done mee all the ſhame ye coulde deuiſe: you haue borne yourſelues in hande that I was tyed vnto you, and that I was of neceſſitie to continue a father towardes you without ceaſſing, notwithſtanding that you played the rebellious children againſt mee. But nowe will I giue you ouer for ſuch as you be: doe the worſt yee can, and at length yee ſhall finde what it is to haue forſaken mee. I will hide myſelfe from you, that is to ſay, I will giue you ouer. In ſteede of maintaining and defending you as I haue done heeretofore, I vtterly renounce all acquaintaunce with you. See nowe what your ſtate ſhall be, and I alſo will ſee what your ende will bee, that is to ſay, it ſhall bee perceiued in what plyght men are, when I haue no longer care of them. GOD then ſpeaketh heere not ſo much of his owne knowledge, as of that which ſhall be ſeene and perceiued in the ende by experience. For (as I ſayde afore) GOD is not to bee taught by the chaunge of thinges, (for all thinges were preſent with him before the making of the worlde) but heere he declareth, that when folke are ſo forſaken, it will appeare by them that all the happineſſe of man conſiſteth in beeing preſerued by GOD: and that on the contrary part, they bee moſt wretched and vnhappie, when God hath giuen them ouer.

And hee addeth the reaſon. It is a fickle and frowarde generation, Children in whome there is no trueth. The firſt worde that Moſes vſeth heere, commeth of a verbe which ſignifieth to turne and returne. And ſo it is as much as if he ſhoulde ſay, It is a generation of wickedneſſes; for he vſeth the plurall number: and it importeth as much as if he ſhould ſay, It is a frowarde and curſed generation, or elſe a mutable and chaunging generation, and whereof there is no holde; nowe heere; nowe there: whereby is vttered not onely the vnconſtancie, but alſo the diſloyaltie of that people. He addeth that there was no ſtedfaſtneſſe in them. The worde betokeneth vprightneſſe, whereby is meant both loyaltie and faithfulneſſe. To be ſhort, GOD declareth heere, that he hadde tryed his people too much, and that in the ende it appeared that there was no vprightneſſe in them, but all manner of treaſon and trecherie. Foraſmuch therefore as hee founde ſuch leaudeneſſe in them, hee ſayeth hee will hyde himſelfe from them. But we muſt call to minde againe what I haue ſayde afore; to witte, that for a time GOD may fauour vs and beare with vs, and ſpare vs though we deſerue to haue rigour towardes vs: but when hee is ſo patient, it is to make vs diligent in examining our owne faultes, and to call our ſelues dayly to account, and to looke neerely to the thinges which are to bee found fault with, in vs. Alſo let vs marke well the ſaying that hath beene alleadged out of Saint Paul, howe that God allureth vs to amendment Rom.2.4. by gentleneſſe, when hee puniſheth vs not at the firſt, according to our deſeruinges. Sith the caſe ſtandeth ſo, whenſoeuer God ſheweth himſelfe fauourable and gratious towardes vs, let euery of vs conſider howe hee hath liued; and if we haue abuſed the benefites which he hath beſtowed vppon vs, let vs condemne ourſelues for it, and be ſorry for our ſinnes, and returne to him with ſuch ſorrowe as may appeare to bee vnfained. That is the thing which we haue to remẽber in the firſt place. But if we will needes diſcharge ourſelues by flatterie, to take leaue to doe euill: then muſt hee needes execute his vnreuocable ſentence of hyding away his face from vs after he hath borne long ynough with vs, and of ſeeing what will become of vs, and he muſt needes let vs rotte in our wretchedneſſe, foraſmuch as we could not abide that hee ſhould reach out his hande to helpe vs. And in any wiſe let vs marke that GOD can not away with hypocriſie in men: for among other thinges he requireth ſoundeneſſe and trueth in vs, that our conuerſation ſhoulde bee vtterly voide of all dubble meaning, and that we ſhould not be diſſemblers before him. True it is that our nature is full of fainedneſſe, as we ſee howe Ier.16.16. Ieremy reporteth of mans heart, that it is frowarde and beſnarled with all naughtineſſe, and that it is euen as a bottomleſſe pit. And therefore we muſt chaunge, if wee will haue God to admit and allowe vs for his children: and wheras we be inclined to euill, ſo as there is nothing but bitterneſſe and hardneſſe of heart in vs, we muſt pray vnto God to indewe vs with his holy ſpiritel, who is the ſpirite of conſtancie, and to ridde vs in ſuch ſort from all our naughtineſſe and vnfaithfulneſſe, as we may walke on before him in pure and vndefiled ſoundneſſe. Thus yee ſee what we haue to remember vppon this place.

Nowe it is ſaide further, That foraſmuch as the Children of Iſraell had prouoked GOD to iealozie by the thing that was not god, and prouoked him by their leazinges through the ſuperſtitions which they hadde deuiſed: he alſo would prouoke them by a people which was no people, and moue them to iealozie by a Nation that was no Nation. Heere GOD ſpeaketh againe after the manner of men, like as if a man ſeeing his wife ſo wicked and leaudely giuen that he could not reſtraine her, ſhould ſay, Well, I muſt needes diuorce her, and to doe her the more diſgrace I will take ſome chambermayde in her ſteede, to occupie her place. Now then if a wife haue liued in honorable ſtate with her husbande, and afterwarde behaue her ſelfe ſo naughlily and ſtubbornely, that hee caſteth her off, and thereuppon taketh ſome poore wench that was of no eſtimation, and vſeth her as his maried wife; his former wife will take the more ſpyte and griefe at it, as who woulde ſay, What? Shall ſuch a one nowe occupie my place? Muſt I be thruſt out for her? Muſt I be pointed at with euerie mannes finger and bee ſhamed and ill ſpoken of euerie where? After that manner is this text to bee vnderſtoode. For thus doeth GOD vtter his minde. What? They haue prouoked mee to Iealozie by the thing that is no god: I am the liuing GOD, and beſides that, they ought in reaſon to take mee for their father, becauſe I haue ſhewed my ſelfe ſo towardes them, declaring howe deerely I loued them, in that I haue preferred them before all other Nations of the worlde: and yet hereuppon haue they forged Idolles. But there is but one GOD: and therefore when men turne away from him, they muſt needes forge ydolles after their owne imaginations. Thus haue they prouoked me to ielozie by the thing which was not god.

And afterwarde he addeth, their vanities. As if he ſhoulde ſay, If a man marke what their ſuperſtitions are, and whereon they bee grounded: he ſhall finde them to be nothing elſe but lyes and deceites. Yet haue they prouoked mee with them ſayeth he: and nowe will I alſo haue my reuenge, for I will prouoke them by a people which is not a people, and by a nation which is not a nation, that is to ſay, which are not eſteemed to be of any reputation. I will then take to me ſuch folke as are nowe of no eſtimation, and ſet them in the ſame degree of honour wherein theſe thankeleſſe folke were before, which haue ſo abuſed the fatherly loue that I bare towardes them. This thing came not to paſſe out of hande, but was then accompliſhed when the Goſpell was ſpredde through out the whole worlde. True it is that in part God gaue ſome tokens of theſe thinges aforehande, in exalting the Aſſyrians and Chaldees Exod.19.6. aboue thoſe which boaſted themſelues to be the holy ofspring and yͤ kingly prieſthoode: but yet was not this definitiue ſentence performed to the full, vntill the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. God (I ſay) ſhewed partly ſome ſigne heereof aforehande, at ſuch time as the people of Iſraell were ſcattered, brought to deſolation, carried away into ſtrange countryes, and there kept as baniſhed wretches without order vnder the ſlauerie of cruell tyrannie. For euen then did GOD beginne aforehande to make them perceiue, that his threatning of them to prouoke them by a people which was no people, was not in vaine. For firſt the Aſſyrians and afterwarde the Chaldees hadde the honour to reigne ouer the children of Abraham, which Ioh.8.33.34 vaunted themſelues to be at libertie, but they were bondeſlaues of ſinne. And foraſmuch as they had withdrawen themſelues from the obedience of GOD, it was good reaſon that they ſhoulde be vnder the bondage of Tyrans. GOD then gaue a certaine ſigne of fauour to thoſe that hadde beene vnbeleeuers, when hee magnified the heathen ſo much, euen as though hee had beene minded to diſanull the promiſe which he had made to thoſe which had earſt boaſted themſelues to bee his people, and had purpoſed to put them to vtter ſhame. Yet notwithſtanding the Chaldees and Aſſyrians did not ſo reigne ouer the children of GOD, that they could preiudice their ſaluation. Neither could the Syrians doe it, nor any of all the other nations that troubled them (as wee ſee in the time of the Iudges) & which inuaded the Lande of Chanaan and brought the children of Iſraell vnder tribute and ſubiection. For euen then although the children of Iſraell were oppreſſed, and caſt downe, as it were, and thruſt vnder foote, and their neighbours which were heathen and Infidelles had their full ſcope: yet notwithſtanding, Gods adoption abode ſtill in the linage of Abraham, and the caſe of thoſe that reigned ouer them was neuer a whit the better for it, becauſe they ceaſed not to ſerue their ydolles ſtill. But when the Goſpell was preached openly to the worlde, then did we ſucceede in the place of thoſe which hadde beene heires of the promiſe afore, accordingly as Saint Rom.10.19. Paule likeneth vs to wilde ſlips which are graffed into a good ſtocke, euen ſo is it with vs. For we be but thinges borne out of time, if wee bee compared with the Iewes who were after a ſorte the naturall children of God. Howbeit foraſmuch as GOD had promiſed Abraham that Gen.12.2. he would be the ſauiour of his ofſpring, the ſame belonged to all ſuch as were deſcended of Act.3.25. him, accordingly alſo as Saint Peter telleth them, You be the children of the prophetes, and heires of the promiſe: as who ſhoulde ſay that ſaluation belonged to them, euen by true and lawefull ſucceſſion: but when as they did cutte off themſelues from it by their owne vnthankefulneſſe, then did GOD call vs vnto him. True it is that if the Iewes had receiued our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, yet had the doctrine of the Goſpel bin ſpredde abroade neuertheleſſe, throughout the worlde, and ſo ſhoulde wee haue beene ioyned and knit together in one. But foraſmuch as the Iewes conueyed themſelues out of the houſholde and Church of God, and imbraced not the grace which was offered vnto them: their roome became emptie, and ſo wee entred thereinto, inſomuch as GOD hath nowe baniſhed them, to the intent to make as it were a new houſe. And therefore S. Paul applyeth this Rom.10.19. text to his owne time. For hee ſayeth that as then the Iewes had too greatly prouoked Gods iealozie by their ydolatries, and that God was faine to raiſe vp a people which was no people, or a nation which was not reputed as a Nation, which thing was done to make them the more aſhamed of their deſpiſing of the benefit which had beene profered vnto them. Truely, the Iewes had not at that time any outwarde ydolatry. When Ieſus Chriſt came into the world, the Temple of Ieruſalem was not defiled with any ydolles, ſacrifices were made there according to the Lawe of Moſes: and yet for all that there was nothing but contempt of God & wickedneſſe, it was a piteous caſe to ſee the great number of groſſe ſuperſtitions, and all the pureneſſe of the Lawe was corrupted.

Let vs marke well therefore ẏ men are counted ydolaters, not only when they haue puppets of ſtone, of wood, or of peinters worke, but alſo when they ſticke not to the pure ſimplicitie of Gods word, but mingle their owne ſuperſtitions with the doctrine of ſaluation, ouerſhooting thẽſelues and turning away to al euil. After that manner was GOD prouoked to iealozie by the Iewes, but ſpecially by their refuſing of Ieſus Chriſt, who is the image of the father. For Col.1.15. whoſoeuer hath not the ſonne (ſayth Saint Iohn) 1.Iohn.2.23 hath not the father. And why? Becauſe the Col.1.19.& 29. whole fulneſſe of the Godheade dwelleth in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Seeing then that the Iewes deſpiſed the onely ſonne, who was the image of the father, ſeeing they would not accept him which was ordained to be ſouereigne king, and of whom alſo it is ſayde in the Pſalme, Kiſſe the ſonne; whereby men are commaunded to doe Pſal.2.12. him homage and to kneele downe vnto him as it is ſayde in other textes: ſeeing that the Iewes haue ſo refuſed Ieſus Chriſt, ſeeing they haue ſo giuen ouer the true Religion; they haue made themſelues vtter ſtrangers to the liuing GOD which had choſen and adopted them. To bee ſhort, if we take not Ieſus Chriſt for our GOD, ſurely wee haue nothing elſe but an ydoll. As for example, the Turkes at this day doe make greate bragges that they worſhippe the GOD which created heauen and earth. What is their God? He is but an ydoll. The Iewes can well ynough ſay; our meaning is to ſerue the God which gaue vs his Lawe by the hande of Moſes, and ſpake by the prophetes. Their God is but an ydol. And why? For the Godheade which is in Ieſus Chriſt is vnknowen vnto them. But it is ſayde that the whole fulneſſe of the Col.2.9. Godheade dwelleth in him, yea euen perfectly and in verie ſubſtaunce, without any manner of ſhadowes or figures. Seeing then that GOD hath fully reueiled himſelfe to vs in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and will haue his face to bee ſeene there: ſurely we can not boaſt that we haue the true God, vnleſſe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt reigne among vs, and be ſo honoured of vs that wee ſticke throughly to him and reſt wholely vppon him. Nowe the Iewes denyed him and vtterly diſclaymed him: by meane whereof they prouoked GOD to iealozie, and there remayneth nothing with them but folly and falſe imagination whereby they haue deceiued and beguiled themſelues. And therefore not without cauſe doeth Saint Paule alleadge this Text, Rom.10.19 ſaying: Seeing that the Iewes haue prouoked Gods wrath by refuſing to imbrace his onely ſonne: therefore hath he rayſed vppe a people which was nothing afore.

And heere we ſee yet much better the thing which I tolde you afore, namely that GOD vſed long ſufferaunce towardes ſuch as were worthy to haue beene thundered vpon out of hande: for betweene the Lawe and our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt there were about two thouſande yeares. And if wee recken the yeeres, the Iewes began to meddle with the infections & filthineſſe of the heathen by ſetting vp of ydols by and by after ẏ death of Ioſua. Ye ſee then how God ſuffered aboue eighteene hundred yeeres to paſſe, wayting ſtill for ſome amendement.

Not that he diſſembled with them, for he chaſtiſed them to put them in minde of their faults. And they returned vnto him. But yet by and by after they fell away newe againe. Inſomuch that when they had acknowledged that thoſe harmes befell them for their ſinnes ſakes, and had giuen ſome token of repentaunce: by and by, or within a while after they fell to their olde byaſſe againe: and God likewiſe fell to puniſhing them newe againe. At the laſt came the captiuitie of Babylon which is deſcribed to haue beene ſo horrible and vnhappie, that it baniſhed them out of the Lande which hee had promiſed them for their inheritaunce, and they were driuen out of their owne houſes. Neuertheleſſe, in the ende GOD pitied them and brought them home againe. Notwithſtanding, they were no ſooner come home into their natiue countrey, and reſtored to libertie, but by and by they became againe worſe than before. Therefore was GOD alſo faine to puniſh them with puniſhment vppon puniſhment euen to the vttermoſt. Then came our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt to remedie all their diſeaſes, in reſpect whereof Iohn.11.25. he is iuſtly called euen the reſurrection of the dead. For although the Iewes had then beene all ſcattered abroade, yet would God haue gathered them home againe to him by the hande of his ſonne, if they hadde knowen the day of their viſitation. But they well bewray that they be wilfully bent againſt GOD, and that there is nothing but bitterneſſe and venime, yea and diueliſh rage in them. For it ſufficed them not to haue skorned the grace which was offered vnto them, and the redemption which they had pretended to haue longed for ſo greatly; but they did alſo crucifie the Redeemer which was ſent vnto them. Foraſmuch therefore as the Iewes did vtterly refuſe all the grace of God: the Goſpell was publiſhed through the whole worlde.

But (as I ſayde) we muſt marke well the long ſuffering which GOD vſed towardes them, that it may keepe vs from ſleeping in our ſinnes. For if wee abuſe the goodneſſe of our GOD when hee ſpareth vs, and vſeth not ſuch vengeaunce as we haue deſerued: we ſhall be driuen to pay the arrearages. Therefore let vs returne to him when hee threatneth vs. For it had beene much better for the Iewes to haue ſuffered temporall puniſhmentes, than to haue beene ſo borne with, and in the ende to haue had ſo horrible vengeaunce layde vppon them as we ſee befell to the Citie of Ieruſalem. For if we looke vpon the aduerſities that fell vppon it, wee ſhall not finde the like examples at any time ſince the beginning of the worlde, that the men of that countrey, and all other inhabiters were ſo afflicted. They played the madde men one againſt another for their vittelles, and the veryeſt cutthroates bare the chiefe ſway. They durſt not go out of their citie to eaſe themſelues becauſe they were incloſed on euerie ſide: and yet they were more cruelly handled within by theeues and rakehelles. The ruffians were readie to cutte the throats of them that came once out of their doores. Thinges were ſo farre out of order and ſo horribly put to hauocke, that women were faine to kill their owne children for hunger and to eate them, and it ſpited the father to ſee the mother ſteale her owne children to deuoure them into her owne bowelles. Therefore let vs bethinke ourſelues, and when thinges are ſo farre out of ſquare, and wee perceiue it to be our Lordes will to giue vs ſuch examples, to the intent we ſhould liue in awe and feare, and yet notwithſtanding that he giueth vs leaſure to returne vnto him; let vs goe vnto him, yea and that with ſpeede; & let vs not driue off frõ day to day, for feare leaſt the gate be ſhut againſt vs. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde.

Nowe let vs proceede to that which Moſes addeth, namely: That GOD did then rayſe vppe a people which was no people, and a Nation which was no Nation. By theſe words we be doone to vnderſtande, that vntill ſuch time as GOD hath choſen vs, and drawen vs to the knowledge of his trueth: it is all one as if we were not at all. True it is that Gods ſetting of vs in this worlde is not a benefite to be deſpiſed, neither doeth he ſet vs heere as Aſſes, Oxen, and Dogges: but as reaſonable creatures, and he putteth his image into vs. Ineſtimable is the benefit which he doeth vs therein: but yet for all that, foraſmuch as we be corrupted in Adam, and all of vs are accurſed; inſomuch that ſinne doeth ſo reigne in vs, that the Image of GOD is wiped out, and the vnderſtanding which we weene our ſelues to haue is but brutiſhneſſe, and our hearts are turned vpſide downe, ſo as there is nothing but rebellioufneſſe in vs: therefore it is ſayde that wee bee not worthy to bee counted a people, that is to ſay, it were better for vs that wee were not at all. Not that GOD is not glorified continually in his creatures: but this is ſpoken in reſpect of vs. For we will needes glorifie ourſelues and ſeeme great men, for wee ſee howe men beleeue wonders of themſelues, and they be ſo blinde that they ſurmiſe this and that of themſelues. But let the children of this worlde eſteeme of themſelues what they lyſt, and aduaunce their owne glorie as much as they liſt: yet doth GOD in one worde heere cut their combes, ſaying that their beeing is as though they were not at all. And it is not heere onely that the ſcripture vſeth ſuch ſpeech: for Saint Paul ſayeth generally, that GOD calleth the thinges which are not, as though they were. Rom.4.17. 1.Cor.1,28. Ye ſee then howe our firſt being is when GOD calleth vs to the knowledge of his trueth: according whereunto Saint Paul ſayth in an other place, ẏ our being is of God in Ieſus Chriſt, 1.Cor.1.30. inſomuch that we haue nothing at all before that time, becauſe there is nothing in vs but corruption. Seeing the caſe ſtandeth ſo, men can not looke for any thing but eternal death, vntil God haue reached them his hand, and gathered thẽ home to himſelfe. That is the thing which we haue to remember in this text where it is ſayde, that God would prouoke the Iewes to ielozie by a people which were no people.

Furthermore let vs marke, that whereas we haue beeing at this day, that is to ſay, whereas God hath aduaunced vs, (according alſo as hee ſayth by his prophet Eſay, Eſa.1.2. I haue brought vppe children and aduaunced them) foraſmuch as God dealeth ſo graciouſly with vs as to put vs in the place of them that were his naturall children, euen vs which were as children borne out of time: let vs aſſure our ſelues that if wee prouoke God to wrath, and make him as it were iealous, he will ſurely rayſe vp other Nations in our ſteede, according to this ſaying of our Lord Matt.8.12. Ieſus Chriſt to the Iewes; The kingdome of God ſhall be taken from you. This threat is ſpoken to vs nowadays. For (as ſayth ſaint Paul) Rom.11.21. if God haue not ſpared the naturall braunches of the oliue, but haue cut them quite and cleane off, and caſt them into the fire: how ſhall hee ſpare the wilde ones? What ſhoulde wee haue who were barreine by nature? Could wee ſay we were the children of Abraham, and that God had adopted vs at the firſt? No. For as long as the doctrine of ſaluation was among the Iewes, our forefathers were as rotten members, they had no hope of ſaluation, they were without GOD in this worlde, as ſayeth Saint Paul. Eph.2.12. But nowe wee bee come to the heauenly kingdome. Becauſe the Iewes are departed from it, through their owne vnthankefulneſſe, and fallen from the degree wherein they were, GOD hath aduaunced vs to it euen againſt nature. And thinke wee then that if wee become like thoſe which were our ſuperiours in dignitie, GOD will not in the ende powre out the like vengeaunce vpon vs as wee haue ſeene vppon them? Yes: and therefore let the Iewes bee a lookinglaſſe for vs to make vs behaue ourſelues humbly, that we abuſe not the grace of GOD. True it is that wee muſt be aſſured that GOD will holde out to the ende in the thinges which he hath begonne for our welfare, ſpecially if we on our ſide be not ſo malicious as to diſappoint his grace. But if we followe thoſe which haue gone before vs, let vs not thinke to ſpeede better than they haue done. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare away in this Text where it is ſayde that God will prouoke his people to iealozie by ſuch as were not a people aforetimes.

And Moſes ſayeth, That they ſhall be a fooliſhe Nation. And it behoueth vs yet againe to marke this well. For we imagine ourſelues to be verie wiſe; and that is the thing which plucketh vs backe from ſubmitting ourſelues obediently vnto GOD, and diſappointeth vs of the modeſtie to embrace by faith, whatſoeuer is propounded to vs in his name. But heere the holy Ghoſt bewrayeth vs what we be, to witte, that there is nothing in vs but ſtarke folly, vntill GOD haue inlightened vs. What muſt bee our wiſedome then? Euen that which we learne in Gods ſchoole. Heereby all ſelfe weening is beaten downe, that menne ſhould not imagine themſelues to be of ſufficient abilitie to gouerne themſelues, nor deſpiſe the doctrine of GOD, but yeelde themſelues teachable thereunto.

And herewithall let vs marke alſo, that generally God ment to bereaue men of all glorie in that he ſayth that they be not at all, and that they be but fooles, that is to ſay, that there is nothing in thē but reprochfulneſſe.

And hee addeth foorthwith, that his wrath ſhall be kindled, and that it ſhall enter vnto the bottomleſſe pittes, and conſume the Lande with her fruites, yea euen to rootes of the Mountaines. Heere Moſes ment breefly to touch thoſe yet better and neerer to the quicke, which were ſo bedoted, that they could not come to the knowledge of their ſinnes. And he not onely ſpake to ẏ people, whom he knewe to be ſtubborne and ſtiffenecked: Exod.34.9. but alſo through the power of Gods ſpirite he prophecied of thoſe that were to come. As for Moſes, he knewe them not to outwarde appearance: but GOD who knoweth what men are, gaue his ſentence vppon them aforehande. And foraſmuch as hee ſeeth them ſo blockiſh he handleth them in their kinde, ſaying, Goe too, I ſee you be not greatly moued at my threatning, and that ye proceede from euill to worſe: but I tell you that my wrath will bee no light fardle to beare, as though I gaue you but a yerke with my rodde by the way. What then? It is a fire that burneth vp all afore it, as we haue ſeene heeretofore in the fourth chapter, Deut.4.24. where it is ſayde, Knowe thou O Iſrael that thy God is a conſuming fire. This was expreſly ſpoken for the hardeneſſe of the peoples hearts. For it is certeine that God is deſirous to ſhewe himſelfe louing towardes vs, conditionally that we come vnto him with all meekeneſſe, and be readie to followe his voyce, taking him for our ſheepehearde, and behauing ourſelues towardes him as his ſheepe. If wee doe ſo, then will not God fray vs, nor ſhewe himſelfe terrible to vs. But if he ſee vs play the wilde beaſtes, ſo as wee can not by any meanes be tamed: then is hee faine to vſe rigour, according to this ſaying of his in the eighteenth Pſalme, that hee will bee Pſal.18.17. harde to ſuch as are harde, and that if men ſhew themſelues vnreformable, hee alſo will come roughly againſt them, and they ſhall finde nothing in him but vtter terrour and dreadfulneſſe. After the ſame manner is it in this text, where he ſayeth, My wrath ſhalbe as a burning fire. Yea, and thinke not (ſayth he) that I will burne but the chaffe and the ſtrawe; for I will burne vp the verie grounde, there is not ſo hard a mountaine but it ſhall melt before me, yea euen to the verie bottome: and there ſhall not be ſo deepe a pitte, but I will go to the verie bottome thereof. Now we ſee what the purpoſe or intent of Moſes was in this place.

And heereby let vs take warning, not to tempt God; accordingly as the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes applyeth the forealleaged text to the ſame purpoſe. My friends (ſayeth he) Hebr.12.18. knowe ye that God is a conſuming fire: and therefore let vs liue in his feare, & not tempt him: as ſoone as he ſpeaketh, let vs quake at it: let vs not tarry till hee ſmite vppon our heades with main blowes: but let vs go vnto him obediently: and let vs pray him to haue pitie vpon vs.

For if we goe about to winne him by ſtoutneſſe, ſurely we ſhall finde howe it is not ſayde without cauſe that Gods wrath is a burning fire to conſume all thinges : and wee ſhall feele that although we be neuer ſo ſtubborne, and that our heartes (to our owne ſeeming) bee as whot as fire through ouerweening, whereof wee haue made our ſelues as it were foretreſſes, towers, and bulwarkes for our great ſafetie : yet notwithſtanding, God will ſo vndermine vs, that we ſhall find howe there is nothing in vs wherewith to make reſiſtaunce, and that we haue no more power to ſtande before his wrath and vengeaunce, than ſtubble or hay which is conſumed out of hande by fire: nay we ſhall be no better than towe. Thus ye ſee howe wee may benefite ourſelues by this doctrine, if wee will not haue the ſentence that God pronounceth executed vppon vs. That is to wit, that foraſmuch as his wrath burneth ſo whot and is able to conſume all: wee muſt turne vnto him as ſoone as he threatneth vs, yea and ſo returne, as he finde vs not to be fooliſhe and wilde headed folke, as in whom there is nothing but lightnes and vnconſtancie.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to open our eyes more and more, that we may ſee our owne wretchedneſſe, and vpon the knowing thereof, bee alſo ſo touched by his holy ſpirite, that our heartes may ſtoope, and hauing felt what wee haue deſerued, we may ſteppe to him aforehande to obtaine fauour and mercie of him: and ſo continue therein, that all our life long, our whole ſeeking may be to increaſe and to be ſettled in his feare and loue: that taking him for our father, and repoſing ourſelues wholly vpon him and his goodneſſe, we may neuertheleſſe yeelde him ſuch reuerence, as to quake at his threatninges, and yet aſſure ourſelues that hee will be ſo good a protector and defender of vs, that we ſhalbe ſafe from all daungers, when he hath once taken vs into his protection and ſafekeeping. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not only to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Fryday the v. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXIIII. Sermon which is the ſeuenth vpon the two & thirtith Chapter.

23 I will heape euilles vppon them, and I will beſtowe mine arrowes vppon them.

24 They ſhalbe burnt with hunger, and conſumed with heate and with bitter deſtruction. Alſo I will ſende them the teeth of beaſtes, with the venime of Serpentes that traile in the duſt.

25 The ſword ſhal rob them of their children without, and in their chambers ſhalbe fearefulneſſe vpon the young woman and the mayde, the ſucking child and the man with the hore head.

26 I haue ſaide I will ſcatter them abroade, and make the remembraunce of them to ceaſe from among men.

27 Were it not that I feared the diſdayne of the enemie, leaſt peraduenture their aduerſaries ſhould wax ſtraunge and ſay: Our hande is high, and it is not the Lorde that hath done all this thing.

WE ſawe yeſterday howe Moſes hauing ſpoken of Gods vengeaunce to the people of Iſrael ſhewed how dreadful the ſame is, becauſe men are not ſo moued at ẏ firſt as were requiſite, at leaſtwiſe to conſider their own naughtines, & to be diſpleaſed at it, ẏ they might humble themſelues & be aſhamed thereof before God. For inaſmuch as men are ſlowe vnto that, our Lorde ſheweth ẏ his threatning of them is not in ſport, and therefore that it is not for thẽ to fall aſleepe at it and to take their eaſe, but rather to trẽble and quake. Now purſuing the ſame matter, Moſes addeth That he will ſende vpon that people all the euilles that can bee deuiſed, that hee will let fly his arrowes at them to the vtter conſuming of them, that he wil arme the wilde beaſtes againſt them, that hee will ſende venemous ſerpentes among them, which though they glyde in the duſt, ſhall neuertheleſſe without fayle faſten vpon thẽ with their teeth, that they ſhalbe ſtarued for hunger, that he will ſende them burning diſeaſes, enemyes without doores, and feare within doores, and that he will not ſpare their babes nor their olde men, nor any thing elſe. It might ſeeme at the firſt ſight, that GOD were ouerrigorous. For ſeeing that God had choſen the ofſpring of Abraham from among the whole world, and his adopting of them was not grounded vppon any deſert or worthineſſe, but vppon the freegoodnes of Gods owne will: ſhoulde he haue vſed ſo great ſterneſſe againſt thoſe wretched creatures, though they had right greeuouſly offended him? Why did hee not rather ſpare them, and make the grace auailable which he had beſtowed vpon them afore? Nay, we haue ſeene already the long ſufferaunce which God had vſed towards them. And when men doe heape vp hoords of wrath a long time together after that faſhiō by their abuſing of Gods goodneſſe, as who ſhoulde ſay they were minded to ſpite God wilfullie, and to defie him, to ſee the worſt that hee can doe vnto them: it is good reaſon, that for their wilfull and ſtubborne hardening of their heartes, God ſhould make them to feele that hee will not haue his gentleneſſe ſo ſcorned, and finally turned cleane contrarie to his intent. Againe, after as God vttereth his fauour towardes vs, ſo muſt it bee the deerelyer ſolde vnto vs, if wee abuſe it. Nowe he calleth 1.Tim.3.15. the Church his houſe, and he taketh and admitteth vs for his children. Therefore if hee be diſhonoured among vs, ought it not to greeue him worſe (as I haue declared afore) than if thoſe which belong not vnto him (in compariſon) at all, had offended him a thouſand times?

Then let vs vnderſtande that God did iuſtlie ſhewe himſelfe ſo rigorous againſt the children of Iſraell, and let vs applie this doctrine to our ſelues becauſe wee be ſucceeded in their roome. We haue ſeene alreadie heretofore, howe God hath cut them off, and graffed vs in, in their ſteade, to the intent wee ſhoulde bee partakers of the adoption that belonged vnto them. Nowe if God haue not pardoned them, what Rom.11.21. will hee doe to vs? For we be not of more worthineſſe than they, neither is our ſtate more excellent than theirs. Therefore let vs ſee that we liue warely, and that we make the grace effectuall which we haue receiued at Gods hand, ſo as he may bee glorifyed thereby, and our ſaluation more and more furthered and confirmed by meane thereof. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to gather vpon this text.

And whereas it is ſaide that God will heape euill vpon them, and ſhoote out all his arrowes againſt them: let vs marke yͤ here Moſes meant to doe vs to vnderſtand, that God hath mo ſorts & means of puniſhing men than one, inſomuch that when they think themſelues to be eſcaped, then are they newe to beginne againe. And this is verie worthie to bee noted. For wee ſee what the negligence of them is which haue doone amiſſe. True it is that if they perceiue any token of Gods anger, they will be abaſhed at it at the firſt, but if they feele no further thā threatnings they ſhake their eares and make a mocke at it. But if God ſcarre them a litle; as ſoone as it is ouer, they thinke themſelues quite rid of it. As for example, if there bee any noiſe of war, ſuch as haue misbehaued themſelues and led a wicked and looſe life, wil begin to ſhudder at it. But as ſoone as the ſame is ceaſed, they be the ſame men they were afore. Likewiſe is it with them concerning famine, and all other afflictions whatſoeuer. If a man be ſtricken with a diſeaſe and preſſed with the hande of God, hee wil play the holie man for the time: but as ſoone as hee is releeued, by and by he beginnes to ſet vp his briſtles luſtilier than afore. Yee ſee then at what point we bee. As ſoone as God withdrawes his hande, we beare our ſelues in hande that we bee quite and cleane diſcharged, and that there bee no mo meanes wherewith to puniſh vs. But contrariwiſe it is ſaide here, that if Gods ſhooting of one arrow haue not woūded vs to death, it makes no matter: for hee will ſhoote agayne, and in the ende ſo deale with vs, that wee ſhall find by proofe that it had beene for our behoofe to haue conſidered at the firſt, that he hath infinite meanes and incomprehenſible to vs, wherwith to take vengeance of our ſins. That is the cauſe then why he ſaith that he wil heape vp euill vppon them, as he will adde hereafter; ſaying: Are not theſe thinges laide vp in my treaſures? Deu.32.34. And there this matter ſhall bee treated of more at large. And by this worde Arrowe, he betokeneth al the weapons of his wrath, the which he ſetteth downe more particularly by and by after, ſaying that He will ſende wilde beaſtes to deuoure all, hee will ſend Serpentes to conſume men with their ſtinginges; hee will ſende enemies with the ſword abroade; and hee will ſende terrour at home. Heere GOD alledgeth ſome examples of the thing which hee had ſpoken, to wit, that when wee be eſcaped from warre, famine ſhall catch vs, and if God ſpare vs from famine, yet ſhall that nothing boote vs, for he will haue other weapons to purſue vs withall. And herewithall wee bee warned further that all creatures are in Gods hande, and that hee imployeth them to what vſe hee liketh beſt. As for example, if hee liſt to haue the wilde beaſtes to ſerue for our benefite, they muſt needes doe it. For hee leadeth them by his ſecrete moouing in ſuch wiſe, as they cannot but execute that which hee inioyneth. And on the contrarie part, whenſoeuer it pleaſeth him to arme the beaſtes: they muſt needes become our enemies, and wee cannot withſtande them. For vntill ſuch time as we bee at one with him, it is certaine that wee haue ſtill the worſe ende of the ſtaffe. Secondlie hee addeth the trayling ſerpents. Although wee deſpiſe theſe little beaſtes, ſuch as the Serpents are which trayle in the duſt as Moſes ſaith expreſlie here: yet wil God make the miſcheefe of them to attaine euen to our heades. For albeit that the biting of a Serpent bee but on ones heele or his foote: yet the venime of it ſtriketh vp through his whole bodie. The like is to bee ſaide of diſeaſes. For vnder one kinde hee comprehendeth here all, when hee ſayth, That hee will ſende bitter heates, and that the ſame ſhall deſtroy men. So then let vs marke (according to that which I haue treated of heretofore) that when wee bee vexed by men, the ſame happeneth not without the ordinaunce of God. Such thinges are Gods chaſtiſementes whereby hee calleth vs to the conſidering of our ſinnes, and whereby hee ſummoneth vs before him, not onely to indite vs of them, but alſo to the ende wee ſhould doe it our ſelues aforehand, and euerie of vs play the iudge in condemning our ſelues, that by that meane wee might obtayne fauour at his hande. But if we will needs bee ſelfewilled, then are they as euidences aforehande to condemne vs with, and wee muſt not imagine that wee can further our caſe by replyinges. And whenſoeuer wee bee ſo viſited, if wee yeelde not GOD the honour to confeſſe that he is righteous in ſo doing: ſurelie the miſcheefe ſhall bee doubled, and ſtill increaſed vntill it haue conſumed vs. Therefore although wee be troubled by men: yet let vs vnderſtande that GOD ſerueth his owne purpoſe by them as by inſtrumentes, and that wee muſt haue recourſe to him, and that if he were not prouoked againſt vs, wee ſhould bee vnder his protection, and hee woulde not giue our enemies the bridle after that faſhion. Let vs aſſure our ſelues that when ſickeneſſe commeth vpon vs, it is to bee accounted as the hande of GOD, and that his ſending of it, is to viſite vs, and to make vs to turne againe vnto him. As much is to bee thought of the reſt. For it is not to bee thought, that the creatures are led at all aduenture, that GOD ſhoulde not bee ſerued by them, and that they ſhoulde not bee at his diſpoſition. It is for heatheniſh and faithleſſe folkes ſo to thinke. But in acknowledging that GOD is the maker of heauen and earth, we profeſſe therewithal that al things are at his commaundement, that all thinges are diſpoſed by his appoyntment, and that nothing commeth to paſſe but by his iuſtice. That then is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde in this text when Moſes ſaith that God will arme the enemie without, and ſende feare within. Whereby hee meaneth that their needeth no more but a ſhadowe to fray vs, accordinglie Deut.28.66 as hath beene declared in the eight and tweentith Chapter. If GOD liſt to ſtirre vp great troubles and ſtormes againſt vs, he will doe it and it is meete that hee ſhoulde bee the ouerruler of all. But when hee intendeth to conſume vs: then muſt our life needes hang as vppon a twyned threed, ſo as at euening wee ſhall ſorowfully ſay, Who will cauſe me to ſee to morrowe morning? And (when night is gone) wee ſhall bee ſtill in the ſame greefe of minde, wee ſhall bee as men beſides themſelues and much woorſe. The thing then which this word Feare or terror importeth, is that God wil make men to be alwayes as it were beſides themſelues when they will not yeelde to his corrections to come to amendement, ſo as they ſhall bee wounded in their heartes, without his ſtirring vp of anie enemies, or his ſending of anie inconuenience vnto them; and they ſhall not knowe why nor wherefore, but that their owne ſhadowe troubleth them and maketh them at their wittes ende. Therefore if wee intende to inioy the greateſt and moſt deſirable benefite in the worlde, that is to ſay, to liue in peace and reſt: let vs learne that wee muſt not prouoke our God to make him our enemie. For as long as wee prouoke his wrath, all thinges muſt needes goe againſt vs. That is the thing which wee haue to gather vppon this place. And we muſt not thinke that wee haue profited anie whit, when wee haue put God out of our minde, or when wee haue turned our backes vppon him for a time, as theſe skorners doe which in ſuch times doe take their pleaſure in ſporting with GOD at the full. Therefore let not vs deale ſo hardheartedlie: for there is not a worſe thing than to haue rocked our conſciences aſleepe after ſuch a faſhion, that wee haue no more remorſe nor heartbiting in vs. But let vs ſet our mindes to haue peace with God, that is to ſay to reſort vnto him in ſuch wiſe, as we may feele him to bee our father and ſeeke to ſtay our ſelues vppon his goodnes, that our ſo doing may keepe vs in reſt. Thus yee ſee in effect howe wee haue to applie this worde Feare or Terrour, wherewith Moſes threateneth here the tranſgreſſors of Gods law, and ſuch as ſtand againſt him to the vttermoſt.

He ſaith further that God will deſtroy euen the ſucking babes, and the olde men which are alreadie gray headed, ſo as hee will not ſpare, neither ſex nor age nor anie thing elſe; for hee ſpeaketh of young folke and of maydes that are to bee maried. Nowe (as I ſayde afore) wee muſt not thinke it ſtraunge that God ſhoulde vſe ſuch ſeueritie: but wee muſt call to minde the vnreformable ſtubborneſſe which was in the people afore. For wee knowe that Moſes wrate this ſong to ſhewe the people their malicious and frowarde nature, yea and vtterlie vnamendable: in ſo much that when God had by all meanes vttered his goodneſſe and mercie towardes them, they drewe all to the worſt, and ſhewed themſelues too too vnthankefull, ſhrinking continually away from him, and marring themſelues with ſuperſtition and Idolatrie, ſo as the Prophetes ſtreyning themſelues to the vttermoſt, coulde not bring them backe againe into the right way. Is it then anie woonder that GOD after ſo long wayting ſhoulde vſe ſo great extremitie as wee ſee? No. For after that GOD had winked at them, their iniquitie came to the full growth, according to the fore alledged text of Geneſis which Gen.15.16. ſaith, that the wickedneſſe of the Amorrhites was not yet full growen: but within fourehundred yeares afterwarde, they ſhoulde bee vtterly rooted out. And why was that? For it was too much that thoſe people were hardened alreadie in the time of Abraham. But when as at the ende of fourehundred yeares more, they were become yet worſe, and ceaſed not to increaſe ſtill the great heape of Gods vengeaunce: was it not meete that hee ſhould then make them to pay the whole arrearages (as they ſay?) And ſeeing that the children of Iſrael comming into the ſame place and hauing ſo fayre a lookingglaſſe before their eyes, in thoſe Nations whome GOD had vtterlie deſtroyed; did neuertheleſſe giue ouer themſelues to the ſame ſuperſtitions, and thereby defiled the lande, which God had appointed to his owne ſeruice: was it not meete that they alſo ſhould be made an example to others? Nowe this ought to ſerue vs. For wee be in poſſeſſion of the inheritance which God promiſed to the children of Abraham: I meane not the land which they dwelt in, but the inheritãce which was betokened by that land as by a gage and figure. Gods will therefore is that we nowe ſhoulde bee his houſeholde, and that we ſhould bee gathered together into his Church and flocke, vntil he take vs into his kingdome. Nowe if in ſteede of honouring him, and of yeelding him his due ſeruice, we become vnrulie folke, giuen ouer to all leawdneſſe, and moreouer doe match the ſame with wilfull ſtubborneſſe, ſo as there is no meane to bring vs backe into the way of ſaluation: thinke wee that our Lorde will not bee reuenged of ſuch vnthankefulneſſe.

Furthermore let vs not thinke it ſtraunge, that the young babes are here ſpoken of. For as touching maides that are to bee maryed, young men, and olde folkes: if a nation bee corrupted, and the miſcheefe haue once ouerflowed his bankes (as they ſay:) they alſo muſt needes bee infected as well as the reſt, and the worlde ſees it is ſo. For when olde men are once ſaped in naughtineſſe, and inured by cuſtome to offend God: they wil rather haue their ſkinnes plucked off from their backs a thouſand times if they had ſo many ſkinnes, than once to be reclaimed. For they become ſo blockiſh, or els ſo inraged, that their is no way to deale with thẽ. As for young folke, we ſee they be as it were ſet on fire to make war againſt God. Againe, whereſoeuer wickedneſſe reigneth, and all thinges are peruerted: there the young women become as wilde as Roes; ſo as there remayneth not anie honeſtie, and much leſſe anie feare of God in them. This is apparant to all men. And therefore it is not to bee woondred at, though God doe threaten both young and old. But as touching little babes, that may ſeeme the more crueltie, becauſe they haue not offended like the others. For will God puniſh the guiltleſſe? Doth hee not ſay by his Prophet Ezechiel, that the Ezec.18.20. parties which haue ſinned ſhal beare their owne puniſhment, and that the Childe ſhall not bee puniſhed for his father? Yes, but we muſt marke that God hath a reaſon of his iudgementes, though it bee vnknowen to vs. Wee then may thinke ſome chaſtiſements of Gods to be ouerrigorous, but yet doeth he knowe why he doth ſo, and it becommeth vs to reuerence the things with all humilitie, which are incomprehenſible to vs. For what a thing were it if wee ſhould meaſure all Gods workes by our wit? Can wee attaine to them? Howe farre extendeth our vnderſtanding? Let vs conſider howe weake and ſmall it is, and what rudeneſſe is in vs. But on the other ſide, what are the iudgementes of God? Rom.11.33. Euen a deepe gulfe vnpoſſible to be gaged: they Eſa.40.13. be vncomprehenſible as ſaith the ſcripture. Rom.11.34 Agayne, whom did he euer cal to counſel? Therefore let vs content our ſelues with the thinges which God hath opened vnto vs, and be mindfull of the thing which wee haue ſeene not long ſince, namely that the ſecrete thinges belong to Deut.29 29 our God, and that the thinges which are in his Law belong to vs and to our children: that is to ſay, ẏ we muſt hold vs to the meaſure which God giueth vs, and not be inquiſitiue without ende & more than is lawfull for vs to know, but receiue the doctrine which hee giueth vs, aſſuring our ſelues that the ſame is ſufficient for our ſaluation. Alſo let vs bethinke vs howe it is ſaide in Iob, that we ſee the brimmes of Gods workes; Iob.9.10. but we can neuer attaine to the bottome of thẽ. Therefore whereas the ſcripture ſpeaketh nowe and then of ſome executions which God doeth: although the ſame may ſeeme to vs ouerrigorous, yet muſt wee bridle our ſelues and impriſon our wits to honour God with ſuch reuerence as he deſerueth. Let that ſerue for one poynt.

Furthermore as concerning that which is ſaid here of Babes, let vs marke that if God liſted to rende vp the whole worlde by the rootes, hee coulde doe it, yea and that right iuſtlie. For euen from our verie birth, we bring nothing but wrath and curſedneſſe. If God take young babes out of the worlde, yea and damne them: yet is there no rigour in ſo doing: for wee be all forlorne afore hande by nature. In this caſe therefore it behoooueth vs to caſt downe our heades and our eyes, and not preſume to ſtande in contention with God by reaſoning the matter with him, nor to control him as though he did wrong or iniurie to little infantes in taking them out of the worlde. For (as I ſaide) hee may not onely ſmite them with death, but alſo ſende them to euerlaſting damnation, becauſe wee bee all curſed in Adam. Now then, when he hath withdrawen his grace from a whole Nation, and all of them are become reprobates: then muſt his wrath needes extende as well to the young infantes as to their fathers, according to this ſaying, that God caſteth backe the wickedneſſe of Ier.32.18. the fathers, into the boſomes and lappes of their children. Not that the children be puniſhed being guiltleſſe: for God knoweth that they bee not ſo. Yea, but we perceiue not that they haue offended. As who woulde ſay, that wee were able to perceiue as much as God knoweth. Haue wee as ſharpe a ſight as hee? [No.] So then, although wee take little babes to bee faultleſſe: yet notwithſtanding there is a naughtineſſe incloſed in them, and the ſeede of ſinne is ſufficient to condemne them before God. Wherefore let vs marke, that although hee root out young babes; yet in ſo doing he cannot be blamed of crueltie: but he executeth a iudgement which ſurmounteth the capacitie and meaſure of mans wit, whereat wee may well wonder, but yet muſt wee confeſſe it to bee rightfull, as it is indeede. Wee ſee howe it fell out both in Sodome and in other places where it was Gen.19. 24. his will to haue all deſtroyed. When anie ſuch thing happeneth, let vs vnderſtande that GODS intent is to make vs to caſt downe our eyes. For if it befall ſo to Luk.23.31. the greene tree, what ſhall be doone to the drie? Behold the litle Infants whom we imagine to bee innocent and faultleſſe: and yet wee ſee that Gods vengeaunce wrappeth them in with the elder ſorte, and with thoſe that haue greatlie offended. Righteous is G O D in ſo doing. What ſhall wee ſay to it, but onelie that wee ought to quake at it? For there is none of vs all which hath not deſerued a hundred times as much. If G O D ſpare vs, are we not the more bounde to his goodneſſe? And againe, if it pleaſed him to deale with vs according to our miſdeedes, ſhoulde wee not be afraide that we ſhal bee much more roughlie handled, than wee ſee little babes are? Yes ſurelie. So then, inſteede of contending as manie doe, and of entering into curious queſtions euen with diueliſhe malapeartneſſe to controll G O D, as I haue ſaide afore: let vs learne to be lowlie, in ſuch wiſe that hauing giuen glorie vnto G O D by confeſſing that he is euer righteous and ſoothfaſt, and let vs alſo haue an eye to that wee haue ſeene, that ſo we may impute it to his free mercifulneſſe that hee beareth with vs, and alſo bee the more incouraged to returne to him, ſo as wee may no more abuſe the long time of his patience. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to remember vppon this text, where G O D ſaith that hee will deſtroy euen the little ſucking babes.

Nowe hee addeth yet further, I had ſaide or determined to roote out this people, but that I feared the prouoking of the enemie, leaſt the Aduerſarie might haue beene eſtraunged, and haue ſaid, Our hand is high, and it is not the Lorde that hath doone all this. In this text our Lorde ſheweth that hee is ſo farre off from vſing any vnmeaſurable rigour againſt his people: that hee hath rather yet another reſpect not to roote them vtterly out, namelie leaſt the Infidels ſhould haue occaſion to blaſpheme him. That is the meaning of Moſes. They will complaine and ſay that G O D ought not to handle his people after that faſhion, but that hee ought to vſe greater kindneſſe and gentleneſſe towardes them. Yea, ſaith hee, pleade on your caſe: but yet ſhal yee winne nothing by it. For if God had reſpected no further matter than you, hee had rooted you long agoe out of the worlde, and the remembrance of you had beene quite and cleane aboliſhed long ere this. What letted him then? Not that you were not worthie to haue periſhed, for you haue not ceaſed to prouoke his wrath by dooing euill: but for that hee had a reſpect to your enemies, that is to ſay, to the Infidels. And why? For if God ſhoulde haue rooted out that people, whom he had chooſen: for aſmuch as the renowne thereof was ſpread ouer all the worlde, and the deliuering of them out of Egypt was as a woonderfull miracle, and the Iſraelites themſelues profeſſed themſelues continually to bee the worſhippers of the God which had taken them out of the deepe gulfe: ſhoulde not his deſtroying of them haue opened the mouthes of the wicked to skoffe at the Religion which was held in Iurie, and to haue ſaide, Where is nowe the God which maintained them ſo long time, as they themſelues haue reported? Either hee is falne aſleepe, or elſe he hath loſt his wittes, for he ſuccoureth them not any more. After that manner woulde the Infidels haue rayled at God if hee had not euer reſerued and kept ſtill ſome ſeede of that people, to ſhewe that his couenaunt was not quite and cleane diſanulled, but that it ſtoode ſtill in full force. That is the verie meaning of this ſaying where wee reade, I had determined to root them, yea and to ſcatter thē abroade eueriwhere. For the worde betokeneth ſuch a ſcattering or rending aſunder, as if one ſhoulde diſmember a mans bodie, and caſt the peeces thereof abroade here and there, ſo as nothing were left whole. Therefore, I had rooted them out [ſaith hee,] yea and that in ſuch wiſe as they ſhoulde neuer haue beene ſpoken of anie more among men, but that I feared the prouocation of the enemie. Nowe the thing that is rehearſed here, is read of in Exodus. And ſo it Exod.32.9.10.11,12,13 14. ſhoulde ſeeme that God was reſtrayned by Moſes from doing the thing which hee ſpeaketh of here. For hee giueth the ſentence, and addeth, Let me doe it; as though Moſes had ſet himſelfe againſt him. And yet for all that, it is verie certaine that God had determined aforehande to pardon his people: but yet it was his will that Moſes ſhoulde make interceſſion for them, yea euen Moſes, in aſmuch as he was there & made ſupplicatiō in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and the people knew that they coulde not haue ſcaped except God had hearde the prayers of Moſes.

But howſoeuer the caſe ſtoode, this text ſheweth vs that God altered not his purpoſe: for hee is not variable, neither repealed hee his ſentence, though hee ſaide, I will yet againe pardon this people for thy ſake. For the thing which hee had determined in his owne minde, was performed, and yet notwithſtanding it was his will that Moſes ſhoulde ſteppe in as a mediator. And when God heareth vs, it is not for that we make him to chaunge his minde: but it pleaſeth him to declare the thing to vs which hee had determined to doe, to the end that our faith ſhoulde bee exerciſed, and wee knowe, that to pray, is no labour loſt or vnprofitable, for the fruite ſheweth the contrarie. That is the cauſe then why hee graunteth thoſe thinges at our requeſt, which hee had determined in his euerlaſting purpoſe afore. Yet notwithſtanding we ſee in effect, that if God had not beene minded to ſtoppe the mouthes of all the wicked, and vnbeleeuing ſort, he had deſtroyed that people. And that was done to correct ẏ ouerweening of ſuch as were euer ready to grudge againſt God. For ſuch is the maner of men, that they neuer want replies: but as ſoone as God ſcourgeth them, by and by they ſtand in contention with him. And if he preſſe them double; then they not onelie grunt at it, but alſo ſpewe out their blaſphemies againſt him. But here our Lorde ſheweth, that whē men haue caſt forth al their rage after that faſhion, yet it ſhall bee prooued to their faces, that hee notwithſtanding hath dealt ouergentlie with them, accordingly as it is certayne that euen at this day, if God had not a further conſideration than onely of vs, we deſerue well to be wiped out of the worlde. For notwithſtanding that wee haue receiued his worde, what doe we fare the better for it? We profeſſe the hauing of the Goſpell, and wee can well ſay that the Papiſtes are Idolaters, ſtraungers from God, and men giuen ouer to all euill. And why? For they be blinde and walke in the darke. But yet for all that, wee that haue the cleare light of life, howe doe we order our doinges? If we be compared with the Papiſtes, ſhall a man finde vs better than them? Nay, wee are ſo much more blame worthie than they, becauſe that for all our teaching yet wee deſpiſe God of a certayne malicious and determinate purpoſe. Sith it is ſo, if God had not a further reſpect than to vs, ſurelie wee ſhoulde bee conſumed out of hand. But for aſmuch as the Papiſtes woulde by and by ſet open their throates to ſcoffe at God and the pure Religion, therefore hee maintaineth vs ſtill. Wherefore let vs not boaſt that wee haue helde out vnto this time by our owne power: but let vs conſider that God woulde not haue his name blaſphemed, nor make the trueth of his Goſpell to bee a ieſtingſtocke for men to ſcoffe at: and let that bee a meane to humble vs yet better. Wee ſee then that this doctrine belongeth vnto vs, and that Moſes ſpake it not onely to the people of Iſraell, but alſo to all ſuch as ſhoulde profeſſe the ſeruice of God, and haue the pure doctrine of his worde: inſomuch that if they play the naughtipackes, and prouoke Gods vengeaunce againſt them, and God neuertheleſſe doe beare with them; it is not for their faire eyes (as they ſay,) nor for that they haue deſerued it: but becauſe our Lord will not giue ſuch looſe and vnbridled libertie to them that ſeeke occaſion thereof.

And it is ſaide expreſſely, That God feared the prouocation of the enemie, leaſt hee ſhoulde eſtraunge himſelfe, and ſay, My hande is high, and it is not the Lorde that hath doone this thing. By this worde Prouocation, hee meaneth the pride that is in men, accordinglie alſo as hee doeth in the eight Pſalme, where it is ſaide that God is glorifyed Pſal.8.3. by the mouthes of ſucklinges, in which place expreſſe mention is made of the enemie and of ẏ auenger, becauſe the vnbeleeuers are alwayes ſo proude and preſumptuous, that there is nothing with them but crueltie & thundering. So likewiſe in this text it is ſaide that God feared to prouoke the enemie, that is to wit, leaſt the Infidels ſhoulde proceede to ſuch wickedneſſe as to ſcoffe at the Law and at the true Religion. God then preuented them. And wee muſt not imagine that God was afraide of men: for hee coulde well haue prouided for it by ſome other meane. Is it not hee that hath made mens tongues? And how can they then ſtirre to ſpeak one worde, if he liſted to reſtrayne them? Could they moue to vtter one ſyllable? It ſhould ſeeme then that the thing which Moſes ſpeaketh here is needleſſe, namely that God ſhoulde bee afrayde to prouoke his enemies: for hee coulde wel haue remedied the matter if hee had would. I haue tolde you oftentimes alreadie, that God is ſpoken of after the manner of men. Therefore when God prouideth for a thing by anie worldlie meane, and ſuch as is common among vs: it is not for that hee is tyed vnto it, & cannot of his infinite power doe otherwiſe: but becauſe it pleaſeth him ſo to doe. Thus are wee doone to vnderſtande in fewe wordes, that when it pleaſeth God to ſerue his owne turne by the inferiour meanes which hee hath ordeyned in this worlde; it is not for that hee cannot doe what he liſteth of himſelfe and without any other helpe: but for that it is his will to keepe that order. As for example. Hee coulde well ſuſteine vs without breade, wine, or water: and yet notwithſtanding hee vſeth thoſe meanes. And why ſo? Euen becauſe it pleaſeth him. If we be ſicke, he can well heale vs without any medicine: and yet will hee haue vs to vſe medicines. In the time of warre he coulde wel repreſſe all our enemies without our ſtirring of anie finger towards it; but yet hath hee ordeyned other meanes. Ye ſee then after what manner this text is to bee vnderſtoode, where it is ſaide that God was afraide to prouoke the enemie: not that hee was vnable to let them or to withſtande them if hee had would; or that hee was vnable to haue ſtopped the mouthes of the Infidels; but becauſe hee ſawe men ſo malicious, that their whole deſire is to haue full libertie to ſpeake euill of his maieſtie. Which thing he perceyuing, intendeth to remedie it. And by what meanes? Euen by ſuch as hee himſelfe likes beſt of. Not that hee doeth it of neceſſitie (as I ſaide afore) or by anie conſtraynt: but that his good pleaſure is ſo. And therefore God coulde well roote vs out of the worlde at this day: and on the other ſide hee coulde well make the Papiſtes dumbe, and altogether ſenſeleſſe, or elſe hee coulde make them blockes or ſtones, or elſe he could vtterlie ouerwhelme them, ſo as his name ſhould not bee blaſphemed by them: and therewithall hee coulde raiſe vp a newe people which ſhould glorifie him in his iuſt deſtroying and conſuming of vs. God coulde well doe all theſe thinges: but yet for all that hee holdeth ſtill ſuch order in his workes, as hee hath determined vppon in himſelfe. That is the cauſe why on the one ſide hee ſpareth vs, and on the other ſide giueth not occaſion to the Papiſtes to blaſpheme his holy name if hee ſhoulde vſe extreeme rigour agaynſt vs.

And by the way, here wee bee put in minde of the nature of man. Indeede God ſpeaketh of the aduerſarie and enemie: but yet vnder them, he comprehendeth all ſuch as haue not beene taught by his worde to yeeld themſelues teachable vnto him. And what manner of diſpoſition attributeth hee vnto them? That they eſtrange themſelues: that is to ſay, that without inquiring or conſidering of Gods vengeaunce wherein he ought to be glorified, they turne it into a ſlaunder and ſay, It is not God that did it. Let vs marke well then, that if wee bee let alone to our owne nature, and that God guide vs not by his worde and ſpirite, to giue vs the true ſoundneſſe of vnderſtanding, diſcretion, and skill: although hee worke after ſuch a faſhion as his righteouſneſſe, power, and wiſedome may ſo appeare, that wee muſt needes be conuicted by it: yet we ſhal not ceaſe to caſt foorth blaſphemie againſt him. And why? For wee ſhall bee as witleſſe beaſtes. And this ſaying: For feare leaſt the enemie ſhoulde eſtraunge himſelfe, is to bee well weyed. For thereby God meaneth, that men inſteede of applying their wittes to the beholding of the thinges which hee ſheweth them, do wrappe themſelues in ignorance wilfully. Nowe it is certayne that although wee be blinde wretches, and that although by reaſon of Adams ſinne wee bee bereft of iudgement, reaſon, and vnderſtanding: yet there is malice ſtill in vs, ſo as our whole ſeeking is to bee ignoraunt of the thinges which our Lorde woulde haue vs to knowe. Therefore whenſoeuer men doe make a cloke of their ignorance, they ſhall euermore bee conuicted to haue refuſed the knowledge of thoſe thinges which might haue beene well knowen vnto them, if they had ſet their minds vppon them. And that is the verie cauſe why Saint Iude in his Epiſtle ſpeaking of theſe heatheniſh folke which deſpiſe G O D, and are groſſe and dulheaded as folke that haue no knowledge at all; ſaith that they knowe not the thinges which they ſhoulde know, becauſe they haue no liſt to knowe them. Then is it a curſed kinde of cloking, whenſoeuer men make not their benefite of Gods workes, but applie them cleane contrarie to his meaning.

Iude.10.

Now looke what is ſaid here concerning the Infidels, the ſame belongeth likewiſe vnto vs. And were it not that G O D bringeth the light vnto vs, or vs vnto the light, and opened our eyes to ſee the thinges which hee ſheweth vs: ſurely we ſhould not onely continue ſtil blind, but alſo it ſhoulde cauſe vs to become worſe and worſe, accordingly as it is ſaide here, that the Infidels ſhoulde haue blaſphemed G O D, ſaying, Our hande is high, and it is not God that hath doone this. On the one ſide then we let God alone as though he had done nothing: and on yͤ other ſide wee become ſo proude as to put ourſelues in his roome. For men content not themſelues with their robbing of God of his power, & with their defacing of his maieſtie: but they will alſo needs deck thēſelues with his feathers; & make themſelues verie Idols, and haue men to beleeue them to haue beene the doers of the thinges which are peculiar to G O D. So then, ſeeing there is ſuch mad pride in vs, and ſo groſſe ſelfe weening: wee ought to bee the more warned to yeelde our ſelues vnto G O D, and to pray him not onely to ſhew vs his workes wherein his glorie may ſhine foorth and appeare: but alſo to open our eyes that wee may ſee them, in giuing vs skill and diſcretion by his holy ſpirit, ſo as we may learne with humilitie to honour him: and that when we haue confeſſed his iuſtice, goodnes, and mercie, we may conſider howe much we be bounde vnto him, and that when hee puniſheth other men, we may be drawen to repentaunce by their meanes, and vnderſtande that he beareth with vs, becauſe he might well confounde vs out of hande, were it not that he intended to vſe fauour and goodnes towardes vs, to the ende wee ſhoulde bee the more inflamed to honor him, and to dedicate our ſelues to him in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Nowe let vs pray vnto him to vouchſafe to haue pitie vppon vs, and not to call vs to account for the great number of miſdeeds whereof wee be guiltie, becauſe wee knowe well that if hee liſted to deale rigorouſly with vs, we ſhould needes be confounded, yea and vtterly periſhe: and that although hee had not wayted for vs ſo long time, yet he had iuſt cauſe to haue deſtroyed vs as often as wee prouoked him to wrath: wherfore although we haue offended him without end or meaſure, yet notwithſtanding ſeeing hee hath ſhewed himſelfe ſo kindhearted a father towardes vs alreadie, it may pleaſe him to continue his mercie and fauour, and therewithall to reforme vs ſo by his holy ſpirit, that being guided and gouerned by him, our whole ſeeking may be to frame ourſelues to yͤ obeying of him, ſuffering our ſelues to be ruled by his word, and ſeeking nought elſe but to pleaſe him in all reſpects. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the vj. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXV. Sermon which is the eight vpon the two & thirtith Chapter.

28 For it is a Nation voyde of diſcretion, and there is no vnderſtanding in them.

29 But if they were wiſe, they would vnderſtande this, and take heed to their ende.

30 Howe ſhoulde one of them chaſe a thouſande, and two of them put tenne thouſande to flight, were it not that God had ſolde them, and that the Lord had ſhut them vp?

31 For their gods are not as our God, and thereof euen our enemyes themſelues are Iudges.

VE ſaw yeſterday how God hauing a reſpect to the Infidels & their blaſphemies, had ſpared the people of Iſrael. And thereupon it was ſhewed, that God doth oftentimes pitie vs, & not puniſh vs ſo rigorouſly as we deſerue, to ẙ end that his name ſhould not be made a ſcoffing ſtocke, & a ieſting ſtock among the wicked, who ſeeke occaſion of skorning when they ſee God chaſtice his Church: & thereupon they fall to rayling at the doctrine and Religion it ſelfe. But now it is added here, That this people were deſtitute of diſcretion, & voyde of vnderſtanding. Truly men thinke themſelues wiſe ynough when they bee craftie and ſuttle in prouiding well for their buſineſſe, and in practiſing this and that, And then fall they flat to deſpiſe God, as wee ſee that all theſe worldlings doe, who are forepoſſeſſed of this fantaſie of ſelfwiſedome, by reaſon whereof the whole worde of God, and the ſuffering of themſelues to be gouerned by it, is to them but ſimplicitie and fooliſhnes. But yet for al that, the holy Ghoſt affirmeth, & that iuſtly, that all ſuch as liue not in the feare of GOD, are witleſſe. For our true wiſedome is to yeelde our ſelues to him which can leade vs to ſaluation: and without that, wee bee blinde wretches and incloſed with darkeneſſe. And therefore wee can not but goe aſtray all our life long, and after tripping to ſtumble right downe, yea euen into a deadly fall. Wee muſt vnderſtand then, that vntill we bee come to the ſubmitting of our ſelues wholly vnto GOD, and to knowe that all our happineſſe lyeth in him: wee bee voyde of diſcretion. But this cannot bee, but that therewithall men muſt alſo needes knowe themſelues. And in deede, if a man haue gone about heauen and earth, and gotten the vnderſtanding of al things in them, and in the meane time thinketh not vppon his GOD, nor yet vppon himſelfe: I pray you to what purpoſe is all his vnderſtanding? If hee were the skilfulleſt Aſtrologer in the world, and had all Philoſophie incloſed in his braine, and were perfect in all other ſciences, and yet in the meane while knewe not himſelfe, nor had any regarde of GOD; but were ſo brutiſh that he wiſt not what Religion meaneth: were ſuch a man to bee more eſteemed, than a ſimple idiot which liueth in the feare of GOD, and knoweth to what ende hee is created? Then is it not without cauſe, that Moſes condemneth all thoſe of brutiſhneſſe, which haue forgotten God, are gone backe from his worde, are intangled in ſuperſtitions, and to bee ſhort, haue left the way of ſaluation, and the light which God offered them to guide them all their life long. As for thoſe which haue ſo eſtraunged themſelues, Moſes not without cauſe doeth terme witleſſe and forlorne in their Diſcretion. And by that terme he meaneth, that the deſpiſers of God being giuen to their vanities and wicked luſtes, haue in deed ſome diſcretion, and doe delight and glorie in their own reaſon, yea and are ful of pride; in ſo much that if a man ſpeake to them to reclayme them into the right way, they deſpiſe all doctrine, bearing themſelues in hand that they bee able ynough to diſcerne betweene good and euill. That doeth Moſes meane. But what? It is a diſcretion of ouerthrowe and deſtruction. And therefore let vs ſuffer our ſelues to bee ruled by God, & let vs apply al our indeuour to the receiuing of ẙ thinges which he teacheth, if wee will haue an vnderſtanding that ſhall doe vs good.

And for the confirming of the ſame matter, hee addeth heere, O that they woulde haue beene aduiſed, O that they had vnderſtood this, and that they had conſidered their laſt end. We ſee why God hath pronounced that there is no reaſon in men, and that they be vtterly dull and deſtitute of vnderſtanding, when their lyfe is looſe and vnorderly. And why? Wee haue ſeene whereto GOD called the people of Iſrael. Nowe his adopting of vs, is to the ende that our lyfe ſhoulde bee bleſſed and happie, and that after he hath preſerued vs in this worlde, the inheritance of the heauenly kingdome ſhould bee beſtowed vppon vs. Yee ſee then that the true happineſſe of men is to haue the fauour and loue of God. And wee be ſure of his fatherly goodneſſe towardes vs, if when hee calleth vs by his woorde, wee come vnto him, and accept that grace by faith. The vnſeparable bond then betweene God and man, is that they receiue the record of his goodneſſe which hee giueth vnto them. And that ſerueth as well for this preſent lyfe, as for their euerlaſting life. On the contrarie part wee haue heard the threates which are giuen forth heere: that is to ſay, that GOD hauing long time borne with the Churliſhneſſe of that people, woulde bee reuenged of it. Now he addeth, Muſt it not needs be ẙ this people are deſtitute of wit and reaſon, when they conſider not this thing, ne haue an eye to their owne ende? Not without cauſe doth Moſes here point out what ẙ people ought to haue conſidered: for wee haue bin told afore, ẙ God hath ſo reſerued to himſelf the matters which concerne his own incomprehenſible determination, as yet notwithſtanding, he hath made the doctrine of the lawe familiar vnto vs: and he will haue it to be obſerued for ẙ exerciſing of vs therein all our whole life. Seeing then ẙ God hath ſpoken, and his will is ſet before our eyes: let vs mark that his ſo doing is not in vaine: accordingly alſo as hee auoweth by his Prophet Eſay ſaying, We cannot alleage ẙ it is a darke thing & ſuch as paſſeth our vnderſtāding. We muſt not ſay any more, Who wil go ouer the ſea? Who ſhall climbe vp aboue the cloudes? Or who ſhall go downe into the deepe? Seeing ẙ the word is in our mouthes & in our hearts, it ought verily to ſuffice vs. Neuertheleſſe it is true ẙ although God haue ſpoken, yet muſt he be faine to inlighten our wits with his holy ſpirit, or elſe we ſhall abide ſtill without vnderſtanding. But if wee conſider the doctrine in it ſelfe, it is moſt manifeſt vnto vs, and God reueileth himſelfe therein familiarly ynough. The thing then which we haue to remember vppon this text, is that Moſes vpbraideth the Iſraelites, that they had beene called to God after ſuch a faſhion, as they coulde not haue erred vnleſſe they had would: and moreouer that their end had beene ſhewed vnto them.

And by the word End, he meaneth al the happines that is promiſed to al gods children which addict themſelues to him and reſt vpon his promiſes, walking continually vnder his obedience: and contrariwiſe the confuſiō and ouerthrow of all skornefull, and diſobedient perſons, which deſpiſe ſuch grace, withdrawing themſelues from him and corrupting his woord. To that intent and purpoſe then doth Moſes expreſly ſpeake of the end of them. And now muſt we make our benefite of this leſſon. Firſt of al therefore let vs mark that (as I haue ſaid afore) we may be ẏ wittieſt folke in the world, and yet we ſhalbe counted as brute beaſtes and without reaſon at Gods hand, if we haue not a regard of him. The chiefe point then of our wiſedom, is to haue our eyes open to behold the light of life, to haue profited wel in the ſchoole of our God, ſo as we can worſhip him; and to be no longer as ſtray cattell, not knowing him that made vs and faſhioned vs, nor yet knowing our ſelues neither. And therefore let vs learne to receiue Gods word with all ſimplicitie, & not doubt but that there he commeth ſo familiarly vnto vs, as we cannot ſay ẏ we need make long iourneyes, or that the things are too profound and darke for vs. For our Lord doth (as ye would ſay) chawe our morſels aforehand to vs, becauſe of the rudeneſſe which he ſeeth in vs. And ſo he handleth vs lyke little babes, to the intent we may the eaſilier ſwallow down the foode which he giueth vs. Thus ye may ſee (I ſay) howe that when we haue Gods woord preached vnto vs, wee muſt not doe as the Papiſtes doe, which ſay, Oh ſir, this is to high for me, this geere is no't for plaine folkes, this is to be reſerued for the clergie. But let vs aſſure our ſelues that God ſpeaketh both to great and ſmall, and dalyeth not with vs when hee calleth vs to him by his word, but will haue vs to vnderſtand it. Then is it not long of any but ourſelues, if when his word is preached vnto vs, we be not dewly inſtructed in the things that are requiſite for our ſaluation. True it is that we muſt not ſteppe to it with preſumption, truſting in our own wiſedome: but we muſt deſire God to inlighten vs, and that as his voyce ſoundeth in our eares, ſo alſo he ſpeake to our heartes by his holy ſpirite. Let vs humble our ſelues, accordingly as we know how it is ſaid Pſal.19.9. that God vttereth his wil to ſuch as are little and lowely. If we go to it after that maner, let vs not doubt but our Lord will make the things auaileable which are ſet downe to vs in his name, and giue vs acceſſe vnto him both familiar and eaſie ynough. Therefore let vs marke well this word End, whereof Moſes ſpeaketh heere, and let vs conſider whereunto God calleth vs. True it is that he maketh vs promiſes euen of this preſent life, ſo as wee ought to aſſure our ſelues that God will not fayle vs in this world, inſomuch that although he will haue vs exerciſed with many miſeries, and vexed with diuers temptations: yet notwithſtanding he ſayth he will hold vs vp with his mightie hand, ſo as we ſhall neuer bee deſtitute of his helpe at our neede. But yet the cheefe point is to conſider the heritage which is reſerued for vs in heauen, ſo as we tend thitherward, and ſet all our affections thereuppon, without intangling ourſelues ſo in theſe baſe things, that wee cannot haue our heartes alwayes vpwarde: and that for as much as our happineſſe and trea- Matt.6.20.
ſure is aboue; wee bee not held downe in this worlde; wherein all things are brittle and tranſitorie. After that maner ought wee to conſider the worde End, whereof Moſes ſpeaketh here. For whoſoeuer they bee that ſeeke their happyneſſe heere beneath; ſurely they differ nothing at all from Oxen and Aſſes, but rather their ſtate is yet much woorſe. For the beaſtes go on ſtill, and are not troubled with the great number of luſtes wherewith men are troubled. There is no ambition to be ſeene in them, there is no Couetouſneſſe, there is none of all the other luſtes. If they be a thirſt, they drink; if they be a hungred, they eate. But men deſire not onely to eate and drinke, but alſo to glut themſelues and to follow all maner of exceſſe. Ye ſee then howe a man is more wretched than a beaſt, in that he is ſo caried away by his vnruly affections. Sith the caſe ſtandeth ſo, let vs tend to the end which god ſetteth downe vnto vs; and let vs vnderſtand that God doth ſo make vs to taſte of his goodneſſe in this earthly pilgrimage, ẏ he wil haue vs to be filled therwith aboue, & but onely to paſſe through this world, or to dwell in it as ſoiourners, and in the meane while not ceaſſe to be ioyned and vnited to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, knowing that he is our head, and the fountaine of all good things, and that all our ioy, contentation, reſt, and glory doe lye and conſiſt in him: and on the contrary part, that if God puniſh vs not at the firſt for our offences, we muſt not therfore fall aſleepe in thē, nor take occaſion thereby to flatter our ſelues. And why? If we liue ſo from day to day without looking any further: muſt it not needes be ẏ we be ſtarke blocks? True it is that the faithfull are not vexed with ouergreat carefulnes. For why? Pſal.37.5.& 145.18.
They caſt themſelues as it were into Gods lap, as they be incouraged to do in the pſalm. Then ſhal we not be vexed ẇ vnquietnes, as they be which haue no truſt in god. For when we cal vpon god, he is neere at hand, and we muſt not make long diſcourſes in that behalfe as the worldlings doe, who ſtand ſcanning of that which is to come a hundred yeres after their death. Yet notwithſtāding we muſt not be ſo wedded to ẏ things which we ſee before our eyes, that we ſhold not alwaies looke further off. But lyke as the promiſes of the heauenly lyfe ought to lift vs vp aboue the world: ſo ought Gods threatenings to quicken vs vp to walke in his feare, by rebuking vs for our ſinnes when wee haue done amiſſe, and by calling vs dayly to account: accordingly as it is ſayde, that by faith Noe beheld the floud when Heb.11.7. other men made great cheere and feaſting.

So then, let vs learne to haue an eye to our end: that is to ſay, when we haue offended God, let vs not fall aſleepe vpon it, neither let vs foſter our vices from morrow to morrow till we be growne hardhearted through vnreformable ſtubbornneſſe: but although God beare with vs and vſe patience in winking at vs for a time: yet let not vs forbeare to bethinke vs of his threatenings, and to waken our ſelues that we may repent and aske forgiueneſſe and turne vnto him with true amendment. Ye ſee then that the true wiſedome is that men ſhould not be tyed to the preſent thinges, but to lift vp their heartes and mindes to the things that are inuiſible: accordingly as it is ſaid that faith is a mirrour of the things that are not ſeene, and the ground of the thinges which are abſent or farre from vs. Hebr. 11. 1. Although then that our happineſſe appeare not at the firſt, and it ſeeme that for all our ſeruing of God yet we be miſerable, by reaſon whereof the vnbeleeuers floute vs, and ſet their feete as it were vpon our throats, ſo as we be perſecuted by them: yet notwithſtanding let vs not ceaſſe to conclude, that hauing once put our truſt in God, we ſhalnot be diſappointed. For why? The end of it wilbe good: and therfore let vs tary patiently til God deliuer vs from the afflictions and miſeries wherin we be at this day. Let vs therfore ſet our mindes vpon the end which God hath promiſed vs. And therwithall let vs alſo haue an eye to his threatenings, and let them hold vs in awe. And although the wicked prouoke God, and are not rebuked for it at the firſt, bycauſe God ſeeth that they be not worthy to be chaſtiſed by his hand: yet notwithſtanding let not vs bee aſtoniſhed therat, but let vs vnderſtand that Gods threatening of the tranſgreſſors of his Law after that faſhion is not in vaine. And therefore let vs frame our owne inditement, that we may preuent the condemnation which otherwiſe taryeth for vs. That (I ſay) is the thing which wee haue to remember vpon the word End, wherof Moſes hath ſpoken heere.

And therwithall we ſee the goodneſſe of God heere expreſſed after a wonderful maner, in that he entereth into a complaning and ſorrowing, as if he were a man that could ſuffer: O that this people (ſaith he) had bin weladuiſed. True it is that our Lord is not ſubiect to our paſſions; but he vſeth ſuch form of ſpeech, to ſhew that the loue which he beareth vs, ſurmounteth the loue of all earthly fathers. And therefore it ſerueth in effect to doe vs to vnderſtand, that when we goe wilfully into deſtruction, and reiect the grace which was offered vs to our ſaluation: then doe we grieue the ſpirite of God, as is ſaid in the Prophet Eſay: Eſa.63.10. Zach.12.10. and it is al one as if we ſtrake God with a dagger, as he complayneth alſo by his Prophet Zachary. That is one thing in effect, which we haue to remember vpon this place. And were all this well grauen in our heartes; I pray you woulde it not make vs to abhorre all our ſinnes? When a man is tempted by Sathan to offend his God, if hee would bethinke himſelfe of this point, and ſay; How now? Thou grieueſt thy God, thou giueſt him cauſe to enter into complaint and ſorrowe, like a father that conceiueth griefe and anguiſh of mind when hee ſees his children vnruly and vnreformable: It is a wounding of him at the heart, and ſo likewiſe God telleth vs yͤ we grieue his ſpirite: If a man (I ſay) would bethinke himſelfe throughly of theſe things: although he had a heart of ſtone, yet would they breake it and ſoften it. And this is the cauſe why that throughout all the holy Scripture hee complaineth of this; that we greatly grieue him, whẽ we are ſo wicked & vnruly. Therefore let vs aduiſe ourſelues wel: & for as much as hee is deſirous to be our father, let vs bee to him as children. For it muſt needes be that Sathan hath more than bewitched vs, & that hee rageth moſt terribly in vs, if we be not moued at ſuch kind of dealing. And it behoueth vs ſo much the more to marke well this text, bycauſe our Lord condemneth men for that they are too ſenſeleſſe and brutiſh, and telleth them that they be too too blockiſh, in that they haue not eye to their ende: but ſpecially for that hee proceedeth ſo farre, as to cloth himſelfe with our humane paſſions, and lamenteth to ſee vs periſh wilfully, and that we cannot abyde that hee ſhould deale like a father with vs. That is one thing more which we haue to marke vpon this text.

Now if any man alleage, that God ſeeing men ſo deſtitute, could wel giue them vnderſtanding, as we haue ſeene heeretofore where it is ſayde, God hath not yet giuen thee a minde and heart Deut.29.4. to vnderſtand. We muſt mark that God hath his ſecret purpoſe, which he reſerueth to himſelfe, (For he ſheweth fauour to whom he liſteth: and Exo. 33. 19 & Ro.9.15 he hath pitie on whome he hath pitie) and it is not for vs to enter thereinto, but rather to doe him the honour to confeſſe that he is the fountaine of al goodnes, of al power, of al wiſedome, and of all Iuſtice and vprightneſſe. Yet notwithſtanding we muſt make haſt when hee calleth & incorageth vs by his word. For if we come not, ne hearken to the things that are ſet forth to vs in his name, to receiue them obediẽtly by faith: we ſhalbe condemned as perſons that haue grieued his holy ſpirite by rebelling againſt him, and ſhewed our ſelues to be vnreformable children, that haue diſdayned our father and made our ſelues ſtraungers to him and to his houſe. That is the thing which is ſet forth vnto vs in this text. Therefore whereas God vpbraideth vs with our grieuing of him, let vs beware that wee enter not into theſe needeles curioſities: but rather let it ſuffice vs to behold him in his word, where he ſheweth himſelf, and where he ſheweth himſelfe in ſuch wiſe, as we ſhall finde that all they which frame themſelues thereafter, ſhall haue a happy end: that is to wit, that for as much as they bee adopted of God afore, they cannot periſh: and on the coutrary parte, that they which turne their backe to God when he ſheweth them his face, and which kick and ſpurne againſt him, ſhall for their ſturdineſſe reape nothing but confuſion. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to gather vpon this place.

Now Moſes addeth conſequẽtly, Were it poſſible for one man to chaſe a thouſand, or that two ſhould put ten thouſand to flight, vnleſſe the Lord had incloſed thē, and that their mightie one did hold thē captiue? Here he ſheweth by effect, yͭ God had ſufficiently warned his people, if they had but one ſpark of reaſon in them. And thereupō it is to be concluded, yͭ there was no more excuſe of ignoraunce for yͤ people, but yͭ they were conuicted ouermuch, to haue hardened their hearts euen of wilfull malice, & ſo to haue withſtoode God, & to haue letted him yͭ he ſhould not bring thē backe into the right way. That was yͤ meaning of Moſes. Now let vs mark, yͭ when God vouchſafed to ſhew his fauour towardes the people of Iſrael: then was his promiſe performed, yͭ is to wit, yͭ as ſoone as the people did but (as ye would ſay) remoue thēſelues, by & by their enemyes were ouercome. We knowe what ouerthrowes they gaue, and by what meanes yͤ ſame came to paſſe. For we heare how it is ſaid by yͤ Prophet Eſay, yͭ whenſoeuer God liſteth to ſuccour his people, & to vtter his power in their defence: it ſhall fall out wͭ them as it did in the voyage againſt Madian: for at yͭ time Gedeon gate not the victorie by mans policie, neither by vailancie, or ſtrength of hand: but it was the ſword of God & of Gedeon that did the deede. And yet it was ſo done, as it might ſeeme to be a play of young children. But our Lord ſaith yͭ he will maintaine his people after yͭ faſhion. Againe in other texts he declareth that his ſauing of his people ſhall be neither by ſword nor by ſpeare, but by his owne only hand. Ye ſee then how God hath ſhewed himſelfe inuincible, as oft as he hath liſted to defend his people. Cōtrariwiſe a verie ſhadowe was ynough to diſmay thoſe wretched people and to put them out of heart, ſo as they were ouerthrowen & brought in bondage of cruel tyrans. After what manner? A man cannot tell how. If a man looke vpon the ouercomming of them, it is a wonderfull and vncredible thing to the ſight of the worlde, that there ſhould haue beene ſo great a change. Now for this cauſe doeth Moſes adde, Were it poſſible that one man ſhould put a thouſand to flight, and that two ſhoulde chaſe ten thouſand, except your God had ſolde you, and that he helde yee ſhutte vp as priſoners? For ſo long as he gaue you courage, and ſhewed you that he intended to maintayne you: your enemyes gayned nothing at your handes, but were vanquiſhed by the onely looke of you, bycauſe your God fought for you. But as now yee ſee how your God taketh part againſt you, and howe it is hee that fighteth againſt you. And therefore impute not your rough handling vnto men, but conſider howe it is the hand of God that purſueth you and is againſt you. Had the Iſraelites vnderſtoode this, they had beene touched out of hand with their faultes, they had humbled themſelues, & they had returned vnto God, acknowledging him for their Iudge. But they continued ſtill in their ſpytefulneſſe. Nowe then wee ſee the ſturdineſſe and alſo the more than beaſtly blindneſſe which was in them. And this vpbrayding of them is to bee marked well. For wee knowe it is the hygheſt poynt of condemnation, when GOD wynneth nothing at our handes by chaſtiſing vs, but his ſcourges become vnprofitable; as if a man ſhoulde ſmite with a hammer vpon a ſtithy or Anuile. Therefore when GOD looſeth his labour after that faſhion in correcting vs; it is a token that our diſeaſes are vtterly vncurable. And that is the cauſe why that in the firſt Chapter of Eſay, hee playeth the ſorowfull father, ſaying: Alas, what a thing is this? From the crowne of the head to the ſole of the foote, there is not any ſounde part in this people. I ſee they bee the ſame they were afore, they bee no whyt amended; and muſt I needes haue beſtowed my labour in vayne? Wee ſee whereunto this tendeth: to wit, GOD ſheweth that men are become ſtarke diuels when they conſider not that his correcting of them is to bring them to amendment. Nowe then if wee chafe vpon the bitte when God ſendeth vs ſuch warnings: ſurely wee bee vtterly vnreformable. Therefore let vs bethinke our ſelues better, and as ſoone as God lifteth vp his finger and maketh vs to perceyue his diſpleaſure; let our ſinnes come before our eyes, and let vs thinke vppon them with vtter miſlyking of them, and returne againe vnto him. The thing then whereof wee bee warned in this text, is that wee ſhoulde better regard GODS ſcourges, and not kicke againſt the pricke: for wee ſhall gaine nothing thereby. Wee haue heard what is ſayde in the Lawe, as I haue alleaged heeretofore, and as we haue read it in the eyght and twentith Chapter: that is to wit, that if wee march ſtoutly againſt GOD, hee alſo will ſtrike croſſely and ouerthwartly vpon vs. So then, let vs marke well the warnings which we heare. When there commeth a dearth of vittelles, let vs not thinke that God ſittes aſleepe in heauen. It is hee that tryeth vs, to the intent wee ſhould thinke vpon our ſinnes, and ſtand the more vpon our garde, knowing that they bee the Roddes wherewith he chaſtiſeth vs. And hee doeth it not without cauſe; but of purpoſe to humble vs, and to further our ſaluation continually, vntill hee haue brought vs to it throughly. Therefore let vs learne to bee brought backe continually to the knoweledge of our vices and ſinnes, when God calleth and exhorteth vs thereto. And for the bringing thereof to paſſe, let vs take good heede to yͤ afflictions which we ſuffer, aſſuring our ſelues that they ought to ſerue for our inſtruction.

Eſa.9.4.

Iudges.7.

Oſee.1.7.

Eſa.1.5.

Deut.28. & Pſal.18.28.

And after this, Moſes addeth further, that their mightie one is not as ours: that is to ſay, The Idols which the heathen worſhip, are not lyke to our God. And that it is ſo, they themſelues are the Iudges. This place hath commonly beene expounded, as though Moſes had complayned that the enemies of the Iſraelites had ſō ſurpryſed them, and ſo vexed them as no man might ſuccour them: but it is cleane contrarie. For Moſes declareth that if God were not againſt his people, they ſhould not bee ſo ſcourged by their enemies: as if he ſhould ſay, yee muſt not loke at your owne ſtrength nor yet at your enemies, but conſider that for as much as ye haue fought againſt your GOD, and prouoked his vengeance againſt you by your offences: all theſe troubles which you do now indure, are of his ſtirring vp againſt you, and your enemies haue not any whit of ſtrength, but of his gift. Thinke not therefore that they ſhould haue ſuch power, vnleſſe hee had ſolde you, and that hee himſelfe held yee in captiuitie, and had deliuered you into the hands of your enemies. And for proofe therof, is he like their ydols? Strength ſtandeth not in men, but it commeth from heauen. Now then do not the heathen deſerue to be depriued of all ayd, when they worſhip their ydols and dead things? But you now doe worſhip the liuing God, hee hath ſhewed that he will keepe you in his tuition, and that then you ſhall be ſafe againſt all the world. Seeing then that your God is not lyke the ydols of the heathen; howe could you bee ouercome by them, if God did not afflict you, giue you ouer, and forſake you? And that it is ſo (ſayeth he,) euen our enemies are Iudges. That is to ſay, the heathen perceiue and finde by experience the power of our God, ſo as they muſt needs ſpite of their teeth confeſſe, that our God hath all power in himſelfe, and that their owne ydols are nothing. True it is that they abyde ſtill in their ignorance and beaſtlineſſe, but yet howſoeuer they bee diſpoſed they haue the experience thereof: and yet you conſider not that. Heere Moſes rebuketh the ſtubbornneſſe of the people yet more, in that they tooke not warning by the great number of chaſtiſements and viſitations. Wee ſee then in effect, that when wee amend not at GODS chaſtiſements, we muſt in the ende pay the arrearages: for there is ſo much the leſſe excuſe in vs. If God did lay the brydle in our neckes and warned vs not of our miſdoings, but rather dazeled our eyes by blindfolding vs in ſuch ſort as wee might not ſee one whitte: yet ſhoulde not all that diſcharge vs, but yet ſhoulde not our ſinne bee ſo heynous, ſo as it myght ſeeme to men that there were ſome little excuſe for vs: but he goeth about to bring vs home to himſelfe, hee ſheweth vs that wee haue liued amiſſe, hee draweth vs to repentaunce, and wee proceede on ſtill, as though wee had determined to reſiſt his hande. Nowe it is ſayde, Humble your ſelues vnder his myghtie hande. 1.Pet.5.6. When GOD ſhaketh his hande ouer vs, it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde ſtoope and relent vnto him, offering to him the ſacrifice which hee requireth, that is to ſay, the ſacrifice of a ſorowefull heart. Pſal.51.19. If wee doe not ſo, but ſtand out ſtill with harde and ſtiffe neckes; ſo as although GOD proceede in calling vs to him, yet wee continewe ſtill the ſame wee were afore; and notwithſtanding his rehearſing of one ſelfeſame leſſon to vs, yet wee ſtande ſtill at one ſtaye: at length wee muſt needes come to account for it. That is the thing which Moſes meant in this text.

What remayneth then to doe? Beholde, to all ſuch as walke in the feare of GOD, and reſt vppon the truſt of his goodneſſe, and flee to him for refuge; he promiſeth proſperitie in all things, ſo as they ſhall not want any thing ſo long as they be ſo vnder his protection. But on the other ſide, what can the ydolles of all the heathen in the worlde doe, or of all ſuch as haue peruerted the true Religion? Shall they bee fauoured of God? No not a whit as in reſpect of themſelues, ſauing that hee will puniſhe vs by their handes. Therefore when wee ſee men ſo aduaunced aboue vs, and to haue the better hande of vs, ſo as they may tread vs vnder foote and deuour vs: let vs aſſure our ſelues that God perſecuteth vs, and that it is he with whom we haue to deale. Becauſe wee haue warred againſt him with our vices: he alſo nowe after long tarying for our amẽdment, is faine to ſhew vs and to make vs feele to our coſt, that for as much as he is our Iudge, he cannot abyde that his grace ſhould be ſo deſpiſed and ſcorned. To bee ſhort, whenſoeuer wee bee afflicted, let vs enter into the thing which Moſes telleth vs heere, and conſider thus with our ſelues: Notwithſtanding that our God haue promiſed vs that wee ſhall finde good ſuccour continually at his hand, yet doe wee now ſee the cleane contrarie. And of whom is that long? Are not wee our ſelues to blame for it? Yes: For it is certaine that GOD foadeth not his ſeruauntes with vayne hope; nay hee alwayes goeth beyond their hope when they imbrace his promiſes as they ought. Wee muſt conclude then, that by our ſinnes wee haue forſaken and put from vs the ſuccours which hee had promiſed vs, and by meanes whereof (as Moſes ſayeth in another place) wee bee ſtripped quite and cleane Exod.32.25 out of that good couerture wherein our welfare conſiſted. For in Exodus Moſes ſpeaking of the ydolatry which the people had committed in making the Calfe of golde, ſayeth that they had ſtripped themſelues naked: as if he ſhould ſay, that the onely ſhadowe of God is ynough for our ſafetie, and that wee neede not to bee afraide ſo long as GOD broodeth vs vnder his wings. But as ſoone as we fall to ſin, we vncouer ourſelues, laying ourſelues open for a pray to Sathan, and to all miſcheefe. So then, we muſt conclude, that when our Lord doeth ſo ſet himſelfe againſt vs, it is bycauſe of our ſinnes. For why? His power is not abated, as ſaith the prophet Eſay. Eſa.59.1. Wherefore conſume we ſo away in our miſeries? Is it that God hath deafe eares & heareth not them yͭ call vppon him? Or yͭ his arme is broken ſo as he cannot help them as he did at yͤ firſt? No no: but bicauſe our ſinnes haue caſt a barre betweene him & vs, & we be not worthy to come at him to feele his helpe as afore.

Beſides this, Moſes by way of compariſon toucheth the children of Iſrael yet neerer the quicke in that hee ſayeth, That their enemyes were Iudges thereof. And thereby he meaneth that euen beaſtes myght perceyue it (as it is ſaid in the prouerb,) and that blindfolke myght iudge of it by groping. Nowe who were the enemyes of the children of Iſrael at that time, but the Infidels which had not any ſparke of lyght, euen ſuch as were ſotted in their ſuperſtitions? And howe coulde they then iudge of Gods power? Euen by the apparantnes therof, which was ſo great that it needed not any great reaſon to conceiue it. So then, in effect Moſes ſayeth heere that God had ſo manifeſted his power in ſauing his people, as that not onely they which were inlightened by the holy ghoſt, but alſo euen the brutiſheſt in the world might perceiue it. And in deed, what myracles wrought God in deliuering his people out of the lande of Egypt, and in leading them through the wilderneſſe? Neede we any great ſharpeneſſe of wit to conceiue ſo wonderfull power, which may rauiſh our wittes to be aſtoniſhed at it? No: but for as much as God hath ſhewed himſelfe ſo openly: both great and ſmall and euen the groſſeſt in the world muſt needes perceiue, that it is God. So then, whenſoeuer the word is matched with experience, & God giueth vs as it were ſpectacles to help vs, ſo as if our eyes be weake or dimmed, his word may bee a guide to ſhew vs how to diſcerne his power towards vs: ſurely there will be no excuſe for vs. For euen the Heathen muſt needes be Iudges or witneſſes thereof, ſo as wee cannot aleage, Yea it is true that God hath done it, and we ought in deede to diſcerne it, but alas, wee perceiued it not, for he dealt after ſuch a darke faſhion, as wee could not attaine thereto. Now, God telleth vs that if we were not ſo malicious as to ſhut our eyes, to ſtop our eares, & to dull all our ſenſes when he ſheweth vs ẏ tokens of his goodnes and mercy: we ſhould feele them with our handes, though wee had no eyes to ſee them withall. And on the contrarie part, when he teacheth vs, if we were not wilfully blind, that is to ſay, are contented to bee ignoraunt of the things which ought to bee beſt knowen vnto vs, it could not be but that vnleſſe we continued, & that through our owne vnthankfulneſſe, wrapped vp in ignoraunce, it could not bee I ſay, but that verie blind folkes themſelues ſhould be ſufficient witneſſes againſt vs, neither neede we to ſeeke any further ſtartingholes in this behalfe, for it ſhall be in vaine. After that our Lord hath drawen vs to him as well by his goodneſſe as by his chaſtiſements, and we come not to him, nor perſiſt to liue in his feare: then ſhall we come to the point to haue it caſt in our teeth, and euen the ignoranteſt in the world, the Infidels which neuer taſted of Gods truth, muſt riſe vp to beare witneſſe againſt vs, and to condemne vs, and to cut off occaſion of all excuſes. Lo at what point we ſhall be then. But this is ſaide vnto vs to the intent we ſhould not tarie to bee condemned after that faſhion. Then ſeeing that our Lord maketh his woord knowen in theſe dayes, euen to ſuch as are bewitched by Sathan: & ſeeing that vnto vs he giueth his word, not onely as a lamp, but alſo as a bright ſhining ſunne to giue vs light, and wee bee put in minde euery minute of an houre to thinke vpon him, to benefite our ſelues by his works, and to take ſuch warning by them as may confirme our truſt in his goodneſſe, and bring vs to his obedience: let vs on our ſide apply our mindes wholly that way, and euery of vs put his indeuour thereto, and giue another maner of iudgement vppon ſuch as haue deſpiſed God, and ſcorned his goodnes. Let vs (I ſay) become their Iudges, according to that which is ſaid, that being the members of Ieſus Chriſt, wee ſhall iudge the whole world. 1.Cor.6.2. The way then for vs to put this text in vre, is not to tarie till our Lord haue condemned vs by the teſtimonie of the vnbeleeuers, but to be ſo well diſpoſed to walke vnder his obedience, as our whole indeuour may be to frame our ſelues to that which he ſheweth vs, and euery of vs to make his profite in ſuch wiſe thereof, as our Lord Ieſus may acknowledge & auow vs to be members of his body, and we may boaſt our ſelues to bee his, when it commeth to the laſt day.

Now let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to haue pitie vppon vs his ſillie creatures, and that although we haue deſerued to bee caſt off by him, yet notwithſtanding he wil not deale with vs according to our deſertes, but rather ſhew footh the treaſures of his goodneſſe, and for our Lorde Ieſus Chriſtes ſake receiue vs into fauour, not only to pardon our faults paſt, but alſo to bring vs home againe to himſelfe, and to reforme vs in ſuch wiſe vnto his will, as all our whole lyfe may bee conformed to his righteouſneſſe. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Munday the xv. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXVI. Sermon which is the ninth vpon the two and thirtith Chapter.

32 For their vine is of the vineyard of Sodom, and of the fieldes of Gomorrha, and their grapes are grapes of gall, and their cluſters are bitter.

33 Their wine is the poyſon of dragons, and the cruell gall of the Aſpe.

34 Is not this layd vp in ſtore with me, and ſealed vp among my treaſures?

35 Vengeance and requitall belong to mee. When time is, their foote ſhall ſlip. For the day of their deſtruction is at hand, and the things that ſhould come vppon them doe make haſt.

Heere our Lorde ſheweth what manner of fruites the Iewes deſerued to gather. As if hee ſhould ſay, that the vengeance which hee intended to execute vppon them, coulde not bee founde to bee cruell, becauſe there was nothing elſe in them but gall, bitterneſſe, and all manner of poyſon. And bycauſe theſe figuratiue ſpeeches might ſeeme ſomewhat obſcure: hee addeth, That they brought foorth none other than the fruites of Sodom and Gomor. Whereby hee doeth them to vnderſtande, that their wicked deedes were as ſhamefull as the dooinges of thoſe two Cities, the which it was Gods will to deſtroy with lightening from heauen, to giue an euerlaſting example to the whole worlde. Nowe wee ſee in effect what the meaning of Moſes was. In deede ſome take this for puniſhment, ſaying that GOD woulde pay them with the like. As how? Namely that hee woulde giue them bitterneſſe, ſowerneſſe, anguiſh, and all manner of puniſhmentes to drinke of. And true it is that the Scripture ſpeaketh oftentimes ſo: for it like- Eſa.51.17.22 neth all the chaſtiſementes which GOD ſendeth vppon men, vnto drinkes. Thou ſhalt drink of my cuppe. As howe? I will ſende you of my ſpirit of giddineſſe, and of the ſpirit of rage and madneſſe. Likewiſe in another text he ſayeth, I will feede you with heauineſſe and ſorowe, and I will make you to drinke of my wrath till yee burſt. This kinde of teaching then is ryfe ynough in the holy ſcriptures. But in this text God hath a higher reſpect. Indeede it is true that hee threateneth the Iewes, but yet therewithall hee ſheweth that hee will puniſh them iuſtly according to their offences. They that referre this to the heathen and Infidels, deceiue themſelues. For they tooke it, that God after he had puniſhed his owne people, would turne his wrath againſt thoſe by whom hee had ſerued his turne, accordingly as wee knowe that when God liſted to execute his vengeance vppon the Iewes, hee vſed the ſeruice of the heathen, ſtirring vp ſometime the King of Egypt, ſometyme the King of Aſſyria, and another while the King of Chaldie. Ye ſee then that the Infidels were the inſtruments of Gods wrath. Not that they minded to ſerue God in making thoſe warres: but we know that God by his ſecret prouidence ouerruleth all thinges heere below; and applyeth them all to good vſe, making men how wicked ſoeuer they bee, euen in deſpite of their teeth to execute and performe all yͤ things that he hath ordained. Now when God hath ſo ſerued his turne by yͤ heathen; then cõmes their turne alſo. For it is ſaid that whẽ God hath done Eſa.10.12. and diſpatched all his woorke vpon mount Sion, then will he alſo ouermaiſter al thoſe which play their pranks, and weene to ſcape Gods hand and to abide vnpuniſhed: for he wil wel ynough find them out to pay them double. Howbeit, Moſes in this place treateth not of the heathen, but rather proceedeth in his matter wherewith he had begunne: which is, that God would puniſhe the Iewes, which ought to haue bin as his children: and yet notwſtanding had not ceaſſed to make warre againſt him, ſo as he held them and tooke them for his enemies. After which maner we ſee how he ſpeaketh by his prophet Eſay in the firſt Eſa.1.24. Chapter, ſaying: Alas, muſt I needes bee auenged of mine enemies?

But now that wee know of whom Moſes ſpeaketh: let vs looke more neerely wherefore it is ſayde that the vine of the Iewes is of the vineyard of Sodome and of the fieldes of Gomor. Wee knowe howe our Lorde lykeneth his Church to a vineyard. And not onely in this place; but alſo in the fifth chapter of Eſay it is moſt notably ſet downe, where he ſayeth, I will ſing a ſong vnto my beloued of his vyne- Eſa.5.1. yard. There the Prophet taketh vppon him GODS cauſe, lyke as a friend vndertaketh a quarell of him for whom he is minded to doe it. I will goe ſing a ſong, ſayeth he. After I had brought thee out of the Lande of Egypt, I planted thee in a fat ſoyle, I husbanded thee, I made a preſſing fatte for thee, and I omitted not any thing that belonged to thee: and nowe whereas I looked to receiue good fruite of thee: thou haſt brought mee foorth nothing but bitterneſſe. Yea and our Lorde Ieſus himſelfe had an eye to this ſong of Eſayes, when he accuſed the Iewes of ſuch vnkindeneſſe towardes God, Matt.21.33 that when hee hadde laboured by all meanes to ſaue them, yet they aduaunced themſelues ſo farre againſt him, as to murther his prophets whom he ſent vnto them to gather vp his Rents, yea and in the end to murther his onely ſonne and heire.

But nowe let vs come to that which Moſes ſayeth heere; namely, that they bee of the planting of Sodome, and of the field of Gomor. It behooueth vs to marke theſe two contrarie thinges. The one is, that God had choſen that people for his heritage, tendering it as a vine, and husbanding it all manner of wayes. It was meete therefore that they ſhould haue yeelded ſome good fruite vnto God, and that was the fruite of Sodom, that is to ſay, all manner of wickedneſſe wherewith Gods anger and vengeaunce were prouoked againſt them. And not without cauſe doeth Moſes ſpeake ſo: for hee foreſawe in his minde, that that people woulde giue themſelues ouer to all euill. And wee knowe alſo howe the prophets reprooue them for it. For they blame them not for ſome meane faultes; but they tell Ier.23.14. them that they haue outgone the wickedneſſe of Ez.16.46.13 the Sodomites and Gomorrites, & that whẽ the account commeth to be made, Sodom and Gomor ſhalbee their Iudges, yea and bee counted innocentes in compariſon of Iſraell and Iuda. For we muſt alwais remember that God had gathered that people to himſelf, and that the more fauour he had beſtowed vpon them, the greater was their vnkindnes, and cõſequently the greeuouſer was their fault, and the leſſe were they to be excuſed. Now the Prophets had an eye to the things which Moſes had propheſied afore. And ſo the whole matter commeth to this point, that the Iewes, who ought to haue glorified God, and which ought to haue had none other regard nor other ſtudy all their life long, than to liue in all pureneſſe of conuerſation; ceaſed not to doe euill, and to yeelde all maner of bitterneſſe vnto God. Sith it is ſo, we muſt not thinke that God did them wrong, neither ought they to complaine though hee puniſhe them extremely, and lay farre greater and horribler vengeaunce vppon them, than vppon all other Nations of the world. Such fruite then as they had ſowed, and ſuch fruit as they brought foorth, ſuch fruit did they gather: and it was good reaſon that God ſhould deale ſo rigorouſly with them. That is the thing in effect, which wee haue to beare in mind.

And now to apply this leſſon to our benefite, let vs marke firſt of al, that if we weene our ſelues to haue done but a ſmall fault, as men commonly doe either cloake their offences through hypocriſie, or elſe go about to make them leſſe than they be indeede: God will take vs to bee like the folke of Sodom and Gomor. And why ſo? Thoſe blind wretches gaue ouer themſelues vnto ouerheynous and curſed ſinnes, and became beaſtly. But what? As for vs we haue the lyght of life; we haue GOD calling vs into the way which is ready made, ſo as we neede but to goe on; wee bee warned to walke in obedience to GOD, and to dedicate our ſelues wholie to him euen as hee hath choſen vs to be his heritage: now if after all this, wee offende him yet ſtill, although our ſinnes bee counted but ſmall before men, are wee not as blamewoorthy as Sodom and Gomor, conſidering the rebellyouſneſſe which is in vs, and that we make warre againſt God euen of ſet purpoſe? Yes: and therefore let no man beguile himſelfe, nor no man flatter himſelfe, but let vs conſider how our Lorde will condemne vs ſtill as he did Sodom and Gomor. Eze.16.49. For God did giue them their fill, ſo as they had abundance of all good things, whereuppon they waxed proud, and did ſhut their handes and vouchſafed not to ſuccour the poore and needy. To bee ſhorte, in that place hee accuſeth Sodome and Gomor of three thinges: firſt that when GOD preſerued them, they became vnthankefull to him, and conſidered not from whence their welfare proceeded, ſecondly that they grewe proude, and gaue themſelues to pompes and delyghtes: and thirdely that they were cruell, and had no pitie nor compaſſion of their neyghbours to releeue them, hauing wherewith. And nowe let vs ſee if our Lorde giue not vs occaſion ynough, to loue and ſerue him, ſeeing he bleſſeth vs ſo many wayes. We muſt not haue an eye to the things that belong to this flightfull and tranſitorie lyfe, and to the ſuſtenance of our bodyes: but let vs conſider howe God powreth out his ſpirituall benefites vppon vs. Hauing ſo our fill, what acknowledgement doe we make to him thereof? Doeth not the world ſee that wee put all thinges out of minde? It ſhoulde ſeeme that our meaning is to deuour GODS benefites euen in mockage of him. As touching pride, doth not the world ſee howe great it is in moſt of vs? Doe wee ſuffer our ſelues to bee guided by the hand of God? Nay, as ſoone as any man ſhewes vs our faults, wee gnaſh our teeth at him, and there is none of vs that will bee meekened. True it is that wee will all generally confeſſe, that it is good reaſon that GOD ſhoulde gouerne vs, and that wee ſhould be guided and directed by his word: but when it comes to the proofe, none of vs will taſte of that ſauce: euerie of vs letteth the brydle looſe to his luſtes, and ſo wee drowne and become drunke in our delyghtes. Likewiſe wee bee full of crueltie. Where ſhall a man noweadayes finde men that deſire to communicate ſo with their neighbours, as they bee contented to releeue the neede of the poore? We ſee the contrarie. Thinke wee that GOD ſleepeth in the meane whyle? Thinke wee that hee hath a double meaſure to mete with? So then (as I haue declared afore) wee ſhall gayne nothing by flattering our ſelues: but GOD ſhall euer finde vs like to the folke of Sodom and Gomor, if we belie his word, and in ſtead of dedicating our ſelues vnto him, doe leade a heatheniſh and looſe life. That is one thing which wee haue to marke vpon the firſt place.

Againe, let vs marke well alſo, howe hee lykeneth the fruite of Sodom and Gomor to the gall or venim of the Aſpe, to the cruell or deadly poyſon of the Dragon, and to all manner of bitterneſſe. For thereby hee doeth vs to vnderſtande, that when wee liue wickedly, it is all one as if wee offered GOD poyſon to drinke, or woulde goe about to poyſon him. True it is that God is not ſubiect to ſuch things: but yet is it not long of vs. But if a childe ſhoulde offer his father the gall of an Aſpe, and all maner of bitterneſſe: I pray you woulde not euerie man abhorre ſuch a monſter? Woulde they not ſay he deſerued to haue all men riſe vp againſt him to roote him out? Beholde, heere our Lorde complayneth that when wee yeelde not the fruite which hee requireth of vs, it is all one as if wee did giue him bitter thinges to drinke, or as if wee woulde make him to burſt with gall, or with the poyſon of an Aſpe. Were this weyed as it deſerueth, ſurely wee woulde ſtand more in awe than wee doe. When the diuel tempteth vs and prouoketh vs to euill, if wee beare this leſſon well in minde, [wee woulde ſay to our ſelues,] Howe nowe? Wilt thou profer thy GOD the gall of Aſpes, and ranke poyſon to drinke? Truely wee are not ſo blockiſh but that our heartes woulde relent at it, and it woulde make vs to bethinke our ſelues. But alas, the diuell doeth ſo bewitch vs, that wee followe our wicked luſtes ſtill. Neuertheleſſe this is not ſpoken in vayne. So then let vs not imagine that Moſes hath heaped vp heere a deale of needeleſſe ſpeeche in that he ſayeth, Their vine is of the planting of Sodom and of the vineyarde of Gomor: and againe, their grapes are bitter, they bee the verie gall of the Aſpe, and their wyne is the poyſon of Dragons. His gathering of all theſe thinges together, is to ſhewe vs that wee cannot ſet ourſelues againſt GOD by leading a diſordered lyfe as we doe, but that (ſo farre as is poſſible for vs) wee offer to him bitterneſſe and ſowerneſſe to drinke, as if wee ſhould put venim and poyſon into his cuppe. And euen for that cauſe alſo doth he complayne that ſuch as haue ſo rebelled againſt him, haue greeued his ſpirit. Eſay.63.10. Not that God (as I ſayd afore) is ſubiect to any ſuch paſſions: but therein hee ſheweth mennes wicked dooinges according to this ſaying: They Zach.12.10. ſhall perceiue him whom they haue wounded. And how is that? Where are the daggers and ſwordes wherewith GOD can bee wounded? Nay hee ſheweth that our ſinnes are taken as ſore to heart, as though they were daggers to wound him withall. Now ſeeing it is ſo, and that our God hauing choſen vs for his vine and planted vs, dooth alſo take payne ſtill to husband vs; let vs learne not to yeelde him ſo harſh and bitter fruite, but rather to regarde what hee demaundeth of vs, and thereunto apply our ſelues, that in the end we bee not condemned to haue bin as Sodom and Gomorre, whereas hee would haue had vs to haue bin his holy citie, and he himſelfe woulde haue dwelled among vs, as in his ſanctuary and dwellinghouſe.

Now hee addeth thereunto, Is not this layd vp with mee? Is not this ſealed vp among my treaſures? This text comprehendeth two thinges. For firſt of all God ſheweth that ſinners beguile themſelues, imagining to ſcape his hand as though his eyes were blindfold, or as though he regarded not the things that men do here below. And ſecondly he ſheweth that he alſo wil therfore do his office, that is to wit, that foraſmuch as hee knoweth their ſinnes and wicked deedes, he will alſo puniſh them as they deſerue. Thoſe are the two poyntes which we haue to marke. Now as touching the firſt, wee knowe that men doe alwayes ſurmiſe that God perceiueth them not. True it is that wee will not ſay it with open mouth, nay wee will abhorre to ſay ſo: for if it bee demaunded of the verieſt naughtiepackes, whether God gouerne not the world, or whether he knowe not all mens faultes: they will ſay yes. But yet for all that, it is certaine that ſuch as prouoke him ſo boldly, are ſo dulheaded and brutiſh, that to their ſeeming God ſeeth them not: and the Scripture is full of that thing. Pſal.94.9. Shall not he which hath made the eare, heare? Shal he be blind which hath created the eye. Shall not he which faſhioneth mens harts vnderſtand all their thoughtes? And they againe haue ſayd on their parte, God ſhall not perceiue it. To bee ſhort, experience ſheweth that when men haue hardened themſelues in their ſinnes, they doe alſo beare themſelues in hand that God thinketh not any more vppon them, but that he turneth his backe and forgetteth them. Lo at what poynt we bee. But our Lorde telleth here on the contrary part, that all thoſe thinges are layde vppe in his treaſures, and faſt ſealed. As if he ſhould ſay, true it is that at the firſt daſh I ſhewe not that your ſinnes are come to my knowledge, I make as though I ſaw them not. Now becauſe I vſe ſuch patience, you imagine that I ſit idle in heauen, and let you alone, and minde not any more the gouernment of the world. Therefore ye abuſe my goodnes when my vengeance is not ſeene out of hand: but yet are all thoſe thinges layd vp in ſtore by me, and faſt ſealed vp in my treaſures.

Nowe to benefite our ſelues by this text, let vs haue an eye to that which is ſayd in Daniell, Dan.7.10. that the bookes ſhall bee layd open when the Iudge holdeth his Aſſiſes. Therefore if our ſinnes bee hidden as nowe from the worlde, ſo as wee be not accuſed of them nor no man rebuketh vs for them, inſomuch that we doe as it were fall aſleepe in them: let vs not therefore forbeare continually to mourne for them before God, and to enter into account, and to quicken vp our ſelues, knowing well that the Regiſters muſt bee layd open, when the ſentence ſhall bee giuen, and that as then our inditement muſt needes bee framed. Wee ſhall not bee made priuie to it aforehand, but as ſoone as the Trumpet ſhall haue ſounded, and our Lorde is ſet vppon the benche, there ſhall neede neither Regiſter nor ſecretarie to reade it, but euery mans conſcience muſt accuſe himſelfe, and euery man beare witneſſe againſt himſelfe, and euery man muſt lay open his owne ſhamefull dealinges: Sith it is ſo, let vs take heede to ourſelues, and not deceiue our ſelues by our vaine ſelfeſoothing. For although God puniſh vs not preſently, but beare with vs for a time: yet dooth it not therefore followe, that hee perceiueth not all our naughtie and wicked doinges. That is the thing then which we haue to remember in this text, wherein God ſaith, that all theſe thinges are layd vp by him, and faſt ſealed vp in his treaſures.

Yet notwithſtanding, no doubt but Moſes had an eye to the puniſhmentes, as if it had bin ſayd, that GOD can well reſerue chaſtiſementes to their due times, ſo that if he vtter them not at the firſt, hee knoweth wherefore hee delayeth them, and yet in the meane while they abide faſt locked vp. Therefore whenſoeuer GOD openeth his cheſtes, hee will finde terrible manners of vengeance, which are incomprehenſible to vs as nowe. Yea and let vs marke, that when GOD hath puniſhed vs two or three wayes, if hee withdrawe his hand afterward and yet wee ceaſe not to offend him ſtill, but hold on from euill to worſe, wee ſhall bee amazed to ſee what newe puniſhmentes hee will finde out, which wee neuer thought of. Therefore let vs not beguile our ſelues as though wee by our wit could meaſure both Gods puniſhmentes and all thinges belonging to his iudgement: but rather let vs vnderſtande that they bee hoorded vp as treaſures; and as often as wee bethinke vs of our faultes, let vs ſay with Dauid, Lorde who is hee that knoweth his owne ſinnes? Pſal.19.13. Truely Dauid played not the hypocrite in hiding himſelfe, neither ſought hee vaine and tryfling ſhiftes to diſguiſe his ſinnes: but after he had wel examined himſelfe, hee ſawe that God is a farre other manner of Iudge than hee himſelfe was, and (as Saint

1.Iohn.3.20 Iohn ſaith) farre greater than our owne conſciences. If our owne conſciences accuſe vs, for euery fault which wee perceiue in our ſelues God knoweth a hundred. So then, there is no more for vs to doe but to cry out with Dauid, Pſal.19.13. Who is he that knoweth his owne faults? Lorde cleanſe mee from my ſecret ſinnes. The way then which wee haue to deale, is firſt & formoſt to doe our indeuour to ſearch well the euill that is in vs, and (when wee haue done all that wee can,) to conclude in the end that wee perceiue not the hundredth part, and that God muſt bee faine to clenſe vs from our iniquities, euen though wee perceiue them not at all. Let that ſerue for the one poynt.

Againe as touching puniſhmentes, If GOD maintaine vs in reſt and at our eaſe, yea and thereunto doe alſo proſper vs: it muſt not make vs to fall aſleepe. For why? He hath his treaſures in the meane while, which are hoorded vp. Therefore let vs bee afraid, and although the ſignes of his anger appeare not, but hee ſeeme rather to ſmile vppon vs: yet if any man finde himſelfe faultie, let him flee to him and praie him to forbeare the putting forth of the treaſures of his vengeance, and rather to clenſe vs from all our faultes, and to ſet vs ſo cleare from them, as we may come before his face without ſpotte, and vnblameable, not in reſpect of our owne perfection, but becauſe hee hath forgiuen vs our offences, and ſo buryed them as hee will not call them to account. After that maner muſt wee put that texte in practiſe. And ſo in a worde let vs marke well, that it behoou eth vs to awake that wee may liue as in the preſence of God. Seeing then that nothing eſcapeth him, nor nothing fleeth out of his remembraunce, except it bee when he vouchſafeth to vſe mercie towardes vs: and lyke as hee marketh all our offences, ſo he hath wherewith to puniſh them; and hee can lay moſt horrible and dreadfull vengeance vppon vs: let vs not tary till hee execute ſuch ſentence vppon vs, but (as I tolde you afore) let vs rather pray him to clenſe vs from all our ſins, and to vtter forth the endleſſe treaſures of his goodnes towardes vs.

Nowe to confirme this leſſon, Moſes addeth, Vengeance is mine, and I will pay home in time conuenient. Their foote ſhall ſlip, the day of their deſtruction is at hand, the time thereof haſteth on apace. We ſee that when Moſes ſayd, This is layd vp in my treaſures, hee meant it not ſimply of mens ſins, but alſo of the corrections which God ſendeth vpon ſuch as haue offended him too much; & to ſhewe that hee hath meanes wherewith to puniſh them, which are vnknowen to men, and which ſhall amaſe them when they come to paſſe: In reſpect whereof hee ſayth, Vengeance is mine: As if hee ſhould ſay, what thinke yee mee to bee? For you call mee God, and yet in the meane while yee acknowledge mee not to bee the Iudge of the world: and that is a robbing me of my glory and maieſtie. And in deede, what is GODS beeing, but that when men haue liued in this worlde, they ſhoulde come to account before him, and he bee their Iudge? If wee ſcape Gods hand, ſo as our faultes abide vnpuniſhed, and euery man might runne at rouers as hee liſted, and in the meane while GOD ſhould ſhut his eyes at them; what a thing were that? Shoulde wee not make as it were a dead idoll of him? Yes certeinly. Here therefore GOD chalengeth to himſelfe the office of reuenging, as if hee ſhould ſay, Thinke not that my diuine being or this name of GOD conſiſteth in I wot not what an idle toye: but that it importeth that I gouerne the worlde with my power, that all thinges are guided by my wiſedome, that my righteouſneſſe reigneth, and that I haue the dominion of the worlde in ſuch wiſe, as all thinges muſt needes come to account before mee, that ſuch as haue ſerued and honored mee may not looſe their labour, nor the wicked ſcape vnpuniſhed which haue not ceaſed to breake all order and to worke mee deſpite. After this manner will I bee knowen to bee GOD, euen when you ſhall perceiue and feele my wiſedome, power, and righteouſnes. Now then, vengeance is mine (ſayth hee) that is to ſay; I am the Iudge, and therefore beguile not your ſelues. It ſeemeth at the firſt ſight that Moſes ſaith not any thing here, which is not knowen and confeſſed of all men. For who will deny that God is a Iudge? And yet for all that, (as I ſayd afore) after wee haue confeſſed it generally, euery of vs intangleth himſelfe in his owne imaginations, and wee thinke not vppon it when it commeth to the offending of GOD, wee make no account of it, all is one to vs, wee bee as bolde as mad men. And muſt it not needes be then, that the knowledge which wee had thereof is ouercaſt with a ſlumber? Now then foraſmuch as men doe wittingly deceiue themſelues, by turning away from this doctrine, that is to wit, that GOD is the Iudge of the worlde: therefore are men here put in minde that vengeance is his, and that hee will not forget to execute his office. And ſo wee ſee now to what purpoſe Moſes vſed that leſſon.

Notwithſtanding this, Saint Paul alledgeth the ſame euen properly alſo, thereby to reſtrein Rom.12.19.
vs from reuenge and from taking vppon vs the thing that GOD hath reſerued to himſelfe. Now then my friendes (ſaith hee) reuenge not your ſelues, but giue place to wrath: for it is written; Vengeance belongeth vnto mee. There wee ſee howe Saint Paul aſſwageth the choler and vnruly paſſions which cary men away, when they bee in a chafe. My friendes (ſayth hee) reuenge not your ſelues, for yee muſt giue place to wrath, or elſe it is all one as if yee ſtriued againſt GOD, and hindered him from dooing his office. But let him alone, for hee hath promiſed that foraſmuch as he is the Iudge of the worlde, whenſoeuer you bee troubled by your enemyes, hee will requite them with the lyke: howbeit conditionally that yee beare all thinges patiently and meekely. For if yee will needes auenge your ſelues, it is all one as if yee did ſhutte the doore againſt GOD; as who woulde ſay, I will not tarie for him, but I wyll trie what I can doe of my ſelfe. Howe ſo? God is willing to bee your protector, hee is ſo gratious to you all as to take you into his tuition, and to auenge you of your wronges: and you bee ſo vnpatient and fumiſh, that ye cannot find in your heartes to tary his woorking. But whoſoeuer haſteth after that ſorte, doeth as it were thruſt himſelfe into Gods ſeate, and that is a blaſpheming of his name. Nowe therefore bee well aduiſed (ſaith hee,) and looke that yee giue place to GODS wrath, that is to ſay, that yee ſuffer our Lorde patiently and with a mield and quiet minde, to doe and performe the thing which hee hath promiſed, for as much as vengeaunce belongeth vnto him.

Thus wee ſee nowe whereto this ſaying tendeth, and that Saint Paule hath applyed this text wiſely, as whereof two thinges may bee gathered: whereof the one is, that for as much as wee ſee our ſelues continually giuen to ſhrowde our ſelues vnder hypocriſie, wee ſhoulde alwayes liue in feare and warineſſe: aſſuring our ſelues that when wee haue playde the beaſts neuer ſo much, and when we be neuer ſo beſotted in our ſins, we ſhall haue made neuer the better market, but in the ende GOD will needes perfourme that which he ſpeaketh heere. For why? Hee cannot bee God but that therewithall hee muſt needes bee Iudge of the world alſo. Therefore let vs liue in awe of him. Secondly wee haue wherewith to comfort vs, in that wee ſee he will auenge vs of our enemyes, if wee indeuour to giue our ſelues wholly vnto him, and to keepe our ſelues brooded vnder his winges; for if wee ſuffer him to guide and gouerne vs by his holy ſpirit, and indeuour to followe his woorde, the vengeaunce which is to bee feared of all the deſpiſers of his Maieſtie and of all that ſtriue againſt his woord, ſhall bee turned vppon our enemyes, and in ſo doing our Lorde will ſhew and confirme the fatherly loue which hee beareth vs. To bee ſhort, on the one ſide this doctrine prouoketh vs to bee afrayde to prouoke the wrath of our GOD wittingly, for feare leaſt wee feele his horrible vengeaunce. And on the other ſide it gladdeth and cheareth vs, bycauſe wee ſee that GOD vndertaketh warre againſt our enemyes, to reuenge our wronges as if they were done to himſelfe. Now therefore if wee will obey Saint Paules exhortation, wee muſt note that we muſt not onely referre all reuenge vnto God: but alſo holde our ſelues as brydled or impriſoned, and not deſire to haue GOD to execute all thinges which we haue imagined in our owne fanſies. For there are which wil not reuenge themſelues with their handes, but yet they woulde haue GOD to execute whatſoeuer they haue conceiued in their owne brayne, yea and they doe euen pray vnto GOD to thunder downe vppon their enemies. But contrariwiſe wee bee commaunded to pray for the welfare of them that doe vs harme. Matt. 5. 44. Then muſt we not onely abſtaine from reuenge, but alſo pray GOD to forgiue our enemyes, and to turne them, and to haue pitie vpon them. For if we auenge our ſelues, howe doe wee leaue it to Gods wrath to bee auenged? True it is that if our enemyes bee vtterly paſt hope of amendment, wee muſt put them into the hande of the Iudge. But vntill ſuch time as there bee no more hope of recouerie, let vs alwayes deſire their conuerſion vnto GOD, and let vs further them thereunto, by teaching them as much as wee can. Therefore, to giue place vnto wrath, is not onely to keepe our handes tyed vp, that wee doe not murther men: but alſo to brydle our affections, ſo as wee wiſh not any euill to our enemyes; but rather (whyle they be conuerſant with vs heere beneath,) to deſire God to haue pitie and mercie vppon them, ſo long as there is any hope of them.

Let vs nowe goe forewarde with the ſaying of Moſes. To mee (ſayeth hee) belongeth Reuenge and Requitall, or I will requite it. For the woorde which Moſes vſeth may well be tranſlated thus: Vengeaunce is myne, and therefore I will requite it. As if our Lorde ſhoulde ſay, I will doe my duetie: for I am not as mortall men, which doe often fayle, pretending great tytles and dooing nothing in effect. Seeing then that vengeaunce belongeth to mee, I will pay euery man according as he hath deſerued. And ſo thereupon he concludeth, That their foote ſhall ſlip in conuenient time. Here Moſes meant to ſhewe, that whereas God had ſpared the Iewes, it did not therefore follow that he had quite and cleane diſcharged them, but that his bearing with them was to ſee if they would at length returne to him againe, and that for as much as hee ſawe them ſtubborne, they ſhould catch a fall in the ende, yea euen in the turning of a hand. He addeth expreſſely: in time conuenient, to ſhewe that hee knoweth that it behoueth him to moderate his roddes, and that it is not to bee ſayde that hee foreſloweth too long, when hee is not haſtie. And why? Bycauſe hee doeth thinges in their due ſeaſons. Therefore wee muſt let him alone with the doing of his woorkes in ſuch meaſure as he liſteth: wee muſt not haſt Gods vengeaunce after our owne fanſie. And hee vſeth this compariſon, That their foote ſhall ſlyde, or ſlip. And why? For wee ſee howe the wicked misbehauing themſelues againſt GOD, doe vaunt themſelues aboue other men, and are not contented with their owne place and degree, but they ſuppoſe that without winges they can take the Moone with their teeth, as the common ſaying is. For as much therefore as they exalt themſelues aboue other men, and would as it were ſet their feete in all folkes neckes, yea and that they make countenaunce to bee no more ſubiect to GOD himſelfe: Moſes ſayeth expreſſely that their foote ſhall ſlip. As who would ſay, Thinke they that they ſhall keepe their footing? Thinke they themſelues ſo well rooted and grounded, that they ſhall neuer bee ſhaken? Nay, but as it is ſayde in the tenth Pſalme, They ſhall ſtum- Pſal. 10. 6.

Pſal.37.9. Pſal.73.18. ble, and I will make them to ſlyde. According whereunto it is ſayde in another place, Lorde thou haſt ſet their feete in ſlipperie places. To be ſhort, Moſes meant to ſhewe heere, that God will ouerthrowe all the deſpiſers of his woorde. When they haue long time looked aloft, and floriſhed and proſpered among men, yea and triumphed ouer others: hee will at length make them to ſtumble. Therefore let vs not truſt to our ſtate, neither let vs abuſe our ſelues when wee bee vpheldē and vnderpropped, ſo as the worlde fauoureth vs and wee haue ſtoore of worldly helpes to mayntaine vs. For why? Vnleſſe God holde vs faſt, and that wee reſt vppon him, ſurely wee bee in ſlipperie places; for although wee perceiue it not, yet is there nothing but yce in this world. One ſpeciall poynt then which wee ought to note well, is that wee muſt not thinke to haue any ſtay but in the grace of God. When he vouchſafeth to maintaine vs by his power, then may wee aſſure our ſelues that wee bee well grounded. But if he bee not fauourable to vs, if he vpholde vs not: let vs aſſure our ſelues that wee ſtand vppon yce, and wee ſhall not neede any thing to ouerthrowe vs. And although it befall vs not ſo at the firſt daſh, yet let vs aſſure our ſelues that the conuenient times are in the hand of God, who knoweth well the fit ſeaſons, and that if they bee not to day, they will bee to morrowe. And that is a thing which ought to waken vs well, and make vs to looke about vs for feare of this leſſon.

Alſo on the contrarie part it ought to bee a comfort to vs to ſee howe our Lorde ouerruleth all thinges in this worlde, and that although the wicked which ſeeke our ouerthrowe bee now exalted, and haue ſuch authoritie that they make all other men to tremble: yet our Lorde will giue them the ſlip, and trip vp their heeles. Yee ſhal ſee them vaunt themſelues, ye ſhal ſee them looke as bigge as though they would ſwallow vp Gods Church, yee ſhall ſee them make ſtoute bragges, the thruſting foorth of their hand is ynough to ſweepe downe all thinges a hundred leagues off; & yet ere they can turne their foote, they are caſt downe and all their attemptes goe quite and cleane backeward. Now when wee ſee theſe thinges, truely it is ynough to aſtoniſh vs and to abaſh vs: but yet on the other ſide
Pſal.73.18. ſeeing it is ſayde that they ſtande vppon yce, God will make them to ſtumble. The remembrance whereof being wel printed in our mindes, woulde put away all impedimentes that keepe vs from fleeing vnto God, & from praying him to vouchſafe to hold vs alwaies vnder his protection, vnder the which, (do the wicked what they can againſt vs) they ſhall neuer bring it to paſſe. Thus much concerning the conuenientneſſe of the time, and the ſlipping or ſlyding whereof Moſes ſpeaketh here.

Nowe to knit vp the matter withall, hee ſayeth, That the day of their deſtruction draweth nigh, and that their times are comming in haſt. This ſerueth ſtill to touche thoſe the better, which doe eaſily beare with their owne faultes, and caſt the time behinde their backes, as they ſay. But GOD telleth vs that ſuddainly ere they thinke of it, yea and euen when they warrant themſelues peace and reſt, their deſtruction ſhall come vppon them, accordingly as the Scripture doth oftentimes put vs in mind there- Eſa.57.21.
of, and not without cauſe. For wee ſee howe men do take their aduantage, bycauſe they imagine that whē God hath borne with them a day, a moneth, or a yeere, it ſhall bee ſo ſtill for euer after. By this meanes ye ſee how men doe recken without their hoſte, bearing themſelues in hande that tyme is woorth monnie, according to the common prouerbe which hath raigned at all tymes. For this cauſe it is ſayde, that the wicked muſt feele Gods hand in ſuch ſorte, as that they ſhal bee ouerwhelmed ere they thinke of it. And therfore the Scripture likeneth them Eſa.13.8. to a woman with Childe: for ſhe is ouertaken in leſſe than the turning of a hand. Euen ſo is it with thoſe which are full of Gods wrath according to their feeding of it in themſelues. And yet for all that, they go on ſtill and keepe their olde trade, bearing themſelues in hand that God is a great way off, and that they ſhall haue forewarninges a long time before they feele the blowes. But they be amaſed to ſee how God hath vtterly deſtroyed them.

For this cauſe it is ſayde, Your dayes make haſte, your time is at hand. And that is the thing which Moſes looked at. Therefore let vs now looke to benefite our ſelues by this leſſon, and let vs make our cōmoditie of it in ſuch wiſe, as we may walk in ẏ feare of our God. Although things ſeeme to be in quiet, yet let vs not ceaſe to haue an eye to his wrath. For that is a thing wherein our fayth muſt be exerciſed. If our lord ſpare vs and deale not roughly with vs as we deſerue; let vs thinke, alas, yet haue we offended our God exceedingly, and thereby deſerue well that hee ſhould looke ſternely vpon vs: and yet notwithſtanding hee ſheweth himſelfe to haue pitie vpon vs, but yet muſt not that cauſe vs to fall aſleepe. The firſt thing then which wee haue to remember vppon this place, is that wee muſt haue an eye to Gods wrath a farre off as though it were at hand. The ſecond is that we muſt be of good comfort when God ſeemeth to be as it were aſleepe and letteth the wicked alone, and toucheth them not ſo much as with his litle finger, but ſeemeth euen to fauor them. Let vs aſſure ourſelues that their ſtate is neuer the better for all that. For it ſhall amaſe vs to ſee how God will worke more in one day, than wee looked for in ten yeeres. Yee ſee then after what manner the faythfull ought to hold themſelues in awe. Namely that when we haue bethought vs of Gods threateninges, and conſidered that his Iudgementes make haſte in comming: we may be ſure that we ſhall not linger ouerlong in this world, but that God wil performe this ſaying of his by the prophet Abacuck, Abac.2.3.
that although he ſhew not himſelfe to haue pity vpon his children at ẏ firſt: yet will he performe his promiſes: and although he doe it not out of hand, yet ſhall we perceiue in the end, that they make haſt, that is to ſay that they be comming in time conuenient, Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs perceiue them better than we haue doone, and in the meane while not to ſuffer vs to ſettle ſtill in our leawde dealinges and offences, nor to yeelde him ſuch bitter fruites, that in ſteede of beeing his inheritance wee ſhoulde become as Sodome where all manner of outrage was committed; but that being gouerned by his holy ſpirite, wee may bee cleanſed from all our wicked affections, ẏ hauing brought him foorth ſuch fruite as hee requireth, we may be gathered vp into his glorie, to be taken and auowed for his children: And that whē he chaſtiſeth vs we may ſo benefite our ſelues by his corrections, as wee may not become vnreformable, but returne to him out of hande, to the ende we may not onely bee exempted from the curſes wherewith hee threateneth the skorners of his worde, but alſo be mayntained by his defence, and his wrath and vengeance bee turned vppon our enemies, to the better aſſuring of vs that he is our God and Sauiour. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not only to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xvj. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXVII. Sermon, which is the tenth vpon the two and thirtith Chapter.

36 Surely the Lorde will take in hande the caſe of his people, and repent him ouer his ſeruantes, when he ſeeth their ſtrength is ſo gone from them, that they be in a manner ſhut vp, and none of them left remaining.

37 And when it ſhalbe ſayd, where are their gods, [euen] their God in whom they truſted:

38 The fat of whoſe ſacrifices they did eat, and the wine of whoſe drinkeoffrings they dranke? Let them ſtepe vp and helpe you, and let them bee your refuge.

39 See nowe how it is I, euen I that am God, and there is no God with me.

SVch as thinke that God hath hitherto alreadie threatened the heathen & vncircumciſed, which skorned the Iewes when they ſawe them in aduerſitie, expounde this text as though our Lorde ſhoulde ſay that hee will maintaine the caſe of his people, when hee ſees them become ſuch a skorningſtocke to the Infidels, and that hee will reioyce in ſo doing. For the ſeconde worde which Moſes vſeth, betokeneth ſometimes to comfort. But wee muſt remember what hath beene ſaide afore, namely that G O D continueth in threatening ſuch as cannot bee ſubdued but by maine force, according to the hardnes of heart which wee knowe to haue beene in that people. It was not enough then for God to haue threatened them in a worde or twayne: but it ſtoode him vpon to holde them as it were impriſoned. And that is the cauſe why hee addeth nowe, That God will iudge his people. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, Thoſe whome G O D hath choſen muſt not thinke to haue a priuiledge to be let alone vnpuniſhed in their offences and wicked doings: it is cleane contrarie: for therein will God ſhew his Iuſtice. And although God be Iudge of the whole worlde in generall: yet will he be knowen to bee ſo cheefely in his Church as the which is 1.Tim.3.15 his houſe, and it is good reaſon that he ſhoulde haue a care thereof and ſhew himſelfe to watch ouer it. And therefore when they that haue beene trained in Gods worde, and are his flocke doe runne aſtray: he muſt needs reforme them firſt of all. And that is the cauſe why the Prophete ſaith that Iudgement ſhall beginne at Gods houſe, which thing Saint Peter alleadgeth alſo. And it is a verie notable ſaying, and ſuch a one as may ſerue vs to great purpoſe. For we be abaſhed when wee ſee God lay his hand vppon them that call vppon his name, and are counted of the number of his ſeruauntes. When hee handleth them more roughly than he doth the Infidels, which belong no whit vnto him, it ſeemeth ſtraunge. But wee muſt note what I haue alleadged afore, namely that foraſmuch as G O D acknowledgeth vs for his houſeholde folke, hee muſt needes haue a ſpeciall care of vs. Therefore when hee ſees vs goe aſtray, hee reformeth vs, whereas in the meane while he makes as though he ſaw not the faults of thoſe that are ſtrangers to him, which neuer knewe him, and which neuer had any inſtruction by his worde: hee giueth them the bridle for a time: not that they ſhall not be driuen to yeeld an account thereof in the ende, but for that (as I haue ſaide afore) God executeth his chaſtiſementes rather vpon his owne Church, than vppon all the worlde beſides: Or at leaſtwiſe beginneth at that poynt. And that is the meaning of Moſes in this place where hee ſaith: The Lord will iudge his people. As if he ſhoulde ſay, Conſider vppon what condition God hath gathered you together, to wit, that you ſhoulde call vpon his name, and be his people and his heritage; his intent is to gouerne you himſelfe, and to haue the guiding of you himſelfe. Nowe then if ye be rebels againſt him, hee muſt needs haue his hand lifted vp, for to puniſh you. Know yee therefore that when ye tranſgreſſe his lawe, and that moreouer he ſees you hardened in euil and cãnot reclaime you by gentlenes, he muſt needs vſe an other remedie, and deale with you by all kinde of rigour: for it is his peculiar office to iudge his people.

And hereunto alſo is referred the text that Eſa.10.12. was alledged yeſterday out of Eſay, When God hath diſpatched all his worke vppon mount Sion, then will he turne his ſworde againſt the skorners of his maieſtie and againſt his vtter enemies. There the Prophet meant to hearten the faithful which might be troubled when they ſawe God puniſh them out of meaſure as men might deeme, and in the meane whyle beare with the heathen who had proſperitie and made good cheare as though God gaue them more libertie to doe euill. The godlie therefore might be ſhaken, and what meanes this? What auayleth it vs to haue the promiſes? Where is God become? It were better for vs ẏ he gaue vs ouer, and wee had no acquaintaunce with him. After that manner might a man bee tempted as in reſpect of the fleſhe. But the Prophet ſaith, No, no, ſpite not them which liue nowe in reſt, for they ſhall haue their turne. Howbeit, God muſt firſt finiſhe his worke vppon mount Sion, that is to ſay, he muſt firſt beginne with you, becauſe you be neereſt him, inſomuch that you ought to be linked to him by the bonde of his worde. But you haue fayled, you haue offended: and therefore hee is faine to chaſtiſe you, and that not ſleightlie as it were with his little finger, for he will doe all his worke throughlie. And it is not without cauſe that hee ſetteth downe the worde All; for it ſerueth to doe vs to vnderſtande, that wee muſt haue our backes readie to receiue his ſtrokes, vntill it pleaſe him to withdrawe his hande who knoweth when it is enough, and that hee haue chaſtiſed vs as much as needeth. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to remember vpon this text.

And the Apoſtle alſo helpeth vs to that conſtruction in the tenth to the Hebrewes. For after that he hath ſhewed that if they which break the Lawe of Moſes were condemned to death, wee in theſe dayes cannot eſcape Gods vengeaunce, if wee breake the couenaunt which hee hath made with vs by the bloude of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, which ought to bee much holier to vs than the couenaunt which hee made, but by the bloude of brute beaſtes: after his ſpeaking ſo, hee addeth, My friendes, yee knowe howe it is hee which hath ſaide, I will iudge my Hebr.10.30 people, it is I to whome vengeaunce belongeth. Alſo hee noteth the text that was expounded yeſterday, and likewiſe the ſame which we treat of as nowe. And wee ſee howe this applying of them is to make vs to vnderſtand, that if God ſpared not the deſpiſers of the couenant which hee had made and contracted with them in old time; needes muſt wee be handled more roughlie in theſe dayes. For we bee worthie of it, conſidering that God hath ſhewed himſelfe to vs after a farre more excellent faſhion, by ſending his owne ſonne, through whome he would haue vs to bee the more confirmed in the promiſe of ſaluation, by meanes of his bloude which is the verie ſeale thereof. Nowe then, if wee in theſe dayes deſpiſe ſo great a good turne, God muſt needes ſhewe double rigour to vs, and execute the thing which Moſes ſpeakes of here, which is, that vengeaunce belongeth vnto him, and that it is his office to iudge his people, and that he will do it.

Now afterward Moſes comforteth the faithfull, telling them that Gods rigour ſhal be none ſuch, but that in the ende he will haue pitie vppon ſuch as are not vtterlie paſt grace. Hee will repent him ouer his ſeruantes, ſaith hee. This is added as a qualification of that which he had ſaide afore, to the intent we ſhould not bee too much diſmayed when wee heare that in puniſhing ſin God will beginne at vs. For that might put vs into ſuch an vnquietneſſe, as that wee had leuer he ſhoulde let vs alone, and neuer take or auowe vs any more to bee his people. Not without cauſe therefore doth the Apoſtle adde this qualification: My friendes (ſaith hee) true it is that wee muſt liue in feare, and beware that wee tempt not God in abuſing his goodneſſe. If hee beare with vs for a time, wee muſt not in the meane while play the looſe coltes: for if wee bee his people, wee muſt receiue the firſt ſtripes. And why? Becauſe he hath a ſpeciall care of our welfare, and hee muſt needes call vs home againe to himſelfe when hee ſees vs runne at randon. But yet muſt not wee thinke our caſe the worſe, neither muſt it greeue vs to bee ſo chaſtiſed at Gods hande. For why? He will puniſh vs meaſurablie, and in the ende wee ſhall perceiue that hee hath not forgotten his mercie for all his ſhewing of ſuch rigour. He will then repent ouer vs, becauſe he ſeeth we be his people, and that hee hath entred into a couenaunt with vs and hath adopted vs for his children: and therefore hee will haue vs to bee his ſeruauntes, to the ende hee may rule ouer vs: and ſo at the length hee will declare; that whatſoeuer hee hath doone in correcting vs, hath not beene doone in vaine, or without purpoſe. But when the worde is taken for Comforting, it is as much as if GOD ſhoulde ſay, that hee will take pleaſure and delight in their vtter ouerthrowe and deſtruction: But here it is eaſie to be perceiued that Moſes meant to ſay the cleane contrarie: For he addeth, That God will repent him when hee ſeeth the ſtrength of his people vaniſhed away, and that all of them are as folke diſcomfited, ſo as there is none of them bee hee neuer ſo well garded and ſhut vp in hold, or bee hee abroade in the fields, which is not forlorne and vndone. Therefore when God ſeeth his people ſo miſerablie vnder foote, then will hee be ſorie (ſayeth he). For it might be ſayd vnto them, Where bee your gods? Heereby Moſes meaneth in effect, that GOD wilbee contented to haue ſo ouermaiſtred the Iewes that they put not their truſt any more in their Idols, ne bee any more blynded in their ſuperſtitions. For they ſhall well ſee that Sathan had beguyled and deceyued them. And on the other ſyde GOD may then ſaie vnto them, Yee ſee now how it is I, euen I only that am GOD alone, and that there bee no other gods. Knowe ye alſo that when I haue ſtryken, I doe heale: and when I haue killed, I do quicken againe. Therefore turne yee againe to mee, and by the way conſider that there is none which can deliuer you out of my hand. God then ſayeth that he will finde the meane to ſpeake after that manner, and that when the people are well beaten, then they will be diſpoſed to come to amendement. Now we ſee what is contained in this text of Moſeſes: it remaineth to apply the doctrine hereof to our vſe.

As touching this worde repent, we muſt take it as it is taken through out the whole ſcripture, not that God is changeable, or that he hath any alteration in himſelfe: but that it is ſo ſayd in reſpect of vs. Moſes reporteth that God repented that he had made man: Gen.6.6. which is not to bee ſo vnderſtoode as though God had not bin well aduiſed at the firſt what ſhoulde inſewe afterward. For whereof proceedeth repentance in vs, but that to our ſeeming we fore ſawe not the matter well at the firſt, and therefore it greeueth vs afterwarde that we were no better aduiſed aforehand? But this can in no wiſe befall vnto God: for all things are preſent vnto him, and he cannot be ouerſeene in any thing whatſoeuer. Why then ſayeth he that he repenteth? (for ſurely it is a very cõmon manner of ſpeech among the Prophets to ſay, Repent you of your ſinnes, Ier.18.2. and I will repent me of the euill which I had purpoſed againſt you, I will diſcharge you of it ſaith the Lorde) As haue ſayd afore, he applyeth himſelfe to our vnderſtanding. When we ſee any change or alteration in Gods works, to our ſeeming hee himſelfe alſo is chaungeable: Not that hee is ſo in deede, but wee be ſo dull of vnderſtanding that wee cannot reach to the maieſtie of God, and we imagine of God after the manner and reſemblance of our owne nature. Now God applyeth himſelfe to vs. Howbeit not to bring vs a ſleepe in our owne ignorance, or ſuperſtition; but to drawe vs to him leaſurely by degrees. That is the cauſe why hee ſayth hee will repent him. Neuertheleſſe the worde ſignifyeth properly, to ceaſe from punishing of vs, lyke as when a man hath chaſtiſed his childe, hee is touched with remorſe for it, and thereupon is loth to vſe ſo great rigour any more, inſomuch that hee ſaieth in the ende, I forgiue thee and I will forget the euill and the offence which thou haſt done: onely ſee that henceforth thou doe as I bid thee, and all ſhall bee forgotten: When a father ſpeaketh to his childe after that manner, it is as much as if he repented him, becauſe he is touched with a fatherly affection and loue that hee beareth to his owne bloud: But God who in goodneſſe excelleth all worldly creatures vſeth this ſimilitude of Repenting, to ſhewe that when hee hath chaſtiſed vs he will withdrawe his hand, and not preſſe vs to the vttermoſt. And that is a very neceſſary leſſon, and that is the cauſe why the Prophets, doe harpe ſo much vppon it. For if we looke well vppon the Prophets, there is nothing more ryfe among them, than after threatning, to adde ſome comfort wherwith to ſweeten Gods wrath, leaſt the faithfull ſhould be too much diſcomforted. For when wee ſee that God is againſt vs, is it not a gulfe to ſwallow vs in deſpaire? Who is hee that can ſtand out, when hee thinketh that God is his enemie, and can taſte nothing in him but vtter rigor? Muſt we not needes bee ſtricken then with ſuch terror, that heauen and earth doe threaten vs, that our lyfe becommeth lothſome to vs, and that wee could finde in our heartes that the mountaines ſhould ouerwhelme vs, as is ſayd in the Prophets? Oſe.10.8. What ſhould become of vs if there were nothing but ſuch rigor in God? Could wee euer preace vnto him, to hope that hee would be fauorable to vs? No, but wee would ſhunne him as much as wee coulde, and we could find in our hartes that his maieſtie were vtterly aboliſhed. Now then, if wee bee deſirous to fare the better by Gods threatninges, thereby to be drawen to repentance: wee muſt vnderſtand alſo that he is mercifull, and that we ſhall finde him ready to receiue vs into his fauour. When we once taſt of ſuch goodneſſe, then ſhall wee fare the better by his threatninges. The thing then which Moſes telleth vs here, is that when wee once knowe that GOD will not ſpare vs to feede vs in our vices and corruptions, but that foraſmuch as he hath adopted vs to be his children, he will hold vs in awe and correct vs when wee haue done amiſſe: wee muſt alſo conſider therewithall that hee forgetteth not to bee our father, but will repent him ouer his ſeruauntes, and ſo meaſure his chaſtiſements, that they ſhalbe as a medicine to vs, and we ſhall finde them to be to a good end. That is the thing which muſt comfort vs, that is the thing which muſt make vs to like well of all Gods chaſtiſementes, that we bee not too ſorrowfull in greeuing our ſelues; ne gnaſh our teeth at them as the faithleſſe do, which martyr themſelues with ſorrowing, and play the madde beaſtes.

But let vs marke well that for the ſame cauſe Moſes addeth ouer his Seruauntes.

It is true when he ſaith, God will iudge his people, that is to wit, the people that cal vpon his name, notwithſtanding that the moſt part of thē were hypocrites and wicked perſons. But whereas hee ſpeaketh of Gods Seruantes, he meaneth thoſe which followe the good trade whereto they were called, and which ſeeke to honor God to whom they belong, and who hath dedicated them to himſelfe. Then muſt we not onely haue the title of Gods people, but we muſt alſo indeuour earneſtly to ſerue him, and be Zelous in yeelding ourſelues ouer vnto him, ſeeing he hath reached vs his hand, and tolde vs that he will receiue vs to mercie.

And it behoueth vs to marke well the reaſon that Moſes addeth, to wit, For hee ſhall ſee that their ſtrength is faded and weakened. Here it is ſhewed vs that God withdraweth not his hand at the firſt when he hath once begunne to puniſh ſuch as haue ſhrunke away from his obedience, but at ſuch time as he perceiueth that their ſtrength fayleth. For why? We ſee that his corrections drawe vs not to amendment at the firſt. In deed we will proteſt as ſoone as God toucheth vs, that we be cleane altered from that we were before. If a man fall into any ſicknes, he will mourne & make a gay confeſſion of his former lyfe, he will ſeeme to be wholy reformed, & that frō thenceforth his whole indeuer ſhall be to giue himſelfe altogether vnto God. But be he once a foote againe, he fals to his old byas, and there appeareth no chaunge at all in him: but rather we accompliſh that which is ſayd by the Prophet, Pſal.78.34. namely that wee returne but onely while God ſmiteth vs, and as ſoone as he giueth vs a little reſt, wee forget it by and by, and make no more account of it. So much the more neede therefore haue wee to marke well theſe wordes of Moſes, where God taryeth till our ſtrength vaniſhe away. For as long as wee haue any courage in vs, we imploy it altogether to rebelling. Although GOD haue broken our armes, yet if we can ſtirre our legges, wee will bee ſtill kicking and ſpurning againſt him. If our tongue be able to wagge, wee will occupy it either in chaſing and fuming, or in grudging and blaſpheming: To bee ſhorte, as long as men are ſtrong and luſty, they ceaſe not to ſtriue againſt God, and to lift vp their hornes, and to puſhe at him lyke Bulles and wilde beaſtes. Lo at what poynt wee bee. Therefore it is no woonder though GOD continue his chaſtiſementes, and that wee ſeeme to bee at the laſt caſt, and that it might well ſuffice him to haue handled vs ſo roughly, yet hee layeth miſerie vppon miſerie ſtill; it is nothing to bee wondered at. For why? Vntill wee be waſhed away lyke water, and that there remaine not one whit of ſtrength in vs, it is certaine that wee will keepe ſome peece of ſtubborneſſe ſtill lurking within vs, which will ſhewe it ſelfe whenſoeuer occaſion is offered. GOD then knoweth good cauſe why hee withdraweth not the afflictions by and by which he ſendeth vpon vs. For vnleſſe it were expedient for our welfare, ſurely he taketh not delight to ſee vs ſo in anguiſh and ſorrowe. But hee knoweth our ſecrete diſeaſes which are vnperceiued euen to our ſelues, how that wee ſhould be beguiled by them. For a man wil diuers times imagine himſelfe to bee ſo well reclaymed, that hee needeth no more, and that is the thing that beguileth vs. But GOD ſeeth much clearer than wee doe, and hee is faine to play the Phiſition. If a Phiſition being a mortall man, bee able to coniecture that there lyeth ſome further inconuenience lurking in the diſeaſed perſon, and thereuppon doe giue him a ſtronger medicine: ſhall not our Lord from whom nothing is hidden, & to whome it belongeth to ſearch mens hearts, perceiue yͭ there are yet ſtil ſome naughty and wicked affections to bee remedied in vs? Yes: and therefore let vs marke well this ſentence of Moſeſes, where hee ſaith that God will repent him, at leaſtwiſe when he ſeeeth all the ſtrength of his people to bee foreſpent. And therefore let vs not thinke that our Lorde will vtterly ſinke vs, though he aſſwage not the afflictions out of hand which he ſendeth vppon vs. For hee knoweth that it is for our behoofe to languiſh, and he ſeeth that wee would kicke at him againe, if hee left vs in our full ſtrength. Therefore we haue neede to bee tamed, yea and to bee brooſed and broken, or elſe hee ſhall neuer haue ioy of vs. That is the thing in effect, which wee haue to practiſe vppon this place.

Nowe it is expreſly ſayd, that GOD will ſee them all diſcomfited, as well the man that is ſhut vp, as the man that is left abroad. This maner of ſpeaking is common enough in the holy ſcripture, as if yee would ſay the ſtrong and the weake, that is to ſay, all one with another. For by this worde Shut vp, the Hebrewes betoken him that is in a fortreſſe, caſtle, or holde, and in good ſafetie as in reſpect of men. And by the man that is left abroad, they meane the poore man which goeth abroad in the fieldes without defence or ſafegard. We ſee then howe his meaning in effect is that all of them as well great as ſmall, ſtrong as weake, riche as poore, ſhall bee all diſcomfited. True it is that ſuch as are already feeble to the worldward, ought to bee eaſily reclaymed vnto God and teachable enough. But herein it appeareth howe much naughtineſſe there is in our nature. For the miſerableſt of vs ceaſe not to ſtriue againſt God, and euen they which haue not whereof to bee prowd, but ought rather to hang downe their heads and to bee aſhamed of themſelues, euen they (I ſay) will not faile to ſwell with pride lyke Toades. When we ſee men fight after that faſhion againſt nature: needs muſt we ſay yͭ there is a terrible vntowardneſſe in mans nature. Now if theſe cannot bee made to ſtoope at the firſt, but God muſt be faine to winne them by maine blowes, inſomuch as hee may ſooner break them than make thē obedient & ſubiect to his gouernment & auctoritie, how much more needful is it for yͤ rich, & for ſuch as thinke thēſelues to be well fenced, & for ſuch as haue worldly meanes to ſtay vpon?

How

Howe much more neede haue they to bee tamed? For they doe euen burſt for pride, accordinglie as wee ſee howe the riche folke and the great perſonages of this worlde, and all ſuch as ſeeke to ſtande by themſelues, are ſo beſotted yea and bewitched with diueliſhe ſelfeweening, that they thinke they may defie God, and that his hande cannot touch them, & that they haue made a league with death, ſo that although al the earth were afflicted, yet they themſelues ſhould ſcape. Wee ſee that men are blinded after that faſhion vnder pretence that all thinges ſhall fal out as they woulde wiſhe. Now therefore let vs learne that all of vs as well ſmall as great, haue neede to bee ſubdued by Gods hand, yea and to be ſo ſubdued, as that wee may bee brought in maner to nothing. For vntill God haue brought vs to that point, wee will neuer ceaſe to put out our hornes at him like ſnayles. Albeit that we be nothing, yet wil we pretend ſome ſigne of pride. Seeing it is ſo, our Lorde muſt be faine to trample vs ſo vnder his feete, as wee may not be able to indure any more. Furthermore wee ſee how pride is a diſeaſe ſo rooted in men, that the remedying thereof muſt needes bee violent. Nay, which more is, God muſt bee fayne to vſe as it were a poyſon to cure that diſeaſe withall. Wee ſee what befell to Saint Paul. To the ende (ſaith he) that I ſhould not boaſt of my ſelfe, God buffeted mee. As howe? After what manner? Hee 1.Cor.12.7. ſaith that hee ſent him a meſſenger of Satan. See heere howe the diuell is become a Phyſition. And howe is that? Wee knowe that he bringeth nothing with him but deadly poyſon. That is true. But yet God ſerueth his owne turne by this poyſon as by a medicine. And if Saint Paul were fayne to haue this doone vnto him, what haue wee neede of in compariſon of him? So then, let vs not thinke it ſtraunge, ſeeing we bee ſo vnrulie and ſo vnweeldie, that when we haue once done amiſſe, a man cannot tel at what end to beginne to reclayme vs. For aſmuch then as we be ſo harde to bee tamed, we muſt not thinke it ſtraunge that our Lorde ſhoulde beate vppon vs with mayne ſtrokes, & continue ſtill in chaſtiſing of vs, vntill wee be vtterly diſmayed, and aſhamed of our ſelues, yea and be brought as it were to nothing in ourſelues. And nowe Moſes declareth, whereat God amed in all his ſcourginges of his people, to wit, to make them able to abide the hearing of the reproch that was to bee doone vnto them, and to touch them to the quicke, that they might accuſe and condemne themſelues, and make no mo replies and vaine excuſes, nor be any more poſſeſſed of their own fonde fancies, ſo as they coulde not feele their owne harme and offence.

For this cauſe hee addeth, that it ſhoulde be ſaide vnto them, Where are your gods? Or where is the mightie one in whome you truſted? Yee haue eaten the bloude of the ſacrifices, you haue drunke the wine of their drinkofferinges: nowe therefore let them ſteppe vp to helpe you and to ſuccour you, and let them be your refuge. Ye ſee ye haue beene deceiued by your fooliſh imaginations. Know ye now therfore that I am the Lord, I am hee, euen I am hee without any other. By theſe words which I haue declared, Moſes doeth vs to vnderſtande, firſt that God reſpecteth nothing elſe but the winning of vs to himſelfe, to the end wee ſhoulde be meeke, and of a mielde diſpoſition to receiue correction. That is the thing wherewith he is contented: inſomuch that if we returne to him by repentance, it is enough. Thē let vs conclude, that when he ſheweth himſelfe rough and ſharpe towardes vs, it is altogether for our welfare, and that although he put vs in feare by pretending the countenance of a iudge, yet he ceaſeth not to be a father and a Phyſition vnto vs. True it is that all men cannot taſte of this. For we may ſee a great ſort of theſe braue laddes of the worlde, which will needes abide in their wilfulneſſe, whatſoeuer come thereof. As for ſuch, all Gods chaſtiſementes muſt ſerue for ſummoninges, to warne them of their finall condemnation, howe it is as an entering into hell for them. But if wee bee not vtterly vnreformable, let vs marke as I haue ſaide alreadie, that Gods intent is not to ſink vs, when he ſeemeth to thunder againſt vs: but to put vs in feare ẏ we may bee led to repentance & become plyable, to ſuffer him to gouerne vs, that hauing acknowledged our ſinnes, wee may come to him with true humilitie, crauing pardon at his hand, that by that meane wee may be reconciled vnto him. That is a verie needeful thing for vs.

Nowe by the way wee ſee the fruite which the afflictions ſent of God doe yeelde vs. Not that they bee profitable to all men, as I ſhall ſhewe hereafter: but vnto the faithfull, whom God maketh his corrections to ſerue. For by thē he holdeth vs in awe, to the end we may not be moued with impatiencie when we happen to be chaſtiſed by his hande. For naturally wee bee inclined to impatiencie: inſomuch that if wee feele anie ſmarte, by and by wee leape out of our boundes. And we heare what complaintes and grudginges are made continually in the worlde: when men ſee warres, when folke are pinched with famine, or when they bee ſtricken with plagues: what a number of blaſphemies doe they ſpewe out againſt God? And although men dare not bee ſo bolde as to defie GOD in wordes: yet doe they gnaſhe their teeth at him, ſhewing thereby that they be no whyt mooued to receiue his chaſtiſements with ſuch mieldnes & meekenes as they ought to do. And whereof proceedeth that? Euen of that we taſt not the thing which Moſes telleth vs here, namely, that by Gods ouermaſtring of vs wee beginne to bee quiet towardes him, and to become teachable, and to receiue the warninges contayned in his worde, ſo as they profite vs to our ſaluation. Vntill GOD haue tamed vs, wee bee both deafe and blinde, yea and in a manner Lunatike. If a wretched man that is in a burning ague, haue anie ſtrength in him, hee will caſte him ſelfe into the fire or into the water: and if hee bee letted of his purpoſe, hee will fling himſelfe downe headlong to breake his necke. Nowe if the Phyſicion do hold him downe in his bed, & ſeeme to deale violently with him:it is meete he ſhould doe ſo, and hee doth no more than neede conſtreyneth him vnto. Let vs vnderſtande then, that wee be like Lunatike folke, and that there is neither wit nor reaſon in vs as long as God ſpareth vs. By reaſon whereof hee is forced to tame vs euen to ẏ vttermoſt til we can no more. For when wee be come to the poynt that there is ſcarce any more breath in vs, and that wee can ſcarce fetch our winde: then beginne wee to fall to the mieldeneſſe whereof Moſes ſpeaketh here, which is, that if a man vpbrayde vs with our offences and blame vs for them, wee keepe ſilence and holde our peace, and are not ſo haſtie as to ſay by and by: It is not ſo, ye doe mee wrong, as wee ſee a number doe, who as ſoone as a man openeth his mouth to tell them of their faultes, they fome out their furiouſnes, and cannot be reclaymed vntill God haue ouermaiſtred them. Therefore let vs conſider the fruit that commeth of Gods corrections: namely that where as earſt we did nothing but ſooth our ſelues in our ſinnes and vncleanneſſe, and weltred in them, and coulde not abide to bee drawen from them: then wee haue our eares opened to receiue good inſtruction, and we acknowledge our ſelues to haue done amiſſe. That is the thing whereunto the words of Moſes tend when hee ſaith, Where are your gods?

For the ſame cauſe alſo doeth our Lorde by his prophete Oſee liken Idolaters to Harlots. As long as a Harlot or Courtiſan hath great reſort vnto her, and hath great giftes, gaynes, and rewardes, and is coſtlie apparelled, and mayntayned in her delightes and pleaſures: ſhe maketh more account of herſelfe (notwithſtanding her leawdneſſe) than all the honeſt women of the worlde: and euen ſo is it with Idolaters. As long as they proſper in the worlde, they beare themſelues in hande that their Idolatrie is the cauſe thereof, and thereupon they growe hardhearted. Nowe if our Lorde let them alone in that plight, they ſettle themſelues continuallie more and more in their filthineſſe: and therefore hee muſt bee fayne to vſe violent remedies. In reſpect hereof hee ſaith that he will ſtrippe Hoſe.2.7.8.9. them out of their clothes, yea and diſcouer their ſhamefull partes, ſo as they ſhall become like a Harlot that is ſmitten with fiſtulaes, Pockes, and ſuch other filthie diſeaſes, and in ſteede of her former brauerie, is lothed and ſhunned of all men, that whereas ſhe went ruffling in her agglets before, nowe ſhee findeth not a man that will giue her a bit of breade, but is ſhaken off and ſcorned at al handes: whereby ſhe perceiueth her miſerie, and ſaith, Alas, I ſhoulde haue kept mee to mine owne husband, and [becauſe I did not,] now I haue the reward which I haue deſerued. Nowe then a leawd woman that is giuen to ſuch naughtineſſe, will neuer bee reclaymed but by ſuch neceſſitie. And euen ſo is it with Idolaters. That is the cauſe why Moſes ſaith nowe, that when God hath ſo diſcouraged his people, that both great and ſmall ſhall bee as it were vaniſhed away: then it ſhall bee ſaide vnto them, Where bee your gods? Goe make your mone to your Idols, goe call vppon them as yee were woont to doe. And ſo let vs conſider Gods goodneſſe in that hee hath reclaimed vs from the Idolatrie wherein we were, and that with more gentleneſſe than is ſpoken of here euen by his reaching of his hande vnto vs to drawe vs to him. And if hee vſe nowe and then ſome ſharpe chaſtiſementes, let vs aſſure our ſelues hee doeth it not without cauſe, but for that he knoweth our diſeaſes to be ſo deepe rooted, that wee haue neede to bee ſo purged and cured.

Nowe it followeth, Let them ſteppe vp to ſuccour you, and let them reſkewe you. Hereby Moſes meaneth, that when Idolaters are bereft of al worldlie thinges, and finde themſelues diſappointed of their vaine imaginations which they had conceiued afore: then they fall to recouer their ſight and their hearing. And in verie deed there is no acceſſe to Gods trueth, for thoſe that are wilfull, vntill they ſee themſelues at ſuch an afterdeele, that for all the ſhiftes and windlaſſes which they can make, they perceiue there was nothing but deceite in all their deuices. As for example in theſe dayes, ſo long as the Papiſtes thinke they can preuaile by the diueliſhe deuices of their Maſſes, Pilgrimages, and the reſt of Satans illuſions wherein they be plunged; who can perſwade them to giue ouer any of all thoſe thinges? What ſay they? Is it not good for a mā to ſerue ſuch a Saint, to call vppon ſuch a patron or aduocate, to builde a Chappel, to cauſe a maſſe to bee ſaid, or to mumble before ſuch an altar? To bee ſhorte, as long as the Papiſtes thinke they may preuaile by their ſuperſtitions, they be ſo wilful that it is vnpoſſible to haue any enterance vnto them, except our Lorde ſet to his hande, as hee hath doone towardes vs, and touch them with his holy ſpirite. But I ſpeake of the ordinarie meane, and I ſay that men are ſo forepoſſeſſed, that they ſhut the doore againſt God, and againſt all inſtruction, and againſt all warninges that can bee giuen. And therefore our Lorde had neede to ſmite vppon them with mayne blowes, yea and to bring them to ſuch extremitie, as they may knowe that they doe but miſſpend their time to no purpoſe, in gadding after their Idols, and ſo fall to miſliking of their offerings and other ſuperſtitions whereunto they were giuen afore.

But yet the knowing hereof is not all that is to be doone: the cheefe point is that which Moſes addeth here, namely to returne vnto God, and to acknowledge that it is hee onely on whome we ought to reſt. For euen the Idolaters themſelues wil oftentimes through deſperation defie their owne Idols. Wee ſee that when the Saint George of the Papiſtes or ſome other of their Idols haue beguiled them, ſo as there commeth ſome great froſt, they fall to dragging of him about in a Corde, like a galloweclapper, whom they had worſhipped a little afore. Wee ſhall ſee ſome, yea euen men of honour, which to ſpite their idols, doe breake downe their puppets, yea euen their bleſſed Ladie and all. And howe ſo? They play the madde bedlems, not onelie againſt their owne Idols, but alſo againſt whatſoeuer elſe they imagine to bee as a God. And the heathen haue ſhewed ful well, that their worſhipping of their Idols was not for anie reuerence that they bore vnto them, but for that it ſeemed to yeelde ſome benefite vnto thẽm: inſomuch that when they were once touched to the quicke, then they vttered their poiſon to aboliſh the name and maieſtie of God, ouerreaching themſelues ſo far, as to ſay that there is no God at all. After that manner doe all Idolaters and all vnbeleeuers deale, vnleſſe our Lorde take vppon him to worke and reſtraine them by his holy ſpirite. And that is the knowledge which Moſes ſpeakes of. Let vs marke wel therefore howe it is not ſaide here barely, that God would vpbraide the Iewes with their yeelding of themſelues to their Idols in vaine, and that their Gods in whom they truſted, had ſtood them in no ſteede: but that hee addeth, Beholde howe it is I my ſelfe, and there is no other God with mee. To bee ſhorte, it booteth vs not to knowe all the abuſes and fooliſhe fancies wherewith men beguile themſelues; but wee muſt alſo returne vnto God. And indeede what a ſorte of ſkoffers are there noweadaies in the worlde, which make a ſkorning of all the dotages of the Papiſtes, and yet in the meane while are worſe themſelues than dogges, ſo as it were much better for them that they were Papiſtes. A man ſhall ſee (I ſay) the deſpiſers of all Religion, which will ſay according as they thinke, that all the Religion which is in the Popedome, is flat mockerie, and a verie childiſhe toye. But what? They haue no feare of God, nor reuerence of his worde; it beareth no ſway at all with them. Nowe (as I haue ſaide afore) it were much better for ſuch that they were Papiſtes. And ſo let vs marke well howe it is to no purpoſe to knowe Idolatrie, and to perceiue and beleeue that all that euer is doone without the warrant of Gods worde or contriued by man is but abuſe, filth, and corruption: vnleſſe (which is the principall poynt) wee returne vnto God to doe homage to his maieſtie, and come aſhamed before him, acknowledging our faultes & crauing pardon at his hande, ſo as euerie of vs accuſe himſelfe and humble himſelfe in ſuch ſorte as there bee no more replying in vs, but that wee yeelde ourſelues to him with true repentance. That is the cauſe thẽ why Moſes hauing ſpoken of ſacrifycing to Idols, and vpbraded the Iewes with their defiling of themſelues with their abhominations, in eating the bloude and drinking the wine of their offeringes, and in intermedling themſelues with the filthineſſe of the heathen: after hee hath ſaid all theſe things and ſhewed that in all thoſe things there is nothing but illuſion and deceitefulneſſe: he addeth, Beholde, I am hee. Nowe God preſuppoſeth that they which are ſo ſubdued with maine blowes, haue their eyes well opened. Hee had caſt them in the teeth afore, that they were vtter blindfoolded as it had beene with a towell: Deut.29.4. but nowe that they ſhall ſee themſelues ſtarke naked, now they ſhall ſee themſelues vnarmed, their eyes ſhall be opened, there will be nothing to hinder their knowledge any more. What is to bee doone then? They muſt conſider that there is but one onely God, and that it is he to whom we muſt turne againe, euen to craue forgiuenes of our ſinnes at his hande, and conſequently to put our whole truſt in him, contenting ourſelues with his protection, without troubling of ourſelues to trot vp and downe as the wretched vnbeleeuers doe, who neuer haue any reſt but are toſſed and turmoyled with continuall vexations. Therefore let not vs bee caried away with ſuch vnquietneſſe, but let vs conceiue a right aſſurance, ſo as wee may reſt all wholie vpon our God. The reſt that followeth cannot be diſpatched as now, and therefore it ſhall bee reſerued til to morow.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to make vs ſo to feele them, as hauing perceiued howe farre we haue ouerſhot ourſelues, wee may ſeeke earneſtly to be reformed by his hand, and that if it pleaſe him to chaſtice vs, wee may patiently abide all the corrections which hee ſhall ſend vs: or rather it may pleaſe him to make his worde to profite ſo much in vs, as wee may not tarrie till hee lift vp his hande to puniſh vs, but receiue the warninges that are giuen vs in his name, to reclayme vs wholy to his will, and that in the meane while he beare with vs in our infirmities, till hee haue rid vs quite and cleane of them, and in ſuch wiſe reformed vs to the obedience of his righteouſnes, as our whole ſeeking may bee to glorifie his name, euen till wee come to the immortal glorie which is prepared for vs in heauen & was purchaſed for vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xvij. of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXVIII. Sermon, which is the eleuenth vpon the two and thirtith Chapter.

39 See nowe howe it is I, euen I that am God, and there is no God with mee. It is I that kill and make aliue againe, I wounde and heale, and there is none that can deliuer out of my hand.

40 For I lift vp my hande to heauen: and as for mee, I liue for euer.

41 If I whet the edge of my ſworde, and my hande lay holde of Iudgement: I will execute vengeaunce vpon mine aduerſaries, and pay them their hyre which hate mee.

42 I will make mine arrowes drunken with bloude, and my ſworde ſhall deuoure the bloudie fleſh of the ſlaine, and of the priſoners at the beginning of the vengeance of the enemies.

43 Yee nations prayſe you his people: for hee will auenge the bloude of his ſeruauntes, and yeeld vengeance to his aduerſaries: but he will be fauorable to his owne lande, and to his owne people.

WE ſawe yeſterday howe it is not enough to knowe, that there is nothing but vanitie and leaſing in Idols, and in al yͤ ſuperſtitions ẏ men haue deuiſed of their owne heades: but that the cheefe point is to knowe God to do him homage, to walke in his feare, and to conſider howe dreadfull his maieſtie is. Nowe heerewithall wee muſt marke alſo, that when we once knowe God to be too great a Lorde to bee dalied withall, if he chaſtice vs for offending him, we muſt taſte of his mercie to returne freely vnto him, beeing throughlie perſwaded and reſolued, that wee ſhall finde mercie at his hande, though wee be vnworthie of it. And that is the cauſe why he ſaith, That it is hee which killeth and quickeneth, and that it is hee that woundeth and healeth againe. Nowe wee haue alwayes theſe two thinges to marke: The one is that wee ſhall bee helde in awe by conſidering (as I ſaide afore) howe dreadfull Gods maieſtie is, according to the Apoſtles treating thereof in the fore alleadged tenth chapter to the Hebrewes. That is the thing which maketh vs to liue in awe. For we be not ſo bolde to offende God, neither take wee ſuch libertie as they doe which fling out at all aduenture: but yet, when wee haue done amiſſe and God warneth vs of our faults, then haue we neede to reſort to his infinite goodneſſe, and to aſſure ourſelues that howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, we ſhall obtayne pardon of our offences. Truely theſe two thinges, namely, That God killeth and quickeneth againe; and that hee maketh a wounde and afterwarde healeth againe: ſeeme at the firſt bluſh to bee contraries: For God ſeemeth not to play the Phyſicion towardes vs when wee bee as it were deade and layde in our graues. Neither ſeemeth this to bee agreeable to his nature: to put vs to death, and to afflict vs: but (as I ſaide afore) hee muſt be faine to doe both the one and the other: and wee on our ſide alſo muſt bee faine to feele it. For as long as men take leaue to doe euill, it is meete that God ſhoulde hold them in awe, and ſhewe them that hee is their Iudge. And on the other ſide that wretched ſinners ſhould humble themſelues, and with griefe of minde turne againe vnto him to obteyne forgiueneſſe at his hande; and then will he bee forwarde and readie to forget all their offences, and ſhewe them nothing but all maner of gentlenes & friendſhip. To be ſhort the two thinges which Moſes noteth here, are to be conſidered well: namely that God vſeth rigor towards ſuch as take too much libertie to do euil, and alſo that his goodnes is ready to vtter it ſelfe towardes thoſe which returne to him with repentaunce. And ſo ye ſee howe we haue to marke alſo howe good and pitifull God is: and againe on the contrarie part, wee haue to conſider his rigour and ſeueritie. To be ſhort, as oft as wee be prouoked to euill, and the wicked luſtes of our fleſh do tickle vs and intice vs to ſin; let Gods iudgement come before our eyes, that we may be mooued with feare, and thereby bee reſtrayned from the euill whereunto we bee tempted. On the other ſide, when we fall through infirmitie, let vs not be afraide to turne againe to our God, neither let vs thinke that hee hath quite caſt vs off. Although his hande be ſore vppon vs, and he ſmite vs as though he meant to vſe wrath and vengeance againſt vs: yet let that not make vs to ſhrinke from him, but rather let vs vnderſtande, ẏ as he hath made the wound, ſo he is at hand to heale it, ſo we ſeeke the remedy. Now the mean howe to ſeeke it, hath beene declared heretofore. And ſo ye ſee after what maner we ought to put this leſſon in vre, where Moſes ſaith that god hauing put to death, doth make aliue again. And herewithall let vs alſo beare in minde, that God playeth not with men as the heathen haue imagined, as who would ſay he toſſed and turned them like a bal: but yͤ reaſon is manifeſt why God doth firſt kill and lay in graue, before he reſtore to life againe: namelie becauſe we cannot find in our harts to ſubmit our ſelues willingly vnto him vntil he haue ſubdued vs by force: Nay the feruent heate of our boyling luſtes doth ſo carie vs away, and we be ſo blinded with them, that wee cannot conceiue howe terrible Gods iuſtice is, vntil he haue made vs to feele it by experience. Therfore it is needful for vs ẏ our Lord ſhold put vs as it were to death, to yͤ intẽt to make vs to taſt yͤ life which he giueth to thoſe yͤ return vnto him.

Hebr.10.31

And for the ſame cauſe he addeth, That no mã can deliuer out of his hand. For we know how men doe alwaies beare themſelues in hand: that they ſhall ſcape Gods hande: inſomuch that hee beginneth no ſooner to ſtrike them, but by and by they ſeeke ſtartingholes, and they will needes haue ſome pretie ſhift or other, and thereupon they fal aſleepe, and ẏ is a kinde of contempt to God ward. To the end then that wee may goe directlie vnto him, whether wee haue offended him, or whether we haue beene tempted to euil: we muſt alwayes vnderſtande that there is no deliueraunce, there is no ſhift but we muſt make our accout to him, vntill he of his owne infinite goodneſſe haue receiued vs, and bee come to attonement with vs. The thing therefore that will perſwade vs to come vnto God, is that we be fully determined and ſetled in our ſelues, that we ſhall gayne nothing by our running to and fro and by our ſeeking heere and there for ſtartingholes, but that all is meere deceyte to beguile our ſelues withall. When we once knowe this well: then ſhall wee bee prouoked to ſubmit our ſelues to God. Alſo it will hold vs in awe of him, and make vs to ſeeke forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes at his hand, when wee haue ſo giuen ouer ourſelues to him.

Againe we ought to wey well the wordes of Moſes, It is I (ſayth he) it is I my ſelfe that am the euerlaſting, and there is not any other God. For hereby wee ſee howe harde it is to holde men to the knowledge of the true God, becauſe they be euer ſwaruing aſide to their owne fooliſhe imaginations. For wee be naturally inclined to the forging of Idols, and to corrupt our ſelues with ſuperſtitions, ſo as faſhood doth alwayes beare ſway in vs rather than trueth. A man woulde woonder how ſo many errours ſhould be in the worlde. But let him conſider what a workehouſe our owne brayne is, and what thinges it forgeth and yeeldeth foorth; and ſurelie hee ſhall finde that we neuer ceaſe forging of lies and deceites to corrupt ourſelues withall, and to turne vs away from Gods pure trueth. And ſo, becauſe men are ſo wholy bent, yea and giuen ouer to leaſinges: therefore doeth God confirme this matter the more by ſaying, It is I, and there is not anie other: It is hee on whome wee muſt wholie reſt. Nowe ſeeing it is ſo, it behoooueth all of vs to knowe that euerie of vs had neede to holde himſelfe as it were by force in the pure ſingleneſſe of Gods worde, or elſe wee ſhall bee ouercome by Satans illuſions, and he will haue caried vs away here and there out of hande. And by the way, if wee ſee the worlde intangled in neuer ſo manie diſorders, and all men poſſeſſed with falſe and wicked opinions: let vs not be too much troubled at ſuch a ſtumblingblocke. For why? Wee ſee there is nothing harder than to holde men in the pure knowledge of God.

Nowe hee addeth conſequentlie, Surelie I will lift vp my hande to heauen and ſay, I am the liuing; and that I hauing ſharpened the edge of my ſworde, & hauing taken Iuſtice in my hande, will execute ſuch vengeaunce that bloude ſhall run downe in ſtreames euerie where, ſo as all mine enemies ſhall be made to come to their aunſwere, and I will ſpare nothing from one ſide to an other. Now here God confirmeth yet better that which hee had declared heretofore, and he confirmeth it with an othe: For this ſpeech, to lift vp the hand to heauen is as much to ſay, as to Sweare; not that God can lift vp his hande after the manner of men: for beſides that hee hath no hande, there is nothing higher than his maieſtie: but it is a figure taken of the cuſtome among men, and wee knowe it is verie common in the holie ſcripture. Becauſe we comprehende not God as he is in deede, but finde him to be a thing farre paſſing our reach: therefore is hee fayne to applie himſelf to our rudeneſſe. Euen ſo in this texte he ſaith that he will lift vp his hande, that is to ſay that hee will ſweare. Now, there is no need, that God ſhoulde ſweare: For the cauſe why we haue othes among vs, is our owne naughtines. There is ſo much craft and ſuttletie among men as is pitifull to beholde. They bee fleeting, they bee full of lightnes and vnconſtancie, and it is harde to bring them to vpright dealing. In theſe reſpectes, and for that wee be ſo giuen to deceitfulnes, othes are faine to bee miniſtred to vs: But Gods ſwearing is for our infirmities ſake. And truely wee bee greatly to blame in this behalfe, in that we compell God to ſweare. For nothing is more peculiar to him than trueth, and if hee had not that, hee were not God. Seeing then, that hee is the infallible trueth it ſelfe, if when hee hath once ſpoken, wee ſtand doubting ſtill, and examine whether it bee ſo or no: can there bee a more horrible blaſphemie, than to call Gods trueth in queſtion after that faſhion? Is it not all one as if wee woulde bereaue him of his verie beeing? And yet for all that, wee ſee howe men ſtande as in a mammering when God ſpeaketh to them. For if hee threaten vs, wee make no account of it: If we were throughlie perſwaded that all that euer proceedeth out Gods mouth is of ſuch certaintie as there ought to bee no replying againſt it, truely wee woulde tremble and quake out of hande for feare, as ſoone as hee threateneth vs: but wee know how hardhearted wee be in that behalfe. On the other ſide, if our Lorde promiſe to bee mercifull to vs when wee haue done amiſſe, and intreate vs as his children, and call vs to the hope of euerlaſting ſaluation: wee bee ſo tangled in this worlde, that euerie thing of nothing holdes vs backe and we deſpiſe the ineſtimable benefites which God offereth vs. Wee ſee then that men do not the honour to God to count him faithful. For then woulde they holde themſelues wholie to his worde, they woulde bee touched to the quicke, yea they woulde quake at his threates, and they woulde ſet all their ioy and delight in his promiſes. That is the cauſe why G O D warranteth, and confirmeth his worde with an othe. Nowe in this caſe (as I ſaide afore) wee our ſelues are much too blame; ſeeing that God is faine to yeelde to ſuch condition as to abace himſelfe as though hee were a mortall creature, to the entent hee may winne vs, and that wee may no more wander away, but bee fully perſwaded in our ſelues that this ſpeaking to vs is in good earneſt. Seeing then that our Lorde is faine to frame himſelfe vnto vs after that faſhion, thereby wee ſee our owne malice and frowardneſſe: and yet doth God beare with vs in ỹ caſe. But when he ſweareth, it is as much as if we ſawe heauen and earth ſhaken, nature changed, the Sunne darkened, and all the ſtarres bereft of their light. And therefore if wee bee not touched with ỹ othes which God maketh after ỹ maner: it is certaine ỹ the diuel hath as it were bewitched vs, and that wee bee become ſtarke blockes, or rather that wee be horrible and vglie monſters. Therefore let vs benefite ourſelues by the othes which wee reade in the holy ſcripture. And when God ſweareth that he will bee auenged at his enemies; let it abaſhe vs, as though we ſawe his vengeance and wrath take effect out of hande, and as though we ſawe him readie and in a forwardnes to execute the thing which hee hath vttered with his mouth. And when he ſweareth that hee will be friendly to vs and take vs for his children, confirming with an othe the heauenlie heritage which hee hath promiſed vs: ought not the doing of thoſe things to aſſure vs to withſtande all temptations? Although Satan and the fleſh tempt vs to diſtruſt, yet notwithſtanding let vs ſet this for a ſhielde againſt them, and ſay, No, ſeeing that God hath ſworne, ſhall we doe him ſuch wrong and diſhonour, as to cal the truth of his word in queſtion? Let that bee far from vs. That is the thing which wee haue to note in this text where God ſaith that he will lift vp his hande to heauen and ſay, I liue.

And he ſweareth by himſelfe, accordingly as the Apoſtle toucheth it in the ſixt to yͤ Hebrewes. Hebr. 6.13. When we ſweare, we call God to witnes as our Iudge if we lie. But it is not ſo with God; he cannot finde a greater than himſelfe to ſweare by. He ſaith therefore, I am aliue, as if he ſhould ſay, Nay, whoſoeuer he be that holdeth not himſelfe to the ſentence which I doe nowe pronounce, he derogateth my glorie as much as if he meant to aboliſh me quite and cleane, and to declare that I am no more God. But if I be God, it muſt needs be perceiued in the execution of the thinges which I doe nowe ſpeake. I am contented that men ſhall henceforth take mee but for an idol or a deade thing, if they finde not my ſayinges true in deede. When God ſpeakes after that faſhion, ought it not to make the haire to ſtande vp vppon our heades, if wee eſteeme not his worde to be verie certaine? Yes, And ſo we ſee my former ſaying yet better confirmed, namelie that it is not for vs to replie any more when God hath once ſpoken, but wee muſt take the matter to bee out of all crie, as though wee ſawe the thing alreadie done before our eyes. But let vs ſee nowe whereat God amed: for it is certaine that hee ſweareth not but for our welfare. It is not for his owne ſake, hee taketh neither good nor harme by it, but hee hath regarde of vs. And in token thereof hee ſaith, That hee will whet the edge of his ſworde, that it ſhall bee as a flaming ſworde, and that hee will take Iudgement in his hand, that is to ſay, that he will hold his aſſiſes to ſhewe himſelfe to bee the Iudge of the worlde, and that as then all his enemies muſt bee confounded, and all aduerſaries bee brought to nought. And whereas God ſpeaketh here of the edge of the ſworde, we muſt not imagine that hee vſeth any material ſword, for that cannot agree to him: but wee knowe hee hath all ſortes of puniſhmentes to chaſtice men withall as ſeemeth good to himſelfe. For in verie deede, all the ſwordes in the world do ſerue to execute Gods ordinaunce. When warre is to bee had, well may princes aſſemble great armies: but it is God that muſt beare the ſtroke. Then if there be fiftie thouſand men in armes on the one ſide, and forty thouſand on the other: wee muſt not thinke that God is that whyle aſleepe in heauen: for all they are of his waging. And although the two armies bee ſet one againſt an other: yet ſhall not one ſtroke be ſtricken but by the diſpoſition of Gods hand. The like is to bee ſayde of peſtilences, famines, & ſuch other like thinges. To be ſhort, all the ſcourges of this worlde are Gods ſwordes. And in that reſpect is it ſaide that God will ſharpen the edge of his ſworde, that is to ſay, hee will execute the chaſtiſementes which hee hath in his hande. But if hee winke at things for a time and liſt to vſe patience: hee ſeemeth to haue no regarde of the faultes that are committed here belowe. Yet doeth it not followe that all thoſe things are not inregiſtred before him; neither is it to bee ſaide that hee hath forgotten his charge, or that his power is idle: for hee hath all kindes of puniſhmentes, which he can well ſhewe foorth whenſoeuer it ſhall bee expedient to execute vengeaunce. And ſo yee ſee after what manner God is ſayde to drawe his ſworde.

Nowe the applying of this doctrine will giue vs yet a more eaſie vnderſtanding thereof. Let vs conſider to what ende it is ſaide: namely becauſe it ſeemeth to vs, that when God puniſheth not the wicked out of hande, hee letteth thinges goe at all aduenture, and that is yͤ thing which troubleth vs ſore. When we be wrongfully afflicted on the behalfe of men, and wee ſee the Church of God to ſuffer manie ſlaunders and moleſtations: what ſay wee? Whereon doeth God thinke nowe? Hath hee not pitie vpon his children? Wee bee tormented with extremitie, and yet hee maketh as though hee ſawe it not. Shall the crueltie of men haue ſuch ſcope for euer? Shoulde hee giue heade to the wicked after ſuch ſort that wee ſhoulde alwayes bee made a pray to them? Such complaintes do men make, when God doeth not out of hande puniſh the outrages that are doone to his ſeruauntes. And therefore it is ſaide, That hee will ſharpen his ſworde, and take Iudgement in his hande, as though that to holde vs in patience, he ſhould ſay, My friendes, trouble not your ſelues, let not your luſtes be ouer haſtie and inordinate. For I doe not this as vnmindfull of you. Although I ſuffer the wicked to doe manie thinges outragiouſly: it is not for that I haue no regarde of you, or for that I watch not for the welfare of my Church, or for that I pitie not thoſe which ſuffer aduerſitie, and are ſo moleſted: but becauſe I haue my conuenient times, which I diſpoſe at my pleaſure; and therefore tarie you my leaſure. For the wicked ſhall bee vtterlie amaſed at the whetting of my ſworde to make warre againſt them. Be not afraide: for although yee ſee it not at the firſt day; yet will I not faile to ſhewe my ſelfe your protector and the defendour of your life. Nowe then wee ſee in effect, that all this is applyed to our infirmitie, euen therafter as we be toſſed with temptations: ſo that when it ſeemeth to vs that God thinketh not any more vppon vs, but that hee hath turned his back and is aſleepe in heauen: we ſhould notwithſtanding that all this fall out, take it, as though hee had ſayd: Ceaſe not you to be patient and quiet, yea, hold your ſelues ſtil til I draw my ſworde, for I will ſurely doe it.

And for the ſame cauſe he addeth, that he wil take iudgement in his hand. Wee knowe that Gods maieſtie and his iuſtice are thinges vnſeparable. Sith it is ſo, let vs hardily conclude that hee is the Iudge of the world, yea & although the ſame bee hidden from vs, ſo as wee perceiue not any ſigne or lykelyhoode thereof, yet let vs not forbeare to ſay continually, What? Is it poſſible for God to renounce himſelfe, who is vnchangeable? Then muſt wee take him for our Iudge, aſſuring our ſelues that although hee hide himſelfe away, yet notwithſtanding hee will ſhewe that hee ſawe all, that all thinges lay open before him, and that he neuer chaunged his mind. Thus yee ſee howe wee ought to practiſe this leſſon, yea euen at ſuch time as our Lorde ſuffereth vs to bee as it were trodden vnder foote by the wicked, and all the whole Church is cruelly dealt with, and all thinges are out of order here beneath. For euē then we muſt not ceaſe to hope & to put ourſelues into ẏ protection of our God, becauſe he hath ſworne, and not only affirmed but alſo ratified with a ſolemne othe, that he will do iuſtice vpon his enemies, and that the execution thereof ſhal be ſo terrible, as ẏ there ſhalbe an vtter diſcomfiture of them, and all ſhall bee filled with bloud. And it is not to bee doubted but that in this place Moſes meant to confirme the faithfull ſtill in the hope which they ought to haue of Gods goodnes, although they ſeeme to bee as it were ſunken. And hee proceedeth in the matter which he had dealt with before: which is, that in the end God will bethinke him of his ſeruauntes. Howbeit that hee beginne at this poynt, namely that while the wicked doe make great cheere, and liue in pleaſure, & make their triumphes: God dooth ſay that hee will iudge his people, and that thoſe which are his children and houſhold ſeruantes, muſt be faine to indure hardnes, becauſe hee reformeth them when they haue done amiſſe. Nowe it would ſeeme that their ſtate is much woorſe than the ſtate of ſuch as are vtter ſtraungers to God and haue no acquaintance with him. And therefore dooth Moſes adde, No, in the ende God will mitigate his rigour towards you, and therefore let it not greeue you to ſee the worldliges ſpared, or to ſee them weltering in their pleaſures, as though all things were lawfull which they liſted. If your God afflict you in the meane ſeaſon, let it not ſeeme ſtraunge vnto you. For hee muſt needes haue a ſpeciall care of his owne children & chaſtice them ſeing he hath adopted thē. And as for your enemies, aſſure your ſelues that their turne will come about: and thereof your GOD aſſureth you here, in that hee dooth not ſimply affirme it, but alſo ſweare it. Therefore you may truſt vnto it. So then euen in the middeſt of our afflictions, let vs bee vpheld with this leſſon. For it will bee a good ſtud for vs to leane vnto, when wee make it auaileable as it deſerueth, and as God himſelfe intendeth it. Now wee ſee the ſtate of the faithfull to be too too miſerable both generally and particularly: for many of them indure ſuch miſeries and reproches in this world, that to all ſeeming they bee vtter caſtawayes, and that God diſdayneth them no leſſe than the world deſpiſeth them. Behold they which walk purely & ſimply before God, which loue righteouſneſſe and vpright dealing, which will neither deceiue nor hurt any man; euen they neuertheleſſe are faine to abide hunger and thirſt, and are greeued with many temptations and troubles, ſo as they wote not which way to turne thē. Now they might bee brought to deſpaire, if God withheld them not, by dooing them to vnderſtand that they haue neede to be chaſticed, and put in minde of their ſinnes. On the other ſide they ſee the wicked and the deſpiſers of God ſporting themſelues in all manner of diſorder, and in the meane while they bee neither chaſticed nor corrected, but ſeeme rather to be exempted and priuiledged from all harme, as it is ſayd in the threeſcore and thirteenth pſalme. Pſal.73.5. Loe here a very ſore temptation. We ſee generally that Gods Church is as a ſheep in the midſt of a great ſorte of Woolues. For the power of our enemies is ſuch, as they might ſwallowe vs vp out of hand, and we ſee there is no meane of reſiſtance in vs, we be all ſcattered abroad. Seeing then that wee ſee ſuch thinges, were it poſſible for vs to holde out one minute of an houre, if wee had not our refuge to this doctrine, that God ſcourgeth his owne, and that he beginneth at them, becauſe he muſt needes haue a care of his owne houſhold? But the wicked ſhall fare neuer the better for his bearing with them as now, neither is it to be ſayd that their ſtate is therefore better than ours. Therefore we muſt tary his leaſure with patience, vntil he take the ſword in hand, and keepe his Aſſiſes. Let vs referre all vnto him, and in the meane whyle keep ſilence, without grudging againſt him. Let not the corrections which wee ſuffer ſet vs in ſuch a chafe as to make vs play the deſperate perſons. Thus ye ſee how profitable this doctrine is to vs, if we can apply it to our inſtruction.

Now it is ſayd conſequently, that God will requite his enemies with the lyke, and pay them their hyre which hate him, hee wil make his arrowes dronke with bloud, and make ſuch a ſlaughter of them that they ſhall all bee diſcomfited. His ſpeaking after that maner is to make his Iuſtice the more terrible to vs, becauſe we be ſlow and dulheadded as I haue ſayd afore, inſomuch that wordes moue vs not a whit. Therefore doth our Lorde ſet downe a vehement kinde of ſpeech here, to the ende to waken vs, and to make vs yeeld due honor to his Iuſtice, and that (as I haue ſayd afore) it might be to vs as though wee ſawe both heauen and earth ſhaken. For after the ſame maner ſpeaketh hee by his Prophet Aggeus; & the Apoſtle ſhewing vs the maieſtie of the Goſpell, alledgeth the ſame text, that as oft as wee Agge.2.7.& Heb.12.26.

heare the voyce thereof ſound, it behoueth vs to call to minde, that God will bee heard and knowen both aboue and beneath. Now it is certaine ÿ the holy Ghoſt would not haue vſed ſuch ſpeach but for our blockiſhnes ſake. Seeing then that our Lord ſetteth downe here ſo many figures and ſo many compariſons, let vs accuſe our ſelues, and conſider that hee doth it for the brutiſhnes of our nature, by reaſon whereof hee is faine to chawe thinges to vs aforehand, to the end we may finde ſome taſt in them and be touched with them. But yet muſt we alwayes haue an eye to the end, and to the intent whereat this doctrine ameth. And our Lord ſayth that it is for the ſlaines ſakes, and for the priſoners ſakes. Whereby he dooth vs to vnderſtand that the vengeance which hee ſpeaketh of is for the welfare of his Church; howbeit not for all that haue borne ÿ name of faithfull, for wee know there are many which make falſe bragges of Gods name, & that is to their double condemnation. We know that the chaffe is mingled with the good corne, and the wicked are intermedled with the godly. But yet they which falſely abuſe Gods name after that faſhion, muſt not looke that their hypocriſie ſhall any whit boote them: nay rather they ſhall pay full deere for it. They then which pretend to bee faithfull and are not, ſhall not be allowed before GOD for euer: but hee will mark them out for falſifyers of his trueth. But our Lorde here comforteth ſuch as are not altogether paſt grace, but which notwithſtanding that they haue offended, doe neuertheleſſe turne againe vnto him, and beeing ſory for their ſinnes doe humble themſelues to him and ſeeke to bee reformed by his hand and by his holy ſpirit. Thoſe therefore which are ſo ouermaſtred, haue neede to be comforted at Gods hand, accordingly alſo as we ſee howe our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſpeaketh to that ſorte of men, Matt.11.28. 29. ſaying; Come vnto me al ye that are wearie and ouerloden, and I will refreſh you, and yee ſhall finde reſt vnto your ſoules. So then, in this text our Lord hath an eye to ſuch as might be drowned in diſpaire, if he ſhould not giue them ſome taſte of his goodneſſe to ſtay them vp withall. And therefore he ſaith that although hee haue ſhewed himſelfe rigorous to his Church for a time: yet notwithſtanding he hath not diſanulled the couenant which hee had made with his ſeruaunt Abraham, but he wil ſhew that the people whom hee had choſen and adopted are his own, and that ſeeing he is their protector, he will Gen.12.3. Exo.23.22. performe this ſaying of his; I will be a friend to thy friendes, and an enemie to thine enemies. That is the thing in effect, which Moſes had reſpect vnto.

Sith it is ſo, let vs learne to arme our ſelues with this leſſon, and whenſoeuer our enemies behaue themſelues lyke wood beaſtes, yea and are as furious as flaming fire: let vs on our ſide vnderſtand that our God hath power enough to maintaine vs, and that if he do it not at the firſt, it is to try our patience, and to make vs to ouercome all temptations. Wherefore let vs learn to proceede on ſtill, yea euen though he ſhoulde leade vs vnto death, aſſuring our ſelues that hee dooth it to giue vs a better lyfe, and therefore let vs alwayes goe on ſtill, whither ſoeuer it ſhal pleaſe him to lead vs. But yet howſoeuer we fare, let vs not beare any ſpite to our aduerſaries. Although as now they execute their rage againſt vs: yet let vs be throughly perſwaded, that in the end they muſt come to account, and that as thē God will ſhewe how deere our welfare was vnto him, & that although he ſeemed to haue forgotten vs and to haue caſt vs quite and cleane vp: yet notwithſtanding hee did ſtill eſteeme vs as his flocke. God then will ſhew that he had vs alwayes in his protection. Therefore let vs in the meane time abide quiet, and let vs not be ſo caſt downe with temptations that wee ſhould be out of hope of our ſaluation, and giue ouer the promiſes thereof that haue bin made vnto vs. Thus doe we now ſee the meaning of Moſes, and alſo in how great ſtead his doctrine may ſtand vs, if we can haue the skill to apply it well to our vſe.

Now it is ſaid for a concluſion, Ye people (or nations) prayſe ye the people of God. Here Moſes directeth his ſpeech to all infidels and heathen folk, to the intent that the exhortatiō which he hath ſet downe heretofore, may haue the more force. Hitherto he had ſpoken to the belieuers, and to ſuch as haue eares to heare God withall, and to ſuch as he calleth to his ſchoole. Howbeit foraſmuch as there is ſo much troubleſomneſſe and ſcrupulouſneſſe in vs as is pitifull to ſee; Moſes meant to giue vs yet one meane more for our better confirmation: in reſpect wherof he ſayth, Conſider my friends & ſee how your God comforteth you in the middeſt of the chaſtiſements which he ſendeth you. Although ye haue offended him, & deſerue to haue extreme rigor vſed towardes you, without any abatement of his corrections: yet notwithſtanding, to ſhewe that hee would not haue you to periſh, nor ÿ you ſhoulde feele him but as a Iudge onely; he ſheweth again that he will haue pitie vpon you, and repent him of his ſmiting of you after that faſhion, and that he will withdrawe his hand. And if you beleeue not this; yet neuertheleſſe, ÿ infidels muſt needs beleeue it. Although they be deſtitute of reaſon, although there be not one ſparke of light in thē, although they be as brutiſh as beaſtes that neuer heard ſpeaking of the liuing God: yet ſhall they perceiue this, and their experience ſhal be ſuch, that they ſhall be driuen to ſay, Bleſſed is Pſal.33.12 the people whoſe father & ſauiour God ſheweth himſelfe to be: Euen they (I ſay) ſhal bleſſe you. Now, when the dumme are able to ſpeake, the blinde to ſee, & the deafe to heare; ſhoulde not they that haue bin inlightned by Gods word, & to whom he hath giuen tongues to magnifie his name; ſhould not they ſee nor perceiue a whit? What excuſe then ſhall there be for them? Now then, wee ſee why Moſes hauing exhorted the faithfull to repentance, & hauing ſhewed them that God will haue pitie & mercie vppon them after he hath corrected them for their faultes & offences: turneth his talke to ſuch as were blind, & had not any knowledge or taſt of the trueth, namely to the heathen, of purpoſe to make vs to perceiue the better, after what ſorte God cauſeth vs to feele his goodnes,euen by experience, ſealing it vp in our harts by his holy ſpirit,which 2.Cor.1.22. is named the earneſt penny and the ſeale of the hope of our ſaluation, & the cauſer of vs to take hold of all the good thinges which we receiue at Gods hand.Now then if we know nothing therof, & that the infidels by beholding Gods wonderfull working after a manner vnaccuſtomed among men, be inforced to ſay, O what a thing is it to be of the number of Gods people? ought not we to haue a more liuely knowledge thereof, & ſuch as may comfort vs in our afflictions,ſo as we may not ceaſe to call vpon our God to hold vs continually vnder his obedience,and to haue alwayes wherwith to aſſwage the bitternes of our ſorrowes? Truely the thing that Moſes rehearſeth here is ſhewed vs in the example of Balaam. For he was a falſe Prophet, hee was an enemie of God, hee was ſuch a one as had his tongue to ſale and his heart vppon his powch, ſeeking to turne the trueth into falſhood,and yet for all this,as though God had held him vppon the rack,he was inforced to vtter this ſpeech; Num.23.10 Let my ſoule dye the death of the righteous. He ſpeaketh there of the people of God, ſaying: Who art thou Iſraell? Who is hee that can doe any thing againſt thee, ſeeing thou ſtandeſt in the fauor of thy God? Was a deceiuer and an vnderling of Satan faine to ſay ſo? Yea verely. For it is Gods will that his will which hee hath witneſſed already to his people by his lawe and by his word,ſhould be knowen,and further confirmed euen by the mouth of his open enemie. Balaam was faine to ſay that the death of the Iewes was more to be deſired,than the life of all other men,becauſe God held them for his people. So then,let vs marke well,that whereas Moſes ſayth, Ye Nations or ye Gentiles prayſe yee the people of God:it is as much to ſay,as declare ye that God hath wrought after ſuch a faſhion, as it is not for men to doubt any more, but that for his adoption ſake, in that he hath voutſafed to chooſe the linage of Abraham, he will haue it knowen that therein he hath layd forth the infinite treaſures of his goodnes.

And forthwith he addeth, that hee will reuenge the bloud of his ſeruauntes, and requite vengeance to his enemies, but bee mercifull to his land, and to his people. Here are three thinges in effect, which I wil touch in few words, and it wil be enough to conclude this ſong withall. The firſt is that God ſayth, He will reuenge the bloud of his ſeruantes. Now vnder this ſaying hee ſheweth vs that wee may well be afflicted for a time,ſo far forth that euen our very bloud ſhall not be ſpared, whether it be that God puniſh vs for the faults which we haue committed againſt him, or that his will be to try our patience. The thing then whereof wee bee warned, is that if God thinke good to haue our bloud ſhed, we muſt not thinke it ſtraunge nor ſhrinke from the promiſes which he hath made vs,in auowing himſelfe to bee our God, and the defender of our lyfe.Neither muſt we think that thoſe promiſes are diſanulled, though our God ſuffer vs to be handled ſo cruelly. But let vs tary the time till he reuenge our bloud: for hee will then ſhewe how deare and precious our lyfe is vnto him.Thus much cōcerning the firſt point.

As touching the ſecond, he ſayth that God will requite his enemies with the lyke, to the ende wee ſhould knowe that all the felicitie of the wicked and of the deſpiſers of God ſhall be accurſed, & Pſal.37.1. therefore that we muſt not repine at them therfore.Now then, if wee ſee Gods enemies to bee rich,to haue their eaſe in this world, and to welter in all pleaſure: let vs let them alone,and not be drawen to ſpite them, or to intermeddle our ſelues with thē.For why?Gods vengeance which is yet vnſeene, muſt come before our eyes, & be conſidered by faith,& we muſt alſo remēber how it is ſaid,Curſed be you ẏ laugh,for ye ſhal weepe. Luke.6.25. Foraſmuch then as the laughter of ẏ deſpiſers of God muſt be turned into mourning, weeping, and gnaſhing of teeth: let vs chooſe to weepe & waile as now,that God may dry vp our teares, & wipe them away when the time ſhall bee come. That is the ſecond point.

The third is, that wee muſt learne and take hart to reſt vpon the promiſe that God will neuer forſake vs howſoeuer the world goe. Inſomuch that although we haue offended God neuer ſo many wayes;yet he will euer be mercifull to vs.And why is that? Becauſe we be his people. The very foundation whereupon we muſt build, is that being adopted of God into the number of his children,according to his purchaſing of vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, into whoſe body hee hath graffed vs, and wee knowe that his pardoning of our ſinnes is for that he hath waſhed and ſkoured vs in the bloud of his onely ſonne: wee alwayes haue recourſe to this promiſe, that our God will be fauorable to vs. True it is that now and then we ſhall be ſo at our wittes end,that we ſhall not knowe what to ſay; but yet muſt wee hope beyond hope, that although God ſhew vs many tokens of his wrath,and we bee aſſaulted on all ſides,ſo as we ſee no way to get out,but we ſeeme rather to be ſhut vp in the very bottom of ẏ dungeons:yet notwithſtāding we haue this ſtay to leane vnto,that God will be fauorable to his people and to his land. And therefore let vs goe on ſtoutely ſtill, vntill God haue ſhewed vs by the deed it ſelfe, the thing that he had promiſed in word, as he declareth it here.

Now let vs caſt our ſelues downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to voutſafe to make vs feele them better,ſo as we may bethink vs of thēm and indeuour to forſake ourſelues, that he may ſo raigne ouer vs,as it may appeare that it is very he which gouerneth vs by his holy ſpirit, and we may ſuffer our ſelues to bee ſo ruled by his hand, as we neuer bee diſquieted and put out of patience for all the afflictions and miſeries of this world,but that we may be more deſirous to yeelde obedience vnto him, than to inioy all the proſperitie,eaſe and pleaſure that the vnbeleeuers can haue,which can ſerue them to no purpoſe but to their endleſſe ouerthrowe and confuſion. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xviii of Iune, 1556.

The CLXXXIX. Sermon which is the twelfth vpon the two & thirtith Chapter.

44 Then went Moſes, and rehearſed all the words of this ſong in the eares of the people, he and Hoſea the ſonne of Nun.

45 And when Moſes had made an end of ſpeaking all theſe wordes:

46 He ſayd vnto them: ſet your mindes vpon all theſe wordes, which I proteſt againſt you this day: commaund you your children to keepe them, and to do all the wordes of this lawe.

47 For it is no vayne worde towards you: but it is your life. And by this word you ſhall prolong your dayes in the land whereinto yee goe ouer Iordan to poſſeſſe it.

I Haue told you heretofore how it was no very pleaſant thing to the children of Iſrael, to heare ẏ contentes of this ſong which I haue expounded. For therein God accuſeth them to haue bin vnthankfull to him from the beginning: inſomuch that whereas he had vttered all the treaſures of his goodnes towardes them; they had abuſed the ſame moſt wickedly, and bin vnfaithfull to him, and that, not for once and away, but by ſhewing themſelues alwayes vnreformable. Now, this might well haue greeued them: but yet was Moſes faine to ſhewe them the will of God. And ſo we ſee that they which are ſet in office to teach the people, muſt not ſooth them vp nor ſeeke to pleaſe them, according to the 2.Tim.4.3. ſaying of S. Paul that men ſhall haue itching eares, deſirous to bee fed with winde: but they whom God hath placed in the office of Shepheardes, muſt not bend themſelues that way. Although then we ſee men ſpiteful againſt Gods word, and to conceiue an vtter miſlyking of the thinges which we bee commaunded to declare vnto them: yet muſt we follow our commiſſion, and diſcharge our ſelues faithfully of our dueties. For although men lyke not to be reproued: yet is it for their benefite neuertheleſſe. As for example, a ſicke perſon will perchance refuſe a medicine: but yet muſt he receiue it, for it is for his health. Lykewiſe although the people of Iſraell were ſtubborne: yet notwithſtanding they did patiently abide this doctrine which was rough and hard, as we ſee. And hereby wee be done to vnderſtand, that if we cannot abide that God ſhould blame vs for our ſinnes, & reproue vs ſharply when we haue deſerued it; we be wors than thoſe to whom God hath ſpoken heretofore. Now God calleth them a curſed and froward generation: and what ſhall then become of vs? So then, if wee be not plyable to ſubmit our ſelues to God willingly, at leaſtwiſe when we haue done amiſſe; Or if he finde ſuch frowardnes in vs that wee haue neede to bee handled roughly: let vs beare it with all mieldeneſſe and meekeneſſe. Thus much concerning that poynt where it is reported that Moſes ſpake or vttered all the wordes of the ſong in the hearing of the people.

Now here is yet thus much more, that therein wee may ſee howe God ſpake by the mouth of Moſes. For it had not bin poſſible for that doctrine to haue bin retained, except the maieſtie of God had matched with it. Had a mortall man handled the people as Moſes did, vnauthoriſed from aboue: ſurely it had bin the next way to haue rayſed a great ſedition againſt him. Therefore it behooued God to ſhew that he had giuen power to Moſes, and that he held the people in awe. And that ſerued to ſhewe that the Lawe was not coyned here beneath: but that God was the very author thereof, and therefore is to bee receiued with ſuch reuerence as is due to thinges that proceede from him. That is an other thing which wee haue to remember vppon this text.

Hauing rehearſed the ſong, now he addeth an exhortation. Set yee your mindes (ſaith he) vpon all the wordes of this Lawe. Here he ſheweth to what purpoſe and intent Gods will was to haue the ſayd ſong publiſhed: namely; that the people might know their owne naughtineſſe, wherein they had continued a long time, and be reclaymed from it, and learne to miſlyke of their ſtubbornnes, and thereupon to meeken their hartes that they might liue in obedience to God. And this belongeth vnto vs, as whereof we may gather a generall rule: which is, that whenſoeuer our Lorde entereth ſo into proteſtation & pleading againſt vs, diſcouering our vices and bewraying the corruption that is in vs: it is to the end to drawe vs to repentance, that knowing in what plight we be, we ſhould humble our ſelues, and therewithall bee more ready to receiue the worde of God, that whereas we were hardhearted and full of venim before, ſo as there was no entring into vs to be found: our hearts might be diſpoſed both to heare & to beleeue his ſayinges, and to bee obedient to him in all caſes.

The end(ſay I)whereunto all the rebukes which God giueth vs,in exhorting and quickening of vs vp, ought to ſerue to make vs the better diſpoſed to heare his worde,becauſe he ſeeth that naturally wee would rather goe backeward than foreward. This thing is declared heere expreſly by Moſes, who hauing finiſhed his ſong, ſayeth, Set your hearts vpon all the words of this lawe. Nowe the maner of ſpeech which he vſeth, betokeneth that they ſhould be attentiue or giue good eare. And not without cauſe:according to his former diſcourſe,where he ſayth that he wakeneth men after that faſhion. For wee ſee what negligence is in vs. Although wee pretend ſome zeale of profiting in Gods ſchoole: yet notwithſtanding the doctrine is no ſooner preached, but that not onely the one halfe of it, but alſo the moſt part of it ſlippeth from vs: in ſo much that euen they that haue profited beſt, doe ſcarſely beare away the thirde part: and ſome others ſcarce one word. To be ſhort,wee bee ſo light headed,that our wittes are continually rouing here & there, and we be at no ſtay to apply our ſelues wholly to the doctrine which is preached vnto vs in the name of God. But although wee vnderſtand the thinges that are ſpoken, and can ſay them by heart: yet are not our heartes and affections euer the more giuen vnto them. Therefore wee muſt not thinke it ynough for vs to bee able to talke of it: but wee muſt haue an inward harkening vnto God, and euerie of vs muſt talke of it to himſelfe,cheawing as it were his cudde, that is to ſay, muſing vpon it in his minde by himſelf, as if he ſhoulde ſay; It ſtandeth mee in hand to marke this wel:but whereas we ſhould indeuour after that manner to print the things in our memorie which haue bin taught vs in the name of God: we let it all ſlip away. For as much then as wee ſee ſuch fault in our ſelues: wee ought to marke this text the better where it is ſayde; Set your heartes thereon. As if Moſes ſhould ſay that Gods word requireth a ſingular affection, ſo as if we will vnderſtand it well, wee muſt not heare it as ſome other thing of another mans telling: for it is a kinde of wiſedome that ſurmounteth all our wittes. Therefore it ſtandeth men in hand to ſtraine themſelues in this behalfe: but on the contrarie part we ſee the coldneſſe that is in vs, in ſo much that when we haue once taſted a little thereof, wee paſſe not any more for it. Come wee to the hearing of Gods woorde? Doe wee reade it alone by our ſelues? Then let this warning alwayes ſtand before our eyes, that Gods woord is worthie to be receiued with ſuch reuerence, as we ſhould lift vp our minds on high & labour and indeuour to rid our ſelues of al things that may hinder vs from giuing our ſelues wholy thereunto. Thus ye ſee what Moſes meant by this ſpeech of ſetting their heartes.

And he ſpeaketh not of ſome one part alone, but of All the woordes of the Lawe. Whereby hee doeth vs to vnderſtand, that we muſt not ſo part ſtakes with God, as to perfourme ſome one ſaying ſlightly, and to let the reſt alone: but that wee muſt doe our indeuour in all caſes, to bee throughly learned in all the thinges which our Lord knoweth to be auailable to our ſaluation. For it is certaine that there neuer ſcaped any ſuperfluous word out of the mouth of God. Wee muſt not thinke that Gods ſpeaking is after the maner of men, who to attaine to ſome one good ſentence, doe vſe many fetches about and many interminglings: ſo that if one good ſaying be rehearſed, a man muſt let paſſe three or foure other for it. But as I ſayd afore, Gods ſpeaking is in ſuch wiſe, that all is profitable euen to the laſt word. And therefore not without cauſe doth Moſes heere exhort the people of Iſrael to ſet their heartes vpon all the woordes of the Lawe. True it is that wee can neuer haue the full vnderſtanding of Gods worde, but wee ſhall haue doone much when wee haue knowen ſome part of it. And wee heare what Saint Paule ſayeth, 1.Cor.13.12 who comprehendeth himſelfe alſo in the number of thoſe which ſee and knowe but onely in part, vntill wee may behold Gods glory face to face. But yet muſt wee receiue all, euen to yeeld our ſelues obedient to God without exception, ſo as wee may bee quiet in all thinges which he ſpeaketh vnto vs. Then let vs not doe as many folke doe, which receiue Gods worde alonely ſo farre foorth as it is to their owne liking, and as for the reſt they let it alone. There are other ſome which beate their braynes about ſome one point, becauſe their minde inclineth that way; and as for all the reſidue, they thinke it belongeth nothing to them. But let vs pray God to graunt vs the grace, that when wee once knowe any one peece of his will, wee may continually growe more and more in vnderſtanding, and that wee perceiue(as ſayeth Saint Paul) that all ſcripture is profitable. For he ſayeth not that 2.Tim.3.16 there wee ſhall finde wherewith to edifie our ſelues: but he ſayeth that it is profitable to all thinges, ſo as there is there not only ſome thing that may doe vs good: but alſo that if we ſearch throughout the things which our Lorde declareth there, wee ſhall finde from the very beginning, that nothing is ſet downe there without cauſe, but that G O D had alwayes a regard to giue vs good inſtruction in all thinges which he hath ſpoken. And ſo ye ſee to what purpoſe Moſes exhorteth heere the people to ſet their mindes vpon all theſe wordes.

But nowe if wee conſider howe many thinges there are to drawe vs away from it, and to thruſt vs out of the way, yea and to pluck vs backe that we might not profite in Gods woorde: it may well teache vs further, howe greatly wee ought to ſtraine our ſelues to bee quiet and peaceable, that our Lorde may bee heard, and wee giue heede to the thinges which hee vouchſafeth to teache vs. Howebeit we bee farre off from ſuch perfection. For hardly can a man abyde ſteadfaſt one minute of an houre, without the comming of ſome toy in his head to turne him away. A hundred of them will come vnto vs in one houre: and how many moe then in a whole day? Yea and ſometimes the conceite of our fooliſhe imaginations doth ſo cary vs away; that we wote not where we be. But beholde, our Lorde God woulde fayne aſſure vs of his ſayinges: there is ſuch a couenant paſſed betweene him & vs, that it is not heard for vs to hearken vnto him; inſomuch that if we will giue eare vnto him, we ſhall finde that his doctrine is not vnprofitable to vs. And ought not this to prouoke vs to fight againſt all ſuch imaginations as trouble our mindes and make vs to wander away? Yes: and ſo wee ſee how greatly this exhortation ought to preuaile with vs, conſidering that we be ſo fickle minded and lightheaded, as experience proueth.

Nowe after this, Moſes ſayeth that the people muſt commaund their children. Heerein it is ſhewed vs, that it is not ynough for vs to profite euery man himſelfe in Gods ſchoole: but that when wee our ſelues haue learned, we muſt alſo indeuer to bring others into the right way of ſaluation; ſpecially wee to whom God hath committed the charge of ſuch as want learning and inſtruction. As for example; fathers and mothers ſhall yeeld an account for their Children, bicauſe God giueth them with this condition, that they ſhall be brought vp in his feare. Lykewiſe Mayſters and Miſtreſſes haue to aunſwere for their menſeruauntes and womenſeruauntes; and if they lay the brydle in their neckes, they muſt not thinke that our Lorde will let their negligence ſcape vnpuniſhed. Therefore let vs take warning by this text, that ſuch as haue children muſt haue a care to teache them, and to make it knowen that God is the father of all their whole ofſpring, if they themſelues wilbe taken to bee the children of God. Lykewiſe they that haue menſeruauntes and maideſeruauntes muſt vnderſtand that their houſe muſt bee ſo dedicated to the ſeruing of God, as he may haue all ſouerainty in the ſame. After that maner ought we to take paines in the behalfe of thoſe which are committed to our charge. For the more we ſee that the world fayleth in that behalfe, the more carefull ought wee to bee to doe our duetie therein. For it wil bee no excuſe for vs to alleage ý it was a common vice, but it will rather turne to our ſorer condemnation, bycauſe one corrupteth and marreth another. Nowe then, let vs learne to haue the zeale that is commaunded vs here; namely that where God hath graunted vs the grace to be drawen to ý knowledge of his truth; then to conſider, that we muſt alſo indeuour to make all other men partakers thereof, that after our death Gods word may haue his courſe ſtill, and not be buried with vs. For wee bee mortall creatures, and as touching this world we doe but paſſe away, and that very ſwiftly. But we knowe Eſa.40,8. that Gods truth indureth for euer; and therefore wee muſt ſo deale as that Gods woorde may continue and bee knowen, and bee receiued of men from hand to hand, euen after that wee be departed out of this worlde. And thoſe which haue any charge ought to bende themſelues cheefely heereunto, according to this ſaying of Saint Peter concerning the ſame matter. I will 2.Pet.1.15. cauſe you (ſayeth he) to haue a remembraunce of my doctrine after that God ſhall haue taken mee out of this worlde. Although I liue not to ſpeake to you any more with my mouth; yet to diſcharge my duetie, I muſt ſo deale ý when my mouth ſhalbe ſhut and I ſhalbe no more conuerſant with you heere belowe to teach you, yet the ſame doctrine which I haue brought vnto you may haue his courſe ſtill, ſo as you may keepe it to your benefite and edification. For although fathers and mothers bee bounde to teache their children, and maiſters and miſtreſſes to teache thoſe that are vnder them, and likewiſe the miniſters of Gods woorde according as the Lorde hath called them to ſpeake in his name, are bounde to ſhewe the right way and to giue good example to other men: yet notwithſtanding we ought all generally to indeuour that all folkes may hearken to God, and receiue his word, and that not for two or three dayes onely, but for euer. Thus yee ſee to what purpoſe Moſes hath ſaide heere, that Fathers muſt trayne vp their Children in all the woordes of the Lawe.

Nowe hee ſaieth conſequently, To doe them and keepe them. Heere Moſes repeateth that which hee had ſpoken afore: namely that our Lordes ſpeaking vnto vs, is not to the end wee ſhoulde alowe of his ſayinges, and confeſſe the ſame to bee true, rightfull, and iuſt: but to trye our obedience. Gods word then muſt reforme our lyfe: for to that end and purpoſe is it ſpoken vnto vs. Neuertheleſſe, wee ſee howe many a one doe thinke themſelues well diſcharged when they haue but ducked downe with their heades, in token that they gaineſaie it not. And they thinke GOD to bee beeholden to them if they blaſpheme not his doctrine, and ſhewe not themſelues to bee enemies to it, but confeſſe the ſame to bee good and holy, for they wilnot haue GOD to vrge them any further. But that were too eaſie a market. For if GODS woorde were preached but onely to the ende it ſhoulde bee receiued and confeſſed with the mouth: to what purpoſe ſhoulde it ſerue when in the meane while euerie man might take the brydle in his necke, and liue as though wee neuer had any rule of GOD? Were it not an vnhallowing and defiling of the holy thinges, and a diſſeating of the power of GODS woorde? Let vs beare well in minde therefore, that if wee come hither to Sermons, and yet continue ſtill lyke our ſelues, ſo as our lyfe bee not aunſwerable to that which hath beene taught vs heere: wee ſhalbe dubble to blame, bycauſe it is but a mocking and ſkorning of the doctrine of ſaluation, when wee let it ſlip away, and haue but our eares beaten with it, without any touching of our heartes or any reforming of our liues thereafter. What is to bee doone then? Wee muſt vnderſtande that GODS woorde is not named a Garde without cauſe, for as much as men are lyke wretched beaſtes without diſcretion, vntill God haue ſhewed them howe they ought to walke. Yee ſee then that it is our Gard or defence. And therefore if wee keepe Gods word, we alſo ſhalbe kept and garded thereby, and we ſhal haue our bonds certaine, ſo as we ſhal neuer erre while we liue: and moreouer we ſhall haue wiſedome to iudge betweene good aud euill.

And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſaith, Let your children keepe the woorde; and againe, let them obſerue it. True it is that wee can neither keepe Gods woord nor doe it; vntill hee haue written it in our heartes. But Moſes preſuppoſeth that God will ſhedde out his holy ſpirite vppon the people, ſo they ſhut not the doore againſt him, but bee readie to receiue the grace which our Lorde had promiſed them, as wee haue ſeene heretofore, where he ſayth; Deut 30.14 Behold, the worde is nygh thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart. And not without cauſe doth Saint Paul ſay that Rom.10,16. this worde is the ſame which is preached in the Goſpell, bycauſe Gods ſpeaking there is not to make a noyſe in our eares onely, but alſo to ingraue the doctrine in our heartes by his holy ſpirit, which is brought vnto vs. So then let vs marke well, that whereas Moſes treateth heere of the keeping of Gods worde, God alſo doeth bynde himſelfe to his people, with condition that hee will gouerne them by his holy ſpirite, and write his worde in their heartes: and moreouer when hee hath ſo touched them, hee will alſo be fauourable to them in bearing with their infirmities and in forgiuing their ſinnes. And after that manner doe wee perfourme GODS woorde: not that wee can accompliſh it and do it throughly: for wee bee ſo farre vnable to perfourme the lawe, that wee cannot ſo much as 1.Cor.3.5. thinke one good thought. Nay rather wee drag backe from that which God commaundeth vs: wee bee enemyes to all righteouſneſſe and vpright dealing. God therefore muſt bee fayne to bow vs, and to giue vs ſuch teachableneſſe as we may bee readie to heare his worde. And moreouer when hee hath graunted vs the grace to haue ſuch zeale and affection, hee muſt alſo beare with vs in that we haue not done our indeuour to do the things which he hath appointed vs; & whereas we be diſobedient, and therefore hee might iuſtly puniſhe vs, yet notwithſtanding hee muſt bee faine to receiue vs to mercie, and to giue vs our pardon for our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes ſake. And although the fathers of olde tyme had not ſo great and ſo euident teaching as we haue nowadayes by the Goſpell: yet did they knowe that our Lorde had promiſed them both the grace of his holy ſpirite and alſo his mercie, to the forgiuing of their ſinnes. For the ſacrifices which were offered in thoſe dayes, were not ordayned without cauſe. It was not a trifling matter, that the people came to the temple to offer ſacrifices: but it was a ſure preſident that God receyued them to mercie; in ſo much that when the bloud of any beaſt was there ſhed, it was a figure which ought to leade them vp to a higher thing. For there Exod.25.40 & Hebr.8.5. was alwayes a heauenly patterne which Moſes had ſeene vppon the Mount. So then, let vs not thinke as the Papiſtes doe, that Moſes vpholdeth heere the Freewill of men, of purpoſe, therewithall to ſet foorth their deſeruinges, as though men coulde by their owne power and pollicie obtayne Paradiſe, and were able to ſerue GOD and to doe the commaundements of the Law: Moſes went not that way to worke; but hee knewe what promyſe had beene made to the people, and that all thinges tended to the Couenaunt which GOD had made with them, notwithſtanding that the time of the full opening thereof was not yet come as it was promyſed afterwarde by Ieremie, Eſay, and all Eſa.61.1.&3. Ier.31.33. Ezec.11.19. & 36.26. the reſt of the Prophetes, where it is ſayd that GOD woulde make a newe Couenaunt with his people, which was that hee woulde write his Lawe in their heartes, and chaunge their ſtony heartes into heartes of fleſh. True it is that this belongeth to the Goſpell: neuertheleſſe, it was figured alſo vnder the Lawe, and the fathers that liued in thoſe dayes, had ſome taſte thereof ſo farre as was expedient for them.

Nowe ſeeing that our Lorde hath nowadayes multiplyed his grace towardes vs, and made our ſtate more excellent than the ſtate of them that liued vnder the Lawe: ſurely wee be leſſe to bee excuſed than they, for it is certayne that it maketh our offences and diſobedience the more heynous. Therefore let vs bethinke our ſelues, and let vs marke well that ſeeing God doeth offer vs the liuing waters whereof Ezechiel ſpeaketh, that is to ſay, ſeeing he Ezec.36.25 sheadeth foorth the giftes of his holy ſpirit to make vs to walke according to his will: wee muſt aſſure our ſelues that if wee ſhut the gate againſt him, we ſhalbe much more worthy of blame than thoſe which yet neuertheleſſe were condemned vnder the lawe. And therefore let this waken vs, and make vs more willing to heare Gods word, to the end to keepe it, ſeeing he not onely ſpeaketh to vs by the mouthes of men, but alſo prepareth vs to draw vs to him by the inward power of his holy ſpyrite, and on the other ſide ſpareth vs, and falleth not to examining of our liues with rigour, but accepteth our dooinges as a father doeth his childrens, notwithſtanding that there bee much infirmitie and many vices in vs. And to the ende this word may haue the more force, Moſes ſayeth that he not onely ſpake or vttered it, but alſo that he witneſſed or proteſted it to the people, as wee haue ſeene afore. And not without cauſe doeth hee repeate it heere againe. For we be ſo laſie and ſhouthfull in receiuing Gods worde, as is pitie to ſee. Therefore it is requiſite that there ſhoulde alwayes bee ſome proteſtation, to make vs thinke the better thereon. Hee ſayde heeretofore, Deut.30.19. I call heauen and earth to witneſſe againſt you this day, that if the doctrine which I bring vnto you doe fall to the grounde, and that yee make no account thereof: the very Sunne and Moone and all other creatures ſhall cry out againſt you for vengeaunce of ſuch contempt and negligence.

So then he addeth now, God hath made mee a teacher, and I for my part will diſcharge my duetie, and that not with a colde and dead vtteraunce of the thinges which I haue receiued, but by proteſting to you on Gods behalfe as though I were a publike notarie & had a proxie from him, aſſuring you that ſith your God hath graunted you the grace to heare his word, if you bee negligent in receiuing it, yee muſt make a dreadfull account for it. Hereby we bee warned to receiue Gods worde with ſuch reuerence, as the Angels of heauen may bee witneſſes of our fayth, zeale, and conſtancie. Let vs goe with open heartes and mindes lifted vp to God, that wee may bee taught by him. And if wee doe ſo, wee ſhall bee turned away from all the impedimentes of the world, in ſo much that God ſhall no ſooner haue ſpoken the word, but wee ſhall bee agreed to yeeld to his teaching, and we ſhall not bee zealous for a ſmall time onely, but when we haue once begun, wee ſhall holde out to the ende. For woe to vs if wee turne head in the middes of our way, and ſtart aſide when we haue begun well, ſo as the diuell may finde yͤ meanes to leade vs aſtray. Alas, what ſhall it boote vs to haue beene come into a good trade? So then, let vs marke well this worde Witneſſe, which is ſet downe here by Moſes, to doe vs to vnderſtand that our Lorde ſpeaketh not to vs to leaue our vnthankfulneſſe vnpuniſhed when wee haue deſpiſed the thinges that are tolde vs in his name, but that there ſhall be alwayes this ſolemne witneſſing or proteſtation, vnleſſe we benefite our ſelues by his teaching of vs.

Now Moſes addeth conſequently, That the worde is not vaine towardes them. This peece of text is miſunderſtoode if it bee taken for an exhortation. And yet for all that, it ſhould ſeeme, that Moſes exhorteth the people, when he ſaith: Let not Gods woord bee vaine towardes you, beware that yee receiue it not as a thing of no price, nay rather conſider what a Maieſtie it hath, when God appeareth to men by his worde which is his liuely image. But in the Hebrewe tongue wherein the Prophet ſpake, it is thus: The worde ſhall not bee vaine towardes you. For ſo is it, worde for worde in the Text: when he ſayeth; towardes you, he meaneth, that in reſpect of the people, the word ſhall not bee in vaine. And this will well bee perceiued by the ſaying of Eſay in his Iſa.55.10. fiue and fiftith Chapter, which text is miſexpounded likewiſe. But the right expounding of the one will bee a key to open the right vnderſtanding of the other. It is ſayd in Eſay, my word ſhall not returne emptie vnto mee, but it ſhall yeeld his fruit there as I ſend it vnto. Some haue thought that our Lord meant there, that whenſoeuer his worde is preached, it ſhall not bee in vaine, but that it ſhall yeelde profite by giuing fayth to the hearers. But the Prophet Eſay ment not ſo by thoſe wordes. What did he then? Hee confirmed or warranted Gods promiſes, to the intent that men ſhould not doubt of the performance of the thinges contained in them. As for example, God promiſeth vs to proſper vs by his bleſſing, to take vs into his keeping, and to defend vs againſt all the troubles and vexations of the world; ſo that if men perſecute vs, he will bee as our bucklar: if wee bee threatened and aſſaulted on all ſides, he will bee our fortreſſe; in time of dearth he will haue a care to feede vs; againſt all the aſſaultes of Satan, hee will gard vs by the power of his holy ſpirit: to be ſhort, Gods promiſes are infinite. And yet for all that, wee bee ſo weake hearted, that we conceiue not what he ſaieth, but rather wee thinke that wee ſhall be diſappointed if wee truſt to his promiſes. There needeth not any thing to toſſe vs too and fro, for to our ſeeming all Gods promiſes are but deceites. For this cauſe he ſayeth; No, like as the Raine falleth not in vaine, but moyſteneth the earth, and the earth being moyſtened yeeldeth forth hir fruite, ſo as the raine hath as it were a ſecret vertue to giue nouriſhment to men: therefore like as yee ſee that in the order of nature, the raine ingendreth ſuch a kinde of fruitefulneſſe in the earth; ſo aſſure you your ſelues that my word ſhall not bee in vaine, but I will make it to yeelde profite, that is to ſay I will perfourme all my promiſes. Therefore bee bold to truſt vnto mee, that I will performe and bring to paſſe al that euer I haue ſpoken by my Prophetes. So in this text Moſes ſayeth, The word ſhall not be voide towards you, that is to ſay, ſo you receiue it, thinke not that God will leaue you with your mouthes open like ſilly hungerſtaruen folke, ſo as yee ſhould hang lingering and not knowe what ſhall become of you: for your God will make you to feele by proofe that hee hath not promiſed you aught in vaine. Now, when our Lorde ſpeaketh after that manner, ſhall wee caſt doubtes yet ſtil, and ſtand ſcanning whether his ſayings ſhall be performed or no? His worde ſhall not bee voyde towardes you: that is to ſay, ye ſhall finde the effect thereof, and hold ye hardily vnto this, that God will worke with ſuch force, as yee ſhall perceyue that when his worde is preached vnto you, it is as much as if he himſelfe were preſent, to put the thing in proofe and execution, which hee hath declared. Thus wee ſee now the meaning of Moſes, to the intent that the people ſhoulde take ſome taſt of Gods word and receiue it with all reuerence. He telleth them that when God ſpeaketh, it is not a ſound that vaniſheth away in the aire: but that in that word lyeth and conſiſteth all our happineſſe and chiefe welfare, and that wee haue wherewith to content our ſelues, when our Lord vouchſafeth to direct his worde ſo vnto vs. For why? Wee ſhall not bee foaded with vaine hope; but we ſhall feele in deede how our Lorde meant to trie our faith in ſuch wiſe for a time, as that he wil yet neuertheleſſe performe all that euer he hath ſpoken.

Now Moſes confirmeth this exhortation yet better, by this which he addeth: It is your life and your welfare. by it ſhall your dayes be prolonged in the land which you goe to poſſeſſe. Hereby we may eaſily gather that Moſes made not an exhortation to the people, [to ſhewe] that the woorde is not vaine: but rather that he made them a promiſe, that the woorde ſhoulde haue force and vertue continually as it were without interruption. It is your life ſayeth he, and through the power thereof ſhall you prolong your dayes. Hee ſheweth then, that vntill ſuch time as our Lorde had giuen his Lawe to the people, they were as wretched folke that wiſt not where to haue any reſt, no more than all other men vppon the earth. True it is that Gods creating of vs and his ſetting of vs in this world, is to the ende wee looke at him,put our truſt in him,and hope for al good thinges at his hand. But what? We be ſo earthly, that we can by no meanes come nigh him. And indeede he is too farre off, and though wee thinke vpon him, yet vntill he giue vs his word and vtter his fatherly loue towardes vs, alas wee muſt needes euer tremble and bee abaſhed. Let vs marke well then,that we ſhal neuer haue any aſſuredneſſe, vntill our Lorde haue giuen it vs by his woorde. For our lyfe is but a lingering, wee bee turmoyled with continuall troubles and vnquietneſſe,and (which more is) wee muſt needes finde GOD our deadly enemie, vntill he haue taught vs by his word. And I pray you, can wee haue any ſparke of lyfe, when we perceiue that God is againſt vs? Now ſurely men deceiue themſelues if they weene to haue Gods fauour, vntill they be grounded and ſetled vppon his woorde. And therefore not without cauſe doeth Moſes ſay that the word is our life. For thereby wee bee doone to vnderſtande howe wretched our ſtate is, vntill our Lorde haue drawen vs to him, and communicated himſelfe to vs by meanes of his word.

Nowe when we once knowe that Gods word bringeth vs ſuch benefites, to wit, that we knowe that God wilbe fauourable to vs, that he quickeneth vs, and that it ſheweth vs wherein our ioy and felicitie conſiſteth: wee muſt knowe alſo that it ſerueth vs for a Seale, & that our Lord will haue vs to take it as a gage, as though the thing were done already. And therefore whenſoeuer God ſpeaketh, let vs hold vs to him. For hee is no vnſaier as mortall men bee: hee is not free of promiſe, and a performer of nothing: therefore let vs boldly ſticke to his word,and ſith it is our life,let vs aſſure ourſelues that it wil not deceiue vs, nor beguile vs if we truſt vnto it. For why? It ſhall not returne void from vs: that is to ſay,when we haue once admitted it in,it wil take ſuch roote,as Gods power ſhall euer be at hande to vs, and God ſhall ſooner renounce himſelfe than not performe his promiſes. True it is,that we ſhal not ſee it out of hand:but yet muſt we be fully reſolued thereof,and patiently tarry til yͤ fit time be come for our lord to ſhew that he ment not to ieſt or to dally, in telling vs that he would be liberall vnto vs. Now ſith it is ſo,let vs learne to be the more deſirous to receiue Gods worde, in reſpect of the profite that it bringeth vs. For God thinketh it not ynough to ſhew vs the maieſtie that is in his word, to the intent we ſhould be humbled to obey it: but his mind is alſo to allure vs,that we might be in loue with it. And to that ende doeth Moſes ſpeake it heere. He had magnified the word ſufficiently heretofore, ſhewing that it proceedeth from God,and that heauen and earth ſhall beare witnes againſt vs if we refuſe it; but now he addeth another reaſon to induce men the better to heare God,yea and to heare him deſirouſly, namely; that God will prolong their dayes in the land which they go to poſſeſſe, at leaſtwiſe if they ſuffer themſelues to be taught by him. And why? For we be all poore ſilly ſoules without hope of ſaluation,if we continue in the ſtate of al mākind. All the life which men weene thēſelues to haue in this world,is but as a way to hell vntill God haue turned vs to the better, and haue taught vs what is ſaide in his woorde. As touching that which he addeth, ſaying, That they ſhall lengthen their daies when they bee paſſed ouer Iordan: I will treate thereof to morow if it pleaſe God.

Now let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes,praying him to make vs ſo to feele them more and more, as wee may learne to turne againe vnto him, and make the great number of exhortations auailable which moue vs dayly ſo to doe: and that when he layeth before vs our ſinnes and threatneth vs with his wrath,we may be ſo conuicted, as we may not continue hardened in euill, but returne vnto him, and pray him to bee ſo gratious vnto vs, as not to ſuffer Satan to haue dominion ouer vs; but rather to make vs indeuour to reform ourſelues in ſuch ſort,as that our hearing of his word may cauſe vs to amend and bring vs backe to him, and frame our whole life according to his will. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Fryday the xix. of Iune, 1556.

The CXC. Sermon, which is the thirteenth vpon the two and thirtith Chapter.

48 And the ſame day the Lord ſpake vnto Moſes, ſaying,

49 Get thee vp into this mountaine Abarim,the mountaine Nebo which is in the land of Moab ouer againſt Iericho:and there take a view of the land of Chanaan, which I giue in poſſeſſion to the children of Iſraell.

50 And thou ſhalt dye vpon the mountaine which thou goeſt vp into, and be gathered vnto thy people like as Aaron thy brother dyed vppon Mount Hor and was gathered with his people.

51 Bicauſe ye ſinned againſt me among the Children of Iſraell by the waters of ſtrife in Cades,in the wilderneſſe of Sin. For yee ſanctified me not in the preſence of the Children of Iſraell.

52 Therfore thou ſhalt ſee the land before thee, but thou ſhalt not enter into it, namely the land which I giue vnto the Children of Iſraell.

Deut.1.37. THis hiſtorie hath bin touched alreadie heretofore in the firſt Chapter, where Moſes declared that he was depriued of the benefite which he had looked for, that is to ſay, of inioying the Inheritance which God had promiſed to all the linage of Abraham. Now the ful time was come, and Moſes had bin appointed of God to deliuer the people: by reaſon whereof there was great likelihood that he aboue all others ſhould haue gone into that land. But when he was to haue ſet his foote into it, then behoued it him to die: and that was a verie hard caſe for him. Hee made mention thereof afore, to ſhewe to the children of Iſrael, howe great and exceſſiue their lewdneſſe was, ſeeing that he was puniſhed for their ſakes. For the miſchiefe came not of himſelfe, hee had not conſented, neither to their murmuringes nor to their blaſphemies, but rather had ſtrayned himſelfe to withſtand them. Yet notwithſtanding, his conſtancie was not ſo great as was requiſite. Onely bicauſe hee was as a man amazed, and glorifyed not God with ſuch ſtedfaſtneſſe as hee ought to haue doone; hee was baniſhed from the land. This doeth he charge them with to their reproch. And here he repeateth againe, how that after he had publiſhed the lawe, God told him againe that he ſhould beare that puniſhment of not entering into the lande of Canaan: and therewithall he telleth him immediately of his death. Nowe firſt of all, if wee reade what is written by Moſes himſelfe; it will ſeeme that he ouerſhot not himſelf in the place ẏ is called Meriba, which aforetime was named Exod 17.7. Raphirim. For there perceiuing the people to cry that they died for thirſt, hee called vppon God. Moſes doeth not take part with them that ſtormed after that manner, hee was no fellow with them, hee repyned not at God: but rather went to him with all humilitie, ſaying; Alas Lorde, I am a mortall man, and how may I ſatisfie this people, vnleſſe thou prouide for them? Moſes reſorted vnto GOD, his meaning was not to prouoke him to wrath, & therewithall it ſhould ſeeme that he looked that God ſhould woorke after his accuſtomed manner; that is to ſay, that hee ſhould ſhewe foorth his power. Now then, if a man looke vppon the outward apparance of the matter, it will ſeeme that Moſes behaued himſelf faithfully, and that he was not to be blamed. Yet notwithſtanding, hee is condemned, both he & his brother Aaron. And why? Hereby wee ſee that wee muſt not alwayes weigh our ſinnes in our owne ballance: for that will euer deceiue vs, according to this ſaying of Salomon, Prou.21.2. Man thinketh his owne wayes to bee right, but God weyeth mens hearts. Therefore when men haue acquit themſelues, they haue gained nothing thereby. For ſometimes the lewdnes lyeth hid within: God ſeeth it, and it is he ẏ chalengeth to himſelfe the office of ſearching of all thoughts. Then by the example of Moſes we be warned not to flatter our ſelues. For although our ſinnes be hidden from men, yea and that we our ſelues cannot comprehend them: wee muſt not vnder colour thereof deeme our ſelues to be righteous, but put our ſelues into Gods hande, praying him to make vs vnderſtand our ſecrete vices, and to vouchſafe that as they bee buryed from vs, ſo they may be pardoned by him: & let vs crie wͭ Dauid, Lord who knoweth his faultes? Pſal.19.13. But clenſe thou me from the things which I haue not perceyued. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to remember vppon this place.

And nowe hereuppon let vs learne to diſcharge our ſelues of all pride, for there are many men to bee ſeene, which coulde finde in their heartes to ſtand in contention with God; and would neuer agree to his iudgement, vntill hee haue ſhewed them wherfore he doth condemne this or that. But we muſt not lift vp briſtles after that maner. We knowe there is but one onely Iudge, and that wee muſt all come before his ſeate with reuerence, as ſayeth Saint Paule. Rom.14.10 2.Cor.5.10. Sith it is ſo, let vs keepe vs from attempting any thing beyond that which belongeth vnto vs, and let vs not take vppon vs the authoritie of God, to put difference betweene good and euill after our owne fanſie; but let vs enquire after the thing which our Lord alloweth, & hold it for good without gainſaying. And looke what he condemneth, let vs hold it for euill, without asking queſtion why, vnleſſe God ſhew vs ẏ reaſon, and then muſt we accept thereof. For if hee once ſay the worde, wee muſt holde vs to it and keepe ſilence. To be ſhort, let vs learne to glorifie God in all caſes: and when hee hath once ſpoken a thing, let it ſuffice vs, and let vs all agree vnto it without any further adoe. For it ſhal not boote vs to ſtriue, wee ſhall but double our condemnation continually. What ſhould it haue profited Moſes to haue made long proceſſe, and to haue entred into particularities with God for the iuſtifying of himſelf, [& to haue ſaid,] Why? What haue I ſaid? Did any one word ſcape mee out of ſquare? And on the other ſide, I meane not to conſent to the wickedneſſe of this people. Which thing I haue ſhewed as much as might be in all my dooinges. In ſo much ẏ euen when they asked water, I knewe not howe to doe better, than to conſider myne owne weakenes, and therefore I confeſſed it with mine owne mouth, and therewithal called vpon thee. Moſes had many allegations to make: but if he had entered into them, it had bin the next way to haue prouoked Gods vengeance ſo much the more againſt him. Seeing then that hee did willingly yeeld to his condemnation, to the intent to obtaine mercie for his fault: let vs followe his example, and ſuffer God to vſe his due authoritie ouer vs; and let all mouthes bee ſtopped before him as ſayeth the ſcripture. Thus much for that one poynt.

Nowe by the way we ſee what charge they take vppon them, which ought to gouerne a people. For it is not ynough for them to bee no partakers of the rebellions, mutinies, wicked compactes, & other offences that are committed againſt God. Although they proteſt that they bee not attaynted with them, nor had any minde or intent that way; yet ſhall they not goe quit nor be counted guiltleſſe for all that. For it behoueth them to withſtand it with all ſtouteneſſe of minde and force, and to bee vtterly vnuincible. If they ſhoulde ſee, not onely two or three naughtipackes ſet themſelues againſt God; but alſo euen a whole people ſet vpon miſchiefe: yet ought they to ſet themſelues againſt them as open aduerſaries, in the maintenance of Gods cauſe: and if they faile ſo to doe; their cowardlineſſe will not be excuſable. Oftentimes the Magiſtrats which haue Gods ſword in their hand, and the Miniſters of Gods woorde which are ordeyned to rebuke euill; thinke it ynough to bee but onely grieued when men offende God. But wee ſee contrariwiſe, that although Moſes and Aaron medled not with the wickedneſſe of the people, but did euen ſhunne it, and would with all their hearts that God had beene honoured, & it was not long of them that things went no better foreward: yet notwithſtanding, God imputeth it to them for a fault, bicauſe they were not ſtout and freeharted in ſtriuing againſt them, as they ought to haue bin. So then, they which are ſet in publique office, ought to deſire God to giue them ſuch conſtancie and ſtoutneſſe of mind, as they may not yeelde for any thing that can happen, but keepe on their courſe continually, without ſtriking their ſayle as they ſay. For ſurely as for vs, a ſmall thing will ſhake vs, or rather throw vs downe at the firſt blow. Therefore muſt God be faine to worke in vs. Yet notwithſtanding we ſhal not be diſcharged, except that euery of vs in his calling do put foorth himſelfe in the maintenaunce of Gods quarel, to reſtraine the euill as much as hee can, ſo as our mouthes be open to rebuke vice, inſomuch that if we ſee a whole people giuen to wickedneſſe, we cry out vnto them, & tel them of the vengeance that is prepared for them. Thus ye ſee what we haue to doe on our ſide.

Alſo let the magiſtrates ſtraine themſelues as much as is poſſible for them. For if we, conſidering what is happened to Moſes and Aaron, doe ſtep aſide; let vs not thinke our ſelues to haue more priuiledge than they. But yet we haue to note heerewithall, that Gods puniſhing of Aaron and Moſes was in ſuch ſorte, as he ceaſed not for all that to auow them for faithfull, and to allow their calling, and to yeelde them an excellent record euen after their deceaſſe, accordingly as Psal.96.6. we heare how it is ſayde in the pſalme, that Aaron and Moſes were his true ſeruauntes. Ye ſee heere how the holy ghoſt magnifieth Moſes and Aaron; and yet for all that they fayled not to be puniſhed too. Yea, but God vſeth but temporall puniſhment towardes them; and thereupon hee ceaſeth not to be their father ſtill. When God then puniſheth our faults, although the corrections bee irkeſome to beare; yet let vs bee contented therewith, ſo long as hee is mercifull to vs ſtill, and that hee auowe vs to bee of the number of his children. So long as that remayneth to vs, let vs go on ſtill, and let it not grieue vs though GOD ſcourge vs with his roddes, for wee haue neede of them. Wee ſee how the greateſt, euen thoſe which haue moſt excelled in all vertue and holyneſſe, haue ſhewed vs the way in this behalfe. Shoulde GOD ſpare vs more than hee ſpared Moſes and Aaron? Yee ſee then howe the faythfull ought to prepare themſelues to receiue chaſtiſement for the offences which they haue committed, and that they muſt not thinke that bicauſe they bee GODS children, therefore they ſhoulde bee exempted from all afflictions, and GOD ſhoulde doe away all their faultes without making any countenaunce of miſliking them. But rather they muſt bee fully reſolued, that God will viſite them and put them in mynde of their ſinnes; and thereuppon ſubmit themſelues to him, and offer him their backes. Like as a child looketh for correction when he ſeeth his father angrie: ſo muſt wee haue the meekeneſſe in vs to ſubmit our ſelues to God, and ſhame muſt not touch vs, neither we be ouermuch grieued when our Lord is minded to diſcouer our faultes, and to bring vs lowe before men. True it is that wee ought to be touched therewith, but yet with ſuch 2.Cor.7.10 ſorow as S.Paul ſpeaketh of, which wee muſt not ſhun, bycauſe it tendeth to our welfare. For if our ſorowing be after a worldly manner bycauſe wee bee not honoured nor had in ſuch reputation as we would be: it is a curſed and ſinfull ſorowing. But if wee bee ſorie that we haue offended God, and all our griefe is for the euill which we haue done: that ſorow is a ſacrifice which God alloweth and well lyketh of. Howſoeuer the world goe, if GOD liſt to lay any note of infamie vppon vs; let vs not thinke it ouer ſtraunge, ſith wee ſee that Moſes who had bin exalted as a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who had deliuered the people of Iſrael out of bondage, and vppon whom GOD had ſhedde out his power; was faine for all that to bee ſet as vppon a ſcaffolde, and to bee put to reproche, and to haue it made knowen that God did ſolemnely bereaue him of the land that was promiſed to the linage of Abraham, when a great ſort of Raſcals and a great many of people of none account entered into it, and in the meane whyle Moſes was fayne to bee ſhutte out. Sith wee ſee this, ſhoulde wee thinke our puniſhment ouer harde and grieuous, when God will haue our ſinnes laide open, ſpecially when it may ſerue for example & inſtruction? Nay, we ought not to haue ſo great regard of our owne honour, but that we ought to eſteeme the ſaluation of our neighbors much more. Moſes for his part knew ẏ this ſhold ſerue for a good preſident to the worldes ende, bicauſe that whenſoeuer we compare our ſelues with him, we muſt needs hang downe our heads (as I ſaide afore) and put our ſelues into the handes of GOD. At the ſight heereof Moſes was contented. For he ſought the welfare of the whole Church; and ſo that God were glorified, he made no further reckening; but vtterly forgetting himſelfe, he was not ſo chare of his owne renowne and good reputation in this behalf, but that hee did patiently beare the chaſtiſement which it pleaſed God to denounce againſt him. That is the thing which wee haue in effect to remember in this place, where it is ſhewed vs againe, that Moſes was ſhut out from the poſſeſſiō of the land which had beene promiſed for an inheritance, as well to him, as to all the reſt of Abrahams ofſpring.

And herewithall we ought alſo to marke well, that whereas God ſendeth him vp into Mount Nebo, and telleth him that hee ſhall dye there; he (as we ſhall ſee in the end) reſiſteth it not, but prepareth himſelfe to it. True it is that he pronounceth the bleſſings which ſhalbe ſeene hereafter in order, and which we wil go in hand withall to morowe if it pleaſe God. Alſo hee maketh as it were his laſt Will to all the people. And yet for all this he is not diſmayed; but putteth himſelfe into Gods hand, and prepareth himſelfe willingly to dye. Nowe heerein wee ſee, how the faithfull ought to be alwayes willing to goe whitherſoeuer God calleth them, and how they ought to ouerleape al the difficulties of this world; inſomuch that although they meete with neuer ſo many thornes, and neuer ſo many encounters: yet ought they to thruſt foreward ſtill, & not to be driuen aſide, nor to be put out of hart for all that. Alſo when God taketh them out of the world, it behoueth them to haue alwaies one foote onward on the way; as if they ſhould ſay, lo heere I am Lord, I am ready to come vnto thee. But this cannot be done, except a man haue profited well in Gods ſchoole, and ſpecially that we know there is a better life prepared for vs. For wͭ out that, we can neuer feele truly that we be but ſtraungers in this world. For they which beleeue there is none other life than this which we inioy heere, and think to make their reſt in this world; are ſo wedded to it, ẏ a man cannot plucke them from it but by force and ſpite of their teeth. But when we once know that our inheritaunce is in heauen: we conclude ẏ this world is but a pilgrimage, and that wee muſt paſſe apace through it. And he that paſſeth it ſo, ſhall finde it no hard matter to go through with his iourney, when he ſeeth that his ſaluation is on the other ſide, and that God calleth him thereunto. The thing then whereunto it behoueth vs to put our whole indeuour, is the minding of the heauenly lyfe, and to conſider that God allureth vs dayly to come to the immortall glory which he hath prepared for vs, to the intent that when we be to depart out of this world, we may not goe vnto him againſt our wils, nor make complaintes, nor ſay after the maner of vnbeleeuers, What ſhal I doe, or what ſhall become of me? For (as S. Paule ſheweth vs,) 2.Tim.1.12 he that hath our gage in his handes, is faithfull. Our ſaluation is named a gage, ſo as God byndeth himſelfe lyke a man that receyueth money or ſome other thing that hee is put in truſt with to keepe. Nowe if a man haue taken a thing to keepe, it behooueth him to ſhewe his honeſtie and trueth. And thinke we that God will deceyue vs, hauing promyſed vs to be the keeper of ſaluation? Seeyng then that hee hath vouchſafed to take it into his handes, and to vndertake the ſafe cuſtodie thereof; let vs bee bold to truſt vnto him, and let vs goe yeelde our ſelues into his handes whenſoeuer hee ſhall call vs. Thus yee ſee howe wee bee to put this text in vre.

Yet muſt wee note further, that there is leſſe excuſe for vs noweadayes, than there was for Moſes, or for all the fathers that lyued vnder the Lawe. For had they the promyſes that are made vnto vs at this day in the Goſpell? They dyd but ſee them a farre off, and vnder verie darke ſhadowes. Or did they ſee Ieſus Chriſt rayſed from the dead? In deede they knewe it, howbeit but by hope, as whereby they comprehended in a figure the thinges that were abſent. But nowadayes, foraſmuch as wee haue the Goſpell, which openeth to vs the gates of heauen: GOD allureth vs to him as familiarly as can bee, wee bee alreadie entered into it in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: in ſo much that his going vp on high, is to drawe vs thither to him. For in as much as he is our head; he will drawe vs vp to him into the glory whereinto hee himſelfe is entred alreadie, ſo wee bee not ſeparated from him. Let vs beware then that wee diſappoynt not that grace of GOD. But let vs bee ſo ſtabliſhed in the fayth, that whenſoeuer GOD ſhal call vs out of the world; wee may not ſticke to goe willingly vnto him, and to doe that which wee ſee heere in Moſes. When GOD tolde him that hee ſhoulde dye, hee ſtrayned not courteſie to goe vp into the Mountaine, although that place were appoynted vnto him, as it were to offer vp himſelfe in ſacrifice to GOD. Moreouer, his ſinne was layde afore him againe: and yet did not that diſcomfort him neither. And that is a poynt more which wee ought to marke well, for it importeth a verie good leſſon. See heere, Moſes is at deathes doore: it may ſeeme that at that tyme hee ought to haue had ſome comfort wherewith to aſſwage his ſorowe. And yet for all that, God renueth the rememberaunce of the fault which hee had committed: and hee telleth him againe, that hee muſt take in good woorth the puniſhment which hee had hearde ſpoken of afore. Wee ſee then that Gods threateninges whereby hee layeth our ſinnes before vs, ought not to trouble vs ſo much, but that wee ought to take occaſion and matter to reioyce in them; bycauſe wee knowe (as I haue ſayde alreadie,) that GOD doeth ſo temper his rigour, as that euen in his puniſhing of vs, hee ceaſſeth not to doe the office of a father ſtill, ſo as the principall (that is to ſay the ſaluation of our ſoules) is reſerued vnto vs, yea and the temporall chaſtiſementes are beneficiall to vs, as by the meanes whereof GOD cleanſeth vs, and maketh vs to taſte the better how greatly it is for our behoofe to haue his fauour. That then is a thing which wee haue to marke in the perſon of Moſes.

So then, if any man be blamed for his faultes, though it were when he is ſicke, yea or at the laſt gaſp when Gods iudgementes are ſet afore him to make him ſory and to lament: yet muſt he not thinke it ſtraunge. For as we ſee, there are many which haue neede to bee ſo touched, and to be as it were touched with a launcer, that they may bee brought to God with ſuch reuerence as is requiſite. And although ſuch corrections bee bitter at the firſt ſight; yet muſt not men fall into deſpaire, but alwayes haue recourſe to Gods goodnes, aſſuring themſelues that his blaming of them after that manner, is not an vtter condemning of them, but is done to the end that they ſhould be their owne Iudges, and that hee therewithall is minded to receiue them to mercy. Therefore let vs ſuffer our Lord to deale after that manner with vs, and whenſoeuer we haue any heartbiting, ſo as God toucheth vs inwardly with the rememberaunce of our ſinnes, or we ſee them in reading his word, or we heare them ſpoken of in ſermons, or wee be warned of them priuately: let vs learne that the ſetting of them before vs is not to make vs conceiue any hartburning, or to caſt vs in deſpayre, ſo as wee ſhoulde bee kept backe from God: but that wee ſhoulde therewithall imbrace his promiſes, and not feare to bee diſappointed of the thinges which hee hath behighted vs: for his proceeding after that manner, is to the ende wee ſhould ſet the more ſtore by his grace, and accept it the better, and bee prouoked to ſeeke it, and alſo receiue it with the earneſter deſire. To that ende are his threatninges and iudgements ſet afore vs. And after that manner ought wee Deu.32.47. to practiſe the text that was treated of yeſterday, and alſo that which remaineth yet ſtil thereof. For it was ſayd that the Lawe was the lyfe of all the people, and that it ſhould maintaine thẽ in the land which God had promiſed them, and whereinto he led them to put them in poſſeſſion thereof. And yet neuertheleſſe wee ſee that in the lawe are many hard and ſharpe threates: there bee the curſes, which ought to make the haires to ſtand vp ſtiffe vpon mens heades: and there bee ſo many preſidents wherein God bewrayeth and vttereth the iniquities of the people: that at the firſt it may ſeeme that they ſhould bee vtterly confounded, and that the law ſerued but to ſmite them with maine blowes like a beetle, and to daunt them and ſcarre them in ſuch wiſe, as they might not approch vnto God; but yet haue wee neede to bee ſo mortifyed. For let vs conſider well the pride of our nature, and the falſe ouerweening and vaine ſelfetruſt wherwith wee be puffed vp, and how ſtubborne wee be againſt God: and wee ſhall finde that if hee will doe vs good, he muſt bee faine to beate vs downe after that manner, and his worde muſt be as a twoo edged ſword, ſo as there be neither thought nor affection in vs which is not ſear- Heb.4.12. ched by it, and it muſt enter into ẏ very marow of the bones, as the Apoſtle treateth thereof in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. Therefore let vs not thinke it ſtraunge that God dooth here tell Moſes againe of his fault, notwithſtanding that it was forgiuen him. For although hee ought to be glad of it, becauſe God did it in ſuch wiſe as he was nothing hindred thereby to call vppon him quietly, and to caſt himſelfe as it were into his fatherly lap: yet was it good for him to think vppon the fault which he had committed. And why? To humble him, to the intent hee ſhould yeelde the more honor to the infinite goodnes of God, and ſay, Alas, I might iuſtly haue bin ſunken to the bottom of hell for one only deede that befel me in leſſe than the turning of a hand: though I was grieued at the manifold grudgings of the people, yet intended I not to haue offended my God, but it happened vnto me through ouerſight for want of thinking thereon. And now if this onely one fault was enough to caſt me into endleſſe curſednes; Alas what is due to my whole lyfe? I ſhoulde haue committed a thowſand thowſand offences, yea and I ſhould neuer haue ceaſed to augment Gods vengeance vppon me ſtill, if I had not bin reſtreined and helde backe. And yet muſt I nowe beare the puniſhmẽt of my fault, which in the ſight of the worlde ſeemeth very light; but God knoweth what maner a one it is, ſeeing that for it I muſt bee foreſtalled of the land of Canaan, and haue deſerued to be baniſhed, not onely from thence, but alſo frõ the heauenly lyfe. Thus ye ſee how it was good for Moſes to bee taught humilitie after that faſhiõ: And what is thẽ to be thought of vs?

Nowe moreouer our Lorde ſayth vnto him, that he ſhould beholde the land: and that was to ſhew him (as I haue ſayd already) that he is not ſo forfended of going thither, but ẏ God taketh him ſtil as one of the number & cõpany of his children. And his taking of poſſeſſiõ of the land by eyeſight, was alſo an admonition vnto him, that ẏ land was not the cheefe heritage whereunto the children of Abraham were to attaine. Here therefore wee haue a ſure record, that although the fathers which liued vnder the Lawe had not the heauenly lyfe ſo lightſomly & largely reuealed vnto them: yet did they grounde themſelues thereupon, laboring to attaine therunto, and were not wedded to this world as if that had bin the marke they amed at and that they had bin tyed to it to ſay; Well, God hath choſen and adopted vs to poſſeſſe a good and fatte land, to the intent wee ſhould bee foſtered therein. For if the people had but thought vppon that; what had become of Moſes who was the excellenteſt prophet that euer God rayſed vp vntill the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, as wee ſhall ſee in the laſt Chapter? That is the cauſe why Moſes beheld ẏ land and vewed it a- Deut.34.10. far off. And although hee neuer ate one graine of the corne thereof, nor taſted one drop of the wine: yet did it ſuffice him to ſee that God had not diſappointed his people. It is to bee concluded then, that Moſes had a further forelook, and ſtood not muſing vppon the tranſitorie inheritance, but conſidered full well that when wee be made the children of God, it is to the ende wee ſhoulde liue euerlaſtingly with him. Seeing then that Moſes had that; let vs vnderſtand that the fathers were not without cauſe called the children of God ; which thing they were not, vnleſſe they were heires with vs. And forſomuch as they tended to the heauenly lyfe, (which notwithſtanding was ſhewed to them but afar off;) let vs take the more courage to vs, ſeeing that God is come neerer vnto vs after a more familiar maner, euen in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Therefore let all theſe things moue vs, that our faith may waken vs and withdrawe vs frō all the impedimentes of this world, ſo as we may keepe on our way to the euerlaſting reſt which cannot faile vs.

Now whereas it is ſayd vnto Moſes, that hee ſhall bee gathered vp with his people: hereby our Lord meant, that hee was of neceſſitie to paſſe the common way (as they ſay,) of all mankinde, and that his caſe ſhould be no better than of all the reſt of Adams children. Truely this woulde trouble vs, if there were no more than ſo. But I haue ſpoken already of yͤ ſpecial promiſe whereuppon Moſes was grounded. Neuertheleſſe, our Lord ſhewed him that foraſmuch as he was deſcended of Adams race; it behooued him needes to dye. And this accordeth ſtill with the matter which I ſpeake of euen now, namely that we ſhal neuer take ſufficient taſte of Gods goodnes and promiſes, vntil we be brought low in ourſelues, yͭ we may know our own needines, and what yͤ lyfe is which is promiſed vs, and which we obtein by Ieſus Chriſt. We think not vpon any of all theſe thinges, except we firſt know the death yͭ is purchaſed vnto vs by Adam, & that the ſame dwelleth in vs, and holdeth vs priſoners in his bands. If we knowe not that wee bee curſed of God by nature, and that we haue no other hope but rottenneſſe as touching our bodies; and that as touching our ſoules we be reiected of God, & feele that he is againſt vs, and that he is our Iudge, yͭ he will vtter forth all his maieſtie to our confuſion: Vntil ſuch time as we feele all theſe things, it is certeine that we will neuer ſeeke the remedie that is offered vs in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, nor receiue him with ſuch reuerence as to become lyke poore hungry ſoules. So then we ſee how we haue neede of this warning, that we muſt be gathered vp. With whom? With thoſe which haue gone before vs. And without that, what comfort ſhall wee haue? Leſſe than the brute beaſtes haue. For if we thinke vpon nothing but death; we goe all into rottonnes; our bodies be in no better plight than the bodies of Aſſes and Dogges. And againe as touching our ſoules, we muſt needes bee ſeparated and cut off from God, and feele him to be againſt vs. That then is our ſtate.

And therfore whenſoeuer we heare any ſpeaking of death; let vs by and by bethinke vs of Adams ſin, of the corruption of our nature, and of all the vices that dwell in vs; which ſerue all to cut vs off as rotten members from Gods houſe and kingdome. When wee haue bethought vs thereof, and that we be ſo diſmayed as we know not where to become, for the terror that ſhall haue caught holde of vs: let vs repaire to Ieſus Chriſt, and ſith we knowe that hee is the reſurrection and the lyfe; let vs take courage to offer our ſelues vnto death, and let it not greeue vs to be done away, ſeeing wee haue promiſe that we ſhall be reſtored againe. And ſo, when wee haue bethought vs of all the nations of yͤ world, and of all Adams ofspring: let vs come to the people whom God hath ſanctifyed and choſen to be his heritage. Seeing then that we ſhall be gathered vppe with the righteous, ſurely it is a good gathering, and therein lyeth all our reſt & cōtentation, ſo as death ſhal be ſweete vnto vs. And although wee muſt of neceſſitie paſſe that way, with all other creatures: yet dooth God take vs and keepe vs as his choſen children, and to be ioyned to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who is named the firſt borne from among the dead. And to the intent we ſhould bee the firſt fruites of the reſurrection and of the quicke, hee hath gathered vs to himſelfe, and matched vs with yͤ holy Patriarkes, Prophets, and Apoſtles. That (ſay I) is the thing which ſweeteneth all the ſorrowes that we can conceiue.

Now in the end it is ſayd yet again vnto Moſes, That he ſanctifyed not Gods name among the children of Iſrael, and therefore hee ſhould ſee the Land, euen the Land which God had giuen to his people. Here we haue to marke, that it is not enough for vs to abſteine from doing euill: but that we muſt alſo ſanctifie Gods name, when we ſee men miſuſe it through their leawdneſſe. And in very deede, the chiefe thing that God requireth, is that his Matt.6.9. name ſhould be ſanctifyed: for it is the firſt petition which we make. And by that order, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſheweth vs full well, that wee muſt begin at that point; as for example when he ſaith, Firſt ſeeke yee the kingdome of God, what dooth that ſignify? Matt.6.33. That we ſhould ſeeke to exalt God, that all the world ſhoulde obey him, and that his maieſtie ſhould be knowen, to the end that all prayſe of wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, goodnes, and power might bee attributed vnto him. That is the thing whereunto euery of vs ought to put his indeuour. True it is yͭ we ought in deede to ſanctifie the name of God, that is to ſay, to dedicate our ſelues euery man for himſelf to his ſeruice, ſo as his glory may ſhine forth in vs: but yet is not that enough. For wee ſhall ſee men vnhallowe the name of God, ſome by blaſpheming him, and ſome by ruſhing out into all vices and enormities. Now therefore whē we ſee ſuch thinges, our zeale ought to be kindled to withſtand them to the vttermoſt of our power, & to ſhewe that we deſire nothing more, than that God ſhould bee honored, and abide vnappayred, ſo as men ſhould not abridge him of any thing. When wee haue this zeale, then ſhall we ſanctify Gods name, not onely in our owne ſoules and bodies, but alſo euen among thoſe which doe ſo vnhallowe and defile it. And for that cauſe are we commaunded to be as burning Creſſets in the mideſt of a froward & crooked generation. Phil.2.15. When wee dwell among the vnbeleeuers and enemies of Gods word, or among ſuch as deſpiſe it and make no account of it: then in ſtead of our accuſtomed ſeeking of vaine excuſes, with, I would faine ſerue God, but there are ſo many corruptions, that I muſt needes howle among woolues as they ſay: then (ſay I) is the time for vs to ſtreyne our ſelues ſo much the more, and to enforce our ſelues to ſanctifie ẏ name of God. And where? Euen in ẏ midſt of thoſe among whom we be conuerſant. That is ẏ thing which is ſhewed vs in this place.

True it is that Moſes was moſt bound thereto, becauſe God had choſen him aboue the reſt. Yet neuertheleſſe it behoued euery other man alſo to ſtreine himſelfe thereunto. And let vs vnderſtand, that ſeeing hee taketh vs for his children, wee ought at the leaſt to maintaine his honor as much as wee would doe the honor of our earthly fathers. And for that cauſe it is ſayd, that he and Aaron had tranſgreſſed. Wherby we ſee, that men may well acquit themſelues, and beſprinkle themſelues with holywater as they ſay, but yet muſt they paſſe by the ſentẽce which God hath pronounced; for only he is the competent Iudge. Although then ẏ Moſes was not ware that he had offended, and although alſo ẏ wee cannot diſcouer his offence: yet doeth our Lord ſay ẏ he had offended, ſo as it was not ynough for him not to haue done any euill deede, nor to haue abſteined from murmuring, nor alſo to haue withheld his conſent from the murmurings of the people: but he was a tranſgreſſor in that he was too cowardly & had not ẏ foreſayd inuincible courage that I ſpake of, to ſet himſelfe againſt the miſchiefe, and to ſtoppe it as he ought to haue done.

Nowe for a concluſion we haue yet to marke this ſaying which is added: Thou ſhalt not goe in thither, but thou ſhalt ſee it, euen the land which I giue to the children of Iſraell to poſſeſſe. For here Moſes had occaſion to bee further out of patience, whẽ our Lord exempted him alone, ſaying, All ẏ reſt of this people ſhall inioy ẏ land, but thou ſhalt be ſet beſide it. If we be driuen to indure any cõmon aduerſitie, we make ẏ lighter of it. But if a man be cut off alone, & ſee that God leueleth at none but him; ẏ is much harder and heauier. And at the ſame point was Moſes. But it was Gods will to trye his obedience and ſubiection. Alſo hee meant to ſet vs a faire lookingglaſſe before our eyes, to the intent we ſhould not be prouoked to rebel, though hee deale more roughly with vs than with our fellowes and neighbors. For we be wont alwayes to alledge; How now? Haue I offended more than others? I ſee God dealeth full roughly with me: and yet there are others which are no better than I: and what fault findeth he in me? Such complaintes ſhall a man oftentimes heare. But it is not for vs to looke how God handleth others. Let vs content our ſelues that he knoweth what is meete for vs; and let euery of vs beare his owne burden patiently, and not fall to vſing of ſuch replyes: for we ſhall win nothing thereby. Thus ye ſee what is ſet downe here in the perſon of Moſes, in that he was faine to bee baniſhed out of ẏ land, when all the children of Iſraell and all the reſt of the people went in; among whom neuertheleſſe there were many deſpiſers of God, and many hypocrites, to bee ſhort, they were as a clowte patched together of many peeces. Yet notwithſtanding, as in reſpect of poſſeſſing the land, they were to be preferred before Moſes. And therefore let vs vnderſtand, that when God hath once made vs to enter into the way of ſaluation, it is not enough for vs except wee attaine vnto it, and that for the bringing thereof to paſſe, we hold out to the end.

I haue told you heretofore, that the land of Canaan was as a common Pawne which GOD gaue to all the children of Iſraell, of his calling of them to the inheritance of the heauẽly kingdome, namely to as many as entered into the land, that is to ſay, to thoſe which were newe ſprong vp in ẏ wilderneſſe. For as for thoſe which came out of Egypt, none of them all but onely two, did enter into ẏ land of Canaan. Num.14.29 30. But thoſe which were then little children, as it were about a foure or fiue yeeres old, all thoſe entered in. Neuertheleſſe there were many of them which ſerued not God faithfully, but played the naughtipackes and backſlyders. Whereby we be done to vnderſtand, that ſeeing God hath once reached vs his hand, it behooueth vs to liue in ſuch ſorte, as we quaile not ne turne not our backes vppon him, but continue ſtill in his obedience, ſo as faith may euermore reigne in vs, to withdrawe vs from the luſtes and cares of this world. And although we haue not the land of Canaan at this day for a viſible ſigne: let vs reſort to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who is much more woorth without all compariſon, than the outward inheritance which was giuen to the people of olde time. And ſeeing we be entered into the trace of Ieſus Chriſt, that is to ſay, be put as it were into his body, and he accounteth vs as of his flocke, and is become our ſhepheard: let vs looke that we behaue our ſelues towardes him as ſheepe, hearkening to his voyce, and following him whitherſoeuer he calleth vs. And in ẏ meane while let vs pray this good God, to holde vs ſo vnited to him in the perſon of his onely Sonne, as wee may continually hold out to the end in all holyneſſe and all goodnes, and that at the laſt wee may be gathered vp by him,] not as children of Adam in the generall curſe, but [as children of Abraham] in the promiſe of ſaluation which was made to vs in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, praying him to make vs feele our faultes and offences more and more, and that for the more miſlyking of them, wee may exerciſe our ſelues continually in calling them to our remembrance, and in mourning for them, ſo as hee may haue pitie vpon vs, and not onely forgiue vs all our ſinnes, whereby wee haue offended him, but alſo rid vs cleane of them, and redreſſe vs in ſuch wiſe by his holy ſpirite, as our whole ſeeking may be to dedicate ourſelues vnto him, and that his name may be ſo ſanctified among vs, as that in the end wee may come to his glorie as he hath prepared it for all ſuch as doe here yeeld and ſubmit themſelues to his yoke. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the xx. of Iune, 1556.

The CXCI. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the three & thirtith Chapter.

HEere followeth the bleſſing wherewith Moſes the man of God bleſſed the children of Iſrael before his death, and ſayde:

2 The Lorde came from Sinai, and roſe vp from Seir vnto them. He appeared brightly on mount Pharan, and came with ten thouſands of Saincts, hauing at his right hand the Lawe giuen in fire for them.

3 Yet loueth he the people, and all the Sainctes are in thy hands, and they bow downe to thy feete to receiue of thy wordes.

WEe knowe that Gods word is ordaind chiefly to this vſe, that we ſhoulde be aſſured of ye good wil & loue which he beareth vs. For wt out that alſo there is no hope of ſaluation, wee be vndone, and to be ſhorte, there is no religion. For how ſhall we feare God, vnleſſe wee knowe that all our welfare lies in him, and that we dare ſeeke him with a right faith? But that is vnpoſſible, vnleſſe he call vs vnto him, and that wee haue aſſurance that if wee come vnto him we ſhall be receiued. That is the cauſe why God in all ages ordeined, that thoſe which are the teachers of the people, ſhould bleſſe them in his name, that is to ſay, aſſure them that God receiued them and was mercifull to them. For ſo dooth ye worde Bleſſing import. True it is that wee bleſſe one another by prayer. And when it is ſayd of a priuate perſon, that he bleſſeth his neighbor; it betokeneth that he wiſheth him all good. But there is a ſpeciall kinde of prerogatiue in thoſe whom God hath appointed as in his owne perſon to beare abroad his worde and to preach it. For they in bleſſing are as witneſſes of God and agentes in his behalfe. And in very deede (as we haue ſeene heretofore) as oft as Gods word is preached, it is a ſolemne act whereby he coueanteth with vs. and lyke as he will haue vs to profeſſe our ſelues to be his children, and to giue our ſelues to his ſeruice; ſo dooth hee bind himſelfe to be our father and ſauiour. That is the cauſe why we haue now here ye bleſſinges of Moſes, which he made before his death. And it is lykely that this was thẽ done when he was ready to yeelde vp his ſpirit vnto God. For he had bin commaunded afore to go vp into the mountaine, where he had nothing elſe to doe but to go ſeeke his graue, which notwithſtanding remained vnknowen, as we ſhall ſee hereafter. Deut. 34. 6. At ſuch time as he was to take his leaue of the people, he pronounced theſe bleſſinges here preſent. By what authoritie? As one appointed to yeelde record of Gods good wil. Alſo he ratified that which had bin done before by Iacob, to whome God had giuen the lyke charge & commiſſion. For wee reade of the bleſſinges which Iacob made ouer his children, Gene. 49. how they were not as a houſhold prayer when a father making his laſt will beſeecheth God to bee mercifull to his fatherles children; Iacob went not that way to worke; but being a Patriarke, and knowing whereto God had called him, hee vttered what was to come, accordingly alſo as we ſee how hee ſpeaketh by the ſpirit of Propheſie. And in good ſooth, yee ſee he was a poore man, ſuch a one as was conſtreyned by famine to goe into Egypt; he poſſeſſed not a foot of land in ye whole world, and yet hee aſſigned inheritaunces to his children. Thou ſhalt haue ſuch a portion by the ſea-coaſt; Gen. 49. 1 13, 20. Thou ſhalt haue the paſture grounds; Thou ſhalt be a delicate ſoyle for kinges; ſo as ye bread which ſhall be made there, and ye ſweete fruits of thee ſhal bee their ſtrength; thou ſhalt haue ye royall ſcepter; thou ſhalt be aduanced, & thou ſhalt reigne among thine enemies; As for thee, thou ſhalt be ſcattered, but yet ſhalt thou haue eaſe of body, although thou be faine to remoue here and there. Seeing then that he tooke order after that maner for the land of Canaan, that although he was driuen thence by famine, yet he alotted it out by portions to his children: ſpake he as a mortall man? Let vs knowe then that God gouerned him by his holy ſpirit, and there came not that worde out of his mouth, which was not as a heauenly oracle. Now hereby the people were edifyed, ſo as they knew that God had choſen them with condition that they ſhould enter into the inheritance which he had promiſed them. When the children of Iſraell were in Egypt after the deceaſe of their father, they were by this meanes certifyed yt God had not forgotten his promiſe, but that hee woulde performe it when the time came. They were fed with ye hope; and to hold them thereunto, God had giuen thẽ occaſion enough, if their own vnthãkfulnes had not letted thẽ. This being done, after that they had bin deliuered out of the land of Egypt, and were to inioy the Land which had bin aſſigned them long afore: God made Moſes to ſpeake, and draue him to vtter that which he had determined to doe as touching the childrẽ of Iſraell. And in verie deede, wee ſee that the things which had bin ſpoken afore by Iacob, are partly rehearſed here againe for the larger confirmation of them. And againe, the things which were not reuealed at that time, are ſet downe here; ſo as the people of Iſraell might here beholde their owne ſtate to come, whereby they were taught that God had a ſpeciall care of thẽ. For ſeeing hee declared, firſt by the mouth of Iacob, and ſecondly by the mouth of Moſes, all that hee meant to doe to the people of Iſraell: did hee not ſhewe that hee was neere them, and that hee tooke them to bee as of his flocke, and that hee preferred them before the reſt of the whole worlde? For it was not with them as with thoſe which are ſtraungers to God. Although hee held and accounted thoſe for his creatures; yet did hee not take them for his Children, to gouerne them and to direct all their ſteppes; ſo as nothing ſhoulde befal them but they might know howe it was God that wrought it, who did alſo tell them of it aforehande. Therefore let vs wel remẽber what is conteyned here, as things that proceeded not from a mortall creature, but from God, who witneſſed that he was the father and defendour of his church.

Nowe this concerneth vs. For although wee haue not the like propheſies; yet hath God declared vnto vs, that we be euer vnder his charge, and that he watcheth for our welfare. And wee for our part haue no neede to bee trayned on in knowledge by ſuch meanes, becauſe God hath brought vs alreadie to an other manner of perfection. Therefore let vs holde vs contented with the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, in whoſe perſon the thing is performed which was hoped for vnder the lawe. And therewithall let vs bee fullie reſolued that GOD guideth our ſteppes, and that euen in the middeſt of all the diſorders and troubles which are ſeene in the worlde, his Church is ſtill deare and pretious vnto him. And in good ſooth wee ſee that before Dan. cap. 7. & 8. Ieſus Chriſt came into the worlde, Daniell diſcouered all the chaunges which ſhoulde bee made, becauſe it might elſe haue ſeemed, that God had gone from his couenaunt a hundred times within the ſpace of foure hundred yeares, and that all ſhoulde haue goone in ſuch wiſe to wrecke, as if God had forſaken that people, and been minded to haue no more to do with them. It was requiſite therfore that theſe things ſhould bee foretolde, that the faithfull might knowe that although they were ſhaken and toſſed to and fro; yet were they ſtill in the hande of God; and that when they ſawe the kingdomes chaunged rounde about them, and the worlde ſo turned vpſide downe as a man coulde not diſcerne anie thing in it; yet they ſhoulde alwayes be aſſured of that which God had promiſed them, namely of his ſending of his ſonne to redeeme them, and ÿ they ſhould by that meanes bee reſtored, euen after ÿ vtter deſolation of al things among them. Thus ſee wee now the vſe of this Song.

Now whereas it is ſaide That it was Moſes the man of God that bleſſed the children of Iſraell: that title was giuen to Moſes as in reſpect that hee was the inſtrument of the holie Ghoſt. Then ſpeake hee not of his owne motion, there is not anie thing ſpoken here after the fleſhe, but as proceeding from a man of God. And hereby wee be the better taught, to imbrace the record that is giuen vs here, as if God proteſted with his owne mouth that hee had a care of his people, and that he would euermore continue his goodneſſe and gratious fauour towardes them. For in deed there was a bleſſing made by the Prieſts in the time of the lawe, according to this ſaying, Bleſſe yee, you that bee of the houſe of the Lorde. And it is the ſame thing which is written in the ſixth Chapter of the booke of Psal. 118. 26. Numbers [where it is ſaide] that they Numb. 6. 23. which doe ſacrifice to GOD, ſhall bleſſe the people in his name. And truely, where the Prieſtes and the tribe of Leuie are ſpoken of, this alſo is added, To whom the Lorde hath giuen Leuit. 9. 22. the charge of Bleſſing the people. And this thing is not aboliſhed at this day. For our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt had in his perſon the thinges that were figured in olde time vnder the Lawe. Let vs knowe then that noweadayes there is one euerlaſting bleſſing of God, which is much better witneſſed vnto vs, than all the bleſſinges that were ſo often repeated vnder the law; inſomuch that as nowe God telleth vs by his onely ſonne that hee taketh vs into his fauour, and that wee bee as his children, and that the preaching of the Goſpell ſerueth vs to that ende, and wee muſt applie it to that vſe. So then, whenſoeuer wee come to heare the worde of God, let vs call to minde howe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt at his going vp into heauen, did lift vp his handes ouer his diſciples and bleſſe them as is reported by Saint Luke. And that was done to make vs knowe what his office is, and to doe vs to vnderſtande Luk. 24. 50. that at this day when the Goſpell is preached in his name, it is all one as if hee ſhoulde ſay, Beholde, my father accepteth you, you be in his fauour. Nowe then, ſeeing we haue this, ought it not to make vs to loue the Goſpel, conſidering that therein wee bee bleſſed by the mouth of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, as in whoſe name and by whoſe authoritie that doctrine is treated of? Let vs vnderſtande therefore, that if it behoued the fathers vnder the Lawe to bee contented with the bleſſing that was giuen them by Moſes, by the Prieſtes, and by Iacob: if wee nowadayes bee faithleſſe, and admit not the recorde with full certeintie which is giuen vs in the Goſpell; wee bee worſe than vnexcuſable, becauſe wee deface the trueth of Gods ſonne, and (as much as in vs lyeth) accuſe him of lying, as though hee were not a ſure and infallible witneſſe of the will of GOD his father. And when wee compare Moſes who is called a man of God, with our Lord Ieſus Chriſt who hath ÿ whole ſoueraigntie of Gods houſe, as the Apoſtle ſaith: Hebr. 3. 2. wee may bee yet the better aſſured that he hath bleſſed vs at this day, and that hee vttereth vnto vs the loue of God his father; and therfore let our faith be ſo much the better certified, ſeeing it behoued this title of Moſes to content the people of olde time.

Nowe it is added, That he did it a little before his death. The worde which he vſeth, is as much to ſay, as hee did it before his death. So then, by theſe wordes, Before his death, is not meant a yeare or two, no nor yet a moneth, but at his death time, euen when hee was to die. And theſe bleſſinges are therefore of ſo much the more authoritie. For wee knowe that when a man makes his laſt will, it ſhall bee better receyued than the things which he ſpake during his life. Although then ẏ Moſes ſerued God as a Prophet and teacher all his life long, and had diſcharged his duetie faithfully: yet neuertheleſſe his minde was to vtter theſe bleſſinges at the time of his death, to the ende they ſhould be the better receiued, and men conſider thus: Beholde Moſes being readie to departe out of the world, hath told vs of the things that are to come: hee hath not doone it at aladuenture nor vnaduiſedly; but hee hath fully and wholy performed that which was inioyned him. To the intent therefore that the people ſhoulde receyue thoſe bleſſinges the better; this circumſtance is expreſſely added, That he did it at the houre of his death. But we at this day haue a farre better and more excellent confirmation, in that we be bleſſed by the mouth of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For he hath not onely doone it at his death, but alſo hath ſealed Gods fatherly loue and adoption towards vs, I ſay ſealed them with his precious bloude, and alſo with his riſing againe from the dead. Seeing then that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath bleſſed his diſciples, to the end we ſhould know that his office is to do the ſame to vs, and that his Church ſhall be bleſſed by his power euen to the worlds end, and that he hath done it by ratifying it with his owne death and paſſion, and by his riſing againe to get vs victorie againſt the diuell, to the intent that all the curſedneſſe which we take as it were by inheritance by reaſon of our father Adam, ſhoulde be aboliſhed: ſeeing that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath ſo ratified all thinges: let vs learne to magnifie the fatherlie goodnes of our God ſo much the more: and ſeeing he hath told vs that we ſhal be bleſſed, let vs be the better aſſured thereof by all theſe circumſtances.

And becauſe it behooued the people of olde time to knowe that Moſes ſpake not in his owne perſon but by the authoritie of God: he addeth, God came from Synai, his comming foorth was from Seir, hee ſhewed himſelfe vpon Mount Pharan. Here Moſes ſetteth Gods preſence before the eyes of the people, after the ſame maner that it had bin knowen vpon Mount Sinay, at the time of the publiſhing of the law. For he ſpeaketh not of the Wonders which had beene wrought in Egypt, neither ſpeaketh he of ẏ Miracles that had bin wrought by the ſpace of fortie yeares in the wildernes: but his meaning is to bring them backe againe to the Law, to make them ſtay and reſt there. For ſurely when the doctrine thereof ſlippeth from vs, all Gods miracles will doe vs no good. We may well muſe vpon him; but all ſhall be but confuſed imagination, ſo as euerie of vs ſhal turne away to ſuperſtition and Idolatrie. To be ſhort, it will be vnpoſſible to be truely vnited vnto God, and to ſticke vnto him ſtedfaſtlie, otherwiſe, than by the bonde of his worde, ſo as wee be reſtreyned by his teaching of vs, & that we hearken to his talke. And why? For we be ful of lying: and therefore it behoueth vs to receiue the trueth of him. That is the cauſe why Moſes ſaith nowe, That God came from Sinay, that he ſhewed himſelfe vpon Mount Pharan, and that for his people, he came forth from Mount Seir. For mount Pharan and mount Seir were neere to mount Sinay. Therefore hee meaneth one and the ſelfe ſame thing: but yet it ſerueth to imprint ẏ woonderfull comming foorth, the better in the remembrance of the people, & to make them to thinke continualy after what maner God appeared vnto them, and ſhewed them his maieſtie viſible. Not that they ſawe him in his being, for that is vnpoſſible: but that they ſawe the ſignes and tokens whereby they knewe howe it was God that cauſed the lawe to bee ſet forth by Moſes. And indeed we cannot ſee God as he is, but he ſheweth himſelfe to vs according to our abilitie and groſſeneſſe. Yet notwithſtanding, the people of Iſraell did eaſily perceiue at that time, that God was there, and that it was his will to haue the power of his glorie knowen. And truelie we ſee howe the Prophets made their benefite of this text of Moſes. For when they ſawe the people variable and ſtarting too and fro, ſo as they were not ſufficiently ſetled in the true religion: they did euer put them in minde of thoſe ſignes and wonders which were wrought at the publiſhing of the lawe. And the Prophet Abacucke doeth in his ſong expreſſely borrowe theſe wordes of Abac.3.3. Moſes. For he ſaith that God came from mount Theman, and appeared vppon mount Pharan. No doubt but hee had reſpect to that which Moſes ſaith here, as though he ſhoulde haue ſpoken thus to the people which were then ſcattered aſunder. Yee wretched people, why holde you not yourſelues vnder the protectiõ of your God ſeeing he hath once called you, and ſhewed him ſelfe to bee your heade, and woulde haue you to bee his bodie? Ye haue ſeene him vppon mount Pharan, that is to ſay, vpon mount Sinay. There his glorie ſhone forth in ſuch wiſe, as yee could not but know that he hath authoriſed the lawe, and made a couenaunt with you to knit you vnto himſelfe. And why then ſhoulde yee now ſtart away, and become as members rent a ſunder?

Nowe ſeeing that the Prophetes vſed this doctrine after that maner; it ought well to ſerue to teach vs likewiſe nowadayes. Therefore whereas it is ſaid that God came from mount Sinay; let vs vnderſtand that ſeeing he hath approued and authoriſed his law by the viſible ſignes and miracles which were ſeene at ẏ time: we at this day ought to receiue the law with like reuerence as if god were before our eyes: & whenſoeuer his word is preached vnto vs, it is all one as if he opened his hart, & ſhewed vs his wil,& that there were mutuall and (as they terme it)interchaungeable communication betwixt vs. The end(ſay I)whereunto Gods word ſhould ſerue vs, is that he might common with vs and we with him,yea and that ſo familiarlie, as if hee came downe to vs becauſe we cannot mount vp to him,ſo as hee is faine to ſhewe that his comming foorth is for our ſakes. True it is that we ſhall not ſee the aire on fire,wee ſhall not ſee the fire burning on the mountaine,we ſhal not heare the thunder roaring nor the trumpets ringing in the aire: but it muſt ſuffice vs that thoſe things were once done to the intent that the lawe ſhoulde haue his authoritie euen to the worldes ende, and that all the miracles which were ſeene at that time, ſhoulde be ingraued in the lawe of God. Againe, it ought to ſuffice vs that God moued both heauen and earth at the publiſhing of the Goſpell: inſomuch that as then his power was yet better vttered; and moreouer his maieſtie hath beene ſeene in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, whereby hee was prooued to bee the onely ſon of God. Seeing that all theſe things are knowen vnto vs; let not our vnbeleefe keepe vs from receiuing his worde with feare and lowlineſſe at this day,which is ſo well warrãted vnto vs. Thus yee ſee what we haue to gather vppon this text, where it is ſaid that God ſhewed himſelfe from Mount Seir. And truely after the warninges of Moſes did once beare ſway; the children of Iſrael did not then any more ſee the mountaines of Seir, Theman, and Sinay; neither was it lawfull for them to returne into the wildernes; but the remẽbrance of thoſe things ought to ſerue their turne for euer. And ſothly, it was not enough for thoſe which had ſeene thoſe thinges, to bee able to ſpeake of them: but it behooued the fathers to teach their children, that they alſo might vnderſtand that GOD had appeared vnto them, and that by that meanes the law might alwayes bee ratified. Sith it is ſo, let vs vnderſtande that wee alſo at this day ought to occupie our ſelues in the minding of the ſame things.

Nowe it is ſayde expreſſely, That Gods comming foorth is for the People. This ſerueth to expreſſe the mutuall communion whereof I haue ſpoken. For it is not enough for God to ſhewe himſelfe or to come foorth: but his comming foorth muſt bee for vs; that is to ſay, to make vs to knowe that hee calleth vs vnto him, and that it is his will to bee knit vnto vs in mutual bonde. And that ought well to touch vs yet further. For the worde which is giuen vnto vs, ſerueth not onely to make vs vnderſtande that there is a GOD in heauen, and that hee hath the ſouereintie ouer all his creatures: but alſo is a pledge that hee will dwell with vs. And foraſmuch as God is inuiſible, ſo as wee comprehende not any thing of him, becauſe it is too high and hidden a thing: when wee haue his worde, wee may beholde him there as in his liuelie image, and ſee him as hee ſheweth himſelfe. And therefore let vs learne; that when our Lorde ſendeth vs his word, he not onely intendeth to aduaunce his maieſtie, but alſo doeth verily renewe his couenaunt to the intent that wee alſo on our ſide might approche vnto him. And thereby wee bee doone to vnderſtande that if wee endeuour to profite in Gods woorde, wee will come vnto it with a right meaning and pure minde, ſo that when God ſheweth himſelfe, we muſt not be afraide as the Papiſtes are, which thinke it to bee too darke a thing. Such doubtes muſt not keepe vs from profiting in the ſchoole of our God, aſſuring our ſelues yͭ he for his part will not fayle vs, but that he wil make vs to perceiue yͭ he ſpeaketh not in vaine, but in ſuch wiſe as we may know yͭ hee is neere vs, and that his countenance ſhall ſhine vpon vs. It is ſaide, That he appeared with ten thouſand of ſainctes.

Some haue taken this for the children of Iſraell as that God came thither with them. And they call them Saintes, becauſe God had ſhouled them out to himſelfe, notwithſtanding that the greater number of them was wicked and vnholie. But there is no reaſon in that, that ſo great a multitude as ſeuen hundred thouſande men or there aboutes, ſhould be termed ten thouſande. No doubt therefore but Moſes ſpeaketh here of Angels. And truely when the holy ſcripture intendeth to ſet Gods maieſtie before our eyes; it doth always ad yͭ he is garded with his heauenly hoſtes, and yͭ he hath his angels with him, which are thouſandes of thouſandes. For wee muſt not ſtand altogether vpon the certaine number, becauſe yͤ ſcripture ſpeaketh ſparely of the thinges that are inuiſible. And ſo a number certaine ſhal be put for an infinite number, as if it had bin ſaid yͭ God appeared euen with his heauenly Angels which ſerued to teſtifie his glory yͤ better. True it is yͭ if the maieſtie of God bee ſet ſingle before vs, it ought wel to ſuffice vs: and in good ſooth, can the creatures ad any thing vnto it? No ſurely: but yͭ is ſpoken for our infirmities ſake. For when God ſaith, Here am I; it toucheth vs not yet ſufficiently, and therefore it behoueth him to ſet himſelfe foorth as in his ſouereintie, & to ſhewe by his angels yͭ he hath a dreadful dominion, & that he hath his vertues & powers ſhed foorth eueriwhere. For we know yͭ his Angels are created to execute whatſoeuer he hath ordeined; ſo yͭ they be as his hands, whereby he worketh and performeth whatſoeuer he liſteth. To yͤ end then doth Moſes expreſſely ſay, yͭ God appeared here, euen with a ten thouſand of Saincts. And wee ſee alſo how the law was giuen by yͤ hands of Angels, as S. Stephen declareth in yͤ ſeuenth of the Acts. Likewiſe when S. Paul in yͤ Epiſtle to the Galathians, intendeth to ſhew yͭ God appeared to authoriſe his law the better; he ſetteth downe that the Angels were witneſſes therunto. Were there then ten thouſand witneſſes preſent at the publiſhing of the law? What a thing is it then, if mẽ beleeue it not, ne receiue it not without gainſaying? If a bargaine bee paſſed before three witneſſes, and ſigned by a Notarie: it is of authoritie, and there is no pleading againſt it. And how was the lawe giuen? God appeared thereat in his maieſtie, yea and Ieſus Chriſt who was the heade of the Angels, was he that gaue yͤ law, as Saint Paul ſheweth in the place which I alledged euen nowe. Looke me vppon Moſes on the other ſide. Hee was glorified after ſuch a ſort, as hee ſeemed not to be anie more of the number of men. God made his face to ſhine as if there Exo.34.30. had beene Sunnebeames thereon, ſo that hee was well ſeene to be a man ſent of God. Againe it ſkilled not for two or three witneſſes: for there were tenne thouſande Angels, there was an infinite number, there were Gods armies to mayntaine the authoritie of the Lawe. And what account is to bee made of men which are but dung, when they will needes deface it, and come to quarell againſt it? Howe ſhall they be conuicted? So then, let vs make all thinges auaylable to the confirmation of our faith, and let vs aſſure our ſelues that in receyuing the doctrine which is conteyned in the law of God, we ſhall agree with all the Angels of heauen, and they will aunſwere Amen to our faith, and bee faithfull witneſſes before God, that we haue not beleeued at aladuenture, but that wee haue bin wel grounded. Thus ye ſee to what purpoſe this text ought to ſerue vs. And ſo we ſee ẏ Moſes had here good cauſe, to make mention of the infinite multitude of Angels, which were witneſſes vnto God at ſuch time as hee ſhewed himſelfe to be the author of the Law.

Now it is added afterwarde, That the Lawe of fire, (or the fire of the lawe) was in his right hand. Wee ſee here againe the thing which I haue declared already; namely that al ẏ euer Moſes hath ſpoken concerning the maieſtie of God, is done to the ende that the Lawe ſhoulde not bee receyued as a doctrine deuiſed by Moſes; but that wee ſhoulde conſider that God auoweth it, and that hee hath ſhewed that it proceeded from him. And Moſes doeth purpoſely terme it a law of fire, becauſe the aire was then all on a flame. The burning of the fire then, was as a marke wherewith God ſealed his lawe, as though hee had rauiſhed the people, and ſhewed them that they were not anie more as vppon the earth beneath; but that they were lifted vp aboue the corruptible thinges of the worlde. Therefore let vs beare well in minde, that the Lawe is termed Fire, becauſe that by that meanes GOD made the preſence of his maieſtie the better knowen. And herewithall let vs alſo marke wel what is ſaide concerning the nature of the lawe and of the whole worde of God: howe it is a conſuming fire. For it muſt needes bee aunſwerable to the nature of him from whom it commeth. When the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Heb.4.12.13 Hebrewes ſheweth vs what the nature of Gods worde is, after hee hath declared that it ranſaketh mens heartes, that it ſifteth their thoughts and affections, and that it tryeth men to the quick: he ſaith ẏ there is nothing hidden therefro. And why? For it is Gods will that it ſhoulde haue as it were his office. Seeing then that our Deut.4.24. Lorde is tearmed a conſuming fire; let vs note that his worde alſo muſt needes be as fire. And that was ſhewed by a viſible token, when it was Exod.19.18 giuen foorth vppon Mount Sinay: and it behoueth vs alſo to be prepared and readie to receiue the ſame. Moreouer wee muſt ſuffer GOD to purge vs and cleanſe vs by the fire of his worde; and if we will not ſuffer our ſelues to be ſo purged; ſurely God will worke after an other faſhion towardes vs, according to this ſaying of his by his Prophete Eſay, Is not my worde as a conſuming fire, and this people as ſtubble? Let vs Eſa.5.24. mark wel then, that ſeeing Gods word is called a conſuming fire; if we bee as ſtubble or chaffe, wee ſhall incontinently bee conſumed thereby. And therefore let vs pray God that wee may be as golde and ſiluer, that we may abide the fining, and be put to the vſe of his owne ſeruice. Howeſoeuer we fare, let vs alwayes marke that the Lawe is not a deade letter, otherwiſe than that men do quench it through their vnthankfulneſſe: and yet for all that, it is not named a lawe of fire without cauſe. For it ſerueth to ſhew that if wee receiue it not with ſuch reuerence & authoritie as is due vnto it; it ſhall not fayle to doe the office of fire towardes vs, to conſume vs. And therefore let vs learne to bowe in ſuch wiſe vnder the worde of God, and to yeelde ſuch ſubiection vnto it, as wee may without anie replying, receiue whatſoeuer is conteyned in it, and not open our mouthes but to ſay Amen, and to giue our conſent to all that euer our Lorde appointeth.

Nowe Moſes addeth immediately; That GOD loueth the people, and that the Saintes are in his hand. True it is that heere is ſome chaunge. For, worde for worde it is ſayde, Yet notwithſtanding God loueth the People, Or, The true God loueth the people. For the word which Moſes vſeth, importeth both. His Sainctes are in thy hands. Here hee altereth the perſon. For when as he ſaith, his Sainctes; no doubt but hee referreth it vnto God. Therefore hee ſhoulde ſay, Are in his hande. But this maner of ſpeaking is rife enough in the ſcripture, ſo as wee ought not to thinke it ſtraunge. The meaning of Moſes then is eaſie enough, namely that albeit God loue all people, yet that his Saintes are in his charge or protection, yea euen thoſe whome hee hath choſen. Vnleſſe a man will refer theſe wordes, the People, to the twelue tribes: but that were harde and conſtreyned. Moſes then doeth here compare all men and all the Nations of the earth with the linage of Abraham which God had choſen: as if hee ſhoulde ſay, that Gods grace is ſpreade out euerie where, as wee our ſelues ſee, and as the ſcripture alſo witneſſeth in other places. And not onely men are partakers of this goodneſſe of God, and are fed and mayntayned by his liberalitie: but he doeth alſo ſhew himſelfe bountifull euen to the brute beaſtes. Euen thither doeth his mercie extende according to this ſaying of the Pſalme, Who maketh Pſal.104.14. the fieldes and mountaines to bring foorth graſſe for the feeding of Cattell, but God who hath a care of them? Seeing then that GOD vouchſafeth to haue ſo mercifull regarde of the beaſtes which hee hath created, as to giue them foode; it is much more to bee thought that he will bee a foſter father to men, whom hee hath made and ſhaped after his owne image, which approche neerer vnto him, and which haue a thing farre excelling aboue all other creatures. God then doth loue all people. Yea, but yet not in compariſon of his Church. And why? For all the children of Adam are enemies vnto God by reaſon of the corruption that is in thē. True it is that God loueth them as his creatures: but yet he muſt needes hate them, becauſe they be peruerted and giuen to all euill. And that is the cauſe why the ſcripture telleth vs that God repented him that euer he made man, conſidering that he is ſo marred. And in the ſame reſpect alſo is it ſayde, that we be baniſhed out of Gods kingdome, that we be his enemies, that he ſhaketh vs off and diſclaymeth vs, that he abhorreth vs, that wee bee the children of wrath, and that we be ſo corrupted, as there remaineth nothing but vtter confuſion vppon our heades. When the ſcripture ſpeaketh ſo, it is to ſhewe vs that although God for his part be fauorable and merciful to vs, for ſomuch as we be his creatures: yet notwithſtanding we deſerue well to be diſclaymed and hated at his hande, and that he ſhould not vouchſafe to haue a care of vs. Now then, whereas God loueth vs, let vs vnderſtand that he ouercommeth our naughtineſſe with his goodneſſe, which is infinite. Howebeit as I haue touched already, his louing of other men is nothing in compariſon of thoſe whom he hath choſen and whome he acknowledgeth for his children. Now then, doeth he loue all people? Yet are we in his hande: that is to ſay, hee will ſhewe that we be farre neerer vnto him, and that he hath much more familiar acquaintance with vs beyonde all compariſon, than he hath with all the reſt of the worlde. For he hath called vs into his houſe, he dwelleth among vs, he will be knowen to be our father, he will haue vs to call vpon him with full truſt and libertie, ſo as we neede not to dout but that his power is ſpred out to defende vs. Lo how Moſes ment to magnifie Gods goodneſſe in this place, after the maner that he hath made himſelfe to be felt in his Church and to his flocke.

Gen 6.6.

Col.1.21.

Eph.2.3.

Nowe ſith it is ſo, let vs learne to benefite our ſelues by this ſentence; and whenſoeuer wee open our eyes, let it be to beholde the bountifulneſſe of God, who ſheweth himſelfe both aboue and beneath by his goodneſſe. We ſee howe the brute beaſtes are ſuſtained by his hand: and therein we ought to conſider what his goodnes is. Againe, as touching the wicked which deſpiſe him, and doe nothing elſe but prouoke his wrath; when yet for all that, wee ſee the Sunne ſhine vpon them to giue them light, they eate and drinke, and they bee maintayned at Gods coſt, & by his liberalitie: let vs conſider that although men deſerue to be vtterly forſaken; yet notwithſtanding God ſpareth them & beareth with them, and ouercommeth their wickedneſſe with his goodneſſe, in that he rooteth them not out at the firſt, but vouchſafeth to foſter thē ſtill, and to ſhewe a fatherly care towardes them. Let vs conſider theſe thinges, that we may be rauiſhed with wonderment, and glorifie God for his mercy, which is knowen and apparaunt vnto vs euerywhere. And thereupon let vs come to our ſelues, and conſider ẏ ſeeing God hath called vs to the knowledge of his trueth: it is all one as if he had adopted vs to be his children. Ye ſee thē that we be ſanctified by him. True it is, that in reſpect of nature we be no better thā other men: yea and there are yet ſtill ſo many wantes & imperfections in vs, as is pitie to ſee. But yet doth our Lord accept vs for his children, when we receiue his word by faith, & doe ſtedfaſtly beleeue that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath not ſuffered his paſſion in vaine, but that as we be reconciled to God his father by his meanes, ſo he wil gouernē vs ſtill. If we be fully perſwaded hereof, let vs not dout but that God will acknowledge vs and auowe vs to be of the company of his Saints: & that ſeeing we be vnder his cuſtody, he wil guide vs and keepe vs vnder his wings and in his protection. And ſo we ſee that Moſes ſpake not for the children of Iſrael only, but meant that Gods Church ſhould receiue common cōfort thereof to the worldes ende, to the intent ẏ being troubled with ſo many ſtormes and tempeſtes, and hauing ſo many perils before our eyes, & being ſo often threatned with deth; we ſhould yet notwithſtanding haue ſure footing, and not ceaſe to faſten our eyes vpon the ſafegarde of God. And ſeeing it is ſo that he ſheweth his loue euen to the vnbeleeuers, let vs not dout but he will make vs to perceiue, that his hande is ſtrong & mightie ynough to maintaine and defende vs, euen though it ſeeme to vs that we ſhould periſh euery minute of an houre.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to correct vs more & more, and to forgiue vs the offences and ſinnes wherof we be guiltie before him: & that foraſmuch as it pleaſeth him to edifie vs dayly by his worde, we may be ready to receiue it, and hee make vs to perceiue the maieſtie which is therein, and that we may continually acknowledge that it is hee that ſpeaketh vnto vs, euen to certifie vs of his will, and of the hope of our ſaluation, ſo as wee may be drawen to the feare & obedience of him, and more and more profit therein, euen vntill we ſee him face to face, whereas wee ſee him nowe but in that mirrour or lookingglaſſe which hee ſetteth before vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Munday the xxix. of Iune, 1556

The CXCII. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

3 They bowe downe to thy feete, to receiue of thy wordes.

4 Moſes hath commaunded vs the Lawe for an inheritaunce, vnto the congregation of Iacob.

5 And was as a king among the righteous, when they gathered the heades of the people together, together with the tribes of Iſrael.

6 Let Ruben liue and not die, and let his people be fewe in number.

7 As touching Iuda he ſayde, O Lorde God, hearken to the voyce of Iuda, and bring him in to his people: let his handes ſuffiſe him, becauſe thou wilt bee his helpe againſt his enemies.

Heeretofore Moſes had exhorted the people to receiue the Lawe with all obedience: for he hadde ſayde that they did caſt themſelues downe at Gods feete. And it is a kind of ſpeech that is verie riſe in the Hebrewe tongue, becauſe the man that is a learner ſitteth downe at his maiſters feete to receiue learning at his hande. Nowe we haue ſeene howe it behooued the people to bee as it were at Gods feete. To what ende? To heare the woordes of his mouth. And heereby we ſee that GOD hath the whole ſouereinetie in his Church, and that although he ſpeake by the mouthes of mortall men, yet doth not that abate any whitte of his right, that men ſhould therefore vſurpe his authoritie, or thruſt themſelues into his place; but that they ought to deliuer the thinges faithfully which they haue receiued of him. To be ſhort, heere it is ſhewed vs that the Church of God is to be guyded alonely by his worde, and not by the thinges which men ſhall haue dreamed and deuiſed of their owne heades. And heerewithall we be alſo exhorted to obey God, and not to ſtriue againſt him when he ſpeaketh to vs, but to ſtoope and to yeelde ourſelues wholly to that which he ſayeth. At a worde, heere wee bee brought backe from the bondage of men, to the ende that our fayth ſhould not depende vppon this man or ẏ man, but be grounded vpon God. And by the way it is ſhewed vs, that it is our dutie to humble ourſelues vnto God, and to profit vnder his worde and in his ſchoole, ſo as wee may ſuffer our ſelues to be gouerned by his doctrine.

Nowe heereupon it followeth, That Moſes gaue the Lawe for an inheritaunce to the Congregation of Iſraell. This ſerueth to expreſſe better what worde it is whereof he had made mention. For euery man can well ynough graunt that GOD deſerueth well to be hearde and obeyed: and the wickeddeſt folke in the worlde will magnifie Gods worde; but in the meane while there are very fewe which by their deedes doe ſhewe themſelues throughly willing to doe that which they ſay. And why? They woulde haue God to come downe from heauen, and to ſende vs his Angelles to tell vs his will. But he will trie our fayth after another faſhion. True it is that he ratified his Lawe in olde time, and ſhewed that it came from heauen, and that it was not deuiſed by men. But nowe hee will haue his Lawe preached vnto vs by meanes of men, and that the ſame ſhalbe of as great force, as if hee himſelfe were preſent in his own being and maieſtie. As for the Goſpell, wee knowe it hath had his confirmation, and that it is not for vs to dout whether it be Gods trueth or no. But now, what are they that bring vs the Goſpell? They be mortall creatures, ſo as this treaſure (as ſayth 2.Cor.4.7. Saint Paule) is in brittle veſſelles; like as if a man ſhould put a two or three thouſande Crownes into a potte that is not woorth aboue a cupple of pence, euen ſo is it in that our Lorde will haue the doctrine of ſaluation which is an ineſtimable benefite, to be declared vnto vs by men like our ſelues, which beare no great ſhowe, nor are of any eſtimation to the worldewarde: and yet notwithſtanding he will haue his worde to be of as great eſtimation among vs, as if he himſelfe were perſonally preſent with vs. And for that cauſe he ſayeth, He that heareth you, heareth Luke.10.16. me, and he that refuſeth you, refuſeth me. For in that place, our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ment not to exalt men: but to ſhewe that Gods worde ought not to be the leſſe eſteemed, although there bee no man to giue eſtimation thereto. For we muſt not haue an eie to the meſſenger, but to him that ſendeth him. So then, we ſee how Moſes hauing ſpoken of Gods worde, and hauing ſhewed that they which call themſelues faithfull, ought to ſubmit themſelues thereto; addeth, Moſes gaue the Lawe, meaning thereby that we neede not to goe to the newfounde Iles to ſeeke Gods worde, nor to paſſe ouer the ſea (as we haue ſeene already,) nor to goe downe into the bottome of Deut.30.12 the earth; but that Gods worde is in our mouth and in our heart, at leaſtwiſe if GOD worke there by his holy ſpirite. For well might we haue our eares beaten therewith, but our heartes ſhould not be touched at all, vnleſſe God gaue force thereto. But when our Lord inlighteneth vs, and maketh vs to feele that it is he that ſpeaketh; then haue we his word in our heart; and againe, we haue it alſo in our mouth, to confeſſe it to be the infallible trueth. And if we ſet our delight therein, wee ſhall no more ſtand in doubt whether it were beſt for vs to receiue it or not, but wee ſhall be fully reſolued thereof. Wherefore let vs learne by this text, that if we will honor God and obey him, and quietly receiue both his lawe and his Goſpell when they bee preached vnto vs by the mouths of men: we muſt not forbeare to doe him the honor to ſubmit our ſelues vnto him, although hee appeare not after a viſible maner, ne ſend vs his Angels from heauen. For it is a true tryall of our faith, when for the honor of him, we forbeare not to accept of men which cary not any great countenance, nor haue any eſtimation at all. That is the thing which we haue to beare away here in the firſt place.

Now immediatly he ſaith that the lawe belongeth vnto vs, becauſe it ſerueth for the whole congregation of Iſraell. For we knowe that God hath gathered vs together with the Iewes, and that in the end when they had ſhut out and baniſhed themſelues from the promiſe of ſaluation, we ſucceeded in their place. Seeing it is ſo, looke what was ſpoken concerning the children of Iſraell, which were come of the race of Abraham as in reſpect of the fleſh: ẏ ſame ought to be applyed vnto vs at this day. And therefore it is no ſuperfluous ſpeech, when it is ſayde that the Law was giuen. Let vs learne then, ẏ ſeeing our Lord will haue vs to receiue his word, aſſuring our ſelues that it is ſpoken to vs, and dedicated to vs for the health of our ſoules, it is not as a ſeed that is throwen into the ayre; but that God ſpeaketh in ſuch wiſe, as he ſheweth that it is for our profit to be ſo taught, and that he will ſo approch vnto vs, as we may be knit vnto him. Now then whereas we haue heard, that folke muſt caſt themſelues downe at Gods feete to heare his word: let vs vnderſtand ẏ wee be thoſe folke. Sith we know that Gods word lyeth and conſiſteth in his lawe; let vs aſſure ourſelues that it is the treaſure & benefite which God hath prepared for ẏ food and ſuſtenance of his children ark.7.27. accordingly alſo as he ſpeaketh thereof to the woman of Chanaan, where he ſaith ẏ men muſt not giue the bread of children vnto dogs. True it is that at ẏ time we were as dogs, ẏ is to ſay, al the heathen men of ẏ world were reiected. And our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſheweth, ẏ as in reſpect of our firſt ſtate, we be no more worthy to be partakers of this benefite; than a dogge is to go to a mans table. None but the children are to take their ſuſtenance and refection there. Howbeit foraſmuch as at this day God hath called vs, & we be his true Church & flocke; this breade is therwithal giuen vs for our ſuſtenãce. And therfore let vs not ſuffer Gods word to ſlip away, whẽ it is preached vnto vs, but let euery of vs applie it to our vſe.

And Moſes declareth expreſly that it is for an inheritance to the Church of Iſrael, to do thẽ to vnderſtand ẏ it was not giuen for a time, but to the intent it ſhold be receiued frõ age to age, and ẏ al men ſhold giue thẽſelues to it, ſo as there might be one conſent of faith betweene the fathers and the children, accordingly as it is ſaide thereof in the ſong of Zacharie, & as the Prophet Malachie alſo had ſayde thereof afore. Mal.4.6. Luk.1.17.18 Let vs marke then, that this worde Inheritance, or Heritage importeth a perpetuitie of Gods word, ſo as it muſt not bee receiued alonely by ſuch as liue at ſome one time, and afterward bee buryed: but the fathers muſt haue a care to make their children agree thereunto after their deceaſe, that all men may obey God and honor him to the ende. If a man haue goods, he will keepe them with great care for his children; and when he dyeth he is well apayd that he leaueth them not vnprouided for, but that they may haue ſome inheritance. But in the meane while we conſider not which is the principal good thing which ought to be left to thoſe which come after vs: which is that they may be partakers of Gods adoption, and accounted among the company of his children. That is the cauſe why Moſes warneth here ẏ people which had bin duely trayned vp in Gods word, that it ſerued not for them alone, but ẏ God bound thẽ to leaue the ſame inheritance in poſſeſſion to their poſteritie, and would haue his Lawe to be knowen continually, & that it ſhould abide frõ age to age in full force and authoritie for euer. And therefore whẽſoeuer we come to a Sermõ; let vs vnderſtand ẏ our Lord calleth vs to him, to the intent that our childrẽ ſhould be drawen Gen.17.7. 1.Cor.7.14. thither with vs. And foraſmuch as he of his infinite goodnes receiueth them afore they bee borne, and declareth that he will be their father and Sauiour, and putteth them aforehand into the aray and company of his, accordingly alſo as they be baptiſed in ẏ vertue of that promiſe: needs muſt we be worſe than vnthankful, if we haue not a care to teach them, whẽ they come to diſcretion: and let vs aſſure our ſelues that this inheritance is oftẽ loſt through the leawdnes of men, or through their careleſnes and coldnes, ſo as their childrẽ are depriued thereof. We ſee what is happened to the world. Wee ſee the horrible diſorder which hath bin euery where, and is yet ſtill in a number of countries, which make great account of themſelues, and deeme themſelues to be of great worthines. If a man ſhould aske the Italians, the Frenchmen, and a great ſort of the Almaines, of what worthines they be; they will ſet ſo great eſtimation vppon themſelues in their pride, as ye would maruel: and yet are they all baniſhed from the inheritance of God, they are all diſherited, they be depriued of the foode of ſaluation which God hath ordayned for his children. Seeing it is ſo, let vs ſee that we be more diligent in keeping this inheritance, & ſith our Lord hath put it as a gage into our handes, let euery of vs inforce himſelfe to teach the younger ſort, that the trueth may bee receiued continually from hand to hand, and that GOD may reigne among vs euerlaſtingly. And to the intent wee may haue the more zeale and good will thereto, let vs call to minde that which I haue ſayd afore, namely that if wee ſhould compare all the goods in the world, and all the riches that fathers can leaue to their children, with this: they be nothing in compariſon of this heauẽly treaſure of Gods auowing of vs to be of his houſhold, and of his declaring that he will dwel among vs, to make vs pattakers of his glorie. Seing then that our Lord aſſigneth vs ſo great a good thing; it is reaſon that he ſhould bee preferred before all the thinges which are to be deſired in this world, and which rauiſh all our wits and willes from vs.

Now he addeth afterward, That he was a king among the vpright dealers; that is to ſay, in Iſraell. This ſentence is commonly vnderſtood concerning Moſes, becauſe he was ſpoken of in the laſt verſe. For he had ſayd, Moſes gaue vs the Lawe: and now he addeth, he was a king in Iſrael. But we knowe it was not the cuſtome of Moſes to call himſelfe king. For the time was not yet come wherein God ſhould haue choſen and ordayned a king to haue preheminence. Saul was the firſt: yea and that was through a rebellion of the people. But God choſe Dauid, to the intent that the kingdome ſhould bee ſtabliſhed in his perſon. And vntill that time, the people were at libertie, and God named himſelf their king, and called the people a royall prieſthood. So then, no doubt but that here Moſes contineweth the matter which hee had begunne already; namely that the people ſhould ſit downe at the feete of God to heare his word. He declareth after what maner wee ſhould ſit downe at Gods feete to be his ſcholers, and that hee may be our maiſter, and we be taught at his mouth: It is (ſaith he) by being our king therewithall. Hee ſheweth that whereas God abaceth himſelfe ſo farre as to be our teacher; his ſo dooing ought not to cauſe vs to deſpiſe him, or to diminiſh his maieſtie: but therewithal he muſt alſo be a king. Let vs beare in minde then, that the doctrine which wee receiue of God, is as the ſpeach of a king, and it behoueth vs to tremble vnder him: ſo as wee may not onely be as little children ẏ record their leſſon vnder a maiſter; but alſo that both great and ſmall doe come to heare what God ſpeaketh, and giue eare vnto it with all humilitie, and that his lawes may preuaile and haue their force amongeſt vs. The thing then in effect which Moſes meant in this place, is that hauing ſhewed that God ſtoopeth ſo lowe vnto our meaneſſe, ẏ he maketh himſelfe as a ſcholemaiſter, and voutſafeth to haue vs ſit at his feet, to the intent we ſhould be familiarly taught at his hand; yet ceaſeth he not therefore to bee a king, and to keepe ſtill his dominion and degree, ſo that what excellencie ſoeuer bee in men, they muſt not preſume to skorne the doctrine that is preached vnto them, but euen the very kinges of the earth ought all of them to ſubmit themſelues to it, and hee as the onely head ought to haue all preheminence and ſoueraigne dominion ouer vs.

1.Sam.10.1.

To be ſhort, we haue two things to conſider in Gods word, the one is his infinite goodneſſe, in that he commeth downe to vs, and becõmeth familiar with vs, and (as yee would ſay) dandleth vs, and ſpeaketh to vs as kindly as a nurſe woulde ſpeake to her babe. Seeing then that God doth ſo faſhion himſelfe to our ſmall capacitie; wee ought of right to loue well his worde. But yet therewithall let vs marke alſo, that hee will not bereaue himſelfe of his right, that hee ſhould not continue King for euer, and wee tremble vnder him, and bee ſubiect to his lawes and commandements. Thus the thing which we haue in effect to beare in mind, is that Gods word ought to bee as ſweete to vs as honie, and as precious as Gold and Siluer, as Dauid ſpeaketh thereof. And he doth expreſly name the people of Iſraell by the terme of vpright perſons, as he had done afore; to ſhewe vpon what condition wee be Gods Church; namely that vprightneſſe and Iuſtice ſhould reigne among vs. For we knowe that God wil not be intangled in our diſorders, if we ſhould ruſh out into any maner of euill: for in ſo doing it might ſeeme that wee would driue God farre from vs. So much the more then ought wee to marke well this text, that God was king among the vpright. For it ſerueth to the end that we ſhould firſt vnderſtand, that if wee obey Gods Lawe, his kingdome flouriſheth. And againe, when wee ſerue him, he maketh vs to be righteous, & certeſſe, our true righteouſneſſe dependeth vpon our hearkening vnto God, & ought to be eſteemed thereafter. As for thoſe then which are diſobedient to the lawe and the Goſpell; doe well ſhewe that they cannot abyde that GOD ſhould gouerne them; and that is all one as if they defied him, and would not admit him for their king and Prince. True it is that none of the wicked ſort of this worlde will confeſſe that their intent is to alienate thẽſelues from God after that maner: but yet is it ſo indeede, and it is not for them to pleade to the contrarie, bycauſe the ſoueraigne Iudge hath giuen definitiue ſentence thereof. Alſo let vs marke by the way, that God neuer reigneth among vs, except our conuerſation bee conformable to his worde, ſo as wee forſake all our owne wicked affections to obey him. And therewithall let vs beare in mynde likewiſe that there will bee no righteouſnes when euery man wil needes ſerue God after his owne deuotion as we ſee ẏ world doeth which muſeth vppon theſe pelting fonde toyes: inſomuch that the Papiſtes ſeeme to thẽſelues to be halfe Angels, ſo long as they haue daunced their common trace, that is to ſay, haue played the brute beaſtes. But the very true righteouſnes which God alloweth and accepteth, is to ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned by his hand, & to haue none other leader than his ſingle worde.

Pſal.19.11.

He ſayeth immediatly, in gathering the heads of the people, and the Trybes of Iſrael together. Heere hee expreſſeth the concorde which ought to bee in Gods Church, euen from the greateſt to the leaſt. Whereas hee ſayeth in gathering or aſſembling, hee ſheweth that as ſoone as GOD hath ſpoken, there ought to be a conformitie and true vnion among vs.

Wee

We muſt not be at variaunce, one drawing one way and another another; but euery of vs muſt yeelde & aſſemble together, that none but God may haue any preheminence ouer vs, and that we may be gathered together in one, as it were vnder his winges. That then is the gathering together which Moſes ſpeaketh of heere. And therfore we may conclude thereupon, that when Gods word is not preached, although mẽ agree together, yet their agreement is curſed, & there is nothing but confuſion in it. Will we thẽ be ſo knit together, as God may allowe of the concorde that is among vs? Let him be alwayes our head; let his word be the mean to faſhion vs one like an other; let there be no brotherhoode but becauſe there is one father cõmon to vs al, and ỹ wee be his children together by one common accorde. And herein it is to be ſeene, that all the fond bragging of the Papiſts is but ſmoke & leaſing, when they ſay that they agree among themſelues. For it is alwayes to bee conſidered what the bonde is. Now the Papiſtes agree in all diſobedience, ſo as they muſt neede bee ſtubborne in refuſing Gods worde, and trample his truth vnder their feete; or elſe we ſee that without that there is no acceſſe to be had vnto them. Seeing then that their linking in together is but to withdrawe themſelues from God: wo worth that vnion. But if we will haue a holy and commendable concorde, ſuch as God may allowe of: let vs begin at this point; namly that we hearken to his voyce, and ỹ we followe it, ſhewing therby that we bee his true ſheepe, & that we take him for our ſheepeheard. And in ſo doing let vs take him alſo for our king (as it is ſayde in this text,) that he alſo may take vs for his people and Church; and then we may be bolde to defie all ſuch as behaue themſelues after their owne inuentions and fancies.

Nowe therewithall Moſes ſheweth that there is no man which ought not to ſubmit himſelfe to Gods worde, when he ſayeth in gathering the heades and all the Trybes together. Heere then is no exception: neither ought ỹ great ones to alleage either their authority or their power: for they be the folke which ought to ſhewe the way, and which ought by their exãple to induce the meaner people to obedience. Therefore when our Lord ſpeaketh, let the heads be as lowely as the inferiour ſort, & let them lead the daunce and reach their hands to all the reſidue. For in very deede when the great men and rich men of this worlde, and ſuch as are in any eſtimation deſpiſe Gods worde & ſet light by it: it is a dubble ſtumblingblocke, becauſe men haue an eye to them, & they be as it were ſet vp on a hygh ſtage. The diſorder therefore which they make is ſuch, that they muſt yeelde dubble account vnto God, for ỹ they haue bin the cauſe of the backſlyding of many ſimple & weake ſoules. And therfore let vs learn ỹ whenſoeuer God ſpeaketh, thoſe to whõ he hath giuen ỹ greater giftes of grace, & which haue any dignity or excellency, muſt ſhewe that Gods prouoking of thẽ to come vnto him is not in vaine, & they muſt be the firſt that obey him. And on the other ſide the rude & vnskilful muſt not alleadge, We be no Clerks, we be no men of great vnderſtanding; for it is ſayde that all the Trybes of Iſraell muſt likewiſe aſſemble together. Let vs conclude then, ỹ as the great ones muſt ſhew the way to the litle ones; ſo all the people generally and without exception, muſt ſubmit them ſelues to God, & al of vs muſt become his ſcholers, ſeeing he vouchſafeth to be our ſcholemaiſter; and al of vs muſt be his people, ſeeing he doth vs the honor to ſet his royall ſeate among vs. That is the effect of the thing which wee haue to remember vpon this place.

But let vs come to the bleſſinges which Moſes giueth to the Tribes of Iſraell. I haue tolde you afore that they be not ſingle prayers, made as by a priuate man: but that foraſmuch as God had appointed him to be his deputie, he declareth that the ſtate of the Church ſhalbe alwayes bleſſed, & that God will haue a care therof. Moſes then ſpeaketh heere, not in his owne perſon, nor of his owne authoritie; but as one gouerned by the holy Ghoſt, and as one whom God cauſed to ſhewe foorth the fatherly care which he would alwayes haue of his Church. To be ſhort, there is nothing heere which ought to be fathered vppon a mortall man: but by the mouth of Moſes God ſheweth that hee hath not choſen the children of Abraham in vaine, but that hee will continue his goodneſſe towardes them to the ende, and ſhew in very deede that they be a people whom he hath adopted to himſelfe and dedicated to his owne ſeruice, and of whom he wilbe the defender. Howbeit, foraſmuch as theſe thinges ſhalbe layd foorth more at large; I doe but touch them ſhortly as nowe.

Let vs come to that which is ſpoken of Ruben. Let Ruben liue, and not dy. We know that Ruben was Iacobs eldeſt ſonne, and ought to haue obteyned the right of the firſt begotten, and ought to haue had a double portion, and to haue reigned among his brothers: but he was bereft of it by his owne leaudeneſſe. For he committed inceſt, which was a crime worthy of more than death: he deſerued to haue beene wyped out of the worlde, and to haue had his name reprochfull for euer. Neuertheleſſe God pardoned him. Gen.35.22. Yea, but not without chaſtiſement, as we ſee by the bleſſing which was giuen him: and he ſeemeth rather to haue beene accurſed. For Iacob his father ſayde vnto him, Ruben, thou waſt my firſt borne, the beginning of my force Gen 49.3. and ſtrength; but thou haſt alſo beene the beginning of my ſorrowes. And therefore thou muſt ſlippe away like water, and drie vp. For thou diddeſt looſe the title of thy birthright, when thou wenteſt vp vpon thy fathers bedde, and committedſt inceſt, which is a horrible crime. Foraſmuch therefore as thou haſt beene a greefe and ſorrowe to me whereas I ought to haue receyued ioye and comfort of thee; thou muſt be baniſhed and excluded from thy birthryght, and from the dignitie which thou ſhouldeſt haue had. It ſhold ſeeme ỹ Iacob taketh too great diſpleaſure againſt his eldeſt ſon, when he ouerwhelmeth him ſo with infamie, & thundereth ſo againſt him. Howbeit, ỹ is but a temporall correction.For notwithſtãding this,yet he continueth ſtil a Patriarke.And ſoothly it is a great honor,that a deteſtable villaine hauing broken the whole order of nature, yea and committed aduowtrie with his own fathers wife,did yet for all yͤ, liue ſtill vpon the earth.But God maketh him a Patriark in his Church, & he wil haue his name holy & his poſteritie holy. Lo here a wõderful mercifulnes of God.Yet muſt he be faine to humble himſelfe,& haue his fault knowen,yͭ hee may no more flatter himſelfe. That is the cauſe why Iacob ſpeaketh ſo roughly,and(as ye would ſay)thundereth againſt him being his eldeſt ſonne as I ſayd afore. Now the comfort which Moſes ſetteth downe here, may ſeeme ſtraunge,as why he ſhould ſay, Let Ruben liue and not dye. It was to the end that the tribe of Rubẽ, (that is to ſay,the people which came of him, for there were at that time a great number of heades of howſes,as it were about a fiftie thowſand men,)ſhould thinke with thẽſelues,we bee after a ſort cut off frõ gods houſe.For inaſmuch as our father was after a ſort baniſhed & bereft of his byrthright , and wee be ſucceeded in his place;what is our inheritance now but vtter infamie?Thus ye ſee how yͤ Rubenites, (that is to ſay the people yͭ came of Rubens line,) might haue bin aſhamed, if they had not bin vpheld, by putting their truſt in God, to ſerue him with a pure and freehearted affection, or if their heartes had failed them ſo as they had not ſtill imbraced the promiſe of ſaluation which had bin made vnto them, and knowen themſelues to be the children of Abraham, a linage which God had accepted and ſeparated from the reſt of the world. It behoued the Rubenites to haue that.And for that cauſe it is ſayd, Let Rubẽ liue & not dye:as if Moſes had ſayd,true it is yͭ Rubẽ deſerued to haue his lyfe thruſt downe to the bottom of hell:but yet ſhall he liue;for his fault is forgiuen;and God hath giuen him lyfe, & that not ſuch a common lyfe as all the ſonnes of Adam haue,but Ruben ſhal liue in the Church of God,he ſhall haue place among the Patriarkes, & the people which ſhall come of him ſhall be a member of Gods Church,and of the number of thoſe people whom he hath choſen and ſanctifyed. Thus then wee ſee now the meaning of Moſes.

And here we be taught,that it ought to ſuffice vs when our Lord taketh vs to mercie,to reſerue vs to be of his people. When we haue offended him,ſo as we deſerue to be caſt off, & to be vtterly diſclaymed at his hand: it ought well to ſuffice vs if wee may but haue a place ſtill in his Church,& be taken & admitted for his childrẽ.Moreouer,if we be chaſtized for our faults, let vs take it in good worth & beare it patiently,& let vs not doe as they doe which grudge & grinde their teeth when God chaſtizeth thẽ, & think they haue great wrong if they be not dãdled, when they haue more neede to be handled roughly.Let vs then beare all yͤ temporal correctiõs which God ſendeth vs, with ſuch mildnes & meeknes,as it may ſuffiſe vs to be cõforted,in yͭ he dooth not raſe vs out of the regiſter of lyfe, but are accounted ſtill among his childrẽ. Doth God then ſmite ſome with ſickneſſe, ſome with pouertie, and ſome after ſome other ſortes,ſo as they pine away in this world,& wote not where to become? Well let all this bee eaſie for vs to beare,ſo long as we haue ſtil wherwith to ſweeten our ſorrowe:that is,when God ſheweth vs yͭ notwithſtanding our imperfections & miſeries, yet he ceaſeth not to be our father ſtill.So long as we haue that; let vs ouergoe all the temptations in the world. Well, I muſt bee heare as a wretched creature, skorned, an outcaſt of the world,ſhamed & deſpiſed; I ſhall ſee no end nor meaſure of miſeries:but what for all this?Yet is it enough for me ſo I bee auowed for the childe of God.Thus ye ſee what we haue to gather vppon this place, when God doth continually put vs in minde of our deſertes, and toucheth vs with thẽ, & maketh vs to feele them by proofe and experience: For whereas he ſayth: Let Ruben liue and not dye: it is to ſhewe them what he were worthie of,& that it was needefull in deede that God ſhould haue pitiẽ vppon him;inſomuch yͭ if he had liſted to haue vſed rigor,hee deſerued to haue bin vtterly rooted out.That then is the firſt poynt which wee haue to remember vppon this place.

Moſes addeth, let his people be fewe in nũber. In deede a man might here repeate the former ſaying thus, let him not dy & let not his people be few in number. But that were conſtrained & forced. The naturall ſenſe then is, that the Rubenites ſhould be ſmall in number: not that they ſhoulde not be a great multitude of folke; for (as I tolde you afore) they were fiue and fortie Thowſand men beſides women & children:and that is an incredible multitude to come of oneman alone. But Moſes meaneth ſmall in number, becauſe Ruben & all his oſpring, which ought to haue had preheminence ouer all the children of Abraham, was baſely & ſlenderly eſteemed, and placed in a very lowe degree. Therefore it is all one as if he had ſayd, Although Ruben be not reſtored to his honor,but dooth ſtill beare the marke of his reproch,and is faine to holde himſelfe among the common aray of the children of Iſrael, and to be ſubiect to his brother Iuda;& to yeelde reuerence to him as to his ſuperior: yet notwithſtanding,let him liue. To be ſhorte, Moſes confirmeth that which I haue declared already,that is to wit,that although Rubẽ was put from his byrthright becauſe of his wicked doinges,and ſo became vnworthy of the honor which had bin done vnto him: yet notwithſtanding his linage ought not therefore to bee diſmaid,but rather take comfort in that God held them ſtill in the number of his people. And although they be not Capteines, ne haue yͤ kingdome in their trybe: yet ought they not therefore to fret & repine,but rather to abide in their degree,& to be glad that they haue God ſtill to their father, & to ſet their whole felicitie & ioy there: & in the meane ſeaſon to beare the correction patiently which God ſendeth them as a medicine,and to make their benefite thereof. And moreouer they ought not to bee out of hope,as though God had diſclaymed them:but aſſure themſelues that they were ſtill receyned for the linage of Abraham,which was bleſſed & had the promiſe of euerlaſting ſaluation.

Immediatly after hee ſetteth downe concerning Iuda. Let it be thus vnto Iuda, ſaith he. And he ſaith,Lord heare the voyce of Iuda. Moſes magnifieth not the tribe of Iuda ſo greatly heere,as Gen.49.8.9 he did in Geneſis in the perſon of Iacob. For there he is likened to a lyon whom no man dareth waken vp. And againe he ſaith he ſhalbe Lorde of all his brethren,ſo as all of them muſt ſtoope vnto him, and bowe their knees to him: and finally that the ſcepter ſhall not depart from his houſe,nor the Lawgiuer frō betweene his knees,vntill God haue ſent the Redeemer whom he had promiſed.Seing that theſe things were ſpoken of the tribe of Iuda; it is maruaile that Moſes ſpeaketh ſo ſhortly of them heere. And againe, hee maketh no mention of the fruitfulneſſe which God promiſed him: As that his teeth ſhould be whyted with milke, that is to ſay, that he ſhoulde haue good and fat graſinggrounde, ſo as hee might drinke milke his belly ful; that his eyes ſhould be red with wine, that is to ſay,that he ſhould haue goodly vyneyardes. Heereby he meant to ſhew,what ſhould become of the tribe of Iuda, and of all his people. And why then doth Moſes ſpeake heere ſo ſparely thereof? It behooueth vs to marke,that by the bleſſings which Moſes vttereth heere, hee meant not to deface the remembrance of the things which he had written afore concerning the ſtate of Iuda, in the teſtament or laſt will of Iacob: but to make as it were a Codicill vnto it, as men terme that which is added to a laſt will that is made afore. And when there is ſuch a Codicill, it ſerueth not to impeach the former laſt will,nor yet to burie it ſo as it ſhould not be knowen. For it is but an appendant, and the Codicill it ſelfe were nothing worth without the will,and that it were added to it. Truly a man may well make a will alone by it ſelfe: but as for the Codicill, it is but as a thing belonging thereto or as a ſhort matter that is added to the will. After that manner doeth Moſes deale heere. For hauing ſet downe there the laſt will of Iacob, as an authenticall matter, and ſuch as ought to haue his full force and effect: nowe for the larger confirmation thereof, hee addeth this comfort which we haue ſeene concerning Ruben,and the comfort which wee ſhall ſee to morrow concerning Leui and ſuch like. Nowe his ſpeaking of the tribe of Iuda,is to confirme the thing which had beene ſpoken afore by the mouth of Iacob. True it is that they be two ſundrie perſons which ſpeake: but yet is all done in the name of God, and by his authoritie.Iacob was not a priuate perſon when he bleſſed his children: but he was Gods deputie. As much is to be ſaide of Moſes.Therefore he repreſented alwayes the perſon of God, who declareth that he hath choſen his people, and will maintaine them to the end, and haue a fatherly care of them. To be ſhort, this ſhortnes ſerueth not to abate the dignitie that was giuen to the tribe of Iuda: but to continue the thing which he had ſaid afore,to the intent we ſhould knowe that God ment not to diſappoint Iuda of the promiſe which he had made vnto him, but that it ſhoulde bee performed in his children. And therefore hee ſaith,Lorde heare the voice of Iuda.

Heereby Moſes ſheweth, that the tribe of Iuda ſhoulde not attaine to the kingdome without impediment.True it is that Iacob had ſaid, that the ſcepter ſhoulde not depart from the tribe of Iuda. And where is this king? Yee ſee Gen.49.10. that the tribe of Iuda ſurmounted all the reſt of the tribes at ſuch time as God deliuered his people out of the lande of Egypt. It is true that Nahaſſon had the preheminence, when the offerings were made in the ſanctuarie. It is true Nomb.2.3. that when God diſtributed his hoſt among the fower captaines of his people,Iuda was the formoſt. Howbeit, that was but a very darke ſhadowe,he had neither kingdome nor principalitie. It ſhould ſeeme then that the things which are ſpoken here concerning the ſcepter and the kingdome,are to no purpoſe. For thoſe thinges were not yet ſeene.Againe,let vs conſider what happened to the people after the deceaſe of Moſes. Ioſua ruled them, and the Iudges ſucceeded him. Thē came Saul of the tribe of Beniamin, 1.Sam.9.1. who was made king. And what ſhall become of Iuda? The thinges that Iacob had ſpoken ſeemed to bee but a ieſt. And yet it is God that ſaide that the kingdome ſhould come from thence. Nowe Moſes ſheweth heere, that Iuda muſt bee faine to call vppon God,that is to ſay that the tribe of Iuda muſt ſigh and grone and indure much hardneſſe, ere it attained to the degree of honour, and vnto the thinges which God had promiſed them. Wee ſee then that things ſhall not [alwayes] come to paſſe out of hande, immediatly after that God hath promiſed them. Beholde, Iacob appointeth Iuda to haue the birthright in his houſe, by reaſon whereof hee hath the right of the firſtbegotten ouer all his brethren, and it ſeemeth that all ſhould bee ſubiect to him. And yet for a time there was no whit of it ſeene, but rather Iacob ſeemed to haue doted,and that theſe things ſerued to no purpoſe. Afterward at the end of fower hundred yeares or thereabouts, (for there were not full fower hundred yeares,)came Moſes. But at the ende of three hundred and fiftie yeares or thereaboutes he came and ſaid, Iuda, pray to God,hee will heare thy voyce,and herken vnto thee.As if he ſhould ſay, My friendes, ye haue a promiſe of the kingdome in the tribe of Iuda,and trouble not your ſelues though it be not performed preſently before your eyes, but tarie till God worke, and he in the end will performe that which he hath promiſed.Be of good hope therefore and poſſeſſe the kingdome now by faith, vntill God ſhewe openly by the effect, that it was hee that ſpake by the mouth of your father Iacob. Thus we ſee now in effect, what the meaning of Moſes was.The reſidue we muſt reſerue vntill to morrowe.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to forbeare to haue reſpect of the multitude and greatnes of them, & but onely to correct them by his holy ſpirit, and ſo to increaſe his ſtrength in vs from day to day as we may fight againſt all temptations, and be reformed in ſuch wiſe to his obedience, as nothing may let him to reigne as king ouer vs, nor vs to doe him homage by dedicating our ſelues to him in all iuſtice, holineſſe, and righteouſneſſe, but that they may bee the true marke whereby we may be knowen to be his children, and that we may feele him to reigne among vs, and we more and more finde ſauour in his promiſes; ſo as we may be drawen to the kingdome of heauen, and drawen away from this worlde, and not helde backe to it any more as wee haue beene too much afore. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to al people and Nations of the earth; &c.

On Tewſday the laſt day of Iune, 1556.

The CXCIII. Sermon, which is the third vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

7 As touching Iuda, O Lord God, &c.

8 Alſo hee ſaide of Leui, Thy Thumim and Vrim belong to him towardes whom thou diddeſt ſhewe thy ſelfe gratious, whom thou diddeſt trie in Maſſa, where ye had debate for the waters of ſtrife.

I Tolde you yeſterday that the thinges which are conteined in Geneſis as touching the bleſſing of Iuda, are comprehended briefly heere. For where as Moſes deſireth that Iuda may be hearde, it is to the end hee ſhould obtaine that which had beene promiſed vnto him, that is to wit, the ſetting vp of the kingdome there, accordingly alſo as he ſheweth in that he ſaith, that he ſhoulde be the leader of his people. For it belonged to none but the tribe of Iuda, to haue the people vnder them and at their guiding. We ſee then in effect, that Moſes meant heere to confirme that which had beene ſpoken by the mouth of the Patriarke Iacob, to the end that God might be knowen to be ſtedfaſt in his worde. The kingdome was promiſed vnto Iuda, & that was a matter of great importance: for not onely the ſtate of the people was grounded thereuppon, but alſo the ſaluation of the whole worlde depended vppon the ſame. To what end was it Gods will to ſtabliſh the ſoueréintie in the tribe of Iuda, beginning it in the perſon of Dauid and continuing it in his houſe, but that the Redeemer of the worlde ſhoulde come from thence? And that kingdome was to continue for euer, as it is ſaid in the Pſalme, that the Sunne and Moone ſhalbe good and faithfull witneſſes thereof in heauen. Pſal.72.5. Seeing it is ſo, it was very requiſite that this promiſe ſhould be certaine, that it might bee helde vnfallible of all the faithfull. Yet notwithſtanding there paſſed a long time wherein the tribe of Iuda was mingled with the reſt of the people, without hauing any authoritie. It was not perceiued what was the meaning of the thinges that had beene ſpoken, and therefore they might haue beene eſteemed as a vaine thing. And therefore Moſes addeth now the confirmatiõ thereof which is ſet downe heere, ſaying that in the end God woulde heare the voyce of Iuda, and that by that meanes he ſhould haue the leading of his people, and obtaine the royall mace which had beene aſſigned vnto him.

Heere wee ſee how our Lorde exerciſeth the faith of his children, in that he doth not out of hande performe the things which he had promiſed them. And this thing ought ſpecially to bee applyed to the reigne of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. God had declared aforehande, that the Redemption of the worlde ſhould be wrought by one that was to come of the tribe of Iuda. And yet hee deferreth and delayeth it ſo long, that it ſeemed to bee but vaine to looke for it. And why? Of purpoſe to trie the patience of them that hoped for him. Let vs learne then that to bee ſetled vpon our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and to be well aſſured of the ſaluation which he hath purchaſed for vs; wee muſt not onely beleeue the things that are tolde vs concerning the Goſpel; but we muſt alſo euen linger in patience, till God performe the things which we ſee not at the firſt ſight. And we muſt not bee ſo haſtie as to ſtart away, when our Lorde anſwereth not our deſires. If God paſſe ouer a day or a yeare, ſo as we perceiue not that he is minded to put the thing in execution which hee hath ſpoken, yet is it not for vs to giue ouer, but we muſt in the meane ſeaſon pray, & not doubt but yͤ he heareth our voyce. We ſhal ſee oftentimes, that yͤ kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſhall ſeeme to be aboliſhed out of yͤ world. And euen at this day, although the Goſpel be preached in ſome places; yet we ſee the power of the enemies to be ſuch as is able to ouerwhelme it vtterly. Wee ſee ſo little order as is pitie. As for vs which ſay we haue receiued the pure doctrine; we be yet farre off from hauing ſuch policie & perfection among vs as were requiſite. To be ſhort,we heare of nothing but diſorder; which might make vs to quaile; were it not that with calling vppon God we did patiently awayt that he will in the end ſet vp the kingdō of his ſonne and maintaine it, though it ſeeme as now to be put out of order, and men ſee it not floriſh and proſper. Were it not for that, ſurely a man would iudge that all Gods promiſes were vaine. It is not without cauſe then, that Moſes ſpeaketh here expreſſely of Iudaes prayers and ſupplications: as if he ſhould ſay, that all they which belong to the kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ought to exerciſe themſelues in calling vpon God, that he ſuffer not his kingdome wherein lyeth all our happineſſe and welfare, to go to decay, and to fall to ruyne; but rather that he ſet it vp, and preſerue it, and defend it. And therewithall let vs aſſure our ſelues that we ſhall not loſe our time, nor finde God deafe to our requeſts, ſo we reſort to him for refuge, as we be warned to doe. To be ſhort, this text declareth vnto vs, that the kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſhalbe ſtabliſhed by myracle, and after a ſtrange maner incomprehenſible to the worlde; and that God will worke after ſuch a faſhion in that behalfe, that we ſhall knowe it to be his worke; and therefore that wee muſt not in that caſe bring the iudgement of our eyes; but continue from time to time in prayer and ſupplication, and reſt vpon the promiſe thereof which is giuen vnto vs.

Alſo it is ſayd, That God will ſuccour Iuda againſt his enemies, and that his hands ſhall ſuffiſe him. This was no more than needed, forſomuch as the kingdome of Iuda was to be diminiſhed after the deceaſſe of Salomon. And from that time foorth, he was to haue but one trybe and a halfe, ſo as a man would haue thought that all that euer had beene done in the perſon of Dauid, had beene but a puffe. True it is, that when Dauid was crowned king, God in one inſtant ſhewed there ſo great power, as all men wondered at it. In the time of Saul the people were extremely oppreſſed, and ſeemed like to haue beene altogither ſwallowed vp. But yet there Sam,8.12, were ſo excellent victories, as it appeared well that God was the author of that change. Sam.21.15 Dauid not onely draue away all thoſe which had poſſeſſed any part of the lande of Canaan, and had ſubdued the people to their taxes and tributes, whereby he purchaſed libertie to thoſe of whom hee had the charge; but alſo conquered all his neighbours, and made them tributarie vnto him. Therefore in that caſe wee ſee an in.10.7. open miracle of God. When Salomon ſucceeded him, gold and ſiluer were of no more eſtimation than grauell, as the holy hiſtorie reporteth thereof. But what? As ſoone as Roboam ſucceeded, there was a backeſlyding, ſo as almoſt all the people turned backe. There was no more but the trybe of Iuda with a piece of Beniamin, that abode in obedience to the houſe of Dauid. What was to be ſayd hereupon, but that for aught that men did ſee, there was verie fickle hope to be had, when all paſſed ſo ſlightly away? Beſides this, that ſmall kingdome being ſo diminiſhed, (as wherof remained but a piece) was ſo aſſayled on all ſides, that it ſeemed to be as a ſheep alone among a dozen wolues. A man then would haue thought that God had forgotten his promiſe. And therefore it was requiſite that Moſes ſhould ad this for the comfort of the faithful, to the intent they ſhould not be ſhaken from their faith, when they ſaw that kingdome ſo diminiſhed.

That is the cauſe why he ſayd, The handes of Iuda ſhall ſuffice him, and God will giue him ſuccour againſt his enimies. And ſo let vs marke well, that this kingdome was ſtabliſhed with great difficultie in the perſon of Dauid; and that in the end it was diminiſhed, and came to ſuch decay, that to all ſeeming it ſhould haue beene vtterly aboliſhed: whereby it was Gods will to ſhewe in a figure, what was to befall to the ſpirituall kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And in deede wee ſee, that when the time drewe nigh wherein Ieſus was to be ſhewed to the worlde; there was nothing but horrible diſorder among that people. Who then would haue looked for the redemption at the comming of Ieſus Chriſt? For the people were ſcattered abroade and vtterly caſt downe. Yet notwithſtanding, God wrought therein after a manner vnknowen to men. Inſomuch that although the Goſpel was preached; yet was it not ſeene out of hand that the Church triumphed in this world; but cleane contrarywiſe that there was nothing but tormenting, perſecuting and oppreſſing of it, ſo as the name of Chriſtianitie ſeemed to be the irkſommeſt thing that could be ſpoken of, & that all Gods children were but as the doung & filth of the world, as Saint Paul ſpeaketh therof. 1.Cor.4.13. To be ſhort, that kingdome was to be ſet vp with ſighing and ſorrowing; & it behooued the faithfull to pray vnto God, and yet notwithſtanding, great was the griefe of minde wherewith they wayted for the ſetting abroad of the doctrine of the Goſpell, to the intent that Ieſus Chriſt might be worſhipped of the world, and all men ſubmit themſelues to him to do him homage. And yet did not that continue any long time. For the vnthankfulnes of the world deſerued that God ſhould haue withdrawen his hand and power; and we ſee howe the worlde ſtroue to haue driuen Chriſt away. For on the one ſide there were hypocrites which ſcorned al religion, and abuſed it falſly. Alſo there were deſpiſers and worldly folk, which tooke to them an vnbridled libertie (as we ſee ſtill at this day) vnder pretence of the freedome that was preached vnto them. Againe, there were Sects, and Hereſies, and rebellions, ſo as a great ſort ſtepped vp and could not abide to beare the yoke which it was Gods will to lay vpon their necke. Ye ſee then that the reigning of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was as it were brought to nothing. And therefore let vs mark well, that this text not only ſerued for the Iewes, but alſo is profitable for vs at this day, as whereby we be done to vnderſtand, that it behoueth vs to make earneſt ſute vnto GOD to ſet vp the kingdome of his only ſonne; and to ſtabliſh it with his power euen in the middes of the trubbles which wee ſee, notwithſtanding that it ſeeme that al things ſhould goe to wracke;& to ſuccour vs againſt our enemies, becauſe we ſee ſo many men inraged againſt vs;& to hyde vs vnder the ſhadowe of his hand, & to ſhewe vs his helpe when wee be in extremitie and euen at the laſt caſt, and can no longer hold out. Againe, although the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſeeme nothing to the world, & that the proud & the vnbeleeuers do ſcorne it & deſpiſe it:yet wil God ſhewe that his own hand ſuffiſeth him, that is to ſay, that his power which is hidden & of no reputation to the worldward, ſhalbe of ſuch force,that in the end the wicked ſhalbe driuen to confeſſe that they were too blockiſh & dulwitted,in that they tooke not hold of the grace wherof mention is made here.As for vs, let vs be ſtil more & more confirmed to truſt in this great Sauiour, & to put our ſelues into his protection, and to ſeeke all our ſuccour at his hand. That is the thing which we be taught in this text.

Now let vs come to the trybe of Leuye. Thy Vrim & thy Thumim (ſayeth he) belong vnto thy meeke one, or vnto the man of thy mercie. The Thumim and Vrim were a parcel of Aarons breſtlap,and of the breſtlap of the high prieſts. Beſides their robe,there was another piece ioyned vnto it,which was of great pryce,beſet with pearles & imbroydered.Moreouer in this piece there was a tablet of precious ſtones hanging Exo.28.14, 15. at little cheynes,which was placed full vpon his breſt: and this piece of the breſtlap was called Iudgement, that is to ſay rightfulnes. Alſo there was another part, which a man cannot well diſtinguiſh, and that was named Thumim and Vrim.The former of theſe words ſignifieth perfection;as if a man ſhould terme them perfections in the plurall number. And the other commeth of light or flame; if yee referre it to doctrine. Then if a man liſt to take theſe words in common ſpeech,he may ſay perfections and teachings [or inſtructions.] But I in reading of the text,haue kept ſtill the verie wordes of Moſes; becauſe it is not to be douted, but that he ſpeaketh of that portion of the breſtlap which was ſo termed as appeareth in the eyght &]twentith of Exodus. And he directeth his ſpeech vnto God.But ſome haue miſexpounded this text,in ſaying,thy Thumim & Vrim belong to thee & to the Man,which is cleane contrary. For Moſes ſaith; O Lord God, thou haſt thy Thumim & Vrim in thy hand. That is to ſay, the things which thou haſt giuen to thy high prieſt,are things holy & dedicated to thy name; they be thy perfections and teachings.To whom belong they?To thy meek one,or to the man of thy mercie;for ſo is it word for word.But the word Meeke, may be taken after the ſame maner that the holy ſcripture calleth Gods children meeke ones;that is to ſay, ſuch as ought to reſemble him who is the fountaine of all mercie & goodnes. For if wee wilbe knowen & auowed to be Gods childrẽ;it is good reaſon that we ſhould reſemble him, by hauing a meeke & myld ſpirit in vs,ſo as we indeuour to do men good. For it is the propertie of God to be liberal to al men, yea eun to thoſe which are Matt.5.45. not worthie therof: inſomuch that he maketh his day Sunne to ſhine both vpon good & bad. After his example we ought to do our indeuer, & to ſtrayne our ſelues to the vttermoſt of our power,to benefite al men,& to do al men good. And ſo it is the common ſtyle of the holy ſcrip- Pſal.16.10. ture to name the faithfull meekes ones; & ſpecially we ſee it is as rife a thing as can be in the Pſalmes. But foraſmuch as he ſayth, to his meeke one; it may be taken for the man of thy mercie;that is to ſay,for the man whom thou Lord haſt elected and choſen through thy goodnes. For Aaron attayned not to the dignitie of yͤ prieſthood by his owne deſertes; but becauſe God vouchſafed to chooſe him.Now then the name that is attributed to him here,may be taken as if a man ſhould ſay in the paſſiue ſignification, that God vouchſafed to make him a mirrour of his free election; yea and that hauing ſo choſen him & exalted him to ſo high and excellent honour, he would haue him to ſhewe that wee depende wholly vppon his goodnes, ſo that of al yͤ things which we haue, none proceedeth of our owne power or vertue, but of his pitying of vs, for that he is mynded to ſhewe his gracious goodnes towards vs. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, Moſes ment to declare here, that the trybe of Leuye ſhould alwayes ſerue God with the dignitie of prieſthood, and that the high prieſt ſhould bee clothed with the ornamentes that were giuen him to goe into the ſanctuarie. And in that caſe hee was not as a mortall man, nor as one of the degree of creatures: but as the mediatour betweene God and men, whereby he ſurmounteth the very Angels of Heauen. For the prieſt of the lawe was in his office more excellent than all the Angels of heauen. And why? Becauſe he was to repreſent the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who is the head of the Angels as well as of men, and hath ſoueraigne dominion ouer all principalitie, not only on earth,but alſo in heauen. Yee ſee then how the meaning of Moſes is, that the prieſthood ſhould be in the trybe of Leuy.

And let vs marke nowe, that Moſes magnifieth heere the trybe of Leuye, of purpoſe to wype away the diſhonour that was there afore. For wee knowe howe Iacob had ſayde, Gen.49.5. Yee Simeon and Leuye, yee bee inſtruments of wickedneſſe, yee haue deſtroyed a towne, and yee haue ſlayne the men like murderers as yee bee; I will not haue to doe with you, neyther in ſpeech nor in heart, I refuſe you. And thou Leuye ſhalt bee diſperſed among my people; for thou art not woorthie to haue any heritage. Loe after howe terrible a faſhion GOD ſpeaketh againſt Leuye and all his ofſpring. Hee ſeemeth to bee quyte raſed out,as one that was not worthie to haue any place or degree in the Church. But what reuerence nowe had there been in the prieſthood, if the trybe of Leuye had continued in that reproch? For ſeeing that their father was diſgraded by Iacob, who was Gods deputie as I haue declared afore:what ſhould haue becom of al thoſe which were deſcended of his race? Nowe then it was requiſite that this tribe of Leuie ſhould bee reeſtabliſhed, to the intẽt that the order of prieſthood might not be deſpiſed, leaſt it might keepe men backe from hearkening to the doctrine of their mouth. What will become of it if they which haue the charge of teaching the people, be pointed at with mens fingers, ſet light by, ſkorned or blemiſhed with any marke of reproch in themſelues, ſo as men diſdaine them? Surely they ſhall neuer profite men, they ſhall not be able to edifie them, men will vtterly miſlike of them. Nowe we knowe, and it ſhalbe declared more fully heereafter, that the Leuites were ordeined of God to teach all the people. Then if they had beene reputed as men of no valour, it woulde haue caried great preiudice with it, ſo as the lawe it ſelfe ſhould haue had no great reuerence, men would haue made no account of it, and the very common people would haue ſhrunke away from the expounders thereof. Therefore it is not cauſeleſſe that Moſes telleth them, that The Thumim and Vrim of god, that is to ſay, his perfections and teachings are in that tribe, and God will haue it knowen, that there remaineth not nowe any ſuch reproch there, as there did before, but rather that hee ſetteth his antſignes there. For in Aarons Mytre was Gods name, euen the name of the Euerlaſting: and that was a thing exempted from all the world. Alſo there was the iudgement, as I ſaide afore. And for what cauſe was Aaron apparelled after that manner, but to ſhewe that in him there was a myrrour of Gods glory? Sith it was ſo, it behooued the people to forget Leuies fault, and the puniſhment thereof which had beene laide vppon him and his offſpring; and to receiue Gods Lawe at the mouth of the Leuites, and to haue them in eſtimation, and to honour them as Gods meſſengers, or rather as Angels as they be termed in the Prophet Malachie. True it is that Moſes was of the ſame tribe: but yet did God ſo prouide, that the ſkorners could not alledge that he had fauored his owne linage or houſe. And why? Who is hee that pronounced that ſentence againſt Leuie? Euen Moſes himſelfe: for it was he that compyled the booke of Geneſis, wherein hee ſpared not the fault of his own auncetor. For it behoued him to be as Gods notarie, to ſet down ÿ ſentence both vpon Leuie and vppon all that came of his race. Heere then wee ſee that Moſes behaued not himſelfe after the manner of men; but executed faithfully the charge that was committed vnto him. Again, the highprieſthood was not in his owne houſe, though it were in his owne tribe. He was a greater man than his brother Aaron, and hee had children which might haue ſucceeded in his place. And yet for all that, hee made none of them prince of the people, he made none of them a gouernour, neither had they any preheminence aboue the others: nay, they had not ſo much as any portion of inheritance, but were faine to be contented with the firſt fruits, Tythes, and Offerings, after the cuſtome [of the reſt] of the tribe of Leuie. Moſes then gaue not the Highprieſthood to his owne children, neither tooke he it to himſelfe. What were Moſes his children then, and al his ſucceſſours? They were but vnderſeruants of the meaneſt in the Temple, and they were faine to ſerue there, euen without being in any degree of honour. God (ſay I) mẽt to prouide, that Moſes ſhould not bee ſubiect to any ſlaunder. And therefore the thinges which hee ſpeaketh now of the tribe of Leuie, are not ſpoken in reſpect of his owne auncetrie: for (as we ſee) he is not led by fleſhly affection, and that doth the verie thing it ſelfe ſhewe, inſomuch that all the malicious ſort and all the ſkorners of God muſt needes haue their mouthes ſtopped heere, conſidering his wonderful prouidẽce in cutting off occaſion of all ſlaunder as I ſaide afore. Moſes then had none other reſpect, but that God ſhoulde be honoured, that the doctrine of the Lawe ſhould be receiued with al reuerence, and that forſomuch as Leuie was choſen thereunto, and the Prieſthood was to continue in his houſe; thoſe which were ſo ſet in office ſhoulde not be hindered in their proceedings for the building vp of the Church, nor haue any blemiſh in their perſons, which might diminiſh the authoritie of the doctrine which they brought. That is the thing in effect whereat God amed.

al.2.7.

But nowe let vs lay forth the whole by percelmeale. He ſaith firſt of all, Thy Thumim & thy Vrim. I haue tolde you already that theſe two words betoken Gods perfections, and his lights or doctrines. Now in effect we be done to vnderſtande heere, that Aarons apparell was no vaine thing; it was not an attyre to giue a glittering ſhewe to mens eyes: but God intended to figure a greater and more excellent thing thereby; which is, that the Prieſt ſhould not be as a common man, but ſhould haue in him things which could not be comprehended. And in very deed, his bearing of Gods eſſẽtial name in his Mytre, ſerued to ſhewe that hee ſurmounted all the worlde and al the creatures therein. There was in his Mytre, The Euerlaſting: and that name agreed to none but to God himſelfe. Needs then muſt it bee, that the highprieſt was a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who is God manifeſted in fleſh. God therefore intended to ſhewe, that none of all the Ceremonies of the Lawe, were as toyes for babes to play withall like the traſh of the Papiſtes, who haue a great ſort of pelting gewgawes, and in all their Ceremonies doe nothing but make as it were maygames or ſtageplayes; after which manner the heathen folke alſo haue ſtore of murlymewes and trifles, and yet all is but a hotchpotch. And why? For there is no doctrine, there is nothing but daſeling of mens eyes, it cannot bee ſaide vpon knowledge that God hath commaunded them, or that hee hath appointed them to ſuch ende or ſuch vſe. I graunt that the Papiſtes contriue good ſtore of gay thinges in their Maſſe, as who would ſay, this figureth ſuch a thing, and this ſuch a thing. And yet for all that, all is but leaſing: for they haue forged them of their owne heads. But God had as it were his lampe lighted in all the Cere-ronies of the Lawe,to the intent that the people ſhoulde be furthered by the helpe of them: inſomuch that they knewe wherefore Aarons Breſtlap was named Rightfulneſſe, and why theſe parts [of Thumim and Vrim] were named Perfections and lights.It was to doe vs to wit,that God tooke no pleaſure in outward things; for hee is not like men, which are rauiſhed with the outwarde appearance and gay ſhew of things. God hath no ſuch thing in his nature. But by thoſe Ceremonies,he meant to betoken farre greater things, vntill the trueth of them appeared in Ieſus Chriſt. Likewiſe all the things that were done in the Lawe, had a reſpect to the paterne Exo.25.40. Heb.8.5. which Moſes had ſeene in the mountaine, and ſo conſequently all things were ſpirituall, as is ſaide of them in the 25.of Exodus.Let that then ſerue for one point.

Much more reaſon is it that we nowadayes ſhoulde abſtaine from all trifling Ceremonies, becauſe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is come, & hath brought vs the trueth of the things which were ſet downe in ſhadowes vnder the lawe. In the time of the Lawe, it behoued the highprieſt to bee appareled [after his peculiar manner,] yea and all the whole lyne of the prieſtes had certaine markes to be knowen by, as who woulde ſay,We be ſanctified to God.But ſpecially when the highprieſt was to go into the ſanctuary, hee was then as it were to bee altogether diſguiſed, there were not the thinges to bee perceiued in him which had beene in men afore:and that order was to bee obſerued in the abſence of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. But nowe all thoſe thinges are aboliſhed. Nowe if men inuent thinges of their owne fancie,(as we ſee there is an infinite gulfe of gewgawes in the popedome): what will become of it? The things which God inioyned with his owne mouth tooke their ende at the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And why? For we haue no mo lightes, or teachings in pic- Exod 28.12 Coloſ.1.15. tures; wee haue them not any more in Aarons breſtlap, but wee haue them in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who is the liuely image of God his father, in beholding of whom face to face,we bee there as it were transfigured into the glorie of 2.Cor.3.14. God. As ſainct Paul ſaith, there is no more any veyle in the Goſpel, as there was in the Lawe. Moſes was to haue his face couered with a veile to ſhewe that the Lawe did not yet diſcouer things ſo plainly as the Goſpel doth at this day. If men thẽ take vpon them to inuent figures of their owne braine, what can they be but illuſions from Satan? Wherefore let vs conclude, that when the Prieſtes do apparell themſelues [with their trinkets] in the popedome,they be but maskingtoyes; and wheras in ſo doing they will needes reſemble the Iewes, it is all one as if they trode Ieſus Chriſt vnderfoot,or elſe would burie him, that men might no more looke him in the face,nor he be neere vnto vs, nor wee any more perceiue the worthines that is in him and in his office. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vppon this text where Aarons ornamentes are termed perfections and teachings.

And it is ſaide that his perfections and teachings are of God, to ſhewe that in the gouernement of the Church, it is not for vs to inuent what ſeemeth good vnto vs; but that that matter lyeth ſimply in the will of God, and that whatſoeuer he ordeyneth ought to bee held, and that it is not lawfull for men to attempt any thing in that behalfe,yea and that ſuch additions and minglinges are mere corruptions. Therefore when Moſes ſayeth, Lord God thy Thumim and thy Vrim, thereby he openly witneſſeth, that when men do ſo farre paſſe their boundes, as to frame a gouernement after their owne fancie, and to ordaine laws and ſtatutes in the church, to ſay this is good,for it liketh me well; It is but a tradition that commeth from ſome one man; and when men do ſo preſume of themſelues, it is a taking away of Gods right; and a committing of diueliſh trecherie.And why?Becauſe the Thumim and Vrim belong to none but God. If the figures of the law,which ſeemed to be ſmall things,were reſerued vnto God, ſo as it was not lawfull for the world to adde any thing, no not ſo much as a pins point vnto them;but that the builders of the ſanctuarie and the makers of the prieſtly garments, were to bee gouerned by the holy Ghoſt: ſeing that God declareth therby that he will haue all things grounded vppon his authoritie: What is to be ſaide to it, if they will nowe binde mens conſciences, and ſet vp a newe ſeruice of God, as if they woulde ſay, Thus ſhall God be honoured, and ſo men become lawgiuers, inſomuch that God ſhall not be heard,nor any account bee made of his ſayings, but that euery man may bee his owne ruler,or elſe ſay after the common manner,Our mother the holy Church hath ſo decreed? In what plight ſhould we be then? And yet we ſee this horrible diſorder throughout all the Popedome. Therefore wee may well conclude that there is nothing but vtter defiling of Gods ſeruice; and that all that euer is ſo intytled there, is but meere ydolatrie; and that Gods name is altogether vnhallowed in that behalfe. That is one thing more which we haue to beare in mind concerning the ſaying of Moſes in that he attributeth the matter concerning the prieſtly apparell vnto God alone.

And as we haue ſeene afore, hee calleth Aaron Gods meeke one,or rather the man of his pitie:& this latter interpretation is the fitteſt. Yee ſee then how Aaron was exalted to high dignitie. And why? To the intent men ſhould not ſeeke any reaſon thereof in Aarons owne perſon, Moſes ſetteth downe Gods freegoodneſſe aforehande, after which manner we ſee how ſainct Paul alſo ſpeaketh. He confeſſeth that hee was 1.Cor.15.1[illegible] ſomtime a murderer a perſecuter,a blaſphemer; for he had conſẽted to the ſheading of guiltleſſe bloude: hee was a deadly enemy to the Goſpel; hee was full of bitterneſſe, full of rage, and hee inforced the weakelings to blaſpheme the name of God. Nowe if hee were a rauening woolfe, was hee worthy to bee made a ſheepherde in the Church? Verily hee confeſſeth him ſelf vnworthie,yea and that he was the leaſt of all others. But yet in the meane while hee ſhrowdeth himſelfe vnder the grace of God, ſaying, Paul an Apoſtle. As howe? According to the wil of god the father, according to the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, according to the euerlaſting purpoſe of God. Heere hee ſtoppeth the mouthes of all ſuch as woulde enter into contention with him, to abaſe the dignitie of his Apoſtleſhip; proteſting that it is not grounded vppon his owne merits, nor gotten by his owne purchaſe, and therefore he cannot boaſt thereof, but that all commeth of God. As much doth Moſes heere, ſaying that the Thummim & Vrim, of God belonged vnto him, becauſe God had choſen him, yea euen meerely of his owne gratious goodneſſe. Although Aaron had neuer obtained ſo excellent a ſtate, if God had reſpect to the thinges that were in him: yet neuertheleſſe he was placed in the degree of Prieſthood. And why ſo? Becauſe it was Gods good pleaſure, and further men muſt not diſpute thereof. And heereby wee ſee that when God giueth his gratious giftes to men to ſerue him in any honourable office, his ſo doing is euermore of his owne louing kindneſſe, for hee is not any whit bounde to vs. And ſpecially when the caſe concerneth the preaching of Gods worde, who is hee that ſhalbe found meete for it (ſaith Sainct 2.Cor.2.16 Paul)? The thinges are ſo high that hee crieth out, who is he that can be able thereto? There 2.Cor.3.5.6 is none but God (ſaith he) that giueth abilitie. For without him we ſhould not haue ſo much as one good thought. And ſo wee be doone to vnderſtande, that we on our ſide are vnprofitable, vntill God haue choſen vs, and diſpoſed vs to ſerue him. That being done, we be good, we be readie, we be fit for ẏ purpoſe. Not for any worthineſſe that is in vs, but that euerywhit of it proceedeth of Gods freegoodneſſe & mercy.

By the way, heere is an exception taken againſt Aaron, that God tried him in Maſſa, and that hee ſtoode in contention at the waters of ſtrife. True it is that this may be taken as though Aarons faith had not failed, when God rebuked him. And it is certaine, that at that time, in the deede which is reported heere, Aaron ſhewed a commendable ſtoutneſſe: and yet for all that hee ſwarued aſide, for God condemned him. The place was named Maſſa, that is to ſay, tentation or triall; and after Meriba, which ſignifieth ſtrife, contention, debate. It was the place Exod.17. where the people required water, yea and they required it with grudging and repyning againſt God. There Moſes & Aarō were as it were ouercome: after ẏ ſuſteining of ſo many incounters, they wiſt not what to ſay or what to do. Ah lord, what ſhall we do to this people? Now ſurely there was ſome faultie infirmitie in them, and God who is the competent Iudge thereof, declareth that it was ſo. Yee ſee then that Moſes and Aaron ouerſhot themſelues, ſo as they fell: inſomuch that they were in verie deede baniſhed out of the Lande of Chanaan: they might not enter into it, God excluded them from it: they ſawe it a farre off, but they might not ſet their feete in it. And the reaſon is added expreſly, becauſe (ſaieth hee) yee ſanctified mee Deut.32.51 not before the people; for there ought to haue beene a farre greater conſtancie in them than there was. And although Moſes and Aaron were ſore grieued, and were touched with zeale to the quicke when they ſawe the ſpitefull dealings of the people, and although they laboured to cauſe them to honour God: yet were they not couragious ynough. This would be counted no fault at all in the iudgement of men, as wee haue ſeene heretofore: but God looketh more deepely and cleerely into things, and wee muſt holde our ſelues to the thinges which he telleth vs with his owne mouth. Yee ſee then how Moſes and Aaron are condemned, and yet was there courage in them. For Moſes rebuked the people, ſaying: Come on yee faithleſſe folke, is Num.20.10. not God able to make water to come out of this Rocke? Yes, and that ſhall you ſee in deſpite of you. The people were at that time on a great rore, inſomuch that they would euen haue ſtoned him. Yet notwithſtanding hee behaueth him ſtill as Gods proctor to maintaine his qua- Exod.17. rell, he entereth into the caſe in Gods behalfe, and he hazardeth his life for it. So then there was excellent corage and ſtoutneſſe in Moſes and Aaron. But yet were they put to their triall, ſo as on the one ſide the weakeneſſe of their faith bewrayed it ſelfe, that there was ſome default in it; and they were faine to acknowledge it with humilitie, and patiently to beare ſuch chaſtiſement as God ſent them for it: howbeit, on the otherſide alſo they ſhewed ẏ they were not ſo greatly diſmayed, but that they had ſtill an affection to ſerue God. And ſoothly we ſhal diuers times ſee Gods ſeruauntes ſore ſhaken, and ẏ foraſmuch as they be men they be moued when there commeth any great tempeſt: but yet for all that they do not vtterly quaile. Euen ſo ſtoode the caſe with Moſes and Aaron.

And for that cauſe is it ſaide in this place, Thou trieddeſt him in Maſſa, thou madeſt him to ſtriue [or contend] at the waters of Meriba. And in that reſpect did I ſay, that this might be taken as though Aaron were taunted for not being obedient ynough vnto God at Meriba, and for that hee ſanctified him not by indeuouring himſelfe as he ought to haue done. Neuertheleſſe, it may alſo be noted, (as truth is), that Aaron was tryed as in reſpect of men, and that being ſo tried [or tempted by men,] he was found faithfull, in that hee ſtoode ſo in contention with them. For wee ſee not that he for his part murmured againſt God, neither ſcaped there any worde of grudging from him. Was hee caried with ſo diueliſh rage as to ſay, Shall we die heere for thirſt? No: he would rather haue died a hundred thouſand times, than once haue opened his mouth to caſt forth one word of murmuring againſt God. What befel him then? By reaſō of the ſpitefulnes of the people, there was a fault committed. For Aaron himſelfe held alwayes on Gods ſide: and therefore although he did amiſſe; yet the ſame proceeded not of himſelfe. And it is the very ſame thing wherewith we haue ſeene Moſes vpbraid the people, ſaying that he himſelfe was puniſhed for their rebellions ſake. Deut.1.37. You be the cauſe (ſaith he) that God hath diſappointed me of going into the land of Chanaan. Hee ſaieth not, I am ſhut out of it for mine offence; but hee caſteth the people in the teeth with it, ſaying; you were the cauſe of it. And ſo it is declared yet once againe in this place, that Moſes and Aaron ought not to be the leſſe eſteemed of the people, nor the prieſthood the leſſe honoured for that there was ſome infirmitie in them which was faultie before God. For therewithall they had alſo a wonderfull ſtoutneſſe of minde, which is ynough to ſtoppe the mouthes of all the worlde, whereby Moſes and Aaron ſhewed themſelues faithfull at the ſame time, ſo as a man might well ſee that what feebleneſſe ſo euer was in them, it could not cauſe them to be corrupted and caried away by the leawdneſſe of the people, or make them to forſake their charge; but they continued in weldoing, and ſtoutly withſtoode all temptations and incounters, ſhewing that their deſire was nothing elſe but that God ſhould haue his due deſerued authoritie among the people, and bee obeyed of all men.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to make vs perceiue them more and more, and that hauing rid vs of all our wicked luſts, he drawe vs fully to himſelfe, and that we may dayly profite and increaſe in his grace, vntil ẏ being departed out of this world, we be come to his heauenly glorie: & ẏ foraſmuch as we be now a prieſtly kingdome, 1.Pet.2.9. it may pleaſe him to cloth vs with ẏ righteouſneſſe & vncorruptnes of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; not in figure as the prieſtes of the Lawe were; but by renewing vs in ſuch wiſe by his holy ſpirite, that although wee bee not perfect at the firſt day, yet we may at leaſtwiſe attaine to that perfection which he calleth vs vnto. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the firſt of Iuly, 1556.

The CXCIIII. ſermon, which is the fourth vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

9 Which hath ſaide of his father and of his mother, I haue not ſeene them, nor hath knowen his owne brethren, nor alſo hath knowen his owne children. For they ſhall keepe thy ſayings, and obſerue thy couenants.

10 They ſhal teach thy iudgements vnto Iacob, and thy Law vnto Iſrael. They ſhal ſend vp perfumes to thy noſethrils, and lay whole burnt offerings vpon thine Altar.

11 O Lorde, bleſſe his ſubſtance, and make the worke of his hands pleaſant vnto thee. Breake the backebones of ſuch as hate him, that they may not riſe vp againſt him.

WE be to proceed with the bleſſing of the tribe of Leuy, which I began to declare yeſterday. I tolde you in fewe wordes, that there Moſes intended to ſtabliſh thoſe whom God had choſen to bee his prieſtes, becauſe it was verie needefull to keepe them from contempt of the people, leaſt men might haue made none account of the doctrine which they were to deliuer vnto them: and therefore it behoued them to be in good eſtimation as Gods ſeruaunts and repreſenters of his perſon. And that is the cauſe why Moſes declareth that although Aaron was tried in Maſſa, and ſuffered ſome trouble: yet notwithſtanding God ceaſed not to retaine him ſtill in his ſeruice, yea euen him and all his offſpring. And nowe Moſes ſheweth whereunto God had called the houſe of Leuie, and what was the office of the highprieſt. He ſaith firſt of al, That they knew neither father nor mother, that they had forſaken their owne Children, and that they tolde their brothers they wiſt not who they were. And that is to ſhewe, that foraſmuch as God had choſen them, it behooued them to forget all thinges, that they might giue themſelues wholly vnto him. Nowe wee knowe that when the Prieſtes were preſented as all other oblations Nomb.8.10.11. were; men laide either their one hande or both their hands vppon them; to betoken that they were no more at their owne libertie, but that they were ſãctified to ſuch a vſe, as it behooued euery one of them to imploy themſelues wholly to their office, and to be altogether at the appointment of God. True it is that the ſame condition is required of all the faithfull, for we ought to bee dedicated vnto God in ſacrifice. Rom.12.1. But yet muſt the preachers of the worde leade the daunce, and conſider themſelues to bee double bounde, yea and more ſtraitly. The thing then which Moſes meant to betoken in this text, is that ſeeing God had ſo highly honored noured the tribe of Leuie, as to haue them all to be his Prieſts: it behoued them to forget both father and mother, & to be vnaddicted to their fleſhly affections, yea and to giue ouer eue͂ their owne children. Not that God intended to alter the order of nature, but to ſhewe that when the caſe ſtandeth vppon the performance of their charge, they muſt not bee turned from it by any worldly reſpect, neither muſt any thing withholde them from executing throughly & faithfully whatſoeuer God commaundeth them. Now then, he that will ſerue God muſt not forget his father & mother by forbearing to do his natural duetie towards them: but he muſt preferre God before all men, according to this ge- Luke 14.26. nerall ſaying, that we cannot be the diſciples of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, except wee hate both father and mother. The word hate is yet ſomwhat harder than that which is conteined heere in Moſes: but the meaning is not darke at all. For our Lord Ieſus doth vs to vnderſtand, that wee muſt make ſuch account of him, that both father & mother muſt be as nothing in compariſon of him, that the husbande muſt leaue yͤ loue which hee beareth to his wife, and the father muſt ſet aſide the care of his children, that wee may keepe on our way roundly: inſomuch that when the caſe ſtandeth vppon yeelding record to the Goſpell, and of cleauing to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, all worldly thinges muſt be quite and cleane wyped out of our hearts. And ſo we ſee nowe the meaning of Moſes. And in very deed, the ſame appeared as well in himſelfe as in his brother Aaron. At ſuch time as the Calfe was made and the people had defiled themſelues with ydolatrie, we ſee with what zeale Moſes was carried, and likewiſe all the tribe of Leuie. For hee willed euery man to take his Exod.32,27 ſworde in his hande. Let vs goe (ſaith hee) and ſanctifie you your handes to the Lorde. For in ſo doing yee ſhall ſhewe your ſelues to be rightly zealous of Gods ſeruice, in that yee kill your owne brethren without ſparing, ſo as in this caſe the order of nature be put vnder foote, to ſhewe that God is aboue all, and ought to beare chiefeſt ſway. Seeing then that Moſes maketh ſuch an execution, that hee carieth with him the whole tribe of Leuie: wee ſee it is not ſaide in vaine that the Prieſtes executed vengeance both on father and mother, that they did ſhut their eyes againſt al that euer might coole them or reſtreine them; and that God had ſo rauiſhed them, as they ſought nothing but the maintenance of his honour, and the executing of his vengeance vpon ſuch abhomination as had bin committed againſt him for to deface his honor in Iſrael. Neuertheleſſe we muſt note that no one deede is ſpoken of heere alone: but Moſes meant to ſhewe in fewe wordes, that God had choſen that tribe, with condition that it ſhould be holy vnto him, and that they all ſhould ſhewe the way to all the reſt of the people. But wee know it is vnpoſſible to pleaſe God, ſo long as wee bee too much affectioned towardes men. And therefore we haue heere a rule, that if wee intende to walke aright, and not to halt before God; we muſt not be intangled in our fleſhly affections, no not euen in thoſe which are moſt commendable, or at leaſtwiſe which may haue moſt excuſe. Men cannot condemne him which honoureth his father and mother, for it is a vertue, and wee knowe that God hath commaun- Exod.20.12. Ephe.6.2. ded it with a promiſe. The man that loueth his wife, ſhall not bee the leſſe eſteemed for it: but what ſhalbe ſaide of the man which hath not a care of his children? He were worſe tha͂ a brute beaſt. And Sainct Paul ſaith that ſuch folk ſhal- 1.Tim.5.8. be condemned by the vnbeleeuers, becauſe the vnbeleeuers do ſhewe them their leſſon. Then is it a commendable vertue for a man to loue his father and his mother and his neighbours: but yet muſt all theſe bee forgotten when God commeth in place, and when his honour is put into the balance to be compared with the duety which wee owe to all creatures. For then, (as I ſaide afore) God muſt go formoſt, and al the reſidue muſt follow. Inſomuch that if we ſhoulde be turned quite away from them for the doing of ſuch things as God commandeth to be done for his honour, the order of nature ought to beare no ſway in that behalfe, but rather to bee vtterly ouerthrowen.

True it is that here he ſpeaketh of the Leuits which were in olde time: yet notwithſtanding, they which at this day do preach Gods worde are bound to the like, and ought to vnderſtande that Gods putting of them in that office & degree, is to the intent they ſhoulde ſo giue themſelues vnto him, as that they ſhould not be turned away from him, neither for regard of their owne perſons, nor for any earthly affection, nor for any loue of the world. Then muſt they fight againſt thoſe thinges; and although there bee great hardnes in it; yet muſt they inforce themſelues neuertheleſſe. For we ſhall not ſo fully ouermaſter our ſelues at yͤ firſt, that we ſhalbe able to forget both our wiues and children. But yet is it no excuſe to alledge that we be weake, and yͭ the things which we haue by kind cannot be ſo ſoone forgotten: we muſt fight againſt the͂ neuertheleſſe. For if we be rechleſſe, heere our condemnation is giuen vpon vs. How then ſhall the miniſters of Gods word performe their dutie faithfully? Euen by hauing the one foote co͂tinually lifted vp to depart out of the worlde, ſo as neither houſhold nor any thing elſe do hold them backe from dedicating themſelues wholly vnto God, be it to liue or die. That is the end whereat we muſt begin. Now in very deede that cannot be done throughly: but yet muſt wee indeuour and inforce our ſelues to that ende, and dayly labour and take paines to profite, & to go forward in that behalf. Moreouer foraſmuch as nowadayes al of vs are Leuits & a kingly prieſt- 1.Pet.2.9. hood, as the people of Iſrael were: let vs note yͭ this matter belongeth partly vnto vs all. For we heare how it is ſaide by the Prophet, that in the Eſay.66.21. reigne of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, thoſe which afore were but Leuits, to be porters of yͤ temple, or to make cleane the veſſels, or to doe the reſidue of the baſe ſeruices; ſhalbe high prieſts: and that the common people which durſt not enter into the Temple afore, ſhalbe of the order and degree of Leuits. And in very deede, at this day Heb.10.19. 20. the ſanctuarie of God is ſet open vnto vs by the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the veile is rent aſunder, and wee goe in vnto the maieſtie of God, as the high prieſtes did of olde time vnder the Lawe. Seeing that God hath ſo greatly inhonoured the faithfull vnder the Goſpell, that hee hath ſet then in equall degree with thoſe which were Leuits in the materiall tabernacle which was but a figure: it behoooueth vs well to conſider what hath beene ſaid concerning the Prieſts of old time; and all of vs from the higheſt to the loweſt, ought to know that we cannot ſerue God without forgetting our father and mother, according to the forealledged ſaying of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who ſpeaketh there not of his diſciples onely. True it is that it behoued them to be the foreleaders, and by their example to induce the faithfull to the reſtreining and diſpatching of their owne affection, and of all that euer they haue of nature; but yet our Lord Ieſus ſheweth that no man can followe him, nor come vnto him to continue ſtedfaſtly in yͤ Goſpel, but with condition of forgetting his father and mother, and of forſaking his wife, and of giuing ouer his own children. After what manner? Not that we do it of our owne head, for euery man ought to diſcharge his dutie as much as he can. But if a man bee called to forſake his wife and houſhold for witneſſing of yͤ Goſpel: he muſt be turned from them as if he had his bowels plucked from him; and yet for all yͭ hee muſt rather chooſe to haue the one halfe of himſelfe taken from him, than in any wiſe to ſhrinke away or to eſtraunge himſelfe from Ieſus Chriſt. That is the thing which we haue to gather vpon that text.

Nowe hee addeth thereunto, That they ſhall keepe the ſayings of the Lorde, and holde faſt his couenant. True it is, that foraſmuch as the Law was giuen to all the children of Abraham without exception, the thing that is ſpoken here belonged alike to all the other tribes. And wee haue ſeene already, that the Leuites were not the onely folke which were commaunded to keepe the doctrine conteined therin: but it was ſaide [indifferently to all the reſt,] Yee ſhall Deut.27.1. keepe my Statutes. When God ſaid ſo, hee directed his ſpeech to all the children of Iſrael. Yet notwithſtanding (as I ſaide afore) it behooued the prieſts who had the charge of drawing the people, and of holding them vnder the obedience of God, to ſhewe them the way, and to haue a more ardent zeale to keepe the lawe faithfully. That is the cauſe why Moſes giueth them that title. But wee muſt note that theſe wordes keepe and maintaine, importe two thinges; that is to wit, that the Leuites ſhoulde teach the people the Lawe (as ſhalbe ſhewed more at large); and alſo holde them in awe, that the religion might be preſerued pure, ſo as the people might not ſtart away to ydolatrie and ſuperſtition, nor leade a wicked and looſe life; but that God might bee honoured and ſerued. That is the firſt keeping which wee haue of the doctrine. And for the ſame cauſe doeth Moſes adde, They ſhall teach thy Lawe vnto Iſrael, and thy Commaundementes vnto Iacob. Then was it not ynough for the children of Leuie to walke vndefiledly and according to the doctrine of the Lawe; but alſo it behooued them all to haue the doctrine in their mouth, to giue inſtruction to their brethren, & to bring them alwayes to the knowledge of God, and to make them continue therein to the end.

The ſeconde manner of keeping was in good life, by ſhewing example and by being zelous to holde the people ſtill in order when they ſawe them ſtart aſide, as we knowe that the worlde is ouer fraile, yea and that we be ſo inclined to naughtineſſe and vice, that it is a great matter to vs if we be not vtterly diſſolute. Therefore it ſtoode the children of Leuie in hande to imploy themſelues thereabouts. And here we ſee, firſt that God meant not to make ydols in his Church, when he ordeined Shepherds and other men to haue ſome ouerſight and authoritie there. And if it were ſo in the time of the Lawe; much more ought it to bee ſo at this day. For (as wee ſhall ſee againe anon) the Prieſtes had the Ceremonies and manie like thinges, ſo as they were ſufficiently occupied about them, although they had not medled at all with teaching. But nowadays al thoſe things are ceaſed, and there remaineth no more but yͤ preaching of the Goſpel, and the miniſtring of the ſacraments, which are but feaw in number, and haue not ſo much adoe as was vnder the figures of old time. That is the cauſe why I ſaid, that if the Prieſtes which were before the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt were bound to be Gods meſſengers in preaching his word and in giuing good inſtruction to the people, or elſe they were after a ſort diſgraded from their office: what ſhall become of it nowadayes, when ſuch as are ordained ſhepherds in the Church, haue none other charge but to teach folke publikely and priuately, and therewithall to miniſter the ſacraments? Seeing it is ſo, then is there no excuſe for ſuch as ſay they haue any charge or ſpirituall gouernement in the Church, if therewithall they haue not the doctrin in their mouth. Wherby it is apparãt, that in the Popedome there is nothing but confuſed diſorder, and that all thoſe which nowadayes doe name themſelues Biſhops and Prelates, are but ſcarebugs ſet vp by the diuell to bleare the eyes of the ignorant, and are folkes vnworthy to bee counted of yͤ flock, foraſmuch as they haue peruerted Gods order, and made ſuch a bottomles pit, that a man cannot diſcerne any remnant of that which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt had ordained among the faithfull. Seeing they haue altered and imbaced all thinges after that faſhion, they bee not worthy to bee of the number of Gods people, but rather of his deadly foes, and much leſſe ought they to be reputed for Sheepeherds. But foraſmuch as this deſerueth to be laid forth more at length; let vs begin at thoſe which are ſpoken of heere.

It is ſaide, That the children of Leuie ſhall keepe the ſayings of the Lorde, and maintaine his doctrine, and preach his Lawe in Iacob. Heere we ſee that becauſe the worlde is ſo weake, and ſo eaſily turned away from God & from the right way; it is requiſite that Gods word ſhold be preached, and that there ſhould be men appointed thereunto. It might be ſaid that euery man may bee his owne teacher, and that there needeth not any chooſing of ſome ſmall number of men to guide the reſt; for ſeeing we haue the Law and the holy ſcriptures, are not they ynough to gouerne vs? A man might ſo ſay. Yea, but they which giue out ſuch ſpeeches, did neuer examin their owne weakeneſſe, or rather how wicked the inclination of their nature is. For our Lord hath ſet downe an order, which he knoweth to be profitable for vs. And thereby he hath ſhewed vs, that of our ſelues we ſhould be caried away out of hande vnto euill, if wee were not reſtreined by the meane which he hath giuen vnto vs. And therfore it was requiſite that there ſhould alwayes be men appointed in the church to preach Gods word, to admoniſh the people, and to holde them in awe, and to withholde them from diſorder, ſo as the Religion might not be corrupted. We ſee then howe God condemneth our vnfaithfulneſſe in this behalfe, ſhewing vs that if we be not held back as it were by force vnder his yoke; we wil by and by play yͤ loſe coltes, and euery of vs will fling away after ſuch a ſort, that we ſhall become as ſtray beaſts. Seing that God telleth vs it, let vs learn to humble our ſelues, and to conſider what neede wee haue to hearken to his doctrin and to reſt theron. But there are a great many of fantaſtical perſons, which thinke it ynough for them to haue taken ſome taſt of yͤ Goſpel. And thereuppon it commeth that the world is nowadayes ſo full of vngodlynes as is ſeene euerywhere; inſomuch that the moſt part of ſuch as haue heard yͤ Goſpel become dullards, worldlings, and naughtipackes, euen like dogs, skorning all religion, or elſe letting it ſlippe like water (as they ſay) ſo as they paſſe not to continue ſtill brutiſh, yea and vtterly ſenſleſſe. The world at this day is full of ſuch vermin and doung. And what is the cauſe thereof? The foreſaid Rechleſnes, & finally alſo pride, where through a great number do beare themſelues in hand, yͭ they haue knowledge ynough to rule themſelues wel, & that it is needleſſe now to learne any more, and yͭ euery man may gouerne himſelfe as he liſteth. By reaſon wherof doctrin is deſpiſed & god is vnregarded, and therfore he muſt needs withdraw his ſpirit from ſuch folke. So then let vs learne to ſubmit our ſelues with all lowlynes and carefulneſſe to yͤ general rule which god hath ſet in his church, euen for euer; which is, that there ſhoulde bee men which ſhould haue the charge to teach vs, and that we ſhould hearken vnto them, and by that meane continue faſt knit together in the obedience of our faith with indiſſoluble bond, & become one body in verie deede, agreeing al in Gods truth and in the pure Religion. Marke it therefore for a ſpeciall point, that we haue then the true token that we be of Gods flocke, and of his Church, when his word is purely preached among vs, and euery of vs doth quietly receiue the doctrine at the mouth of ſuch as haue the charge to preach it. And therewithall, as I haue ſaide afore, it behoueuth thoſe which are called vnto that ſtate, to looke well to themſelues that they ſurmiſe not to thēſelues a fantaſticall dignitie in this world, to make thēſelues ydols. For wherefore be we ſhepherds, but to giue men the foode of life? In reſpect whereof it behoueth vs to bring folke vnto God, and to holde them ſtill vnder his gouernment. And that is vtterly vnpoſſible to be done, vnleſſe gods word doe ſounde and ring loude and ſhirle in our mouthes, ſo as folk may haue their eares beaten therewith, and be dayly prouoked to come vnto God, and to ſticke vnto him with ſuch firmneſſe and conſtancy, as wee may neuer ſtart away againe. For in all ages men haue miſuſed yͤ things which were ordeined for their welfare, & ſpecially vnto the people of God. We ſee howe the Prieſts themſelues ſtepped awry vnder the law. That is yͤ cauſe why yͤ Prophets crie out againſt them, that they be dumbe dogs, yͭ they be blinde watchmen, yͭ God had ſet thē as on a high ſtage or watchtowre, to the intent they ſhould keepe good watch for the preſeruation of the people & of the true Religion. But they were blinde. Again, he wold haue their mouthes open to teach & that whenſoeuer they ſaw any miſbehauiour, they ſhould crie out againſt it with open throat, as it is ſaid in yͤ Prophet Eſay. But they haue bin as dumbe dogs, they haue done nothing but fill their bellies, and as for the people, they paſt not though they wēt al to deſtruction & decay. We ſee then how yͭ vnder the Lawe, the Prieſtes did wickedly abuſe their vocatiō, inſomuch yͭ whereas they were vtterly corrupted, yet neuertheleſſe they would needes take vpon them to bee men of great valor, & be named Prelates of the Church. Howbeit in yͤ end, when God had well rebuked them, he giueth definitiue ſentence of condemnation vpon them by his Prophet Malachie, who was yͤ laſt of them. No, no (ſaieth he) pretend no more yͤ name of your father Leuie, ſay not any more yͭ God hath choſen you to the dignitie of Prieſthood, for Leuie walked in the feare of God, & kept his law: and the verie condition whereupen God called you, is that the lawe ſhould be in your mouth, ſo as men might ſeeke for learning at your hands, and you be as Gods meſſēgers and Angels. But you haue corrupted and falſified all thinges. And therefore I alſo doe renounce you and diſclaime you. After that maner did God ſpeake to the prieſts of old time.

Eſay 58.1.

Malach.2.6. 7.8.

Likewiſe let not vs thinke it ſtrange nowadayes, that theſe horned beaſtes of the Popedome doe ſtill vſurpe the title of Prelates and Biſhoppes, and will needes bee worſhipped, vnder colour of vaunting themſelues to haue the gouernement of the Church, which indeede is a ſtarke lye; for it behoueth vs to conſider whether they bee ſet vp by God or no, or whether they haue thruſt in themſelues or no. They haue no ſure grounde. For as it is ſaide in the fifth Chapter to the Hebrewes, No man ought to take authoritie vppon him in the Church, for it is not for any man to intrude himſelfe, but it behooueth vs to be called. Heb.5.4. Certaine it is that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt declaring the will of God his father, and his owne will alſo, ordeined not dumbe folke thereunto; which ſhoulde but vaunt themſelues with a two-horned Myter and ſuch other gewgawes. Hee meant not to play a pageant, that men ſhoulde diſguiſe themſelues, and in the meane while no man know to what purpoſe thoſe things ſerued. Hee intended not that men ſhoulde play murlimewes, as one that coulde wel skill to mocke at God and all his doctrine by making of Croſſes and bleſſing of Altars. Our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt did not put forth any ſuch defilementes in his Church: but Satan corrupted all things. And therefore they which at this day doe terme themſelues Prelates in the Popedome, cannot alledge that they be ſent of God, nor that they ought to haue any authoritie or credite in the name of Ieſus Chriſt. For hee diſclaimeth them becauſe they haue not any likeneſſe to his inſtitution. Sith it is ſo, we may boldly conclude, that in Popery there is no Church at al, but a helliſh Synagogue: and that whoſoeuer medleth there or thruſteth himſelfe in among them, forſaketh Ieſus Chriſt, and cutteth himſelfe off as a rotten member from his Church. Loe at what point the Papiſtes are. It may bee that they will call vs heretikes and Schiſmatikes as they doe indeede. Yea, but they bee not our Iudges, and wee may boldly laugh at the ſentence which they giue vppon vs, as vaine. For wee haue our warrant in heauen, who alloweth vs, and holdeth them as accurſed. For we know that the true marke of ſheepeherds is to preach Gods worde, that men may inquire at their mouth howe to behaue themſelues according to Gods will, knowing that it is hee which ſendeth them vnto vs. And therefore whenſoeuer wee haue the Goſpell purely preached vnto vs, and that wee agree in vnitie of faith: God doeth vs to vnderſtande that hee dwelleth among vs, and our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt doeth then ſhewe himſelfe to bee the heade of that whole bodie. That is the thing which wee haue to gather vppon this text, where it is ſaide that the children of Leuie ſhall keepe Gods couenant. And why? For elſe it might periſh in the worlde; according whereunto 1.Tim.3.15. Saint Paul ſaieth, that the Church is the Arch, the Piller, and the vpholder of Gods trueth. And howe is that? Becauſe that men (as I haue ſaide afore) are ſo inclined to vanitie and leaſings, that they ſhoulde bee alienated out of hande from the pure Religion, if they were held ſtill by that meane. The Church then is as a Gardian to Gods trueth, to the intent it ſhoulde not bee done away, but that we ſhould alwayes haue that light among vs, and that wee might vnderſtand that where preaching is, there Gods voice ringeth in our eares, ſo as if wee were neuer ſo ſore ſhaken too and fro, yet doeth God giue vs a ſure ſtay wherewith to reſiſt all temptations. Yee ſee then how the keeping of Gods couenant is committed to the Leuits, and generally to all ſuch as haue the office of ſheepherds among Gods people.

Moreouer, for the better maintaining of the pure Religion, it behooueth them to haue a zeale of Gods honour; they muſt all their life long indeuour to maintaine the doctrine, and therewithall they muſt haue their mouthes open to preach the worde that is committed vnto them, to the ende that that treaſure bee not loſt nor buried, but that all men may bee made partakers thereof. They ſhall preach thy lawe then vnto Iacob, and thy doctrine vnto Iſrael: ſo as Gods worde muſt needes be publiſhed if we will ſhew our ſelues to bee a people dedicated vnto him. Againe, let vs marke alſo that heere is ſpeciall mention made of Gods worde and of his lawe, to doe vs to wit, that God will not haue mens inuentions to reigne among his people, but will haue men to hold themſelues wholly vnto him, and (as yee woulde ſay) to hang altogether vpon his mouth. Nowe then, the children of Leuie haue not here a libertie giuen them to forge lawes after their owne liking, and to ſet foorth whatſoeuer they liſt as the Pope and al his haue done. And it is to be ſeene yet ſtill at this day howe the ſame tyrannie reigneth in ſuch ſort, that whatſoeuer is termed by the name of Gods ſeruice in Poperie, is but a confuſed heape of all manner of dotages, whereunto euery man hath put to his peece, and yet they cannot alledge one ſyllable of holy ſcripture to ſhew that God alloweth their doings. But men haue ſtepped foorth through their owne diueliſh raſhnes, & haue made Lawes and Statutes to binde mens conſciences vnder paine of deadly ſinne: and moreouer haue coyned articles of faith at their owne pleaſure. From whence then hath all the doctrine of poperie beene taken? Not from the fountaine of ẏ truth; but from the helliſh & ſtinking puddle of Satan, where there is nothing but confuſion. Where haue they founde their praying vnto Sainctes, but in their owne braine, or rather that Satan hauing forged it in his ſhoppe, hath beſotted them therewith? Againe, where finde they any of the thinges which they ſpeak concerning works of ſupererogation, Merits, the Apes toyes of their Maſſe, and all their Ceremonies in generall? It is certaine that al theſe things were ſet forth by men. But contrariwiſe our Lorde hath tolde vs here, that he meaneth not to haue thoſe to put forth any thing of their owne, whom hee hath appointed to beare abroade his worde. For the commiſſion which hee gaue to the Leuites, was to ſet thoſe thinges abroade which they had receiued of him, and to deale them forth plainly and rightly to the people, taking good heede that they did not alter or falſifie any thing. And therefore let vs marke, that wee ſhall then bee allowed for Gods people, when our faith flittereth not, after the lure of mortall men, without knowing why wee beleeue, but that wee reſt wholly vppon God; and that when wee knowe that wee haue his worde to rule vs by; then will hee vpholde and auowe vs to bee his Church. But yet muſt wee alwayes come backe to this, that it is not ynough for vs to haue the lawe written, and to haue Gods worde in our handes; and to make a priuate reading thereof at home in our houſes: but the ſame worde muſt alſo bee preached and expounded vnto vs. And why ſo? Becauſe Gods will is that it ſhoulde be ſo, and therefore wee muſt not diſpute vppon it. For why? The order which God hath ſet among vs, is not to bee broken. Neither hath hee doone it without cauſe and iuſt reaſon (as I haue ſaide alreadie) conſidering the frailtie that is in vs, and how eaſily wee be led to ſwarue aſide.

Moſes addeth heereunto, That they ſhall put vp the perfume vnto the noſethrilles of the Lorde, and lay the whole burnt offerings vppon his Altar. This concerneth the Ceremonies. For vnder the Lawe they had thinges which we haue not nowadayes, namely the figures of the things which were fulfilled in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For the Prieſthoode did vs to vnderſtande, that the people coulde not haue any acceſſe vnto GOD, without ſome meane. And when the people came to worſhippe God, and to offer ſacrifices; they helde themſelues in yͤ outmoſt court. There was the firſt part wherein they all held themſelues and it was not lawfull for them to preace any further. There was alſo yͤ ſanctuarie for the prieſts, and lodgings for the tribe of Leuie. Alſo there was the great Sanctuarie whereinto the highprieſt entered all alone with great ſolemnitie. And all this ſerued to ſhewe yet more liuely the death and paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But nowe all thoſe things are come to an end. For there is no more ſhadowing, the veile (as it is ſaid) is broken aſunder, and we haue the heauẽly ſanctuarie wherunto we be called right forth, and Ieſus Chriſt hath ſet it open for vs. And ſo there needeth nowe no more burntoffering, there needeth no more ſacrifiſing for ſinnes: for our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath by his one only ſacrifice wiped away the ſins of the world, & made an euerlaſting attonement, the vertue whereof can neuer be diminiſhed. As often then as we will preace vnto God, it is not for vs to bring thither either calfe or ſheep, but we muſt reſort to the bloudſhed of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, becauſe that thereby the euerlaſting redemption is purchaſed vnto vs. Nowe we ſee wherein the Prieſtes of the olde lawe differed from vs. Yet notwithſtanding, thoſe which are ordeined at this day to preach Gods worde ought to knowe that God will haue them to ſhewe the way in praying to him. And to that ende ſerued the perfumes that were made in the Temple. Let vs not thinke that God taketh pleaſure in any ſweete ſents, though mention bee made of his noſethrilles after that manner: for wee knowe hee hath no bodie, and therefore wee muſt not imagine him to bee like our ſelues: but the holy ſcripture ſpeaketh after that faſhion, becauſe we comprehend him not in his maieſtie. As for the perfumes then which were vnder the lawe, they ſignifie nothing elſe but the ſauour that is in our prayers and petitions, when wee come to offer our ſelues into the preſence of our God. True it is that all of vs both great and ſmall, may bleſſe the name of our God and yeelde him thankes. True it is that wee may with Rom.8.15. full libertie and open mouth call vppon him as our father, becauſe that in Ieſus Chriſt hee auoweth vs for his children. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, yet was that charge committed ſpecially to the miniſters of Gods worde, as is ſaide thereof in the ſixth Chapter of the Actes of the Apoſtles. It is ſaide that wee muſt Act.6.4. giue our ſelues to preaching and praying. And howe? Belongs it not to the whole bodie to doe ſo too? Yes verilie. But (as I haue ſaide) it is requiſite that thoſe to whom GOD hath committed the charge of his Church, and ought to watche ouer it, ſhoulde bee carefull to praye, as who ſhoulde ſay, yea Lorde, This is a charge which I were neuer able to beare, except I were vphelde by thy power: wherefore I pray thee vouchſafe to direct mee and ſtrengthen mee; and therewithall vouchſafe alſo to maintaine thoſe who thou haſt alreadie gathered together vnder thy banner, and to drawe thoſe thither which are away from it. Yea and ſhewing other men the way to pray, wee ought to frame our wordes after ſuch a ſort, as other men may take them as at our mouth. When the Miniſter is in the pulpit, hee is to vtterfoorth the common prayer, and all the reſidue are to ſay Amen, accordingly as Sainct Paul ſpeaking thereof in the fourteenth Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, ſaieth that 1.Cor.14.15 when prayer is made in the name of the whole congregation, there ought no moe but one to ſpeake, and all the reſt ought to aunſwere Amen; becauſe that they which ought to teach in Gods name, ought alſo to rule the reſt, and to prouoke them to prayer and ſupplication, by their example. And therefore let vs marke, that whereas heere is mention made of perfumes and ſacrifiſes; let vs (ſay I) mark the thing yͤ was peculiar to the Prieſts, namely how God would haue thẽ to guide the people to hope that there ſhould be a redemption wrought by the bleſſed ſeede of Abraham; and that the people were to be inured thereunto. As for vs, we haue not that office, yͤ is to wit, to be as in yͤ perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt to make ſacrifices. But we haue the Sacramentes; we haue Baptiſme, which ſerueth to ſhewe howe we be made cleane before God: and wee haue the Lordes ſupper, wherein it is ſhewed vs that wee bee nouriſhed with the ſubſtance of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Nowe then let vs vnderſtande, that as the Prieſtes were ordeined to repreſent in the Temple the Mediator which was to come: ſo we at this day doe repreſent him after another manner. Not by doing as yͤ Papiſts do who haue plaid yͤ Apes: For in their Maſſe (ſay they) they make a ſacrifice: but it is an abhomination which ſerueth to aboliſh the death and paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Nowe the vſe of the Sacramentes is cleane repugnant thereunto: For they ſerue vs to ſhewe in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, that we haue bin once waſhed & made cleane, and that by meanes thereof men are reconciled by the ſacrifice of his death which was offered vp for them. Alſo when wee miniſter the Lords ſupper, we rehearſe what was ſaid by our Math.26.26 & 1.Cor.11.24. Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: This is my body which is deliuered for you: this my bloude which is ſhed for the ſaluation of the world. Seeing then that we nowadayes do miniſter the Sacraments after that manner; we take not vpon vs the thing that belongeth to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt or to his office: but rather we ſende the people to the euerlaſting ſacrifice whereby we be reconcyled vnto God, ſo as we neede not any other meane or helpe than that. Moreouer in ſteede of the materiall perfumes which were in the Temple, at this day wee offer vp prayers vnto God, as thinges that caſt a ſweete ſmell vnto him.

Furthermore whereas it is ſaide that God bleſſed the ſubſtance of Leuie, & accepted the worke of his handes, and that hee breaketh the backebones of all thẽ that ſet thẽſelues againſt him: therby Moſes doth vs to vnderſtande that wee haue neede to pray our Lord Ieſus Chriſt to maintaine thoſe whom hee hath choſen and ſhouled out to preach his worde. For all Satans ſeeking is to plucke vp all the ſeede, as wee ſee is come to paſſe. For the diuell hath founde out ſuttle ſhifts to make many ſorts of ſhepeherds, Churchmen, and Clergimen. Wee knowe that the number of the Popiſh Clergie is infinite. There are ſuch a ſort of offices, and ſo many liueries of men of the Church as they terme them, that a man cannot tell at what point to bee. If a man ſhould recken vp the orders of Friers, hee ſhoulde bee at his wittes end, there is ſuch a rabble of them as woulde amaſe a man. Yee ſhall ſee their gray Fryers, white Friers, blacke Friers, and Friers of all ſortes. Againe there is ſuch a howge heape of ſtates and offices in the Popedome: as Patriarks, Archbiſhoppes, Biſhops, Archdeacons, Deanes, and other inferiour offices; as woulde make a man to wonder. Beſides this, there are a ſort of Sacramentes, to deceiue men the better, and to giue a pompe and maieſtie to al their gewgawes, which are but ſlights to ſerue Satan withall. For they bee all illuſions framed in his workehouſe. And of all this rout there is not ſo much as any one taile that doth his duetie in teaching Gods worde. Wee ſee then howe Satans wylyneſſe is ſuch, that hee will bring in maskingtoyes ynowe, and iuggling-trickes ynowe to holde ſtill the worlde in errour and ſuperſtition, vnder pretence that they may ſay, wee haue prelates, wee haue men of the Church, wee haue Clergimen. And in the meane while the thinges which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ordained are aboliſhed.

For this cauſe Moſes ſaieth, That God maintaineth Leuies ſubſtance, and that hee breaketh and cruſheth all ſuch as ſet themſelues againſt him. They that intende to ſerue God faithfully and to preach his worde, ſhall neuer want enemies to make warre againſt them, according as it is tolde vnto Ieremie, Goe thy wayes, I haue appointed thee to fight. Ier.1.10. Inſomuch that the man which ſerueth God in bearing his worde abroade faithfully ſhall neuer haue peace, nor goe vnpinched and vnuexed, nor bee without good ſtore of enemies. But what? Heere Moſes comforteth all ſuch as imploye themſelues that way. Although the worlde bee againſt them, and it ſeeme that they ſhoulde bee ouerwhelmed euery day: yet will GOD maintaine them, and breake the heades of all their enemies; according to this which is ſaide vnto Ieremie, Goe thy way, thou muſt fight: Iere.1.19. but thou ſhalt haue the vpper hande. Thou muſt bee faine to haue a foreheade of braſſe, that thou maiſt ſet thy ſelfe againſt the whole worlde and withſtande them. For in the ende they ſhalbe all broken and ouerthrowen before thee. Seeing wee haue this promiſe, let vs hold our owne & be ſtedfaſt, though wee ſee the whole worlde ſteppe vp againſt vs, knowing that God will beate downe all that ſet themſelues after that faſhion againſt them which indeuour to ſerue him faithfully. Moreouer let vs knowe alſo that this is ſpoken for all the faithfull, to the ende they ſhoulde bee deſirous to haue Gods worde maintained, and men to preach it, and that they ſhould all reach their handes vnto them. Let euerie man in his degree doe the beſt he can, that ſuch as do the duetie of Sheepherds, (ſuch as doe it, I ſay, and not ſuch as bragge and boaſt of it), may be ſtabliſhed and helped, ſo as there may bee an acorde betweene ſuch as report themſelues to bee the Children of God, and ſuch as feede them with the foode that God giueth them. That then is the thing whereat Moſes amed. Let vs note further, how it is not without cauſe that Moſes exhorteth the people to make ſuch intreatance for the bleſſing of Leuie and of his ſubſtance. For why? If wee bee deſirous that God ſhould continually prouide for his church: it behoooueth vs to haue a care to pray for thoſe to whom he hath committed the charge thereof. And if wee through our vnthankfulneſſe cauſe not God to bereaue vs of ſo great a benefite; let vs aſſure our ſelues that wee ſhall neuer want good Sheepeherds. Nowe then if our vnthankfulneſſe cauſe not the contrarie, let vs knowe that our Lord will alwayes prouide vs of fit and able men, and that he will hold them vnder his ſafekeeping, and maintaine them in ſpite of Satan and all the force of the worlde.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to make vs to feele them more and more, that wee may miſlike them: and therewithall to worke ſo mightily as we may not be turned away from him as wee haue beene, but that wee may proceede ſtill in the renewment which he hath commanded vs, vntill we haue throughly attained thereunto, & that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt do ſo reigne among vs, as we may bee true prieſts vnto him, becauſe that by his meanes wee alſo doe obtaine that grace and dignitie before God his father. And ſo let vs all ſay; Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the ſecond of Iuly, 1556.

The CXCV. ſermon, which is the fifth vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

12 Alſo he ſaide of Beniamin, The beloued of the Lorde ſhall dwell ſafelie by him. He ſhalbe a ſhadowe ouer him all the day, and he ſhall dwell betwixt his ſhoulders.

13 Alſo he ſaid of Ioſeph, His Land is bleſſed of the Lorde, through the heauenly ſweeteneſſe of the deaw, and of the waterſprings lying beneath,

14 And through the ſweetneſſe of the fruits of the Sunne, and the ſweetneſſe of the influence of the Moone,

15 And through the toppe of the auncient mountaine, & through the ſweetneſſe of the euerlaſting hilles,

16 And through the ſweetneſſe of the earth, and the plentifulneſſe therof. And the good fauour of him that dwelt in the buſh, ſhall come plentifully vppon the heade of Ioſeph, and vpon the Crowne of the Nazarits head among his brethren.

17 His beawtie is as the firſt borne of a bull, and his hornes are as the hornes of an Vnicorne. With them ſhall hee daſh the people together vnto the ends of the earth. Theſe are the thouſands of Ephraim and the thouſands of Manaſſes.

YEſterday in the bleſſing of Leuie, we ſawe this promiſe, that God will mainetaine ſuch as preach his worde faithfully, inſomuch that although they haue many enemies in this world, and bee aſſailed on all ſides; yet are they ſure that God will ſhewe himſelfe on their ſide, and ſtrengthen them when he ſeeth that Satan ſtreyneth himſelf by all meanes to make cleane riddance of them. And therein he hath an eye to yͤ welfare of all his people. For Gods Church ſhoulde periſh, if it were not preſerued by good and pure doctrine. God then muſt bee faine to reach out his mightie hande ouer all thoſe which preach his word, to the intent they may be mainteined though all the world ſtriue to ouerthrow them.

Nowe he ſpeaketh of Beniamin, and he ſaith, That he ſhall dwell ſafely by God, and be his welbeloued; and that God will ſhelter him and dwell betwixt his ſhoulders. I haue told you already that heere Moſes confirmeth and warranteth the promiſes which God had vttered afore by the mouth of Iacob: or elſe that where there was any hardneſſe in them, Moſes mitigateth the ſame, to the intent that the faithfull ſhould not bee troubled out of meaſure. As touching the tribe of Beniamin, Iacob had ſaide that it ſhoulde bee like a woolfe that ſnatcheth vp his pray in the morning, and diuideth the ſpoile at night. For that is the natiue ſenſe. Beniamin then ſhalbe as a rauening woolfe, alwayes giuen to the pray: inſomuch that when hee hath robbed in the morning, he ſhall diuide the ſpoile at night alſo. It is a harde condition that a people ſhoulde liue vppon robbing and rauening: and it might ſeeme by that meanes that they were diſgraded. For we knowe that all men will hate them that vſe ſuch violence and liue vpon the ſpoile of other men by doing them harme and anoyance. To be ſhort, it ſeemeth that the tribe of Beniamin ſhoulde become as robbers. Truely this was ſpoken in reſpect that in the ende they ſhoulde bee placed in the borders or marches of two kingdomes; which thing came to paſſe when the kingdome of Iſrael was departed from the tribe of Iuda. For then the one halfe of the tribe of Beniamin abode on the one ſide, and the other halfe on the other ſide; by reaſon whereof they were as members rent in peeces. And becauſe the firſt brunts lighted vppon them, ſo as they were faine to beare the firſt blowes: it behooued them alſo to be men of warre. That was the thing which Iacob had an eye vnto. Yet coulde it not bee but that the Beniamits muſt bee grieued, ſeeing that God did ſet them there, to maintaine themſelues by violence, and to bee alwayes with ſworde in hande. It was a verie harde caſe, whereat the faithfull might be ſore grieued and diſquieted. Heere therefore Moſes qualifieth the thing which might ſeeme ouer ſharpe in yͤ Propheſie of Iacob; in reſpect wherof he ſaith yͤ

Gen.49.17.

Beniamin ſhalbe Gods derling, and that he ſhall dwell ſafely by him. Soothly it was requiſite that the Beniamits,(at leaſtwiſe the faithfull ſort of thẽ) ſhould be comforted,becauſe there befel horrible enormities, ſo as it might haue ſeemed that God had appointed that houſe to bee as a lookingglaſſe of his wrath. At one time all the people Iudg.20. of Iſrael were faine to ſet themſelues againſt them to roote them out. And in very deede there was a ſolemne othe taken to haue ſlaine them all ſo as one man of them ſhoulde not haue beene left aliue: and they were driuen to deuiſe meanes howe to ſaue fower hundred men which were not in the battell,but were by chaunce in a Towne neere by. Ye ſee then how the tribe of Beniamin ſhould haue beene rooted out of the world.

Now it might ſeeme that by this meanes Satan had made a breach which God foreſawe not before it was come to paſſe, or elſe that hee had failed of his promiſe in maintaining the offſpring of Abraham. This (ſay I) was a great temptation. And therefore not without cauſe doth Moſes preuent it,and giue a good remedy to ſuch as could patiently beare the puniſhmẽts that God ſent vpon them: and he ſaith that yet for all that, that tribe ſhould not ceaſe to be beloued of God, and to dwell by him in ſafetie as vnder his hande. But wee muſt note that this profited not al of them in general. For the tribe Iudg.20.15 of Beniamin was great,and we ſee there went a great armie of them to the fielde: And needes muſt it bee that they were of great force, when all the people of Iſrael were faine to go to battell to puniſh the curſed deede which had bene Iudg.19.25 committed in murthering the Leuites wife,and the abhominable ſinne of Sodome which had reigned in the Citie of Gabaa;which had beene ſuffered by all the Beniamits; inſomuch that to mans ſeeming, God was minded to haue thundred downe vppon them, to ſhewe the like vengeance as he had done afore in Sodome & Ghomorre. It was not therefore for any ſmall number to haue done this. And ſo wee haue to gather, that when God maketh any promiſe to a Nation,a great number of them ſhal not faile to periſh; but yet thoſe which call vppon his name purely ſhalbe preſerued, as it is ſaide in Ioel.2.31. Ioel, Although there ſeeme to be ſome waterfloude to ouerflowe all; yet will God finde incomprehenſible meanes to drawe his ſeruantes out of it, ſo as they ſhall not periſh with the multitude. And therefore when wee haue any promiſe,let vs bethinke our ſelues, and receiue it with pureneſſe of faith: and then let vs not doubt but it ſhalbe performed. But if we thinke that God ſhould be bound vnto vs, becauſe we haue heard ÿ promiſe; and in the meane while bee diſordred and careleſſe of him, ſo as it may rather ſeeme that we would haue nothing at all to doe with him: ſurely hee can well ſhewe himſelfe to be faithfull and performe his ſaying, & yet wee notwithſtanding ſhall periſh, ſo as the ſame ſhall ſtande vs in no ſteade. And indeede, we ſee how God worketh after that manner for the preſeruation of the ſtate of his Church. He ſaith generally ÿ he is our defender: & yet notwithſtãding we ſee ÿ the greateſt number goes to wrecke, and that the number which remaineth is very ſmall. Yea, but yet doth God continually bring to paſſe, that his Church abydeth vnquenched, and that there is ſtill ſome remnant left, according to this ſaying of Eſay, Eſay 1.9. that he will reſerue ſtill ſome little ſeede. And therefore let vs beware that we be of the ſeede which God reſerueth to himſelfe, when hee puniſheth thoſe which turne away from him, notwithſtanding that they did erſt beare the name and title to bee of his houſe,and in deede God did direct the promiſes of ſaluation vnto them, but they receiued them not. Wherefore let vs take heede that wee run not into diſorder with the greater number.

And it is ſaide expreſly, that God will ſhrowde him, dwelling betweene his ſhoulders. Heere Moſes ſheweth why God will maintaine the tribe of Beniamin, which notwithſtanding might ſeeme to be vtterly periſhed: namely for ÿ he woulde dwel vpon his ſhoulders. For the temple was builded in the tribe of Beniamin. Although the kingdome was in the tribe of Iuda, and that the kinges houſe alſo was ſet there: yet in the parting of their inheritances, the mountaine of Sion fell to the lot of the Beniamits. God then dwelt vpon his ſhoulders or betweene his ſhoulders; as if a man ſhould beare ſome burthen vpon his necke,ſo doeth God declare that Beniamin did partly beare him as I haue tolde you, becauſe it was his will to dwell vpon him and to haue his Temple there. And he ſpeaketh of his ſhoulders as in reſpect of mount Sion. And ſo foraſmuch as Beniamin did beare God vpon his ſhoulders, that is to ſay, becauſe the Temple wherein it was Gods will to be ſerued, was builded in the tribe of Beniamin, and the people were to aſſemble on Sion to doe homage vnto God, and Beniamin ſerued to that purpoſe: therefore it is ſaide that God was (after a ſort) vppon his ſhoulders. That then is the reaſon why Beniamin was well beloued of God. Not that he had any whit deſerued it: for wherof came it ÿ God choſe mount Sion for his dwellingplace? Euen of his owne free loue, which hee bare to Beniamin. So then let vs not dreame that Beniamin preuented Gods grace with any worthineſſe: but Moſes declareth, that Gods vttering of his loue and fauour towards the tribe of Beniamin,& that there ſhould be a manifeſt recorde and token thereof in the building of the Temple there, and that the tribe of Beniamin ſhoulde euer continue vnder Gods protection; are thinges linked together. Inſomuch that although that tribe ſeemed to bee left vp to the ſpoile, and that their enemies had gotten the ouerhande of them: yet woulde God ſhewe himſelfe pitifull to maintaine them ſtill. True it is that in the ende all that Countrie was harryed, and wee ſee howe the Prophet Ieremie ſaieth thereof, that Rachel mourned Iere.31.15 for her children (for Beniamin came of her)and ſorrowed to ſee ſuch deſolation & waſt made, & could not be cõforted becauſe all were deſtroyed, and no tydings coulde bee brought vnto her of any reſidue that remained, but ſhee ſawe that all her bloude was ſhed, whereuppon ſhee was in anguiſh and as a woman forlorne. Surely Rachel was at that time deade: but the Prophet Ieremie ſpeaketh of her in way of a ſimilitude, and ſetteth her as a mother vppon a ſcaffolde weeping and lamenting to ſee one cut the throats of all her children. Thus ye ſee what befell; but that was an vtter extremitie. Yet for all this, God ceaſed not to performe his promiſe; but at the ende euen in the middes of Babylon, euen in that gulfe, he reſerued a remnãt of Beniamin, which returned home with the tribe of Iuda. They that were much more excellent in dignitie became as baniſhed folk, and God forſooke them as rotten members, ſo as they returned not any more into the inheritance of yͤ land of Chanaan, & the reſtingplace which god had foreappointed to their fathers. Ye ſee then how God continued ſtill his grace towardes the tribe of Beniamin; not that they had not horrible puniſhments, as it fell out afterwardes, but that God by his infinite goodnes ouercame the naughtineſſe of men.

To bee ſhort, let vs note, that when God giueth vs his promiſes after that maner; they ſhal ſeeme to be diſappointed of their effect and performãce through the vnthankfulnes of yͤ world; for yͭ there are a great many which refuſe Gods goodnes & ſhut the gate againſt him, ſo as they be not partakers thereof. That is the cauſe why God ſheweth not himſelf liberal towards vs any more. For if we could skill to inioy his goodnes; ſurely he would alwayes outgo our expectation, & all our wiſhes. But what? We will haue him to content vs, and to pleaſe vs in all caſes: and in the meane while it ſhould ſeeme that wee haue conſpired againſt him, to keepe him back from doing vs good. Therefore let vs not thinke it ſtrange if God perform not his promiſes which he hath made vnto vs with his owne mouth; for we our ſelues be yͤ cauſe thereof. Neuerthelater, although the world be ſo malicious and froward, that (to all ſeeming) men woulde wilfully diſappoint all Gods gratious dealings; yet notwithſtanding let vs not doubt but that there ſhall euer be ſome ſmal number whom God wil maintaine. Onely let vs indeuour to liue vnder Gods wings, that we may be preſerued by him, & ſuffer him to dwell betweene our ſhoulders. Wee heare what warning S.Paul giueth vs thereof, how he ſaith yͭ we muſt beare the Lorde both in our bodies & in our ſoules.

1.Cor.6.9.& 2.Cor.7.34.

True it is that there is not now any material tẽple builded any where, wherein to do ſacrifice: but euery of vs is yͤ temple of God, and that is with condition that wee ſhoulde beare him, according to S.Pauls ſaying, who vſeth the ſame word. And how do we beare him? In knowing that it belongeth to him to be the ſoueraine & to raigne ouer vs, and to haue al preheminence; & that it behooueth vs to bow downe our neckes to receiue his yoke, and to obey him in al reſpects. And if we do ſo, let vs not doubt but that God watcheth for vs cõtinually, ſo as all the aſſaultes and temptations of the world ſhall not preuaile any thing at all againſt vs. Inſomuch that although we be like to periſh a hundred times, yea and to bee ouerwhelmed; yet will he vtter forth his power to preſerue vs, and we ſhalbe ſaued in the mids of death, ſo as we may keepe on our courſe ſtil. When thunder ſeemeth to come downe from aboue, & nothing is to bee ſeene vpon earth but confuſion euery where; then let vs not doubt but God giueth vs incomprehenſible ſafetie. Thus much concerning the tribe of Beniamin.

Now commeth Moſes to the tribe of Ioſeph and ſaith; That his lande ſhalbe bleſſed of God with the delectable fruites of the Sunne, with the fruites of the Moone, with the pleaſures of the Deaw from aboue, and of the depths from beneath, that is to ſay, of fountaines and waterſprings which giue moiſture and nouriſhment to the earth: That his honour ſhould be as the firſtborne of a bull; that he ſhall haue excellent hornes, wherewith to puſh againſt his enemies; that hee ſhall haue the olde mountaines, and the pleaſant hilles, where ſhalbe nothing but ſweetenes. And afterward in the end it is ſaide, That all theſe things ſhall come vpon the heade of Ioſeph, & vppon the Crowne of the heade of the Nazarite of his brothers. Here we may ſee how the intent of Moſes was to confirme the things that Iacob had ſpoken afore: for he vſeth many of the ſame words which are in the nine and fortith Chapter of Geneſis.

Gen.49.

Partly then Moſes doeth but make a rehearſall of the things which had beene written in the perſon of Iacob: and that is not ſuperfluous: but God reneweth and ratifieth his promiſes, to the ende they ſhould be the more aſſured. And ſuch confirmation alſo was needfull, to the intent that the other tribes ſhoulde not grudge againſt the tribes of Ioſeph. Wee knowe that the people of Iſrael were verie full of quareling and rebellion, and that it was a verie harde matter to holde them in awe. Nowe Iacob had giuen dubble portion to his ſonne Ioſeph, becauſe hee had two children, Ephraim and Manaſſes. Hee had ſaide that Ioſeph ſhoulde repreſent two heades in the houſe, becauſe the tribe of Leuie was excluded and had no portion in the Lande, but onely tooke the tenthes and Offerings.

Nomb.18. 20,21.

Their ſucceſſours therefore might haue ſaide, In deede it was the will of our father Iacob to giue this aduantage to his ſonne Ioſeph, howbeit that was vppon ouer earneſt affection, becauſe Ioſeph had ſuccoured him in his neede, and fedde our Fathers in the time of famine. But what? Shoulde they therefore haue two heads here, and we bee ſo much abated? Becauſe the people might ſtill haue pleaded for the partition which had bin aſſigned, and haue ſtriuen when they had bin come into the Land of Chanaan: Moſes confirmeth the thing which had beene declared afore; that is to wit, that Ioſeph ſhould hold ſtill the portion yͭ had bin giuen vnto him, & repreſent two chiefe houſes in yͤ linage of Iacob, & that there ſhould be ten thouſands of Ephraim & thouſãds of Manaſſes. We ſee now to what purpoſe Moſes reherſed yͤ words of Iacob.

And let vs marke alſo that whereas he ſaith, that that he is the Nazarite among his brethren, the word which he vſeth may bee taken for a Crowne, as if he ſhoulde ſay, Hee ſhall be the glorie of his brethren. True it is that this continued not for euer; it was but a temporall dignitie, becauſe that in the end it behooued the tribe of Iuda to attaine to the royall ſcepter, and to haue the ſoueraintie ouer all the whole bodie. And then was Ioſeph alſo brought vnder obedience. But yet for a time hee was the crowne of his brethren. Yet notwithſtanding, he ſetteth downe the worde of Separation. So then, he was ſeparated from among his brethren; not in that hee was ſolde into Egypt as ſome haue expounded it, for that is cleane contrarie. But rather hee is termed a Nazarite in way of honour, for that God had choſen him and ſhouled him out by himſelfe, ſo as hee was not of the common ſort, but had as it were a firſt begottenſhip, in reſpect whereof he tooke double portion of inheritance. That is the cauſe why hee was called a Nazarite.

And here we haue to marke firſt of all, that al that euer hath beene rehearſed by Moſes, or ſaid before by Iacob, was a very propheſie that came from God, ſo as it could not haue bin vttered by the mouth of mã, except God had gouerned him by his holy ſpirite. And why? For Moſes neuer came in the land of Chanaan, as we knowe. And as for Iacob, he dyed more than three hundred yeares before the partitiõ of the Land was made. How then coulde he make it? And euen hereby wee ſee, that there was no caſualtie or chaunce in the matter. For Iacob (as wee ſhall ſee againe in due place,) aſſigneth vnto Nepthalim the countrie on the ſeacoaſt, and pointeth out euery man his portion there. And howe is it poſſible that he ſhould hit ſo right vpon it? Surely he did it not of his owne imagination; but God who holdeth the lottes in his Prou.16.13. hand (as ſaieth Salomon,) and who by his wonderfull prouidence which is hidden from vs, diſpoſeth of the things which ſeeme to come by chaunce; vttered by Iacobs mouth what he intended to do. And nowe he ſheweth that when the people are come into the lande, nothing ſhall happen but by his direction. Nowe wee know that the tribe of Ephraim and Manaſſes were planted in ſo fat and fertile a ſoile, that it was the very ſtorehouſe of the Lande. True it is that other of the tribes, as the tribe of Aſer, had great Cornecountries; but theſe countries were ſtored with all kinde of commodities beſides: they were the pleaſanteſt and plentifulleſt Countries of all the lande of Iurie. Nowe then we may eaſily gather, that in this caſe Moſes hath not ſet forth any thing of his owne braine; but that the holy Ghoſt did in very deede gouerne his tongue. And therfore we haue a great warrant of all his doctrine, in that wee ſee that vnder the name and authoritie of God, hee ſetteth ſuch order in things to come which a man wold neuer haue thought of. Sith we heare this, it is all one as if God reached out his hand from heauen, and came to authoriſe yͤ doctrine which Moſes deliuered, and to ſhew that he is yͤ author therof, and that it proceedeth from him, neither ought men to doubt thereof as though it came from ſome creature. And let vs marke that wel. For we knowe that by nature we be inclined to diſtruſt: and were it not that we be helde vp, we ſhould continually be ſhakẽ downe, & we ſhould not neede any thing to turne vs aſide from the right way, & from the certaintie of our faith. For this cauſe therefore let vs marke well howe it is told vs heere, that God in theſe Propheſies hath ſhewed vndoubtedly, howe it was hee that was the guider of Moſes; and that he vſed his ſeruice in ſuch wiſe, as we may well ſay that we receiue his doctrine from God, and that it is grounded vpon his vnchaungeable power, & yͭ it is the vnfallible truth. And why? For it was not inuented by man.

But nowe let vs come to the contents of this bleſſing. It is ſaid that Ioſephs Land ſhalbe bleſſed of God, as well with the deaw from aboue, as with fountaines and welſprings from beneath; that is to ſay, that God woulde ſo water the land both from aboue and beneath, that it ſhould be fat & fruitefull. Nowe here we ſee howe it is not for nought yͭ we be commaunded to ſeeke our dayly breade at Gods hande. For howe commeth it to paſſe that yͤ earth bringeth forth fruites for our ſuſtenance? It is becauſe God moyſteneth it. It is not ſaid yͭ the earth hath ſubſtance in it ſelf, neither is it ſaid that yͤ heauen or the fountaines do giue it ſimply of themſelues: but it is God that ſendeth the deaw, it is God that maketh the water ſprings to ſhead out; ſo yͭ he is to haue the praiſe of all the ſubſtance which we haue, whenſoeuer we be fed and nouriſhed therewith. Ye ſee then how God hath ſuch a care of our bodies, and of this corruptible life, that we cannot eate one bit of bread which commeth not from him & of his meere liberality. And indeede it ſtandeth vs in hande to acquaint our ſelues well herewith. For ſith it is told vs yͭ we cãnot haue ſo much as one ſilie mite of theſe goods, no not euen of theſe tranſitory goods, but we muſt receiue it at gods hand: What ſhal befal in the things yͭ are much more excellent? If I want but a bit of breade, I ought of duety to aske it of God, & to acknowledge yͭ it is his peculiar office to feede me. And when yͤ caſe concerneth the attainmẽt of yͤ heauenly life & the euerlaſting ſaluation; ſhal I thẽ go ſeek it elſewhere thã at Gods hand? Or ſhall I thinke to haue it in my ſelfe? What an ouerweening were that? We ſee then how the bread and the bodily foode which is giuen vs, ought to be as a meane to lift vs vp higher, to make vs to thinke our ſelues beholden to God and to his bountifulnes for all yͭ we haue, both of body and ſoule and all. Marke that for one point.

Againe, wheras in this place Ioſeph is called A Nazarite among his brethren: we ſee howe God beſtoweth his gracious goodnes where hee liſteth, euen contrary to the opinion of men, yea & cleane contrary to al expectation. Ioſeph was indeede ſeparated from his brothers; yea and yͭ was as by being appointed vnto death, they had conſpired againſt him to kill him. And whereas Gen.37.18. 24.28. he was yet ſaued, it was but to bee caſt into a pit and there to pyne away , which was a crueller death than if they had cut his throte out of hãd. In the end, the greateſt fauour that hee founde, was that he was ſold into a barbarous nation to ſtrange & vnknowen perſons. Againe, when hee came into Egypt, he was thruſt into the bottom Pſa,105.18. of a dungeon, & he was put into the ſtockes, according to this ſaying of the Pſalme, ẏ the iron wounded him & nipped him to the heart. Yee ſee then how Ioſeph is ſeparated not only from his fathers houſe, but alſo from ẏ whole worlde; he is cut off from mankind as a dead perſon; he is like to rot in a dungeon. But God ſeparated him after another maner in his wunderful coũſel. And therefore it is ſayd, that hee was as a ſtarre which was to be worſhipped of ẏ Sunne & of the Moone, and of all the reſt of the ſtars. Gen.37.5.9 Which was as much to ſay, as that all his houſe ſhould ſtoope to him & be ſubiect to him, ſo as his ſheafe ſhould haue preheminence, and all the other ſheaues fall downe: euen becauſe god had decreed it in his own counſaile. And ſo we ſee that when all the worlde thought to haue thruſt Ioſeph downe into the pit: then God exalted him in ſpite of men. Thus yee ſee howe God ſuccoureth his ſeruauntes after a wonderfull faſhion. If wee looke vpon our ſtate as it appeareth to the viewe of men: we may ſeeme as it were reiected, death ſeemeth to threaten vs, and we ſeeme to be beſeeged with it on al ſides, it ſeemeth that we ſhould be ouerwhelmed euery minute of an houre, & that we ſhould be eaten vp quyte & cleane. Lo at what point wee be! But God who hath ſanctified vs, & doeth as it were broode vs vnder the ſhadow of his wings, if we put our truſt in him & flee to him for refuge; will ſhew that his bleſſing of vs is not in vaine; but that he hath ſo ſeparated vs, ẏ though all the earth were moued, & that we were afflicted as wel as thẽ wicked, & wrapped with them in the ſame curſe; yet notwithſtanding hee will maintaine vs by his grace, & euen in the middes of death always find meanes to draw vs out to ſaluation. That is the thing which wee haue to marke in that Ioſeph is called a Nazarite amõg his brethren. So that if we haue any aduantage or priuilege, if we be exempted from any perill, if we be enriched ẇ any goods be it of body or of ſoule; all thoſe things proceed of Gods ſanctifying & chooſing of vs to himſelf, & we ought to yeld ẏ praiſe therof to his only free goodnes.

And to the intent theſe things may be taken to be ẏ more certaine, it is ſaid that they ſhal light vpon the head of Ioſeph. Moſes then declareth that theſe things are not a ſound which vaniſheth in the aire: but ẏ God wil giue effect to his word ſo as his bleſſing ſhalbe poured out vpon the linage of Ioſeph. For thereby he aſſureth vs as if he ſhould ſay, No: I ſpeake nowe in the name of God; let no man think that I geſſe at aduenture concerning things to come: for God will performe al things vpon Ioſephs head; ẏ is to ſay, either vpon Ioſephs own perſon or elſe vpon his children. For here the caſe concerneth thoſe ẏ come of his race. God therefore wil ſhewe by ẏ effect, how it is he ẏ hath ſpoken by my mouth, & how it is he ẏ hath declared ẏ things which he had concluded in his own counſaile afore.

Now in the ende, he doeth alſo compare his beautie to a yong Bull & an Vnicorne; to ſhewe that he ſhal not onely haue abundantly wherewith to liue, but alſo that he ſhall haue ſtrength to withſtand his foes & be preſerued. For wee know we haue neede of two things; the one is that we deſire God to bleſſe vs & to giue vs ſuſtenance: & againe that wee may bee defended from our enemies which aſſayle vs. Both theſe things are here compriſed in the linage of Ioſeph. For it is ſayd that God will bleſſe him in his lande, ſo as it ſhalbee verie fruitfull: and alſo that he will giue him ſtrength, whereby hee ſhall haue the vpper hande of his enemies, yea and driue them away to the vttermoſt borders of the world.

For a concluſion Moſes addeth that there ſhal be ten thouſands of Ephraim, & thouſands of Manaſſes. His meaning is that theſe two trybes ſhall come to be headhouſes. For by this worde thouſands, the Hebrues are wont to betokẽ as it were Bayliwikes & Prouoſtſhips; like as when it is ſaid, And thou Bethleem in the land of Ephrata, art of the leaſt among the thouſands of Iuda; Mich.5.2. that is to ſay, if a man conſider thy Prouoſtſhips and Bayliwikes, thou art the leaſt of all: but yet ſhall the redeemer come of thee. I alledge this text to ſhewe what this worde thouſand importeth. Now then, when Moſes ſpeaketh here of [thouſandes] he meaneth briefely that Ephraim who was one of Ioſephs children, ſhoulde make a headhouſe or trybe, ſo as he ſhuld haue his ſtate of gouernement & officers by himſelf: and alſo that Manaſſes who was another of Ioſephs ſonnes, ſhoulde likewiſe haue his order and ſtate of gouernement with vnderofficers as wel as Iuda, Beniamin, Iſachar & the reſt of ẏ other trybes had. Let that ſerue for one poynt.

But by the way it is ſayd, the thouſands of Ephraim, & the thouſands of Manaſſes. Here he maketh Ephraim tenfold greater than his brother: yet was Manaſſes in verie deede the elder ſonne Gen.48.19. of Ioſeph: but at ſuch time as their grandfather [Iacob] bleſſed them, he declared that Ephraim ſhould be greter than his brother Manaſſes. Thus was the order of nature quyte changed, in that God gaue the birthright of the firſtbegotten to the yonger ſonne; to ſhew ẏ we bring not any thing of our own vnto god, but ẏ we receiue al things of his mere goodnes, & ẏ he diſpoſeth of vs at his pleaſure, without being boũd therunto. And this hath God ſhewed by a figure in ẏ perſons of Manaſſes & Ephraim. For it lay not in Iacobs power to make Ephraim greater than Manaſſes: the matter concerned not ẏ inheriting of ẏ countrey only, but alſo the hauing of a Trybe. And ẏ ſame is called a ſpecial gift of God. Although riches alſo do come of him, yet wil he haue mẽ to acknowledge, ẏ to haue iſſue is a peculiar gift which cannot be gottẽ by cunning nor by any other meane. The ſcripture then in ſpeaking ſo, doth wel ſhew that it lyeth not in the power of any creature, to ſay, This man ſhall growe into a great people, as Iacob ſaid, & yet he could not then diſcerne them aſunder by outward ſight. For he was blinde for Gen 48.10.13. age. And when Ioſeph came & brought him his two children, he did ſet Manaſſes the elder to his right hand, & Ephraim to his left; to the end that Iacob in bleſſing them (as the faſhion and ceremonie then was) ſhould lay his right hand vpon Manaſſes, & his left vppon Ephraim. But Iacob putting his hands acroſſe, did lay his right hand vpon the yonger, & his left hand vpon the elder. Whereat Ioſeph ſayd, Sir ye miſtake them. No, no, ſayd Iacob; let mee alone, I do it not through ignorance: for he that is the inferior by nature, muſt be the greater; God hath ſo ordeined it. Behold here a ſilie blind ſoule, an old man, ſuch a one as ſeemeth to dote for age: he ſpeaketh of things vnknowen, & yet for all that, hee dealeth in that behalfe as if hee were God ſitting in his ſeat. And in very deede (as I haue told you afore) He was Gods deputie and ſpake by his authoritie. So then, to confirme the propheſies which had bin vttered by the mouth of Iacob, Moſes ſayeth, theſe bee the ten thouſands of Ephraim. Although he be the yonger brother, yet ſhall he exceede his elder brother in number of people, & in al other things: and according hereunto, in the end there was ſuch preheminence giuen to that trybe, that the other ten trybes of Iſrael were comprehended vnder it. When the Prophets name Ephraim, it Eſai.7.2.& in other places. is a comprehending of all the ten trybes togither; inſomuch that euen Ruben who was the eldeſt of all, lay hid vnder the wings of Ephraim. And who knew that? Our Lord did ſo vtter it by the mouth of thoſe whom he had appointed in his place. And ſo we ſee againe the thing that I ſaid afore, namely that in this caſe Moſes was not a priuate perſon, ne ſpake at randon, nor of his owne head; but was directed by God, to the intent it might be knowen, that that people was gouerned by ſpeciall meanes as a people choſen and picked out by God from the reſt of the world. True it is that God is the generall creator of all mankind, and that all people are his. Yet notwithſtanding, foraſmuch as he had choſen the linage of Abraham; it was his will to haue his power the better knowen there, & to holde them as his houſhold folke, & neerer alyed vnto him. And therefore it was good reaſon that the things which are declared here, ſhould be knowen of al yͤ Iewes, & that by that meanes they ſhould be prouoked to bleſſe the name of God, acknowledging howe greatly they were bound & tied vnto him, for that he had ſo withdrawen them from al other nations, & vouchſafed to make them feele him to be their father, ſeeing he had adopted them to be his children.

Now let vs come to the things that befell. True it is that God hath wel perfourmed al that he had ſpoken. And thereby wee ſee that the children of Ioſeph were not diſapointed of their expectation, neither was any of al thoſe promiſes void. But yet for al that; they tooke no great benefite by them, but rather it came to paſſe through their own lewdnes, that they were of neceſſitie turned to their harme and vndoing. Wherin we ſee yͭ men are ſo vntoward, yͭ they change all yͭ euer God had ordeyned for their welfare: in ſo much that when he bleſſeth them, they turne his bleſſing into a curſe; when he offereth them life, they turne it into deth; & they not only dim yͤ light, but alſo turne it into darknes. But what befell to the Trybe of Ephraim? It was aduaunced as it were by miracle, and againſt the order of nature, through the onely bleſſing of God. And yet for all this, it cauſed yͤ body [of the commonweale] to be rent & torne aſunder, Gods ſeruice to bee corrupted & peruerted, ydolatry to reigne in the holy land, God to be defrauded and bereft of his inheritance, and all manner of infections to be brought in. Whereupon inſued foorthwith all manner of miſchiefe, ſo as they did eate vp one another like dogs and cattes, and there was ſuch deadly enmitie betweene the two kingdoms of Iuda & Eſay.7.1. Iſrael, that they went to ſeeke help of the Heathen & Infidels to ouerthrow one another: and was not yͭ a diueliſh rage? & yet all this proceeded from the trybe of Ephraim. If a man ſhould ſay yͭ Gods bleſſing was the cauſe thereof, then is there a double malice to be ſeene in yͭ behalf. For they ought the rather to haue bin incouraged to magnifie Gods name, & to walke in his feare, ſeeing he had ſo greatly bounde them to him. But they turned yͤ benefite to the contrary, as I haue ſhewed alreadie, & therfore it was of neceſſitie yͭ all thoſe bleſſings were taken from them, & moreouer yͭ they were vnto them an occaſion of decay; I ſay they were the occaſion, howbeit not the cauſe. Yea, but yet was yͤ blame to be imputed vnto them, becauſe they themſelues were the alterers of Gods order. What is to be done then? Let vs vnderſtand that when God ſhal haue fed vs fat in this world, ſo as wee haue the fruits of the earth, yea & be as it were made drunken with the things that delight vs; yet if we haue not the chiefe poynt, the reſidue ſhalbe ſold vs ful deere. Then let vs not ſo gretly eſteeme the temporall & tranſitory goods, that we ſhould not euermore haue an eye to yͤ chiefe point; which is yͭ God receiues vs for his children, that we abide vnder his gouernement, that wee call vppon him as our father, howbeit truely and vnfaynedly, reſorting rightly vnto him and ſubmitting our ſelues wholy to his wil; knowing that as ſoone as wee bee neuer ſo litle ſeparated from him, it cannot bee but that miſerie and confuſion muſt needes fall vpon vs. So then, let vs eſteeme of the tranſitorie benefits which god beſtoweth vpon vs in this world; but let vs eſteem them in their degree, ſo as we be not tyed to them, ne ſet not our chiefe deſire vppon them. If God giue vs of them, let vs enioy them with all ſobrietie; and let vs not ſet our minds too much vpõ them. Again, if he giue vs them not, let vs beare our pouertie patiently, & keep on our way ſtil. And in yͤ meane while let vs take our cõtentatiõ & reſt in yͤ ſpiritual goods which God granteth vs, in yͭ he vouchſafeth to certifie vs yͭ he is our father, in yͭ he calleth vs vnto him daily, in yͭ he telleth vs yͭ we ſhal finde fauor at his hand for our lord Ieſus Chriſts ſake.

Let the hauing of theſe things ſuffiſe vs, and let vs not repyne at the aduerſities, griefes, & troubles which we haue in this world: neither let vs enuye ſuch as are here in better caſe than wee; but when we ſee the vnbeleeuers liue at eaſe, & haue all their pleaſures, ſo as they want not any thing; let vs haue an eye to the trybe of Ephraim, & conſider the great wealth both of the ſame, & alſo of the trybe of Manaſſes. They were fed at their pleaſure; but what? They glutted themſelues with Gods benefites, and were choked with them for their owne vnthankfulnes. Now then, let this ſerue to reſtraine vs frõ repyning at thoſe with whome God dealeth ſo liberally in this world, and to whom he ſheweth himſelfe ſo bountifull. Let not vs bee grieued thereat. For why? We haue the goods which are of farre greater value: that is to wit, the things that concerne our ſaluation. For ſeeing yͤ God hath begunne to worke after that faſhion in vs by his holy ſpirite; let vs ſeeke for the heauenly riches whereunto he calleth vs from day to day till we haue the ful fruition of them at the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs perceiue them more & more, and that therewithall when wee enioy here neuer ſo many benefites, and bee fedde by his hande, wee may not bee ſo rechleſſe and ſleepie, as not to haue our myndes continually lifted vp to heauen, to giue thanks to him for all his benefites, and to ſerue him with the earneſter good will: and that by theſe tranſitorie benefites, we may be put in minde to ſeeke all things in him which belong to yͤ heauenly life, knowing that we ſhalbe vtterly deſtitute & barreine of them, vntil he vouchſafe to impart them vnto vs, at leaſtwiſe according to the meaſure & portion of his meere goodnes, becauſe that wee on our ſide deſerue not any thing at all. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people & nations of the earth, &c.

On Fryday the iij. of Iuly, 1556.

The CXCVI. Sermon, which is the ſixth vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

18 Alſo he ſaide of Zabulon, Reioyce thou Zabulon in thy going out: and thou Iſachar in thy Tents.

19 They ſhall call the people into the mountaine, where they ſhall ſacrifice the ſacrifice of righteouſnes. For they ſhall ſucke the abundance of the ſea, and the hidden treaſures of the ſand.

Yeſterday in the bleſſing of Ioſeph, we ſaw how Moſes referred all things to Gods grace, which men are cõmonly wont to attribute vnto fortune. And it is a doctrine well worthie to be marked becauſe of our vnthankfulnes. For vnleſſe wee bee enforced to acknowledge Gods goodnes, it ſhall alwayes lye buryed for vs, and wee ſeeke things here belowe to buſie our wits vpon; in ſo much that when God ſhall haue giuen vs neuer ſo ſufficient occaſion to magnifie his grace; yet do wee make none account of it. Therefore it behooueth vs to be warned to lift vp our wits and mindes aloft, that wee may doe homage vnto God, for all the benefites which we receiue at his hand. Alſo we haue to marke herein the thing that is ſet downe by Moſes. He ſayeth that all the good which Ioſeph and all his whole linage ſhall haue, ſhall come of the free fauour of him which dwelt in the buſh. And no dout but that therby he meaneth God. Why then doeth hee mention the buſh here? For at the firſt ſight it ſeemeth a fond thing, & ſeruing to no purpoſe but to leade the ignorant and the weaklings into ſuperſtition. We knowe that the holy ſcripture ſpeaking of God, ſayth that hee dwelleth in heauen. Not that his maieſtie is incloſed there: for his beeing is infinite; it contayneth all creatures, as is ſayde in other textes. But this worde Heauen ſerueth to plucke vs from the worlde, when wee thinke vppon God, to the intent that when wee goe about to worſhip him, wee imagine not any earthlineſſe in him, but conſider that hee ſurmounteth all things, and that wee ought to thinke of him farre otherwiſe than wee can conceiue. Nowe ſeeing that the holy Scripture pitcheth Gods tent in heauen, to the ende wee ſhould be lifted vp aboue all the worlde & aboue all creatures when wee thinke vppon him: why doeth Moſes in this place ſet him in the Buſh? It is becauſe God had there ſhewed himſelfe vnto him. And it behooueth vs to note that ther are two dyuerſe faſhions of ſpeaking in the holy ſcripture, when God calleth vs vnto him. Neuertheles, this diuerſitie is not to draw vs into contrary opinions: they meete both in one. As how? Sometimes God ſheweth vs what his glorie is, to the intent wee ſhoulde bee fully reſolued of this poynt, that hee is incomprehenſible, and that wee ought to worſhip him with all humilitie, & that we muſt not looke to forge him after our fancie, or to make make him like to our ſelues , by transforming after our own imagination. Therfore when the holy ſcripture ſetteth foorth Gods maieſtie ſo high as we be abaſhed at it , yea & euen ẏ very Eſai.6.2. Angels of heauen, accordingly as it is ſaid that the Cherubins hyde their faces , becauſe they cannot abyde to looke vppon the maieſtie ſo great and infinite as it is in God : therein it is ſhewed vs that wee muſt needes ſtoope vnder ſuch greatneſſe and highneſſe. But yet therewithall God conſidereth how it is for our benefite to haue ſome familiaritie with him:& thereupon he yeeldeth to our rudeneſſe, and taketh vppon him as it were a newe ſhape , howbeit not which is contrarie (as I ſaid afore;) but to the intent that wee ſhoulde not bee ſtared,nor take occaſion to ſhrink from him. Now then,he allureth vs gently, and therwithal hee ſtopeth to vs & maketh himſelf as it were meane vnto vs. And to that end haue the ſacramentes bin referred at all times: Like as at this day ſtill in Baptiſme we ſee the water;and in the Lordes ſupper we ſee the bread & the wine. And what is the cauſe that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who is Col.1.15. & 2.9. the liuely image of God his father, & in whome dwelleth the whole fulneſſe of the godhead bodily;what is the cauſe (ſay I) that hee ſheweth himſelfe to vs in corruptible things, and in the elements of the world ? It is for our infirmities ſake,becauſe we cannot approch to his ſpiritual power. That is the very cauſe why he figureth his graces vnder the viſible elements:& in them ought we to behold the heauenly power of his holy ſpirite. That is the ſeconde faſhion which God vſeth in reuealing himſelfe vnto vs, the which is anſwerable to our rudeneſſe. But wee ſee howe hee ſhewed himſelfe to the fathers of old time vnder certeine ſhapes. As for example when he talked with Iacob in Bethel, it was be- Gen.28.13. cauſe Iacob needed ſuch confirmation. True it is that he ceaſſed not to looke vp to heauen ſtil when he worſhipped God. But yet for all that, he had the more familiar acceſſe vnto God by his comming downe ſo lowe at that time. And for the ſame cauſe alſo, when Iacob was to re- Gen.35.3. moue from one place to another, he offered ſacrifice to the God of Bethel. Why to the God of Bethel? Was there a God ſhut vp there? No, for we ſee that euen they which would needes Amos.4.4. make a God in Bethel, that is to ſay, which would haue builded vp a temple there, & offered ſacrifices there ; were abhominable vnto God,Inſomuch that God ſayth that it is Bethauen, Oſee.4.15. the place of wickednes ; and no more his houſe:he forſaketh & diſclaimeth it vtterly, euē becauſe they abuſed the reuelation that was giuen to their father Iacob in that place. As for Iacob,he knewe howe to benefite himſelfe by it. For he knewe that God had not changed his nature, ne was incloſed in any certaine place, but that by that meane he meant to draw him vnto him familiarly. Iacob then receiued the gage that was giuen vnto him, to the intent it might be knowen that he worſhipped not ſome God at aduenture, as the Heathen did: but that his faith was ſure and vnfallible. That is the cauſe why he expreſly mentioneth Iacobs worſhipping of the God of Bethel, that is to ſay,not a God which was vnknowen to him, nor a God that was forged of mortall mans braine, a God but in ſurmize & opinion: but the God of whom he was fully aſſured, becauſe he had the trueth whereof he was throughly ſure. And euen ſo is it now in the caſe of Moſes. He ſaith , the God which ſhewed himſelfe to me in the buſh, euen that God ſhew his fauour towardes the trybe of Ioſeph. In ſaying ſo,Moſes proteſteth that he ſetteth not downe ſome ydol that had bin forged of late time,ne bringeth in the ſuperſtitions of any heathen folke, Infidels, or ydolaters: after which maner we ſee the Papiſtes & Turkes do, who ſpeake much of God,but in the mean while they haue no aſſurance, all their fond dotages are grounded but vpon ſuppoſals, and all their Apes toyes are founded but vppon their owne good intent as they terme it. For it is ſtarke diueliſhnes when men preſume vpon their owne ſelfelikings, and it is an opening of helgates to them to plunge themſelues in the bottomleſſe pit. Lo what commeth of that which men terme good intent, & of the things which they haue imagined & dreamed in their own brayne . But as for vs,we muſt haue a ſure leaning ſtocke, & ſuch a one as wil not ſwarue , ſo as we may ſay, we haue a God which is not vnknowen nor hidden from vs. Now then in ſpeaking of the God that had appeared to him in the buſh,he meant here to certifie the promiſe yet ſo much ẏ better:as if he ſhould ſay , I ſpeake not at randon, my words are no flying tales : but it is God that hath ordeined mee,& at ſuch time as it pleaſed him that I ſhould deliuer his people out of the land of Egypt,he appeared to me in the buſh, & Exod.3.2. there I knew his maieſtie. So then, the certeintie which I haue of my calling, & of the things which I haue hitherto done by his commandement, ought to make mee continue ſtil,to ſhew that the ſame God wil perfourme his promiſes which are conteined here, & ſpecially his fauor & free goodnes ſhal reſt vpō ẏ trybe of Ioſeph.

2.Chro.6.18

Now of this text we haue to gather , ẏ when we ſpeake of God we muſt not wander too and fro, but to the intent we may be throughly aſſured,& that we may hold our ſelues in awe,we muſt conſider after what manner God hath reuealed himſelf vnto vs. But I haue told you alredie ẏ our lord Ieſus Chriſt is his liuely image; Coloſ.1.15. & therefore it behoooueth vs to ſeeke him there. And the very cauſe why the wretched worlde hath bin beguyled by the deceites & illuſions of Satan,is that they haue not held themſelues ſimply to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Whence ſpring ſo many diſorders at this day in the popedom,but of this,that(as they themſelues ſay in their prouerb)Ieſus Chriſt is not knowen,nor can be diſcerned from among his Apoſtles ? For they haue bereft him of the glory , power & grace which God his father had committed vnto him. To be ſhort,foraſmuch as our Lorde Ieſus hath bin as it were buried , therfore ſuperſtitiōs haue increaſed more & more, ſo as ther hath bin no end nor meſure of thē,& therfore no maruel though there haue beene ſo horrible a Babylon [that is to ſay confuſion] there. Let vs learne then to know the liuing God as he ſheweth him ſelfe vnto vs,& to impriſon all our wits . And foraſmuch as he hath moſt perfectly reuealed himſelf in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt;let vs not ſeeke any other knowledge than that, neither let vs ſwarue one way or other from the ſame.

But now let vs come to that which Moſes addeth concerning Zabulon and Iſachar. He ſaith of Zabulon,Be glad in thy going foorth: and of Iſachar,*Reioyce thou in thy tentes,*or in thy couerts,or in thy houſes. And thereupon he attributeth as common to them both , That they ſhall call folke into the mountaine (that is to ſay)of Sion, there to make ſacrifice to the liuing God, and therefore that God wil bleſſe them, in ſo much that they ſhal skim off the fat of the ſea,that is to ſay,they ſhalbe enriched by trade of marchandiſe. And that although their countrey was ſandy (as the ſeaſhores cōmonly be)ſo as there was no fruitefulnes of corne & wine;yet ſhould they not faile to be rich for all that: for the ſand (that is to ſay the Sea) ſhould giue them ſufficient abundance. That is the ſumme of the thing that is ſpoken here.Now(as hath beene touched heretofore)we ſee that Moſes ſpake not of his owne head, but that God himſelfe vttereth here the things which he had determined afore:for Moſes could not haue geſſed what was to befall in the portion of Zabulon. I haue told you afore, that the Iſraelites were not their owne caruers. True it is that the trybe of Gad and a parte of Deut.20. Ioſue.14.2. Ephraim had their portion beyond Iordan as ſhalbe declared hereafter : but all the reſt of the portions were made by lot, ſo as it was not for any man to ſay , Such a thing ſhall befall mee. It behooued God him ſelfe to bee the whole doer, as wee ſee he was in this text, ſo as he might be acknowledged aboue all his creatures. Therefore when Moſes declareth that the trybe of Zabulon ſhalbe planted by the ſeas ſide, he doeth vs to vnderſtande that God had reuealed vnto him things vnknowen , and that his ſpeaking was by the holy Ghoſt. When he ſayeth that traffike and merchandiſe ſhalbe in the trybe of Zabulon,and that Iſachar alſo ſhal go by ſea; no dout but ŷ therein God vttereth things which men would neuer haue thought. And ſo wee haue an infallible proofe,not onely of the promiſes that are ſet downe here, but alſo of all the doctrine of Moſes. For to what ende did he ſo bleſſe the trybes of Iſrael,but to holde them vnder obedience of the lawe , and vnder the religion which he had taught them , not of himſelfe,but as he had beene inioyned from aboue? Seeing it is ſo,let vs learne to apply all the teſtimonies to the ſetling of our ſelues in Gods trueth, that wee ſwarue not aſide one way nor other,ne be doutfull in faith, but imbrace the things with all reuerence which are contained in the lawe. For without that, we be miſerable, as all they be which haue their fantaſticall deuotions,of which ſort wee ſee the Papiſtes are, and likewiſe the Turkes , and alſo all the Heathen of the world . For they be verie wilfull in the things which they haue once conceiued: O (ſay they)I hold mee to this,becauſe it is an ancient religion: but in the meane while they bee nothing ſure of it . And why? Becauſe that as long as men reſt vpon their owne opinion , all is but vanitie and ſmoke . Then can wee haue no ſure faith vntill wee be come vnto God,& know that it is he which guideth and gouerneth vs. And therefore it ſtandeth vs in hande to haue the lawe warranted vnto vs, ſo as wee may bee able to ſay that it is no doctrine of man, but that God is author thereof. The like is to bee ſaide of the propheſies and of the Goſpel. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to marke in the firſt part of this text.

Now here are two things ſet one againſt another in Zabulon and Iſachar. Zabulon,(ſayth he)Reioyce thou in thy going out: and vnto Iſachar he ſayeth,Reioyce thou in thy reſt ; Here the one goes abroad and ſeekes from place to place ; & the other taries quietly and peaſably at home like a ſnudge as they ſay . And yet Moſes ſaith that God will make them both to proſper, though their caſes be nothing like. And by Zabulons going out,he meaneth not his end (as ſome haue expounded it;) but the voyages which the people of that trybe were to make, as folke that ſhould traffike into farre countries . His ſaying then is,God will proſper thee in thy goings abroade. When thou goeſt in danger by ſea, and makeſt long voyages ; thou ſhalt be guyded & gouerned by God , and his bleſſing ſhall accompanie thee. But as touching Iſachar, becauſe he was fearefull and cowardly , it is ſaide that God will yet haue pitie vppon him, and bleſſe him though he loue his eaſe . And it is not without cauſe that he ſpeaketh ſo to Iſachar . Wee ſee howe it is ſaide of him in the nine and fourtith Chapter of Geneſis by Iacob, Iſachar is as a ſtrong Aſſe or a Mule of burthen which ſleepeth (ſayeth hee) betweene his packes . Gen.49.14. Hee ſawe that eaſe was good, and he bowed downe his ſhoulders, and chooſe rather to bee a ſeruant and to pay taxes and tallages , than to trye his force in reſiſting his foes . Here wee ſee howe the nature of that people was ſtrong and ſturdie , but yet that they wanted heart, and were cowardly,ſo as they played the burdened Mule, which coucheth downe betweene his packes, and there falles aſleepe , that is to ſay, Hee was like a great packehorſe which careth not for libertie: in ſo much that although men loade him with heauie and intollerable burthens , yet he ceaſſeth not to yeeld to them ſtill,as if a Mule ſhould fall aſleepe beeing loden with his packes.He bare then taxes & trybutes and paſſed not greatly for it : he was at a point for all other things,ſo he might eate and drink his fil;as ye ſhal ſee ſome lubberly loutes, which ſo they may always haue meat & drinke, do make no further reckening;neither can they any skil of freedome,they be in that behalfe as Oxen & Aſſes,ſo as they haue no care of any thing.And euen ſo was it with Iſachar.

And Moſes intent is not to ſooth him in his vices when he ſayeth , that God will bleſſe him in that reſt of his: but it ſerueth to comfort the faithfull which were of that trybe; becauſe that elſe they might haue been diſcouraged, as hath bin touched afore. For God might ſeeme to haue vpbrayded them ſaying, Yee be not worthie to enioy the common freedom which I giue to my children; for yee be of a ſlauiſh nature, yee be great lubbers, which ſuffer your ſelues to bee made vnderlings. It might ſeeme then ÿ God gaue them a marke of reproche, to caſt them off from the aray of his children. Howbeit his intent was that the faithfull ſhoulde knowe, that although they had a hard burthen to beare as in reſpect of the worlde: yet notwithſtanding, God would not ceaſſe to bleſſe them. That was the verie meaning of Moſes.

And here wee haue to note in generall, that although men be able to trauell, and they haue skill alſo, ſo as they want not any thing: yet muſt all their proſperitie come of God and of his meere grace. For it is not without cauſe ÿ Moſes here ſendeth the trybe of Zabulon vnto God. They were men that ſpared not themſelues, they hazarded their liues, they traffiked into ſtrange countreys; and therefore a man woulde ſay it is no wonder though they were riche, for they were men of courage, they were vigilant; they were painfull, they had all worldly meanes to helpe them ſelues withall. Yea, but when all comes to reckening, it is ſhewed vs here that without Gods bleſſing all were to no purpoſe. So then let vs learne, not to preſume any thing vppon our owne trauel & skill, or any thing elſe; but let euery man referre him ſelfe to God, that he may guyde vs in all our doings, according to this ſaying which we haue heard heretofore, Thou ſhalt not ſay, it is mine Deut.8.17. owne hand that hath gotten mee my foode; but know thou that it is God, who fed thy fathers by the ſpace of fourtie yeres in the wilderneſſe; it is hee at whoſe hande thou receiueſt thy foode at this day. Thus much concerning that point.

Furthermore, as touching the trybe of Iſachar, wee haue to note that if it pleaſe God to bereaue vs of any earthly benefites for our imperfections ſakes, we muſt not be greeued out of meaſure therefore; but paciently beare the yoke, contenting our ſelues with this, that God in the meane ſeaſon turneth ÿ things to a good end vnto vs, which of themſelues were as a record that he reiecteth vs; and that he maketh them to ſerue as furtherances of our ſaluation. As for example, it falleth out that ſome folke haue ſome peculiar fault in them; as we ſee how ſome bee groſſewitted, ſo as they ſet not their mindes vpon a great ſort of things which might be good and conuenient for them: Others are fainthearted and rechleſſe, and other ſome, although they ſpare not them ſelues, yet haue they ſome other fault which is a let to them that they cannot throughly ſeeke their owne profit & commoditie. Wel, our Lord alſo bereaueth them of many things which he giueth to others that take paines, & his hand is ſtretched out to bleſſe the labors of ſuch as are painfull & imploy their wittes about it. It may wel be then that our Lord wil puniſh thoſe rechleſſe folke ŵ the want of ſome earthly commodities, for not doing their indeuor as they ought to do. But yet doth it not followe that he taketh them not for his children ſtill, although he make them feele ſome temporal chaſticement, which he cauſeth alſo to ſerue to their ſoulhealth. They ſhal then receiue chaſticement for their infirmities, but yet ſhal they not ceaſſe to be Gods childrẽ ſtill. That is ÿ thing which we haue to gather where it is ſayd of the trybe of Iſachar, that through his cowardlines he ſhall keepe home, and bowe downe his ſhoulders to receiue the great burdens, tributes, & taxes that men lay vpon him, making no reckening at all of them. Well: and doth God ſee ſuch rechleſnes in them? He ſuffereth them to ſmart for it to the worldwarde; but yet howſoeuer they fare, he telleth them ÿ he wil not ceaſſe to be merciful to them. Reioyce thou (ſaith he) in thy Tents. Wee ſee nowe more clearly the thing that I ſaid afore; namely that Moſes intended not to flatter Iſachar in ÿ thing for which he was to be condemned, that is to wit, for the cowardlines whereof I haue made mention. Neuertheleſſe, becauſe that fault was vnreformable, & in the meane whyle God was to chaſtice that people with bondage, with tributes, and with tallages; therefore Moſes had a care to comfort them, ſpecially the faithfull, which might fall into deſpaire when they ſawe thẽſelues ſo puniſhed at Gods hand. Well (ſaith he) beare ye this burthen paciently, for yee be worthie of the puniſhment which God layeth vpõ you. But howſoeuer the world go with you, be not out of hart, for he wil not faile to be a father to you ſtill. Although yee ſeeme to be ſubiect to many burthens, & he ſeeme to haue withdrawen his hand from you & vouchſafe not to ſuccour you: yet notwithſtanding he wil haue pitie vpon you ſtil. Therfore be glad in your wretchednes & diſtreſſes. Lo how the faithful ought always to aſſuage their ſorowes when God chaſtiſeth them in this world, foraſmuch as his chaſtiſing of them is after ſuch a ſort, that yet neuertheles he eſtrangeth not himſelfe vtterly frõ thẽ, but reſerueth them ſtil as of his houſhold & Church.

Moſes hauing ſpoken ſo of thoſe two trybes, addeth in cõmon, that they ſhal cal folke vp into the mountaine, to offer vnto God the ſacrifice of righteouſnes. No dout but Moſes meant this of mount Sion: & that is yet one other propheſie. For no man could foreſee that God would haue his tẽple to be builded in that place: & yet Moſes ſetteth it down expreſly that it ſhalbe ſet vpon a hil. In deed he ſayth, Thy God will chooſe him Deut.12.5. a place where his name ſhalbe called vpon: but yet it was a hundred yeres after, yea, foure hũdred or rather Six hundred yeres after, ere any man knewe where that place was. But Moſes aſſigneth it to a mountaine, and that was by force of the ſpirite. For it muſt needes be that God guyded him thereto, ſeeing he could ſay, Vppon a mountaine ſhal my temple be builded. True it is, that hee nameth not mount Sion:

but yet we ſee there was a comformity between that which was reuealed vnto Dauid, and that which had beene ſpoken ſo long aforehande by Moſes. Heere therefore we haue yet againe an infallible proofe, that Moſes deuiſed not any thing of himſelfe, but that the liuing God vſed him continually as his miniſter, and as the inſtrument of his holy ſpirite. Againe, heere the two tribes of Iſachar and Zabulon are commended for exhorting folke to the ſeruice of God. And it is a praiſe well woorth the noting. For thereby we be done to vnderſtande, that it is not ynough for euery man to occupie himſelfe in the ſeruice of God; but that our zeale muſt extende yet further, to the drawing of other men thereunto, accordingly alſo as is ſayde thereof, ſpecially when the prophet Eſay treateth of the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, at which time euery man ſhall reach his hande vnto his neighbour, ſaying; Let vs goe vp into the Lordes hill to worſhippe him. Heere Moſes declareth that Iſachar and Zabulon ſhall do the like, and draw their neighbours to the ſeruing of God. But in very deede it were to ſmall purpoſe for vs to incorage our neighbours to yeeld God his deſerued honour, vnleſſe wee ourſelues did beare them companie.

Eſay.2.3.

And for that cauſe it is expreſly ſayde, That they ſhall call folke, and offer Sacrifice with them. The thing then in effect which we haue to gather vpon this text is, that we muſt as much as in vs lyeth indeuour to drawe all men on the earth vnto God, that all men may ſerue him and worſhip him with one accorde. And in deede if we haue any kindneſſe in vs, ſith we ſee that men goe to deſtruction till God haue gotten them vnder his obedience: ought we not to be moued with pity, to drawe the ſilly ſoules out of hell, and to bring them into the way of ſaluation? Againe on the other ſide, ſith we knowe that God is our father; ſhould we not be deſyrous to haue him knowen to be the like to all men? And if we can not find in our heartes that all creatures ſhould doe him homage; is it not a token that we haue no great regarde of his honour? Ye ſee then howe that one of the thinges whereunto we ought to apply our mindes and indeuours is, [firſt] to procure the ſilie ignoraunt ſoules to ſerue God: and ſecondly to be alwayes incoraging of ſuch as are in the right trade. As for example, when we ſee blinde wretches runne aſtray; ſurely if we be able and can haue any acceſſe or meanes to doe it, we ought to giue them a taſt of the true religion, that they may ſubmit themſelues to God. Againe, we knowe wherein the ſeruice of God conſiſteth, namely in learning his woorde that we may put our truſt in him, and therewithall call vpon him, yeelding him thankes for all the benefites which he hath beſtowed vpon vs, and dedicating ourſelues vnto him all our life long. Nowe at this day his ſeruice is ſpirituall; it conſiſteth not in the ſhadowes and ceremonies of the Lawe. Therefore let vs prouoke ech other to reſorte to the hearing of Gods worde, let vs treate of it together to the edifying one of another, and let vs alſo giue good exãple of putting our truſt in him, of being patient in our aduerſities, and of walking vnder his feare. Afterwarde let vs call vpon him, as which is the chiefe Sacrifice that hee requireth at our handes; let vs flee to him alone for refuge; let vs yeelde him the prayſe that is dewe to him for al his benefits, and let vs prouoke all others to do the like. That is the thing which is declared vnto vs in the example of Zabulon and Iſachar.

Pſal.5.12.

But as I ſayde afore, we muſt not teache our neighbours, and tarrie behinde ourſelues, but we muſt beare them companie. And for ẏ cauſe is it ſayde that they ſhall all worſhippe. Now then, if we will diſcharge our duetie, we muſt not ſay to others, pray you vnto God, put your truſt in him, giue him thankes for the great number of benefites which he hath beſtowed vppon you, dedicate your liues vnto him with all pureneſſe: it is not for vs to ſhift off the matter in ſuch ſort. What then? We muſt ioyne with them, and ſay, let vs ſerue our God, let vs worſhip him, let vs call vpon him, yea and let vs ſhewe the way to ſuch as haue neede to be prouoked by vs. That is the thing then, which in the ſeconde place we haue to practiſe out of this text.

But heere a man might demaunde wherefore Moſes ſpeaketh this of Zabulon & Iſachar rather than of the other tribes. It is likely that it was becauſe of the ſituation of the place. For firſt they were farre ynough from the Temple, and therefore it was the harder for them to offer Sacrifices, becauſe the iourney was paineful; or elſe they might eaſily haue growen out of kinde beeing ſo farre off & intermingled among the heathen, by reaſon whereof they might haue become hardehearted, and haue made no great account of Religion or of the Lawe. That is the cauſe why Moſes doth purpoſely attribute vnto them the ſayde title of zeale of prouoking folke to the ſeruing of God. True it is that the tribe of Gad (of whom mention ſhalbe made heereafter) and alſo a part of Ephraim ſhould haue their portions allotted vnto them beyonde the Iordan. But although they were farre off from the temple, yet might they haue the Religion ſimple; they were not ſo mingled with the Heathen, they had not ſo great corruptions as were in the tribes of Zabulon and Iſachar. For we knowe that theſe were neere vnto Galilie, and that a part thereof was called the Galily of the Gentiles. And when Salomon was in the greateſt proſperitie of his kingdome, we ſee howe he gaue Cities in that Countrey vnto king Hiram, by meanes wherof it was like ynough that thoſe people ſhould bee corrupted. And vnder the worde Folke, Moſes comprehended not onely the Tribes of Iſraell; but alſo thoſe which erſt had no acquaintaunce with God but were vtterly ſeparated from the true and pure Religion. Of them is it ſayd that Zabulon and Iſachar ſhould doe their indeuour to bring them into the right way, and to the doctrine of ſaluation.

Nomb.32.

1.King.9.11.

Nowe by this example we be taught, that although the worlde and the fleſh do diuers waies withdrawe vs and hinder vs from giuing ourſelues to the ſeruice of God; yet is that no ſufficient excuſe for vs, but wee muſt fight againſt it. And it is a very profitable warning. For wee ſee that euery ſtrawe (as they ſay) will ſtop vs, when we be towardes the ſeruing of God. If a flye doe but whiske afore our eyes, wee take occaſion to turne aſide, O (ſay we,) I hadde good will, but there happened ſuch a thing, and that diſappointed mee: and ſo by that meanes we thinke ourſelues quit and very well diſcharged. Then let vs conſider, that although this worlde haue many lettes to plucke vs backe and to turne vs out of the right way; although wee haue many temptations; and although there be ſnares layd for vs by Satan, ſo that when we would goe one ſtep forwarde, it ſeemeth that at euery paſe we ſhould meete with a mountaine: yet muſt we inforce ourſelues, and howſoeuer we fare, we muſt not cocker ourſelues in our delightes nor thinke that if we haue ſome harde and troubleſome incounter to ouercome, that that will ſerue to diſcharge vs: But that ſeeing it is ſayde of Zabulon and Iſachar, who being placed in the borders or outleets of Iewry were mingled with the Gentils and heathenfolke, that they ſhould not forbeare to prouoke their neighbours to ſerue God: we alſo ought to followe that which is ſayd heere of them. And ſpecially let vs put this in practiſe when we be among yͤ vnbeleeuers, which would faine infect vs with their corruptions, and bring vs into a miſlyking of Gods ſeruice, to plundge vs in their ydolatrie. When we ſee ſuch thinges, let vs followe the conſtancie and ſtoutneſſe of thoſe whō Moſes cōmendeth & prayſeth heere. For he ſetteth them as lookingglaſſes before our eyes, to the intent that we ſhould followe them. Be we then ſomtimes among the ydolaters? Let vs labour as much as in vs lyeth, to winne them to God and to the Goſpell of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. At leaſtwiſe when we ſhall haue done our indeuour, let vs continue ſtill in the pure ſimplicitie which we holde of God and of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and let vs not be turned from it by any maner of occaſion. And in any wiſe when we goe about to win any ydolaters, let vs alwayes ſhewe them our good inſample; that ſo farfoorth as is poſſible for vs, we may drawe them to the fayth, euen by ſhewing them that our Religion is warranted by our conuerſation. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to gather vppon this text.

And heere is ſpeciall mention made of the ſacrifices of Righteouſneſſe, to ſhewe that euen in the time of the ſhadowes and figures, Gods will was not to be ſerued with countenaunces onely, but that he would haue men to come vnto him with trueth and righteouſneſſe: for hee hath euer hated hypocriſie. Truely the diuerſitie betweene the fathers of olde time and vs is this, that when they worſhipped God it behoued them to ad ſacrifices, and to ſet vp lightes, and to haue many other ceremonies, all which thinges are layde downe at this day. But yet it was Gods will in all ages that men ſhoulde offer themſelues to him with pureneſſe of heart, according to this ſaying in Ieremy, Ier.5.3. Lord, thine eyes regard the thing that is right. And therefore we muſt not thinke that God did euer take pleaſure in any of theſe outwarde thinges which are ſpoken of in the Lawe. For he commaunded them for mennes ſakes. He did it not in reſpect of himſelfe, but to keepe the people in order who were like to litle children, vntill the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Nowe ſeeing that vnder the Lawe and ceremonies Gods will was to be ſerued in truth: let vs vnderſtand, that as nowe when his ſeruice is altogether ſpirituall, (as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſheweth in the fourth of Saint Iohn where hee Iohn.4.23. ſayth to the woman of Samaria, that God would no more haue the things yͭ were required vnder the Lawe, but would be ſerued altogether in ſpirit and truth:) if we will ſerue him duely, it is not for vs to haue any ſtore of pelting gewgawes before men, as who would ſay, wee woulde pleaſe him with murlymewes, but we muſt offer him the ſacrifices of righteouſneſſe. And this is a doctrine too much corrupted by the world. For we ſee what men doe commonly terme Gods ſeruice at this day. I ouerpaſſe the dooinges of the papiſtes, they be but mens inuentions wherin there is not one ſyllable of Gods worde. But let vs put the caſe that GOD accepted the thinges which they doe; yet are they nothing worth, becauſe there is nothing in them but cōtempt of God and hypocriſie. When the papiſtes haue babbled very much when they haue trotted on pilgrimages, when they haue lighted vp tapers, when they haue bedecked their puppets and ydols, they beare themſelues in hande that God is well payd. And why? For they transforme him with their dotages, and thinke they may ſerue him after their owne faſhion & pleaſure. We ſee then that the wretched worlde is become brutiſh. And we haue ſo much the more neede to marke well this text, where mention is made of the ſacrifices of righteouſneſſe, to ſhew that we doe but vnhallowe the name of God, when we bring not our heartes to him, to offer him a pure and cleane oblation. Yea and we ſee that Dauid alſo did practiſe the ſame doctrine in his time. For whereas he ſayeth, Offer vnto Pſalm.4.6. God the ſacrifice of righteouſneſſe, it is a rebuking of them that had peruerted the Religion. And becauſe his enemies had their full ſcope at that time, and he himſelfe was chaſed and baniſhed in that while, & the wicked vaunted themſelues as the papiſtes do at this day, with, What? We be the Catholike Church; wee haue Gods temple; we haue all the titles which belong to the Church: therefore Dauid ſkorned all ſuch abuſers of Gods name, and tolde them that all their dealinges were but leazinges. And why? Offer vnto God the ſacrifice of righteouſneſſe. He vſeth the ſelfe ſame word which Moſes hath ſet downe heere; to ſhewe that God neuer ment that men ſhould diſcharge themſelues towardes him with Ceremonies and ſuch like thinges, but that he intended to bring them to his ſpirituall ſeruice, that is to ſay, to put their truſt in him, to call vpon him, and to yeelde him the glorie and prayſe of all good thinges. That is the thing which he requireth, and the marke whereat hee would haue vs to leuell.

And ſo we haue one good leſſon more in this text, which ſhall ſerue for an ende and concluſion, becauſe the time will not beare any more. Let vs marke well then, that Moſes hauing ſpoken ſo of the zeale which ſhould be in the tribes of Iſachar & Zabulon; ſayth that God will bleſſe them. True it is that nowe hauing the kingdome of heauen opened vnto vs by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, by reaſon whereof it behoueth vs to looke vp higher; wee ſhall not alwayes be riche in this worlde; we ſhall not occupie the trade of marchandice by ſea, we ſhall not flit off the fatte thereof: for it is euen good for vs that our Lorde ſhould keepe vs vnder in lowe ſtate. But yet ſhall we be bleſſed of him, if wee bee his children; according as Saint Paul declareth that the trewe Religion and feare of God hath promiſes both of the preſent life and of the life to come. 1.Tim.4.8. And therefore if we intend to be gouerned by Gods hande, and that he ſhould ſende vs proſperitie conuenient for our welfare: let vs learne to dedicate ourſelues vnto him, let vs all indeuour to ſerue him, and let vs worſhippe him with one accorde. If we doe ſo, ſurely wee ſhall finde that God hath not forgotten vs, and we ſhall alſo ſee what force there is in his grace, when it is vttered vppon vs. And that is the meaning of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt where hee ſayeth, that we muſt firſt ſeeke the kingdome of God, Mat.6.33. yͭ is to ſay, we muſt firſt indeuor as much as is poſſible, that God may be honoured, & that the world may be gathered vnto him; and wee ourſelues muſt come formoſt. When we once haue this zeale, all other thinges ſhalbe caſt vnto vs. But if we beginne at the preſent life; if we be ouercarefull for our ſuſtenance and food, if we be ſo wedded to this worlde that we make none account of the kingdome of heauen: wee may take peynes and toyle ynough, yea euen till we breake our armes and legges aſunder: but yet it ſhall ſo litle boote vs, that it ſhall rather turne all to our vtter confuſion. Therfore let vs marke vpon this text, that firſt of all God muſt be knowen of all: and then thereupon wee may looke that he will haue a fatherly care of vs, not only in calling vs to the heauenly inheritaunce, but alſo in prouiding vs of thinges neceſſarie, euen while we be as pilgrims and wayfarers in this worlde.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to touche vs more and more with them to the quicke, and to drawe vs to ſuch repentaunce, that we miſliking our ſinnes and being ſorie for them, may obtaine the grace to be throughly reclaymed vnto him; and that although we be eſtraunged from him, and doe dwell in the middeſt of ſo manie temptations, ſtumblingblockes & impediments, as long as wee bee compaſſed with our mortall fleſhe: yet notwithſtanding he may not faile to preſerue vs, and to giue vs ſuch ſtrength as wee may maintaine battell againſt all thinges that may turne vs from him, vntill wee bee come to the heauenly reſt, and that all our ioy and contentation may be there, and that in the middeſt of the miſeries of this worlde, we may patiently beare his chaſtiſements & corrections, vntill he haue made it knowen vnto vs that they haue benefited vs towardes our ſaluation. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not only to vs, but alſo to all people & Nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the iiij. of Iuly, 1556.

The CXCVII. Sermon, which is the ſeuenth vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

20 Alſo he ſayde of Gad, Bleſſed bee he that inlarged Gad: hee dwelleth as a lyon and ſnatcheth away the arme with the head.

21 He looked to himſelfe at the beginning, becauſe a portion of the Lawgiuer was hidden there; yet ſhall he come with the princes of the people, and execute the Lordes iuſtice, and his iudgement with Iſraell.

22 Alſo he ſayde of Dan; Dan is as a Lyons whelpe, hee ſhall leape from Baſan.

23 Alſo he ſayde of Nepthali; O Nepthali which haſt thy fill of [Gods] good pleaſure, and art full of the Lordes bleſſing; take poſſeſſion at the weſt and South.

24 Alſo he ſayd of Aſer; Aſer ſhalbe bleſſed with children, and acceptable to his brethren, and ſhall dippe his foote in Oyle.

25 Thy Incloſures ſhall be yron and braſſe, and thy life ſhalbe according to thy dayes.

HEere wee haue to treate of the bleſſednes of the tribe of Gad, to whom that name was giuen, becauſe that whereas his mother had erſt beene deſpiſed & as it were reiected of her husband Iacob, now after many other children had by him, reioycing that GOD had made her ſo fruitefull, ſhee ſayde of this Gad, In number, or in Gen. 30.11. bande [or Hoſte]. And for the ſame cauſe alſo when Iacob bleſſed this his ſonne, he ſayde, An Gen. 49.19. armie ſhall riſe vp againſt Gad, but hee ſhall get the vpper hande. Whereby he ment, that as the mother of him was fruitefull in children, ſo Gad ſhould become a great tribe, and be ſo multiplied, that he ſhould be able to ouercome his enemies. This promiſe doth Moſes confirme and ratifie, ſaying, That God will inlarge Gad. We ſee then how that in this promiſe Moſes hath ſhewed, yͤ the bleſſing which was giuen to Gad himſelfe was not in vaine; but that God continued the ſame fauour towardes all the whole tribe, ſo as he had alwayes a ſpeciall care of that people, to performe all that euer hee had ſayde, as well to Abraham as to the other Patriarkes. Now we muſt apply this to our owne vſe; and although the ſame name belong not vnto vs nowadayes; yet haue we a generall leſſon to gather thereupon; namely that we may well apply vnto ourſelues al the promiſes which are giuen in the holy ſcriptures: yea and wee may apply them in ſuch ſorte, as we may euermore conclude, that not ſo much as one mite of them ſhall fayle vs.

Nowe Moſes addeth, That he ſhalbe as a Lyon tearing his pray, as well the head as the arme. Wherby he betokeneth that thoſe people ſhall haue enemies, but that they ſhall giue them the repulſe by force. To be ſhort we ſee how it behooued that people to be exerciſed with diuers battelles, but yet that God woulde alwayes ayde them and giue them meanes to ouerthrow their enemies. And therefore let vs learne, that although our Lord ſuffer vs to indure many troubles, yet doth it not followe thereupon that he ſhaketh vs off, or that he will not be mercifull to vs & make vs to feele his goodneſſe. For what elſe are the bleſſinges which Moſes rehearceth heere, and which Iacob vttered in the forealleaged place; but a ſure warrant that God woulde ſhewe himſelfe gratious to the tribes of Iſraell? And yet is this no impediment but that they ſhould haue many troubbles, many warres, and many temptations. And therefore let vs not thinke that becauſe God accounteth vs for his children, and hath pitie vpon vs; therefore wee be exempted from all vexation, ſo as we ſhall liue at our eaſe, and all thinges ſhall fall out to our luſt and liking: for yet notwithſtanding wee ſhalbe afflicted and moleſted. Wherefore let it ſuffiſe vs that we haue God on our ſide, who will at length ſet vs vp, and giue vs ſuch deliuerance and iſſue out of all our miſeries, that wee ſhall throughly perceiue that he holdeth on our ſide. As long as we haue that, let vs paſſe patiently through all the tribulations which it behoooueth vs to ſuffer.

It followeth that Gad ſawe that he had a portion of the Lawemaker hidden, and yet neuertheleſſe that he ſhould goe with the Princes, to execute Gods Iuſtice and Iudgement. Moſes rehearſeth that which was alreadie come to paſſe concerning the tribe of Gad, and excuſeth them for deſyring to haue their portion beyonde the Iordan, that is to wit, the countrey of Og king of Baſan, and whatſoeuer elſe had beene conquered before the death of Moſes. It might ſeeme that in this caſe the two tribes of Gad and Ruben were to bee condemned; for their ouerhaſtie eagerneſſe in deſiring to haue partition made afore the people were come into the Lande of promiſe. But yet doth God allowe of it, with condition that they ſhould require that partition. And how was that? That Countrey had elſe lyen deſerte, and had ſerued to no purpoſe. Heereupon the two tribes alleaged that they had great ſtore of cattell, and that the ſayde countrey was a Countrey of very good paſture, ſo as they might leaue their wiues and children there, and not be in charge with the whole hoſte. Againe they alleaged that in the meane while their cattell ſhould proſper, & Nomb. 32.4. the Countrey be inhabited. As touching their owne perſons, they offered to go with the reſt of the people, and to die there rather than not to diſcharge their dutie in yͤ right of brotherhood. Moſes then excuſeth the requeſt made by the tribe of Gad that they might dwell beyond Iordan, and haue their portion and inheritaunce there. Therefore he ſayth, That they had a hidden Portion of the Lawegiuer, [or at the Lawegiuers hande]. This text hath cōmonly beene expounded thus; He ſawe that this ſhould be the graue of Moſes the Lawgiuer: but that is ouercolde & not worthy to bee ſpoken of, notwithſtanding that ſome ſticke vnto it. And why? Becauſe wee ſhould bee neuer the ſurer of the ſenſe, which yet notwithſtanding is as fit as any can bee. For to what ende is the excuſe of Moſes compriſed heere? namely that he ſhould haue a portion at Gods hande in that Countrey. As if he ſhoulde ſay, that Gad was led by good diſcretion, when he deſyred his dwelling place beyonde Iordan. If a man ſhould reply, How ſo? Was it not Gods will to reſerue yͤ diſtributing of the inheritances to his people by the hand of Ioſua? And againe, was it meete that the Countrey ſhould haue bin conquered afore? But that was not doone: and therefore there was raſh dealing in this caſe, or at leaſtwiſe there was ouerhaſtie deſire. If any man reply after that maner, Moſes ſayeth that the portion was hidden, and he termeth it a portion from the Lawegiuer. Whereby hee ſignifieth that Gad attempted not any thing but yͤ which was lawfull & permitted. For it was well knowen that it was Gods will yͤ the ſayd Land ſhould be conquered after an extraordinary faſhiō, & that it ſhold be poſſeſſed & put to good vſe, & yͤ ſome benefit ſhould be made of it while all the reſt of the people went to conquere the Lande of Canaan. So then, the worde Lawgiuer may better be referred vnto God than vnto Moſes. For ſo God be obeyed, all thinges ſhall goe well. Men will perchaunce finde fault with our doings; but let it ſuffice vs to haue God for our warrant, when we ſhall not haue offended him,nor withſtood his ordinance. The meaning then of Moſes is, that Gad knewe he demaunded not aught which was not conformable to the purpoſe of God: and ẏ in ſo doing he was not to be blamed, foraſmuch as he had followed Gods ordinance.

Againe, he termeth it A hidden portion, meaning that he did not take his part by violence, but that he tooke it as a thing belonging to him, and which was lawefull for him to doe. For although it fell not to him by lot, but by conſent of the people and of al the other tribes:yet notwithſtanding, God declared that it was his will it ſhould be ſo, and that it was good. And why? For it was a hidden portion; that is to ſay, God had foreappoynted it to that vſe, and he would not that in that behalfe they ſhould followe the common rule, nor that they ſhould tarry till the cōmon partitions were to be made by lot. And thereupon it is ſayde, that he ſhould goe with the Princes, that is to ſay with the reſt of the tribes, to execute Gods Iuſtice and Iudgement vnto Iſraell: ſo as his dwelling in that countrey ſhoulde not holde him backe to deceiue his brethren, and to fayle them at their neede: but that notwithſtanding that they ſaw they might haue abidden in a fat and fertile Countrey, yet hee would not inioy his ſtate, but followe ẏ warres ſtill vntill all were at an ende, and that the Lord had giuen reſt to all the other tribes. Nowe we ſee what Moſes meant in effect.

And by this place we be put in minde, that in all our doings we muſt haue an eye to Gods wil. For as ſoone as we ſwarue from that, there remaineth no excuſe for vs,what colour or couert ſoeuer we pretende. Heere then is a good rule to diſcerne betweene good and euill: namely ẏ if men ſubmit themſelues to Gods ordinance,ſo as they attempt not any thing, ne take libertie to do one thing or other, except they knowe it pleaſeth God it ſhould be ſo: then ſhal all things go well. And it is a leſſon well worthy to be marked, to the intent we wander not in our life, ne ſtande in dout and grudge of conſcience, to inquire of the thinges that are to be done. Then let vs alwayes haue Gods will before our eyes, to do whatſoeuer he cōmandeth vs, and to followe whitherſoeuer he calleth vs:and then let vs not paſſe though men ſlaunder and condemne vs; ſo we may be acquit before God, that ought to ſuffiſe vs. For we ſee whereupon the acquitall which Moſes ſetteth downe heere to iuſtifie the tribe of Gad,is grounded; namely that he ſaw that he had that Portion from the Lawegiuer; that is to ſay,that he might require the preſent partition, without gaineſtanding the will of God. For it is Gods iuſtifying of vs that maketh vs to ſtande vpright:& contrariwiſe as ſoone as he pronounceth the word to condemne vs, we muſt needes tūble down though al ẏ world ſhould hold vs vp.

And this word Lawgiuer is to be marked wel: for it is the ſame wherunto S. Iames had an eie, where he ſayth that there is but one Lawegiuer, ames.4.12. who can condemne and deſtroy, and who can alſo ſaue. He ſheweth vs that it is not for vs to giue ſentence againſt our brethren; for then we take too much vpon vs. Why ſo? Becauſe (ſayth he) there is none but God to whom it belongeth to condmne or to acquit. And why? For he is the only Iudge, and we be his vnderlinges. It is his office to lay Lawes vpon vs, and to put vs to the yoke, vnder the which he will haue both great and ſmall to humble themſelues. After the ſame maner it is ſayde in this text, that Gad knowing how there was a portion layde vp for him with the Lawegiuer, might lawefully require to haue his partition made there, (that is to wit vpō the hill of Baſan,) ẏ hee might not continually driue his cattell from place to place. Now then we ſee, that in the perſon of thoſe whō Moſes ſpeaketh of, we haue a generall rule, to ſhewe that when we followe the thinges which God liked of, and paſſe not beyond our boundes; it is a good warrant for vs to defie the whole worlde when they finde fault with our doinges. And on the contrary part, when we haue not Gods worde to guide vs and rule vs by, nor warrant of his will:al that we can alleage wilbe to no purpoſe. And why? For we be ſet in this worlde to none other ende, but to do homage vnto God with our life. Now if we intende to obey him vnfainedly; wee muſt ſhewe it by the obedience which we yeelde vnto his woorde. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to gather vpon this place.

Now it is ſayde, that he ſhall followe the Princes of Iſrael, to performe Gods Iuſtice and Iudgement. Heereby Moſes ſheweth that Gad ſhould not be turned away from God by the cōmodities which he was to inioy. For although hee had alreadie gotten him a certaine dwelling, and was nowe in a place of reſt: yet notwithſtanding he ſhould not forbeare to go ſuffer cold and heat, to ly vpon the hard ground, to followe the wars, to put himſelfe to all maner of daunger, and to indure trauaile and all maner of peines of warfare. Seeing he ceaſed not to ſerue GOD in his calling, ſurely he was to be excuſed. And we haue a good leſſon to gather vpon this place; which is, that we may then well inioy the aduauntages which God giueth vs, when they holde vs not backe from the diſcharge of our dueties,and from imploying ourſelues faithfully in the things which God inioyneth. For although a thing be lawfull of it ſelfe:yet doe we abuſe it when we be hindered by it that we keepe not on our way whither our Lorde appointeth vs. And heerein wee ſee howe there are very few nowadayes, which are not giltie of peruerting the true and right vſe of all the benefits which God beſtoweth vpon thē. We may wel ſay we haue not ſtolne,and ẏ we do iuſtly poſſeſſe the things which God hath giuen vs:but yet for all that,who is he which is not ouercombered with earthly cares, when he hath goods & lāds? Who is he which is not too much wedded to them,& which reſteth not too much vpon them? Who is he which doeth not ſo giue himſelfe vnto them, that he mindeth not ẏ heauenly life? Yee ſhall ſee a great number which become cold, when God hath once giuen them goods: and otherſome become altogether blockiſh.

kiſh. Howe many rich folke ſhall ye find,which are diſpoſed to giue thēſelues wholly vnto God? Nay,we ſee they be held backe as with lines and ropes, ſo as they be not able to ſtep one ſteppe right forth,becauſe their goods do hinder them. And euen therin do we ſee a manifeſt condemnation, ſo as there is no excuſe to be ſought for, wherewith to ſheelde ourſelues afore God. To be ſhort,ſo ſoone as God giueth vs any forehand in this worlde or any cōmoditie, by and by we be as it were tyed heere belowe , and we drawe backe from him, whereas we ſhould rather goe vnto him. We can not ſet forth one ſtep to goe vnto him; it is pitifull to ſee how laſie wee be in doing our duetie. And we ſee that ſcarſely the hundreth man doth determine with himſelfe to followe God: and if he doe, it is ſo laſily as may be. Alwayes the fault ſhalbe layd vpon ẏ goods of the world for plucking vs backe from following the good which God calleth vs vnto. But heere it is ſayde on the contrary part,that God will then like well of our vſing of his benefites, when we be his people,and when we ſeeke to do Iuſtice and Iudgement; that is to ſay, when wee ſhroude not ourſelues vnder pretence of our impediments, or vnder pretence of want of vnderſtanding, as we ſee the common maner is to alleage ſuch fonde excuſes as theſe,I haue bought Luke.14.18. a yooke of Oxen, I haue purchaſed a Manour; and another ſayes, I haue taken a wife, and becauſe I am maryed,I can not go thither as God calleth me. Foraſmuch then as we perceiue that Gods benefits which of their owne nature ought to be ſpurres to pricke vs forewarde, are hinderaunces to plucke vs backe;to the intent we may come to him with the earneſter deſire, let vs inforce ourſelues the more ſtrongly to ouercome all thinges that may hinder vs or plucke vs backe.

Moreouer wheras mention is made of Iuſtice and Iudgement;let vs marke that it is ment concerning the conqueſt of that Countrey. Moſes termeth it Gods Iuſtice & Iudgement,after the cōmon maner of the holy ſcripture: for theſe wordes heere do ſignifie the rule which God giueth vs.And that is yet one other notable point. For ſometimes we may gather good doctrine euen of one worde. It is not for nought, that the holy Ghoſt vſeth theſe ſo excellent wordes, of executing Gods Iuſtice and Iudgement. in ſtead of ſaying, obey God. For thereby hee ſheweth, that as long as men deale after their own fancy, they go croſſely and crookedly, ſo as there is no right dealing in them.I graunt they beare themſelues in hande that their life is well ordered, ſo as no fault can be founde with it, for euery man Prou.21.2. ſtandeth in his owne conceit, as ſayth Salomon. But yet for all that, heere God telleth them frō heauen, that there is none other righteouſneſſe or Iuſtice, than that whereof he himſelfe is the author;and(to be ſhort)that we do but go aſtray, and behaue ourſelues like wandering beaſtes, if we be not grounded vpon his worde. Nowe let vs ſee howe the worlde hath diſcharged it ſelfe heereof. It is as hard a thing as may be to hold ourſelues vnder the obedience of God, that we flatter not ourſelues to inuent ſome one thing or other. For howſoeuer the worlde go,this can neuer be altered,that is to wit that we obey God when we do Iuſtice and Iudgement: and that in following our owne fancies wee take crooked & vntowarde wayes, and(to be ſhort) that we doe but raunge heere and there, without going forewarde.

And truely this circumſtance deſerueth well to be noted. For at the firſt a man would not ſay it were Iuſtice and Iudgement, to goe to put all to the ſworde. For the very purpoſe for which it is ſayde that Gad ſhould followe the tribes of Iſraell, was to goe with naked ſworde , to kill all the males of that Countrey both great & ſmall. And therefore in that caſe it might ſeeme there was ſome crueltie. Yea; but yet for all that,it behooued it to be executed; for it was the iuſt vengeaunce of God. Fourehundred yeeres afore,he might well haue rooted out thoſe people, who were ſo frowarde, and ſo exceſſiue in all wickedneſſe, that although God puniſhed them with extreeme rigor, yet muſt it needes be confeſſed that he had iuſt cauſe to doe it. Yet did he ſpare them and beare with them. But when their wickedneſſe was once ripe, and come to the full grouth; as had beene ſayde thereof vnto Abraham Gen.15.16. fourehundred yeeres afore: then was it for God to execute his laſt ſentence. And ſo let vs marke,that although the thing which God commaundeth vs may ſeeme ſtraunge vnto vs, and we may alleage ſome reaſons againſt it and caſt doutes of it: yet is it not for vs to be wiſer than he, or to make any replying to ſhrinke from obeying him: but wee muſt goe through with it. For it is a true proofe and tryal of our ſubiection, when God commaundeth vs a thing that may ſeeme ſcarſe good, and yet notwithſtanding becauſe he ſpeaketh it, we hold our wittes captiue, ſo as we take not leaue to ſay,I am of a contrary opinion, I thinke it not to be reaſonable. Let vs not bee ſo preſumptuous as to diſpute againſt God, but though a thing ſeeme euill vnto vs, let vs thinke it good if he allowe of it. That is the thing wherein we ſhewe that we be rightly obedient vnto him in all pointes. Therefore when we heare Gods Iuſtice & iudgement ſpoken of, though the caſe concerne the vtter rooting out of all that euer is to be found in a whole Countrey, and the putting of all thinges to the ſword without ſparing: let vs aſſure ourſelues that it is not for men to be iudges of good and euil in that caſe, but that looke whatſoeuer God ſpeaketh,it behoooueth them to holde them to it, and to reſt wholly thereupon. For ſith the tribe of Gad is excuſed heere for not enterpryſing any thing againſt God, and commended for dooing Iuſtice and Iudgement in warre: much more reaſon is it that we ſhould indeuour to obey God when he inioyneth vs things which do much more proue themſelues to be iuſt and rightfull, as when hee will haue vs to be dedicated to him in al holines, to pray vnto him, to put our whole truſt in him, to liue in good loue with our neighbors,indeuoring to doe ſeruice to euery man,and to be ſober and ſtayed in all our conuerſation. For in thoſe caſes his iuſtice is apparant ynough. We cannot reply, that it is too ſtrange a thing: for wee haue this record ingraued in vs aforehand, that God requireth not any thing of vs, which wee owe not vnto him. Nature driueth vs thereunto. Although wee be vnwilling therto, and that we haue a malicious & froward luſt in our harts which draweth vs cleane backe: yet can we not ſay but that the things which are conteined in Gods law be iuſt, good & rightful. Sith it is ſo, let vs ſet our mindes vpon this leſſon, that wee may giue our ſelues vnto him, and breake al the bonds that might hold vs backe, & ſpecially ẏ the gracious benefites which he beſtoweth vpõ vs, may not be ſo peruerted, as to take occaſion therby to deale leaudly, ſo as we ſhould not ſtill do our indeuour to giue our ſelues to the obeying of him.

Now it followeth afterward, that Dan is as a Lyons whelp, & that he ſhall go out of Baſan. No dout but ẏ here Moſes intended to ſtrengthen ẏ trybe of Dan, & to giue them courage becauſe they were few in number. They were a trybe of no great reputation, & they ſeemed not worthie to be made account of. Now, they which are ſo deſpyſed of the world, & are of no force, credit, or countenance, are alwayes in dout, & thinke that one time or other they ſhalbee put to the ſpoyle, or rather that men ſhall ſet their feete vpon their throtes. Forſomuch therfore as mẽ beholding their own weaknes, do diſtruſt after that faſhiõ: Moſes meant to exhort the trybe of Dan to put their truſt in God, & not to dout but that he would maintaine them, notwithſtanding that they were fewe, & had not wherof to get any great authoritie to the worldward. And that is the cauſe alſo why Iacob in bleſſing him Gen. 49.16. ſayth, Dan ſhall iudge his people as the other trybes of Iſrael. The word Dan ſignifieth to iudge: & that name was giuen to the Patriark Dan. For it ſeemed vnto Rachel, that God had condemned her; or rather that men had condemned her vniuſtly. Oh (ſayd ſhe) God hath taken my Gen. 30.6. caſe in hand, he hath iudged me; & thereby it appeareth that my quarell hath been maintained of God; for he hath ſhewed in the end, that he condemned me not. Iacob then taketh holde of that ſpeach & ſayth, Dan, thou ſhalt iudge. And in the Hebrew, this worde Iudge ſignifieth, not 1.Sam. 4.19 only to giue ſentence in matter of controuerſie as it doeth in our language, but alſo to rule or gouerne, & to haue preheminence. And that is the cauſe why it is ſayd, Such a one iudged, that is to ſay, gouerned or ruled. And thereupon alſo doth the booke of Iudges take that name; becauſe the Iudges, that is to ſay the gouerners had al the preheminence ouer the people. Thus then we ſee what Moſes meant in ſaying that Dan ſhould be as a Lyons whelpe: that is to ſay, that although he ſeemed neuer ſo weake, & wanted wherewith to maintaine himſelfe to ẏ worldward, yet notwithſtanding God would giue him ſtrength, & he ſhould be as a Lyons whelp that leapeth frõ Baſan (it was the place that was aſſigned him for his portiõ) & ſtrẽgthen himſelf in ſuch wiſe, ẏ he ſhuld be maintained & defended.

To be ſhort, wee haue to gather vppon this place, that our Lord if it pleaſe him, will welynough preſerue vs; inſomuch that although we be without defence & vtterly vnfurniſhed of theſe inferiour helps, ſo as we haue neither any great number of people, nor great riches, nor great ſcope of ground: yet we neede not bee afrayd for any of thoſe things; for God is able ynough to preſerue vs, ſo we put our truſt in him. Wil we then be ſafe & ſure? We muſt not haue an eye to our own power: for that is a thing that ſpyteth God & kindleth his wrath: inſomuch ẏ when men thinke themſelues well at caſe, becauſe they haue wherewith to repulſe their enemies, & are rich welthie & ſtrong: that preſumption of theirs muſt needs make God to bereaue them of all; that he may ſhew vnto them that it is in vaine for them to turne away from him, & to put their truſt in corruptible & tranſitorie things. And it is a iuſt vengeance. For we cannot put one drop of truſt in any creature, but Gods right is diminiſhed therby: for we withdraw our faith from him, which ought to be wholly ſhut vp & as it were tyed there. Againe, on ẏ other ſide when we be weake; let vs vnderſtand that it behoooueth vs in any wiſe to flee to Gods protection, that we may be brooded vnder his wings. And God ſeeing vs to be litle ones wil helpe vs. Wherfore let vs therupon conſider; ẏ hee hath power ynough to withſtand al our enemies; inſomuch ẏ wheras to outward ſeeming we haue not the ſtrength of a Gnat; hee will giue vs the ſtrength of a Lyon, or rather he himſelfe wilbe a Lyon for vs, as he vſeth the ſame ſimilitude afore, Deut. 20. & as he ſpeaketh therof by his Prophet Eſay, Eſa 4.31,4. ſaying that he will rore like a Lyon, to repulſe the furie and violence of his enemies; and that he will ſnatch vp the pray, & no man ſhall be ſo bolde as to come neere him to take it frõ him. Now then, when wee bee thus aſſured of the goodneſſe of our God; wee ſhall euer haue wherwith to repulſe all the practiſes of ẏ worlde againſt vs, how many perils ſo euer wee ſee at hand, and as it were hanging ouer our heads. And wee haue good cauſe to put this leſſon in practiſe. For we ſee the malice of the enemies of the Goſpel, wee ſee alſo how all things nowadayes are ſo farre out of order, that by all likelyhood wee ſhoulde bee deuoured euery minute of an houre. And although a greate ſort doe neuer thinke vppon it; yet in very deede the knyfe is continually vppon our throte. And it is not for any man to flatter himſelfe in this behalfe, for then ſhoulde wee bee too dulwitted. It ſtandeth vs in hand to conſider our owne daungers, that wee may bee quickened vp to call vppon GOD, and to flee vnto him for refuge. Then if wee looke well to our ſtate; wee ſhall perceiue that our lyfe hangeth as at a threede, ſo as death threateneth vs on all ſydes, and wee haue no power to withſtande it. The onely remedie whereof is this, that foraſmuch as God hath promiſed to mayntaine the feeble and weake things, and that when in ſight of the worlde, all thinges are like to ſlippe away, yet neuertheleſſe he wil haue his hand reached out, to bleſſe ſuch as are ſo baſe and deſpiſed, & to hold them vnder his tuition, that they may be in ſafetie: we muſt reſt wholly vpon him, and learne to leane vnto him, and beare all things patiently through the power of that promiſe, & with our glorying in God not bee aſhamed to confeſſe our weaknes, to the intent that he may vtter foorth his power, and haue it the better knowen, when the worlde ſhall ſee that there was nothing at al on our ſide, and therfore that we play not the vainglorious folke who woulde always conceale their own weakneſſe although it be knowen. And what a fondneſſe is it to bee deſirous to ſeeme ſomewhat, when we haue nothing in vs? Is it not a fighting againſt nature? And yet in ſo doing we fight againſt God. For it is a darkening of his glory, when we wil needs bleare mennes eyes, and beare them in hande that there is that in vs which is not. Therefore let vs learne to acknowledge our meaneſſe with all humilitie, that we may prouoke one another to reſort vnto our God; and that although wee be but a ſmall handfull of people, and as it were vtterly without ſtrength of our ſelues; yet notwithſtanding, wee ſhalbee defended from aboue, euen when we be caſt vp to all perils here beneath.

Gen.49.21.

After that Moſes hath ſpoken of Dan, he addeth concerning Nephthalim, that he ſhall haue euen his fill of Fauour, or of good will, or of free good will: for the Hebrewe word ſignifieth Free-beſtowed loue. Then ſhall he haue his fill of Gods free fauour, & be repleniſhed with the bleſſing of the Lorde. Nowe as concerning Nephthalim, it is ſayd in Iacobs bleſſing of him, that hee ſhalbe as a hynde that can skill to ſcape daunger, a fine Hynd that is brought vp deintily, & that ſhall giue goodly wordes, ſuch as will well content men. Hereby Iacob meant to betoken that this trybe ſhould not bee ſo greatly troubled with warre as the other trybes were: but that it ſhould maintaine it ſelfe after another faſhion, namely by being mylde and amiable, & that his ſpeech ſhould be full of gentlenes and courteſie, and that no man ſhould moleſt him. And in ſteed hereof it is ſayd in this place, that Nephthalim ſhall haue his fill of Gods free fauour. The ſtate of this trybe then was better than the ſtate of Dan or of Gad who had enemies, and were continually aſſayled, becauſe God had not giuen them a peaſable ſtate. Now wee knowe that all the riches of the worlde, & all that euer wee can deſire beſydes is nothing woorth; if wee enioy them not in peace. To be ſhort, the chiefe good thing that men can wiſh, is to be voyde of griefe and miſtruſt. This is promiſed to the trybe of Nepthalim, at leaſtwiſe in compariſon of the other trybes. Not that that countrey alſo was not waſted in the ende becauſe of the vnthankfulnes of the people. But God ſheweth here, that whereas hee intended to ſtabliſh the people of Iſrael hee would giue vnto euery of them his portion; & the bleſſings which hee woulde beſtowe vppon them ſhould be diuers; accordingly as we know well, that hee dealeth not alike with all men, no not euen with his owne children, whome hee hath choſen. Albeit that hee loue them all, and be father in common to them all; yet doeth hee handle them diuerſly. After the ſame ſort was it with this people. Here then wee ſee as in a mirrour, that God is not bounde to gouerne his Church after ſuch a ſort, that euery faithfull man ſhoulde haue the ſame thing that the others haue. For God knoweth what is meete for vs. One is handled after one faſhion, [and another after another.] And doth God (ſayth ſome man) take pleaſure in ſuch varietie? For hee knoweth that thoſe things are for our behoofe. Although wee knewe none other reaſon, euen this were ſufficient, that he doeth not any thing but with perfect righteouſnes & wiſedome: and that ought to content vs. But we ſee moreouer, and finde it prooued to vs by experience, that it is not good that all men ſhould be dealt withal alike. And why? For we haue diuerſe diſpoſitions & diuerſe complexions; al mē are not to be fed with one kind of meate; nor all diſeaſes to be cured with one medicine. God therefore vſeth diuerſitie of dealings towardes vs, after as hee perceiueth it expedient for vs: And that is the cauſe why I ſayd that the whole ſumme of Gods bleſſings is a mirror vnto vs to ſhewe vs that hee ſo diſtributeth his gracious giftes vnto his Church as that euerie man hath his meaſure and qualitie, and yet notwithſtanding that howſoeuer wee fare, wee muſt with all humilitie giue thankes vnto GOD, for that it pleaſeth him to bee our father: [aſſuring our ſelues] that although he giue vs not all that our fleſh craueth; yet will he ſuccour vs at our need, and turne our ſorrowes to good, making them to ſerue to our ſaluation.

But it behooueth vs to marke well the word that is ſet downe heere by Moſes, where he ſayeth, that Nephthalim ſhall haue his fill of Gods fauor, and that he ſhalbe repleniſhed with his bleſsing. This word Bleſſe (as wee knowe) is taken diuers wayes in the holy Scripture. Sometime it is taken for praying. As when wee bleſſe one another, it is as much to ſay, as wee wiſh well one to another. And when it is attributed vnto God, it is alſo taken for benefiting or dooing good. For when God ſayeth the worde, the deede goeth ioyntly therewith. God then needeth not to wiſh vs any good, if hee doo but ſay that hee will doe vs good, wee ſhal haue our fill thereof, and whatſoeuer is expedient for our ſaluation. Nowe then, Gods bleſſing is a teſtimonie and effect of the free fauour, good will, and loue which hee beareth towardes vs. But yet this free loue of God is as the fountayne: and then his bleſſing is as the Conduit pype. Therefore whenſoeuer wee receiue any good or proſperitie; let vs aſſure our ſelues that it commeth of Gods bleſſing of vs, that is to ſaye, of his vttering of his fauour towardes vs; but yet muſt wee euer reſort to that free loue of his, when ſo euer wee bee ſo bleſſed at his hande. For hee would giue vs no ſhow of his fatherly goodnes, if he had not receiued vs alreadie for his children. And that is the cauſe why he dealeth ſo gently and kindly with vs. Moſes then hath kept here a verie good order, in ſaying that Nephthaly ſhould haue his fill of Gods fauour, and be repleniſhed with his bleſſing. Hee ſetteth downe Fauour in the firſt place, for (as I ſaide) that is the very welſpring: and afterward he addeth the bleſſing which proceedeth thereof, that is to ſaye, the record which God yeldeth by effect, that he loueth vs, and that hee hath adopted vs for his children, in reſpect whereof hee vouchſafeth to powre out vpon vs all the ſtores & treaſures of his goodnes.

Now haue wee a good leſſon to gather vpon this text: which is, that if wee bee deſirous of proſperitie, wee muſt ſeeke it at Gods hand; & not do as they do which wiſh ynough, but in the meane whyle cannot lift vp their hearts to call vppon God. Looke vppon the wiſhes of this world, how they flee in the aire; euery man coueteth whatſoeuer moſt liketh his fleſh; & there is no ende of wiſhing, with I woulde, I woulde. And whereas men ſpeake after that faſhion, yet ſhall yee ſcarſe finde one among a hundred, which directeth himſelfe to God, to ſay, Lorde thou knoweſt what is meete for mee, vouchſafe I beſeech thee to ſende it mee. Foraſmuch then as men are ſo gadding, and that their nature leadeth them but to flickering in the aire after their wiſhes; and in the meane while they occupie not themſelues in prayer and ſupplication: therefore it behooueth vs to marke well the texts, where it is ſhewed vs that all proſperitie commeth of God. And moreouer we muſt vnderſtand that when God vttereth his fauour in that wiſe, it is becauſe that hee of his owne free goodnes hath vouchſafed to loue vs: ſo as we muſt not ſeek the cauſe therof in our ſelues, as though we had preuented God, or as though wee had gotten aught by our owne deſertes: but [wee muſt vnderſtande] that God is fauourable vnto vs, becauſe hee hath loued vs, notwithſtanding that wee were vnworthie of it. Thus yee ſee then that from the conduitpype whereat wee drinke, wee muſt goe vp to the fountaine and to the ſprings head, that is to wit, to Gods free goodnes which is higheſt in degree, as the onely cauſe of all the benefites which wee receiue at his hand.

Nowe laſt of all it is ſayde of Nephthaly, that hee ſhall poſſeſſe the South and the Weſt, that is to ſay, the Sea; for ſo doeth the ſpeach import. Wherein Moſes propheſieth againe of the ſtate of that trybe. And let vs alwayes beare in mynde howe it is God that ſpeaketh theſe things, to ſhewe that hee hath a care of that people. And that people was as a Mirrour of the Church; yea, and in olde time it was the Church, in whoſe roome wee bee nowe ſucceeded. Wherefore let vs aſſure our ſelues that GOD will alwayes haue a fatherly care of vs. And although hee gouerne all the nations of the worlde in generall by his prouidence: yet is hee neerer vnto vs, and that ſhal wee feele in that wee ſhalbee vnder his direction; and that hee will ſo maintaine vs as wee ſhall knowe that nothing happeneth vnto vs by his will, in ſo much that one hayre ſhall not fall from our head, but by his appoyntment. Luke.12.7.

In the ende hee concludeth with Aſer. True it is that Iacob in his bleſſing of Aſer, ſayeth that hee ſhall haue a country that is fruitfull of corne. Gen 49.20. Here it is ſayd that hee ſhalbe honoured for his children, and that hee ſhalbee acceptable to his brethren. Wee ſee then howe God hath diſtributed to euery of them according to his owne will; and therewithall that it was not lawfull for any of the trybes to murmure againſt him, but that it behooued all of them to bee contented that euery of them ſhoulde receiue the portion that was giuen him. And againe, that all of them ſhoulde thinke thus with them ſelues: Wee haue all one GOD and one father: although hee deale dyuerſly with vs as touching our bodyes; yet will hee haue vs to abyde all faſt knit togither, as whome hee hath called all to one ſelfe ſame inheritance. Lo what wee haue in effect to beare in mynd.

But here is no mention made of the trybe of Simeon. It is alledged that they were ydolaters. And what elſe were all the other trybes alſo? Wee knowe that all the Iſraelites were alienated from God, they were all backſlyders, all the whole countrey was infected with abhomination, and in the ende the very trybe of Iuda was corrupted. It was meete then that all ſhould be buryed. Others ſay that Simeon was companion to Leuy, and therefore that Moſes had already repaired that which had beene ſpoken againſt Leuie and Simeon, which ought to ſuffiſe; Deut.33.8. Gen.34.25. and that God gaue him no peculiar bleſſing, becauſe of the cruell deede which they had committed togither: but that it was ynough for him that hee was comforted in the perſon of Leuye. Howbeit we haue not a better, or a more likely coniecture than this; that although Simeon was then accounted as of the body of that people; yet God gaue him no ſeuerall bleſſing, but left him to languiſh; and yet notwithſtanding, that hee was not deſtitute of all comfort, foraſmuch as hee knew yͤ his fault was forgiuen him, as we haue ſeene afore. Deut.33.8. In likewiſe our Lorde doeth ſometime giue an incling of his fauour though ſomewhat dimly, ſo as we be not named, nor haue yͤ thing ſo cleare as we could wel find in our harts to haue it; but our Lord maketh vs as it were to licke vp his grace, like poore hungry ſoules; wee ſhall haue ſome darke promiſes, and wee ſhall finde them very leane: but yet howſoeuer wee fare, wee muſt vnderſtande that wee muſt not bee out of heart. Therefore when our Lorde ſheweth not his goodnes ſo largely as we would deſire; wee muſt fall to the examining of our faults, whereby it is poſſible that wee haue prouoked him in ſuch ſort, that wee bee vnwoorthie to haue him returne vnto vs out of hande, but hee is fayne to deale with vs as a father that will ſhewe ſome ſigne of diſpleaſure to his childe, inſomuch that although hee ſay, well, I forgiue thee; yet will he not take home his chyld to him to make him a cockeney in his houſe: he will not ſay vnto him, I wil take thee home; but he will ſay, I will not vtterly diſclaim him, I will take him ſtil as one of my houſhold: and yet for all this, the chyld ſhall daunce attendance, he ſhall ſee his fathers countenance very ſtrange towards him, ſo as he ſhall dwell ſtill in dout and in ſuſpence. Euen ſo was it betweene Simeon and God. Our Lord ſhewed not openly vnto him that hee was mynded to receiue him: but yet for all that he did not in the meane while vtterly caſt him off. Although he gaue him not ſuch warrant as was requiſite, to ſhewe that he would admit him to mercy; yet (as we haue ſeene afore) he might perceiue by the bleſſing which belonged to them both and was as it were common to them both, becauſe it was vttered in common by the mouth of the Patriark Iacob: that God did not baniſh him altogither out of his houſe. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, wee ſee that to reioyce in God & to receiue his gracious giftes in ſuch ſort as we may haue our mouthes always open to glorifie god, and alſo to bee diſpoſed thereunto all our life long; it behoooueth vs to behold heere as in a mirrour, that ſeeing God is our father, and that we be partakers of the adoption which is made in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, by whome hee hath drawen vs out of the deſtruction and gulfe wherein wee were plunged, and hath receiued & choſen vs to be of his flocke: the ſame ought to ſuffiſe vs, and to make vs to call vpon him, & to beare the afflictions patiently which he ſendeth vs, and to learne alſo to giue him thankes for his mainteining of vs in this mortall life; & not to be ſo groſſe in gobbling vp his benefites, as not to conſider that hee continually giueth vs ſome taſte of his goodnes and fatherly loue towards vs. Therefore let vs haue the skill to apply all theſe things to our profite, that wee may be more and more confirmed in beliefe of the immortall inheritance whereunto wee bee inuited.

Gen.49.5.
Deut.33.8.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him ſo to refourme vs, as wee may not be ſotted in our wicked luſtes & affections; nor Satan ſo bewitch vs with the pleaſures of this world, that wee ſhould bee eſtranged from our God; but that ſeeing he hath once vouchſafed to call vs to the knowledge of his trueth, and that his whole ſeeking is to drawe vs vnto himſelfe; we on our ſide may come vnto him, and euery of vs ſo do his indeuer, as our liues may be dedicated to his honor, and men may knowe that he reigneth among vs in verie deede, and that wee ſhoote at none other mark but to frame our ſelues in all pointes and all reſpects according to his lawes & holy ordinances. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not only to vs, but alſo to all people & nations of the earth, &c.

On Munday the xiij. of Iuly, 1556.

The CXCVIII. Sermon, which is the eighth vpon the xxxiij. Chapter.

26 There is none like the God of Iſrael, who rideth vpon the heauens to help thee, and whoſe glorie is in the clowdes.

27 Thy dwelling place is the Euerlaſting God, & vnder his armes ſhalt thou be for euer. He will put thine enemies to flight before thee, & ſay, deſtroy them.

28 Iſrael ſhall dwell in ſafetie alone. The eye of Iacob ſhall dwel vpon a land of corne and wine: and his heauens ſhall drop dewes.

WE can welynough confeſſe in one worde the greatneſſe and highneſſe of God: but yet yee ſhal ſcarcely find one man of a hundred, which yeldeth vnto God that which belongeth vnto him. For euery man will needes haue his ſhare of it, as though it were a bootie or a pray. For proofe whereof, who is hee that preſumeth not eyther vpon his owne vertue, or vpon his riches, or vpon his courage, or vppon his credit and authoritie? And by theſe meanes God is robbed of his glory. On the other ſide, if wee perceiue any danger, which of vs truſteth and reſteth vpon God? which of vs ſetteth his heart vpon him? Nay, we be vtterly diſmayed. And what elſe betokeneth this, but that after wee haue declared with our mouth that God is almightie, that he gouerneth the world, that nothing can let him to perfourme what he liſteth; we ſhewe by our doings that wee beleeue none of all thoſe things, or elſe that wee be not fully & throughly perſuaded of them? And therſore it is not for nought that the ſcripture doeth ſo magnifie God vnto vs, declaring vnto vs that wee cannot ſufficiently conſider his infinite highneſſe and power which is in him to doe whatſoeuer hee hath ordayned.

And that is the thĩg whereunto Moſes had an eye in this text where he ſayd, There is none like vnto God, ô right. This worde is taken for Iſrael or for the Church, as wee haue ſeene heretofore. Deut.33.5. Now at the firſt bluſh a man would thinke that this doctrine were ſuperfluous: ſpecially being directed to ſuch as euen from their childhood were trayned vp in the lawe, and had the doctrine preached vnto them. [A man woulde thinke (I ſay) that it were needleſſe] to tel them that there is none like vnto God. For who denyeth it? But (as I haue ſayd alreadie) it coſteth nothing to ſay ſo; but yet for all that, wee be ſo forepoſſeſſed with the leaſings and darkneſſe of our vnbeleefe, that wee cannot glorifie God in ſuch ſort as to reſt vppon him, to call vppon him, and to holde our ſelues perſuaded and reſolued, that all ſhall go well with vs, ſo God doe pitie vs.

Let vs marke then that in this place Moſes ſpeaketh not to the vnbeleeuers, ſuch as neuer wiſt what the maieſtie of God is: but to ſuch as had heard the lawe, to ſuch as had had their eares beaten with teaching. And wherefore doeth hee it? I haue tolde you alreadie that wee be ſo inclyned to diſtruſt, that euery little temptation will ouerthrowe vs out of hande. Nowe wee ought to reſt vppon the promiſe that is giuen vs; namely that God will guyde vs, & defende vs, ſo as wee ſhall not be ouercome. But wee ſee howe wee be diſmayed euery minute of an houre, and wee haue neede to haue Gods power ſhewed vnto vs to confirme vs, and to knowe that which is ſaide heere, that is to wit, that there is not any like vnto God. And therefore when wee ſee the worlde ſet it ſelfe againſt vs, and Satan ſtill practiſing one thing or other, let vs alwayes reſort to this concluſion, that if Rom.8.19 God be on our ſide, who ſhall then be againſt vs? Not that we ſhall not haue many enemies, or that as in reſpect of our ſelues wee ſhall not haue much adoo to reſiſt them: but that yet notwithſtanding, God will win the vpper hand of them. The way then for vs to put this leſſon in vre, is that when wee ſee all the force of the world bent againſt vs, wee conſider with our ſelues that all is but ſmoke in compariſon of the ineſtimable power of our God, who wil alwayes be in a readineſſe to ſuccour vs.

Nowe hereunto Moſes addeth, that God rydeth vppon the heauens for our ayde, and that his maieſtie is vppon the clowdes. This ſerueth to confirm the doctrine which wee haue heard afore. And although it be ſufficiently expreſſed alreadie in one worde, that God hath not his like; and that hee deſerueth to bee ſo exalted aboue all the worlde, that when hee is ſpoken of, all things ought to ſtoope; according as it is ſayde in the Prophets; that as ſoone as his maieſtie appeareth, Eſai.13.10. the Sunne muſt loſe his light, & ẏ Moone muſt bee darkened. Yet I ſay: Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth foraſmuch as wee conceiue not his infinite glorie and power: therefore it is ſayd that God rydeth vppon the heauens, and that his maieſtie is aboue the clowdes. As if it were tolde vs that all creatures are vnder his feete, that they bee ſubiect vnto him, and that hee can wealde them as hee liſteth. For if God were mingled with the worldly things, there would be a combate betwixt them, there woulde bee many incounters, and there woulde needes be ruſhing againſt him. When one man commeth againſt another, it muſt needes bee knowen which of them is the ſtronger to driue backe his enemie. If God then were in equall and like degree with his creatures, what woulde come of it? But whereas it is ſayde, that he rydeth vppon the heauens, and that hee ſurmounteth all things: thereby it is done vs to vnderſtande, that hee hath ſubdued to him ſelfe and to his dominion, whatſoeuer things may make vs afrayde. For although Satan bee called the prince of this worlde, although it bee ſayd that hee fighteth againſt vs from the aire, and that John. 12.31. hee is aboue ouer our heades: Yet notwith- Ephes.6.12. ſtanding hee commeth not at all at God, hee is fayne to ſtoope vnder him. So then in this text wee ſee our vnbeliefe. For when we haue gotten the knowledge of all thinges, if wee knowe not God, what is there in vs but vtter ignorance and beaſtlineſſe? For is it not the chiefe poynt of our wiſedome, to bee ſo grounded in our God, that wee can call vppon him, and flee vnto him for refuge in all our needes? That wee dout not of the aſſuredneſſe of our ſaluation, ſo hee kept vs? If wee haue not that; all our life is but wretchednes.

And by the way we haue to note, that whereas the holy Ghoſt taketh ſo greate paynes to perſwade vs what manner of one God is, and that his power is infinite: it is becauſe wee bee alwayes doutfull and wauering, ſo as there is no ſtayedneſſe in vs. In ſo much that although wee haue heard that God gouerneth all things, and that hee hath ſoueraigne dominion; and although men aſſure vs thereof, and it be tolde vs neuer ſo often times; yet ceaſſe wee not to haue ſtill ſome fancies or others, which darken our vnderſtanding; wee enter into I wote not what ſpeculations, and therewithall wee bee toſſed and turmoyled with a great ſorte of troubles that come vppon vs: And beeing ſo ouerraught by our owne fantaſticall imaginations, wee knowe what it is for vs to truſt in God, and to leane vnto his power. Let vs vnderſtande (I ſaye) that in this text, the holy Ghoſt meant to put vs in mynde of the beaſtlineſſe that is in vs, to the ende to waken vs, that wee may learne to magnifie the glorie of our God, better than we haue done, ſpecially conſidering that all the things which are wont to make vs afrayde, are nothing in reſpect of him. For he is able to ſubdue both Satan & the worlde, and whatſoeuer elſe is againſt our ſaluation: yea, euen all thoſe things muſt yeld themſelues to his ſeruice whenſoeuer he liſteth.

But let vs alſo marke well the ſpeeche that is ſet downe here, that God rydeth vppon the heauens to our ayde. If there were but mention made only of Gods maieſtie, and that he were exalted aboue all; wee ſhould already haue ſome matter to make vs to leane vnto him: but yet might we inquire whether he would haue pitie vpon vs, and whether he would diſappoynt the things that are againſt vs, becauſe wee bee not worthie that hee ſhould vtter his power to our benefite. But here Moſes ſaith expreſly, ẏ looke what greatnes & power God hath, he wil apply it to our welfare, that we may be maintained & defended. Therefore when wee heare that God wil be almightie to the intent to ayde vs, & to prouide for al our needes, it is a thing whereon we take a ſure & infallible reſolution. Here then is nothing omitted or forgotten; for on the one ſide Moſes thruſteth downe all that euer may ſeeme high, ſhewing that God hath all things vnder his feete, and that he can wel weald them as he liſteth. And therewithall he ſheweth [on the other ſide] that God will be fauourable vnto vs, that he will helpe vs, and that he will alwayes be readie to ſuccour vs. So then, if wee conceiue God in his high maieſtie, although hee ſeeme to be farre off from vs, and we to bee as wretched wormes creeping on the grounde, and he ſurmounting al that can be ſeene howe great excellencie ſo euer be in them: yet neuertheleſſe, let vs aſſure our ſelues that he vouchſafeth to ſuccour vs, and will haue that mightie power of his linked in vnſeparable bonde with our welfare.

And that is the cauſe why Moſes addeth, that his dwelling place ſhal be on high, or that the ſoueraigne God ſhalbe his dwelling place, and that his armes are alwayes vnder him. Truely, this worde dwelling place is expounded as if it were meant that God is ẏ harbor of his ſeruants, after which manner it is ſayde in the ſong of Moſes in the nynetith Pſalme: Lorde thou haſt bene our refuge from generation to generation. ſal.90.1. And this kinde of ſimilitude is verie often ſet downe, to ſhewe that we ſhould be ſet open to wynde and rayne, heate and cold, if our Lord preſerued vs not, and that we were not harboured vnder his wings. This interpretation then were very conuenient and profitable, namely that the dwelling place of the ſoueraigne & euerlaſting God is a ſure abode, and therefore that it is for our behoofe to get vs vnder him, for there we ſhall be in ſafetie, and wee ſhalbe well lodged as it is ſaid therof in the fourſcore & eleuenth Pſalme. ſal.91.1. And (as I ſaid afore) it is a doctrine which is to be ſeene almoſt in euery leafe of the holy ſcripture, Howbeit foraſmuch as ther is great briefneſſe in the wordes, and there is no more ſayde but the dwelling of God euerlaſting: it will come al to one poynt if it be taken, that Gods abyding is euerlaſting, ſo as he fleeteth not as we ſee that we do, who are fayne to trot vp and down here beneath in the worlde, without any certayne ſtay. What is the life of men, yea, euen of thoſe which thinke themſelues to bee lodged in their neſt, neuer to go out of it? Yet muſt they walke here & there. And in very deede there paſſeth not one minute of an houre without ſome change of vs. Though a man ſit ſtil or lye ſtill, yet beareth hee changes continually with him, and hee himſelf changeth in the conceits of his mynd; and he is euer as a ſhadowe. Like as wee ſee a ſhadowe continually fleeting to remoue from the one ſide to the other: euen ſo is it with men. I ſay they be continually fleeting, which ſheweth wel that their life ſlippeth away. But contrariwiſe it is ſayd, that Gods abyding is euerlaſting, according as S. Iames ſayeth that there befalleth no ſhadowing vnto him. It is God (ſayth he) in whome there is no trouble, Iames.1.17. ſo as he is not to bee compared to vs nor to any other creatures. For we be variable, & in continuall mouing; there is a certein ſturring which carryeth vs frō place to place: But in our God there is a ſure ſtayednes, which wee comprehend not here. To be ſhort, the intent of Moſes was to ſhewe, that if wee put our truſt in God, then come there neuer ſo many turnings and returnings, that heauen & earth may ſeeme to runne togither, ſo as to day there is report of warre and to morrowe of famine, enimies approche, and ſudden incounters come, inſomuch that wee bee beſieged with a thouſand deathes, & the world is continuall wauering; ſtormes ariſe on all ſides, & we be as on the ſea, where is no ſtay for vs to reſt vppon: yet neuertheleſſe we may wel be alwayes in quiet. And why? For the dwelling of our God is euerlaſting, & therfore being vnder his hande and protection, let vs not be afrayd of al the things that may happen vnto vs from elſewhere. For wee muſt not meaſure our God by the things which wee ſee with our eyes, & which beſet vs here beneath.

Now remaineth that we apply this doctrine to our benefite: and although wee be driuen to liue as pilgrims in this world, & to be ſubiect to many changes: yet notwithſtanding let vs not ceaſe to put our ſelues ſtill into the cuſtodie of our God. And for as much as wee know that he wil maintaine vs; let vs ouerpaſſe al the ſtormes that riſe againſt vs, and let vs ouercome all tēptations. By what power? Becauſe he that dwelleth in heauen hath taken vs into his keeping; he wil defend vs, for his abode is euerlaſting. So then, he is ſo gracious vnto vs, that wee ſhal not periſh, though it ſeeme ẏ we ſhould be ſwalowed vp euery day, by the dangers that appeare vnto vs. And to the end we ſhould be the ſurer hereof, it is ſaid, That his armes are below for euer. Some referre this to the people of Iſrael, ſo as ẏ arms of that people ſhuld neuer faint, ſo long as they were vphelde from aboue: that is to ſay, they ſhall haue an inuincible force ſo long as God is their ayd. Which thing is true. But the wordes of Moſes import it not. His intent and meaning rather is, that Gods armes are here beneath. And why doeth he ſet Gods armes beneath, ſeeing he hath alreadie told vs that God rydeth vpon the heauens? Theſe things ſeeme to be repugnant. For if God haue his ſeat on high, how ſhal he haue his armes ſo lowe? It is becauſe hee filleth all thinges, ſo as not onely his eſſence is infinite, but alſo his power: and it is ſpoken of ſet purpoſe, becauſe he wil haue vs to perceiue it by experience. If it were ſayde that Gods armes are in heauen; it woulde well ſerue to mayntaine the Angels; but as for vs, wee ſhoulde neuertheleſſe quake and be afrayd whenſoeuer we were threatened with any miſchiefe; we ſhould looke heere and there, and continue diſmayed without any remedie. Heere therefore the holy Ghoſt remedieth ſuch temptations, and ſayth that Gods armes are heere beneath. Although then that God ſit aboue in his maieſtie, although that as oft as we thinke vpon him, we muſt needes bee rauiſhed with all reuerence to worſhippe him with humilitie, ſeeing that we be nothing, and he is aboue all: although it behooue vs to worſhip God after that manner by abaſing ourſelues vtterly: yet ought that to be no impediment vnto vs, that we ſhould not knowe his power to be neere vnto vs, that his armes are reached out vnto vs, and that he will make the ſtrength of them to be felt euen heere, and ſhew the open proofe thereof. And why? For he will haue a care to keepe thoſe whom he hath choſen and elected, euen thoſe which truſt in him, which reſt vppon him, and which flee altogether vnto him. It is then a notable point of doctrin, when Moſes maketh ſuch a deſcription of God, that on the one ſide hee ſheweth vs how wee ought to behaue ourſelues lowely in thinking vppon him; and on the other ſide comforteth vs in ſaying that our God diſdaineth not to ſuccour vs: and that for proofe therof hee putteth downe his armes heere belowe, not that he is not alſo in heauen as I haue ſayde afore, but for our faythes ſake, in reſpect wherof mention is made of theſe neathermoſt partes. If we looke vpon our life, truely there is nothing but frailtie in it. Againe, we be beſeeged with ſo many enemies, as is horrible to ſee: and moreouer infinite deathes doe manace vs. But what? Gods armes are rounde about vs, we be fenced with them, and that for mo dayes than one. For as God is vnchaungeable, and hath an euerabyding ſeat: ſo his armes alſo abide heere for euer, and he will neuer be weary of ſuccouring vs. Let vs truſt to that, and then may we alwayes haue full boldneſſe, euen in the middeſt of all the troubles of this worlde, becauſe our ſaluation is in Gods hande, ſo as we neede not to be afraide or to dout.

Deut 33.7. Nowe after this, it is ſayd, That he will driue away the enemie before vs, ſaying, Deſtroy them. Wee haue ſeene heeretofore howe Gods Church is neuer without enemies, because Sathan who is John. 12.31. the prince of this world, doth moue the wicked continually to vexe the children of God. If the deuill were quite and cleane doone away, then truely we might haue peace in the worlde. But foraſmuch as he hath the greateſt multitude of men in his hande, who are frowarde by kinde, & we knowe that his whole ſeeking is to deſtroy vs: therefore we muſt prepare ourſelues to haue warre as long as we be in the worlde. The condition is harde, but yet muſt we beare it patiently, ſeeing that our Lorde hath ſo ordained, and therefore ſeeing he will try our faith and obedience by ſtirring vp enemies vnto vs; let vs yeeld our neckes vnto him. But yet moreouer wee haue neede to bee ſuccoured at his hande, yea and to haue him fight for vs: or otherwiſe what would become of vs? In that therefore ought we to haue full truſt. Wherfore let vs be contented, and although wee muſt needs be troubled, and ſuſteine many bruntes, and liue in continuall care foraſmuch as our enemies ceaſe not to prepare newe battels againſt vs: yet notwithſtanding let vs ſtay our ſelues vppon this, that our Lorde will not leaue vs in our neede. The meaning then of Moſes is, that God will ſo ſtretche Pſalm. 10. 5. out his arme, that all our enemies ſhalbe put to flyght; inſomuch that although they come with neuer ſo great violence againſt vs, ſo as it may ſeeme that they ſhould beare downe all thinges afore them, yea and ouerthrow all thinges with their breath: yet notwithſtanding God will ſtep afore them, as in reſpect whereof he is heereafter termed our ſheelde. Deut. 33.29. To be ſhort we ſee after what manner Gods armes are heere belowe. They bee not ydle; but they bee occupied in driuing our enemies away. And we be warned not to vexe ourſelues out of meaſure, when God exerciſeth vs with ſtore of temptations: but to ſtande alwayes vpon this ground (as I ſayde,) that our Lorde will fight for vs, and that by reſting vppon him, wee ſhall gette the vpper hande.

Nowe he addeth, that he will ſay, deſtroy them. If God put them to flight or driue them away; why ſayth he that we ſhall deſtroy them? Heere may ſeeme to be ſome contrarietie: For if God doe all, it ſeemeth that hee leaueth nothing for vs. But Moſes hath very well expreſſed, how it commeth to paſſe that we get the victorie of our enemies. In deede it is God that fighteth, but yet will he haue vs to bee inſtrumentes of his power. As for vs, we could not abide any one aſſault, vnleſſe we were ſtrengthened frō aboue, and (to be ſhort) that God himſelfe gouerned vs. For we be vtterly vnprofitable, inſomuch that there is not one droppe of ſtrength in vs, & that ſtrength which we weene we haue, is but leaſing. Yee ſee then how God worketh in ſuch wiſe, that we be maintayned by him; whatſoeuer we haue be it welfare or life, we muſt father it all wholly vpon him, and acknowledge ourſelues to haue it from thence. And if we will needes make ſuch a partition as the papiſtes do, and ſay that we worke together with God ſo as there is a concurrence [or meeting together]; and that we do helpe him: it is a renouncing of his ayde. So then, let vs learne to let God alone with that which is his, namely that all our welfare conſiſteth in him. Yet notwithſtanding, he applyeth vs to his ſeruice, ſo as we ſeeme to be dooers thereof. And that is a thing wherein the papiſts beguile themſelues. They ſpake of Freewill, and of mans abilities, and (to their ſeeming) we worke wonders. They confeſſe in deede that we had neede to be helped by God, and that he had neede to ſuccour vs with his grace: but yet doe they alwayes make vs companions with GOD. And why? Becauſe they ſee well, that to ſerue God, to reſiſt temptations, to walke in vprightneſſe of life, and to eſchue the corruptions of the world, the faithfull are faine to inforce thēſelues, to take paines to brydle themſelues, to become as captiues, and to fight againſt themſelues; which can not be done but with great difficultie. For, to be patient in their aduerſities, they are faine to holde themſelues as locked vp, and ſo to brydle and ouermaiſter their paſſions, as they may be tamed. Nowe then, when the Papiſtes ſee the faithfull take ſuch paines; they imagine that they do it of their owne power. But the matter is not whether mé take great paines, and whether they labour till they pant or no: but to knowe from whence that proceedeth. Now we ſay it is of God: and ſo there remaineth not any ſhare for men, nor aught whereof they may glory. God driueth away his enemies afore him, and yet neuertheleſſe ſayeth, Deſtroy them. Lo howe God on the one ſide deſtroyeth our enemies; and therewithall alſo commaundeth vs to vanquiſh them. How can theſe agree? O, yet is it God that doth all. And although he ſeeme to ſet vs a worke; yet are we able to do nothing. No, but yet do we indeuour. Yea, ſo farfoorth as he giueth vs it, and according to the meaſure of his grace, ſo as wee muſt not thinke we haue it of our owne growing. To be ſhort, man hath nothing of his owne in this caſe, neither doth the holy Ghoſt leaue him any thing. But yet are not we ydle: for our Lorde keepeth vs occupied, and maketh his grace auailable in vs, and cauſeth it to bring forth fruite, and wee be the inſtrumentes thereof. So then, we haue nowe the meaning of Moſes; which is, that although heere belowe wee liue not in an earthly Paradiſe; but our enemies do vexe and trouble vs on all ſides, and it ſeemeth that we ſhould bee ſwallowed vp by them: yet ought wee to walke on conſtantly vnder the protection of our God. And why? For his armes are come downe to vs, to ſuccour vs by his power, which ſhall vanquiſh all that euer is againſt our welfare; ſo we on our ſide doe ſuffer him to vtter his power in vs, and we behaue our ſelues as his inſtrumentes. For although he be the dooer of all; yet (as I ſayd afore) he doth vs the grace to doe it, & will haue the worke to be as it were ours: Not to puffe vs vp with preſumption & ouerweening as though we thought our ſelues to haue any thing: but that we ſhould ſo much the more acknowledge his goodneſſe towardes vs, in that hee attributeth and imparteth vnto vs the thing that is his, yea and will haue it to be reputed as our owne.

Hauing ſpoken after that faſhion, he addeth, that Iſraell ſhall dwell ſafely alone by himſelfe. Heere Moſes had an eye to the ſtate and condition of that people: becauſe God had culled them out, to ſet them there as in a neſt by thēſelues. True it is that the Countrey of Iewry was not ſeparated out from all other Countryes: but yet had Deut.32.9. God caſt his metelines there, as we haue ſeene in the laſt chapter going afore: and that he had ſet the boūdes and borders thereof, of purpoſe to harbour that people there. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, the people of Iſraell were ſeparated from all other Nations. They had in deede ſome trafficke with their neighbours; but yet had God gathered them together, as who would ſay, yee ſhalbe purified, that ye may no more liue in the corruptions of this worlde. And that could not be dóne, but that the reſt of the world muſt haue them and ſhake them off. For when men deſpiſe vs, we alſo on our ſide do diſdaine them againe. The neighbours of the Iewes then, deſyred nothing ſo much as that the memory of the Iewes might haue periſhed. To this ſtate of theirs had Moſes a reſpect in ſaying, that Iſraell ſhould dwell ſafely, though he dwelt alone by himſelfe. As if hee ſhould ſay, In deede it is like ynough that yee ſhalbe in perill of many daungers, becauſe our Lord wil not haue you to be mingled with other natiōs, but wil haue ye to be as a litle body cloſe knit together: It may wel ſeeme ẏ ye ſhould be afrayde; but it is ynough ẏ your God hath you in his cuſtody: therfore be contented with him and with his ayde, and ye ſhall dwel ſafely. Furthermore it is not to be douted but that heere Moſes ment to giue a continuing leſſon to the whole Church; which is to thinke her ſelfe ſafe and well aſſured of her ſaluation, although ſhee ſee not her ſelfe fenced in the worlde, ne to haue fortreſſes, walles, weapons, or any other ſuch thinges wherein men are woont to truſt, but rather is vtterly deſtitute of them all. And why? For we be in the hande of God. Then if we will yeelde God the honour which hee deſerueth: when we ſee nothing heere beneath, that may aſſure our ſafetie; let vs learne to go ſtreight vnto him, and to make ſuch account of his power, as to conclude that wee neede not to feare any thing ſo he be on our ſide. For if wee will haue our ſafegarde heere beneath; our Lorde will bee nothing to vs, neither can we ſay that it is he in whom we put our whole truſt. If we ſeeke the inferiour meanes, and ẏ as ſoone as they fayle vs, by & by our hearts quaile, then is there nothing but hypocriſie in vs, and we ſhall euer bewray our owne diſtruſt. Ye ſee then howe the true tryall of our fayth, is to hope in ſuch ſort for ſuccour from our God, that although all the worlde fayle vs, and we ſee nothing about vs that may giue vs corage; yet we aſſure our ſelues of ſafegarde [at his hande]. That is the thing which this text importeth.

When we haue digeſted this leſſon, we ſhall fare much the better by it al the time of our life. For on the one ſide wee ſhalbe drawen away frō the vaine imaginations which deceiue vs. As ſoone as we haue any thing heere beneath that makes for vs, or if we be any thing aforehande: we doe as it were deſpiſe God, that is to ſay, we thinke not that we haue any more neede of him. Will they that haue their Garners and cellers well ſtored, call vppon God to bee fedde at his hande? In deede they will ſay their Paternoſter as other men doe: but yet there is nothing but filth in them, they beare themſelues in hande that they be ſufficiently prouided for, ſo as they come not to God for any neede. In like caſe is it with them which are healthy and ſtrong; they conſider not the brittleneſſe of their life. To be ſhort, ſo long as thinges fall out to our minde and deſire in this worlde, we be ſo daſeled with it that we reſort not vnto God, ne knowe what it is to be guided and gouerned by him. And therefore let vs exerciſe our ſelues in this leſſon, that it behooueth vs to dwell in heauen : that whenſoeuer God liſteth to leaue vs alone, that is to ſay to bereaue vs of al mainteynance, ſo as we be deſtitute of all helpes to truſt vnto: yet for all that we muſt not be out of heart. And the reaſon is, becauſe our ſafetie conſiſteth not in any of the thinges which we diſcerne with our naturall ſenſes; but in Gods defence. True it is that we perceiue not his hande but by fayth, for it is inuiſible. But yet will he make vs to perceiue his ſuccour continually, if we receiue his worde: and when he ſheweth his goodneſſe vnto vs, his power goeth ioyntly therewith. And therefore firſt of all, let vs be withdrawen from all the vaine ſelfeweeninges which are woont to deceiue vs: and ſecondly let vs doe this honour vnto God, that we put our truſt in him, knowing that ſith he hath care of our welfare, we ſhalbe in ſafetie. And this ought to preuaile more now adayes, than euer it did. For it is ſayd expreſly of the reigne of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that euery man ſhall dwell ſafely vnder his vine and vnder his figtree. Seeing then that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt calleth vs nowadaies vnto his protection; let vs boldly reſt vpon him. Albeit ẏ all thinges goe againſt vs, and worldly helpes faile vs; yet howſoeuer we fare let vs ſtande faſt, and let this ſaying bee well printed in our remembraunce, that Iſraell ſhall not fayle to be ſafe though hee be alone. And why? Becauſe God is his keeper; his welfare dependeth not vpon ẏ ſtayes of this world; it is ynough for him that God hath taken him into his cuſtodie.

Mich.4.4.

And hee addeth immediatly, that the Eye or Fountaine of Iacob was vpon a land of Corne & Wine, and that the heauens ſhould droppe downe deawes. Heereby Moſes betokeneth in effect, that if we be Gods people, he will haue a care to ſuſtayne vs: and that becauſe wee haue neede of ſuſtenaunce, hee will prouide vs thereof according to our neceſſitie, ſo as hee will giue vs meate and drinke ſufficient. True it is that the Hebrewe word which he vſeth, may bee taken both for an Eye and for a Fountaine. And in deede the Hebrewes call Fountaines Eyes, becauſe the ſpringes of the water (if yee marke them) haue the ſhape of the eye in a mans body. If we take it for an eye in his proper ſignification; it is as much to ſay as that Gods people ſhal haue their ſight continually vppon corne and wine, and that God will giue them ſufficient ſuſtenaunce. For the deawe ſhall come downe from heauen, which ſhall make the grounde to yeelde fruite. If we ſhould take it for a Fountaine; that were ſomewhat harde. I grant it is ſayde in ẏ Pſalme, You that be of the fountaines or welſpringes of Iacob: but that is becauſe the Patriarke Iacob was the welſpring of that people. And it could not agree to the preſent text. And therefore let vs content ourſelues with the naturall ſenſe of Moſes: which is, that God will make vs feele & ſhewe vs by experience, that wee ſhall receiue ſuſtenaunce at his hande as long as wee bee in this worlde. Of a trueth, breade and wine are not the chiefe thinges which we ought to ſeeke at Gods hande: yet is it much when we ſee he hath a care of this corruptible life. And that ought to make vs to ſtye vp higher. For when we ſee that God vouchſafeth to feede our bodies: ought wee not to conclude that it is much more likely that he will feede our ſoules which are much more deerer vnto him? The good then which we receiue heere beneath, ought to ſerue to make vs to ſende vp our truſt aboue the heauens, to ſeeke a better life at his hand, which we can not as nowe comprehende. And therefore of no ſmal importance is this promiſe where it is ſayde, that God will alwayes make his people ſee and feele that he is their foſter father, that he giueth them corne and wine for their ſuſtenaunce, and that he will ſende them deawe from heauen to keepe the grounde frō parching vp, ſo as it may haue moyſture to ſuſteine thoſe which otherwiſe ſhould abyde a hungred. Ye ſee then that the thing which we haue to remember vpon this place, is that if we be of Gods flocke, we ſhall not be deſtitute of any needefull thing. For euen as in reſpect of this tranſitorie life, we ſhalbe fedde and nouriſhed at his hande. And when we obtaine ſuſtenance at Gods hande; it is to incourage vs. Let ſuch as are poore take paines, and pray vnto God to bleſſe their labor, becauſe it belongeth to him to ſuſteine thoſe that are his. Lo howe the poore ought to bee ſtirred vp vnto prayer. And if they haue litle wherewith to ſuſteine them, let them conſider that God intendeth to trye their patience; and yet that in the meane while hee maketh that ſuſtenaunce of theirs as ſlender as it is, to turne into Manna, ſo as they be ſuſteyned therewith. Let not the rich ſort be puffed vp with pride, vppon that they haue their life in their owne hande; but let them vnderſtande that it behooueth thē to haue recourſe vnto God with all their goods. For if they haue not a regarde of him; let them aſſure themſelues that he can well conſume the Corne in their Garners, the griſt at the mill, & the batch in the Ouen: yea he will conſume the bread in their bellies, ſo as in ſteede of receyuing nouriſhment by it, they haue nothing but corruption. Let vs knowe then, that God muſt be faine to performe ẏ which is declared heere, that is to wit, that our eye may be vpon a Land of Corne and wine: and that it behooueth vs to conſider that it is he to whome we be beholden for all thinges. I graunt it may fall out that wee ſhall not haue ſuch abundaunce as wee would wiſh, and as our fleſh luſteth for: but yet (as I haue ſayd already) God ſheweth that he forgetteth not his ſeruauntes; and that although hee giue them but a ſmall and ſlender pittance; yet they haue wherwith to content themſelues, becauſe they receiue ſuſtenance at his hand. Therfore as long as we be to paſſe through this world, let it ſuffiſe vs that God vouchſafeth ſtill to ſuſteyne vs, and that in ſo doing he ſheweth himſelfe a father towards vs to the intent we ſhould go on ſtill, and keepe on our way to the heauenly heritage whereunto he will bring vs, to make vs inioy the thinges fully and perfectly, whereof we haue knowledge as nowe but in part.

Pſal.68.27.

After that maner ought we to put the ſayde leſſon in practiſe. For when the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh of the temporall bleſſinges which God ſendeth to his children: he meaneth not to hold them there, as if he ſhould ſay, ſeeke no greater thinges: but contrariwiſe, becauſe wee be rechleſſe and ſlowe, and can not ſtep one ſtep without ſtumbling except wee bee vphelde by God; and ſpecially we could not haue the ſteedineſſe and conſtancie to ſay, Let vs put ourſelues into the handes of our God, let vs yeelde vnto him, and in our paſſing through this world, let vs not be held backe, aſſuring ourſelues that Gods prouiding for all our neceſſities, is to none other ende but that we ſhould looke vppe vnto him: That (ſay I) is the ende whereunto we ought to referre all the promiſes wherein our Lord ſayth that he will haue a care of our life. Wherefore let vs make this leſſon auayleable wherein it is ſayde, That his eye ſhalbe vpon a lande of Corne and Wine. True it is that we ſhall be threatned with many neceſſities, ſo as we ſhalbe in continuall anguiſh: yet notwithſtanding, if we haue an eye to Gods bleſſing, we ſhall hope ẏ he will guide vs vnto the end, and that he will make vs to perceiue that he hath goods ſufficient wherewith to mayntaine thoſe that are of his houſholde: yea and to ſuſteine them in ſuch wiſe, that by the abundaunce which he will giue them, he will ſhew them alſo that he is able to ſuſteine them euen as it were with nothing. For when God giueth vs abundaunce and fruitefulneſſe, there we ſee that he layeth foorth his treaſures, and that (as hath bin declared heretofore) he will lay abroad Deut.28.12. the treaſures which were (as it were) hidden vnder the earth. But when wee haue a very deere and ſcarſe yeere, which ſeemeth vnable to finde almoſt the one halfe of the poore people: If our Lord make the ſame to ſuffice, and wee paſſe it cleane ouer: in the ende we know that our Lord prouided for vs, and ſhewed a farre more wonderfull prouidence, than if hee hadde giuen vs wherewith to fill our bellies, & that we had wanted nothing. So then, howſoeuer the world goe, let vs learne to call vpon our God. If wee haue ſuſtenaunce, let vs vnderſtande that it is not for vs to truſt thereto, but to do vs to wit, that when God is liberall vnto vs, wee muſt conſider that he laieth forth his riches becauſe he hath a care of our life. And when we haue not ſufficient prouiſion, let vs reſort vnto him, aſſuring ourſelues that he is not diminiſhed: and that although he ſhewe not his bountifulneſſe to the vewe of our eye; yet he hath wherewith to ſuſteyne his ſeruauntes. And therefore let vs call vpon him, & put the thing in practiſe which is ſhewed vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, which is to craue of him Math.6.12. our ordinary bread from day to day.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs perceiue them better, and that we may be ſo touched with repentance, as it may make vs to ſubmit ourſelues wholly to his trueth, and to fight in ſuch wiſe againſt our owne affections, as our battaile may be ſpirituall againſt Sathan and againſt all his attemptes, vntill we haue obtained the victory that is promiſed vs, at ſuch time as wee ſhall be perfectly knit vnto our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, to bee partakers of the glory of his reſurrection. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not only to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xiiij. of Iuly, 1556.

The CXCIX. Sermon which is the ninth vpon the xxxiij. Chapter, and the firſt vpon the xxxiiij. Chapter.

29 Bleſſed art thou O Iſraell. Who is like thee O people which art ſaued by the Lorde the ſheelde of thine ayde, and who is the ſworde of thy mightineſſe? Thine enemies ſhalbe weakened towardes thee, and thou ſhalt march ouer their toppes.

The foure and thirtith Chapter.

THen Moſes went from the plaine of Moab vnto the mountaine Nebo, vp to the top of Phaſga, which is ouer againſt Iericho. And the Lorde made him to ſee the whole Lande, the Countrey of Galaad vnto Dan.

2 And all the Lande of Nephthaly, and all the Lande of Ephraim and of Manaſſes; and all the Lande of Iuda vnto the vttermoſt Sea.

3 And the South and the leuell of the medowes of Iericho, the citie of Palmtrees, vnto Zoar.

4 And the Lorde ſayde vnto him, This is the Lande whereof I ſware to Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, ſaying, I will giue it to thy ſeede; I haue made thee to ſee it with thine eyes, but thou ſhalt not go into it.

5 And Moſes the ſeruaunt of the Lorde dyed there, in the Lande of Moab, according to the word of the Lorde.

6 And he was buried in the valley in the Lande of Moab, oueragainſt Bethphogor, and no man hath knowen his graue vnto this day.

Among the other matters which were layde foorth yeſterday, there remayned how Moſes tolde the people of Iſrael, That there was not then any Nation vpon earth, like vnto them, becauſe they were ſaued by God: and that is to bee marked well. For although God do by his power and grace preſerue all creatures; yet will he bee knowen to be the Sauiour of his people. Therefore when wee be ſaued in him it is a priuiledge which can not be ſufficiently expreſſed & magnified. For we differ not from other men in reſpect of any worthineſſe that is in vs; neither haue we it by inheritaunce, but it commeth of Gods freegoodneſſe. And therefore whenſoeuer we be ſpoken to concerning our ſaluation, let vs vnderſtande from whence it proceedeth, and that God giueth vs that beautie. For we be like all the reſt of Adams ofſpring. If we ſhould bee eſteemed according to our nature, we be no better woorth than thoſe whom God forſaketh and vtterly caſteth away. Wherefore then hath he choſen vs, but for his owne meere goodneſſe ſake? The thing which we haue to remember vpon this text, is that God will haue his grace ſo much the better knowen, becauſe ſaluation is not common in generall to all men, but is a peculiar gift. And Moſes ſheweth by the way, what this ſauing is; namely when God is our ſhielde and our defence. As if hee ſhould ſay that without him we can not be maintayned: for wee be layde open to many deathes, and haue not wherewith to reſiſt. It is like as when a man is aſſayled on all ſides, and hath neither weapon nor armour, but is ſtarke naked. Euen ſo is it with vs, if God fence vs not. Therefore he is called our ſhield and our help. Wherby we be done to vnderſtand, that we can not ſuccour ourſelues of our owne power, neither haue we the meane to doe; but it muſt come of God. Hee is termed the ſworde of our glorie. In deede men glorie ynough in themſelues, they flatter themſelues, and they perſwade themſelues the thing that is not. But heere we be plucked backe from all the vaine hopes which deceiue vs and beguile vs, to the ende we ſhould learne to ſet all our glorie in God, and to conclude that we haue none other power than his, whereby to be maynteyned.

Now heereupon Moſes addeth, that the Iewes ſhould march ouer their enemies heades, or ouer all their gallantneſſe (for there is no more but the word Top, or hygheſt part), and that their enemies ſhall flatter them with leazing [or lying]: for this worde Lye in holy ſcripture, is taken for to ſet a good face or countenaunce vpon a matter, and to play the hypocrite by force, as when it is ſaid in the eighteenth Pſalme (where the great victories are ſpoken of, which God would giue vnto Dauid) Thine enemies ſhall lye vnto thee. Pſal.18.5. Nowe then, the ſumme is this, that God will be the ſauiour of his people. Inſomuch that although they haue many enemies, yet ſhall they not bee able to match them, but ſhall be driuen in the ende to confeſſe themſelues to bee the weaker. And that although their ſo dooing be but counterfaite; yet notwithſtanding, Gods power ſhall ſhewe it ſelfe therein. And now proceeding with this leſſon, let vs learne firſt to knowe that wee be vtterly naked, and that wee want all thinges: & when we knowe that, let vs humble ourſelues ſo as there may not be one droppe of hautineſſe or fooliſh ſelfeweening in vs. And therewithall let vs vnderſtande, that God will not ſuffer vs to quaile in any caſe. For if we haue neither ſword nor ſhielde, he will ſerue our turne for both of them. If we be in daunger of vndooing, hee is our preſeruer. If we be plundged heere in neuer ſo many miſeries with the reſt of all mankinde; we ſhalbe recouered again by his grace, becauſe he hath choſen vs for his people. That is the point whereon we muſt reſt.

Nowe haue we heere a rehearſal of the death of Moſes, whereof mention was made in the end of the two and thirtith Chapter, and heere it is repeated againe; Deut.32.50. namely that God made Moſes to goe vp into the mountaine Nebo, which otherwiſe is a part of the Mountaine Abarim. And he addeth afterwarde Gay. In deede this worde Gay ſignifieth a valley. But we ſee it was a part of the mountaine in diuers reſpectes, and that appeareth in many places. Moſes then went vp as he was commaunded of God, and there beheld all the Lande which had bin promiſed for an inheritaunce to the linage of Abraham, euen vnto the Sea which was right ouer againſt it, that is to wit the midland Sea. He viewed the Countrey, to the intent he ſhould be certified before his death, that the promiſe which God hadde made fourehundred yeeres afore, Gen.12.7. was not in vaine, but euen at the point to bee performed: neuertheleſſe it was not Lawfull for him to goe into the Lande, but only to ſee it. And (as hath beene treated heeretofore) God puniſhed him Deut. 32.51. becauſe he had not glorified God at the place of Exod.17.7. Meriba, that is to ſay the place of Strife, which was ſo named becauſe the people were on an vprore there.

And heere we haue to cal to minde the thing which hath beene layde foorth already more at length; that is to wit, the obedientneſſe of Moſes. For he knewe well that his going vp thither as God called him, was to the intent he ſhould die. Death then was not ſo greeuous vnto him, but that he prepared himſelfe vnto it when hee ſawe it was Gods will it ſhould be ſo. And by this example wee be taught to liue in ſuch ſort, as wee may alwayes haue one foote lifted vppe to goe, whenſoeuer GOD liſteth to take vs hence to himſelfe. And in deede, what win the ſtubborne ſort by their deſyrouſneſſe to eſchewe death, but to bee ouercome by force when they haue fretted and chafed neuer ſo much? It is a point of ſlender diſcretion when men conſider not that as God hath ſette them heere, ſo he ought alſo to haue authoritie to take them away againe when he liſteth. Wee ſhewe ourſelues to be deſtitute of wit and reaſon like brute beaſtes, if we haue not ſuch conſideration wᵗ vs. Wherfore let vs learne to finiſh our courſe in ſuch wiſe, walking as Pilgrimes vppon earth: as we may euermore be ready and weldiſpoſed to depart from it, whenſoeuer God ſheweth vs that our houre is come. But truely that can not be done, except we conceiue a hope of a better
Cor.5.4. life. For (as ſayth S. Paul) naturally we be loth
D to be vnhouſed; there is no man but hee would faine continue ſtill. Therefore it ſtandeth vs in hande to knowe that our true dwelling place is not heere in this worlde, and that we be but onely to paſſe through it. So then, without fayth
Hebr.13.14. we can neuer obey God, ſpecially when we bee to depart out of the worlde; but we will alwayes grynde our teeth at it, ſo as if it were poſſible, we would fight againſt God. But when we once conceiue that our inheritaunce is aboue, and that God hath a better life in ſtore for vs: then doe we determine and prepare to ſubmit ourſelues vnto him, whenſoeuer hee giueth vs any token that we muſt depart hence. After that manner ſhall we followe the example of Moſes.

I graunt he had a promiſe that God accepted him for one of his; but yet the ſame belongeth to vs alſo, and we haue this aduauntage more,
Iohn.11.25. that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt who is our life, hath ſhewed himſelfe vnto vs, to the intent we ſhould boldly followe his ſteppes. And he entered into death, to bring vs to the glorie of his reſurrection. Therefore let vs not ſticke to followe the Lorde Ieſus, becauſe that if we die with him, we Rom.6,8. be ſure (as ſayth S. Paule) to be partakers of his life, and to be companions with him, becauſe it belongeth vnto vs. For he was not rayſed againe for his owne profite, but for the aſſuring of our ſaluation. Therefore let vs not dout therof; but let vs cleaue vnto him. And in ſo doing let vs aſ-
Rom.4.26. ſure ourſelues, that his reſurrection ſhall be maniſeſted in vs alſo. Thus ye ſee howe we haue to put this text in practiſe, where it is ſayde that Moſes went [vppe to the mountaine] knowing well that when he came there, God would take him out of the worlde. And yet for all that hee ſhunned not the place, ne made any reſiſtance, but prepared himſelfe to death with true obedience, yea and with ſuch frowardneſſe, that forward he needed not to be ledde, nor to be haled forth by the handes of ſergeauntes. God ſayde the worde, and Moſes went thither with a good will.

Againe, let vs marke alſo what hath bin declared as touching the puniſhment that was laid vpon Moſes: namely that God had ſhut him out & baniſhed him from the lande which was promiſed to all Abrahams poſteritie: and that was a verie greeuous thing to him. But yet did he beare it patiently, acknowledging ẏ fault which he had committed; though it came not of himſelfe. For he had alwayes ſerued God faythfully: yea and in the very ſelfeſame deede, there was no more but this, that it ſpyted him to ſee the leaudneſſe of the people. Howbeit foraſmuch as he was caſt downe, and ſtoode not ſo ſtoutly to it as was requiſite; God layd that fault to his charge, and puniſhed it with ſuch rigour as we ſee, in not admitting him into the lande of promiſe. To be ſhort, let vs vnderſtande (as I haue ſayde afore) that whereas we thinke wee haue not done amiſſe, our offences ſhalbe groſſe and exceeding great before God. Wherefore let vs learne, not to be our owne Iudges, but to referre ourſelues vnto God, and to ſuffer him to acquit vs or condemne vs by his worde. When we ſhall haue doone any thing, albeit that our conſcience reprooue vs not, let vs aſſure ourſelues that God ſeeth more clearely than we do, as ſayth S. Iohn in his canonicall Epiſtle. And 1.Iohn.3.20 if we thinke the fault ſmall, our Lorde will account it great. If we ſhould iudge after the imagination of men concerning this deede of Moſes, what is to be ſayde but that he ſhewed great ſtoutneſſe? For he reſiſted the people, and vſed very rough and ſharpe wordes. Thinke yee (ſayth he) that God is not able to make water to Num.20.10. iſſue out of this Rocke? See howe Moſes ſtryueth with them through fayth, with obedience to God, and he glorifieth him. To be ſhort, in all his words there is nothing to be ſeene, which is not worthy prayſe: and yet notwithſtanding he did amiſſe; and ſeeing that God pronounceth it ſo, it is not for vs to gaineſay it. Therefore let vs learne to walke in humilitie, for feare leaſt it happen vnto vs according to this ſaying of Salomon, that whē we haue weyed our waies Prouer.21.2. and thoughtes, and that to our owne ſeeming there is nothing amiſſe, God will not agree to our balaunce, for hee hath another meaſure, whereby he will iudge more vprightly. And we haue his worde to iudge vs. Let euery man then examine himſelfe, and when we finde that our Lorde reprooueth any thing, let vs aſſure ourſelues it is not without cauſe. Againe when we once knowe our faultes, let vs aſſure ourſelues that there are a hundred thouſande times moe than we can perceiue, and we muſt cry out with Pſal.19.13. Dauid, Lorde, who can tell the number of his faultes? Clenſe thou mee from my ſecret ſinnes.

Moreouer, wee haue to comfort ourſelues in all the temporall puniſhmentes which God ſendeth vs, becauſe they ſerue to bring vs lowe, whereby God ceaſeth not to further our ſaluation continually, and to holde vs euermore in the hope which we haue that he acounteth vs of his houſhoulde and Church. So long then as we be ſure that we belong to our God, and that he acknowledgeth and auoweth vs to be his; it ought well to content vs, as wee ſee heere that Moſes was contented with the onely ſight of the Land. Truely he neither poſſeſſed nor inioyed it; but it ſuffiſed him that he was a partener in the promiſe, to the ende he might attaine to the heritage of heauen. Foraſmuch as Moſes had that, it was a comfort and ioy vnto him. And it behoued him thence foorth to forbeare the making Deut.3.25. of that requeſt any more afterwarde. So then, although the puniſhmentes bee harde vnto vs when God chaſtiſeth our ſinnes, & that we may deſire him to deliuer vs from them: yet if we ſee that his will is not ſo, but that it is good for vs to be corrected, let vs ſtrengthen ourſelues to it, and pray him to giue vs power to holde out vnquailed. And therewithall let vs vnderſtande that our ſtrength conſiſteth in faith, in ẏ we haue an eye to the hope wherunto we be called. True it is that we poſſeſſe not in deede the thing that is promiſed vs; but yet God giueth vs ſuch a taſt thereof, as ought to ſuffiſe vs: we haue the certeinetie thereof printed in vs by his holy ſpirite. Therefore let that bee a meane to holde vs in, that we may patiently beare all the corrections which God liſteth to lay vpon vs. That is ẏ thing which we haue to gather here vpon the example of Moſes.

Now in the end it is ſayd, That God buried him. In deede the word [God] is not expreſſed, ẏ text ſayth only Moſes dyed, and he buried him in Nebo: but yet it ſetteth down alſo, according to the mouth of God, and buryed him in Gay. Hee went vp into Nebo, & on the other ſide of the hill, there was a place named the valley of Gay; and there was his ſepulchre. We ſee then ẏ it is ſpoken of God where it is ſet downe that Moſes dyed according to his mouth. For Gods mouth ſignifieth nothing elſe but his worde. In deede God declareth not the dying time of euery of vs, he reſerueth that to himſelfe. We haue our boundes which wee Iob.14.5. can not paſſe; but we ſhall die euery chone of vs, and we be to die according to Gods decree. The only difference betweene vs and Moſes is this, that God telleth vs that we be mortall as ſoone as we come into the worlde. Heerewithal we ſee alſo how ſhort & flyghtfull our life is, inſomuch Iob.14.2. that we haue but a ſhadow which ſlippeth away. We ſee it; but we haue not a day certaine aſſigned vs: God prolongeth the life of one, & ſhorteneth the life of another. And in that caſe it behoueth vs to ſubmit ourſelues to his determination. All of vs then die according to Gods decree: but Moſes dyed according to his mouth, that is to ſay, according as hee had declared it afore.

Nowe as touching his buryall, it behoueth vs to ſee wherefore Moſes was not buried after the common faſhion of men, and why he would haue his ſepulcher to remain vnknowen. Soothly we muſt not expounde the worde ſo groſſely which is ſet downe heere, as to ſay ẏ God made a pit to burie Moſes in: but hee ſo ordeined that he was buried by his power. God needeth not to ſet his hande to a thing when hee will haue it done: it is ynough that his power bee knowen. For all creatures muſt needes obey him, the earth will open when it pleaſeth him, as the which was made of nothing. God then may cōmaunde, and the thing is by and by done & performed, accordingly as it is ſaide in the Pſalme, Pſal.33.9. that his commaundement is of as great force as all the executinges of the worlde. Ye ſee then that ẏ burying of Moſes by God, was that God willed the earth to open to giue him buryall, & to hyde his body in ſuch ſort as neuer man might knowe what became thereof. And it was not without cauſe, ẏ God would haue the graue of Moſes ſo hidden. Nay rather, wee haue to note what S. Iude ſayth thereof in his epiſtle, ẏ is to wit, that Michael tharkeangell fought with Iude.9. the deuill for the graue of Moſes. And that battell was not ſtirred vp by Satan for nought. For needes muſt it be that hee pretended ſome aduauntage, if the graue of Moſes had bin knowen: and that had bin a meane to beguyle men with ſuperſtition. So then Gods purpoſe and intent is nowe manifeſt vnto vs; which is that he would not haue men to abuſe the body of Moſes in ydolatrie. And ſeeing that God prouided for it; it is a ſigne that he knewe mens inclinations to be ſuch, as they would hardly forbeare to make ydolles, if they had any occaſion at all. Beholde, Moſes excelled all Prophetes, as it is ſaid of him in the ende of this booke, & as (by Gods will) we ſhall ſee to morrow. Inſomuch that after his death there came not a prophet in Iſrael like vnto him. All of them were as expounders of the Lawe; but yet had he as it were the principall anthoritie. Againe, we knowe howe God wrought by him, how he deliuered the children of Iſraell from the bondage of Egypt, howe hee ruled them by the ſpace of fortie yeeres in the wilderneſſe: yea and that he was taken vp into the mountaine to ſet foorth the Lawe, and had Exod.19.3. taryed there fortie dayes and fourtie nightes together without eating or drinking, liuing like an Angell of heauen, as one that was no more Exod.24.18 ſubiect to mortall ſtate. For we knowe that men can not continue if they want ſuſtenance. Yee ſee then howe Moſes was caught vp to the glorie of heauen. Moreouer, when he came to the people, he had beames ſtreaming from his face ſo as men could no more abide to looke vppon him than vpon the Sunne. The brightneſſe of God ſhewed it ſelfe in ſuch wiſe in him, that the people were aſtoniſhed at it, and hee was fayne Exod.34.29 33 to put a veyle before his face, to ſhewe that he was no more a common man, nor ought to bee taken as he was afore. Seeing then that Moſes had done ſo notable thinges, and God had ſo hyghly inhonored him: no dout but the people would haue beene led to ſome ſuperſtition, and haue made an ydol of his bodie. That is yͤ cauſe why his body was hidden, and God would not haue it to be perceiued.

Nowe wee haue in this text a very profitable warning. Firſt of all how great frailtie there is in vs, if wee bee not reſtrained and brydled by God; and that aboue all things our nature is ſo giuen to ſuperſtition, that God is faine to reclaime vs from that vyce as it were by force. Therefore let vs ſuſpect our ſelues in that behalfe, and conſider that it ſtandeth vs in hande to remoue all obiectes and all other things that may intyce vs to ydolatry, becauſe wee be ſo much giuen vnto it alreadie. Marke that for one poynt. But if men had wel conſidered this, there had neuer beene ſo great and horrible confuſion, as is to be ſeene in the Popedome. What is the cauſe the Papiſtes are ſo whot after their ydols and puppets? Whereupon haue they taken ſo great libertie to fill all their Churches with them without ende or meaſure, buylding ſo many altars and chappels, and making ſo many images and pictures? It is for want of the knowledge of that which is tolde vs heere, that is to wit, that as ſoone as men haue neuer ſo litle occaſion to commit ydolatrie, by and by they bee rauiſhed with it, and as it were ſtarke mad. They knewe not this. They bore themſelues in hande that they might buylde altars, make images, and fill all places with the filthines of their ydolatrie, and yet not offend God. They perſuaded themſelues ſo. Howbeit they ſhewed by experience, that God doth not without cauſe condemne all mankinde to bee giuen to ſuperſtition. Seeing then that wee perceiue this miſchiefe to bee come to paſſe; let vs the rather take warning to liue ſoberly; and (as I ſayd afore) let vs diſtruſt our owne nature, ſeeing it is ſo ſinfull and corrupted. Alſo let vs note, that God meant to ſhewe by his owne authoritie, howe greatly all ydolatries and ſuperſtitions diſpleaſe him. Hee hath hidden the graue of Moſes; and ſhall men nowe pleade againſt it? No: for it is a fighting againſt God, when wee will nowe diſpute whether it be good to haue meanes of ydolatrie. For our Lord pulleth them away from vs, becauſe he ſeeth well that wee ſhall by and by bee ſnarled in Satans ſnares, vnleſſe hee take from vs all obiectes. Seeing then that God declareth the matter ſo plainly; it behoooueth vs to agree fully thereunto.

And ſpecially wee haue to note, that heere God condemneth all the ſuperſtitions which are committed in the perſons of Prophets or Apoſtles, as well as vnto Idols which the Heathen haue made. And that is yet one other thing wherein the Papiſtes do ouer groſſely ouerſhoote themſelues. For when ydols are ſpoken of, they beare themſelues in hand, that if a man worſhip not the gods which were renowmed among the Heathen; it makes no matter, & that it is no ydolatrie at all. For if the virgin Marie ſhould bee called an ydol among them; what a thing were it? If the Saints as well Apoſtles as Martyrs, & euen thoſe whom they themſelues haue imagined, ſhould be called ydols: it were a curſed ſpeech among the Papiſts. And why? For they take none to be ydols, but thoſe which were ſo vſed among the Heathen. Yea, but in the meane time they perceiue not that ydolatrie may as wel be committed in the perſon of an Angel, yea & euen in the perſon of God, as in the perſons of theſe petidiuels which were ſo forged among the Infidels. I ſay that ydolatrie may be committed euen in the perſon of God. Let a man followe all the abominations that are committed in the world, & how be they coloured? There is a thing in the Popedome, which they terme Gods ſeruice; and what is that? The Maſſe. But we knowe it is moſt lothſome & diueliſh ydolatrie that can be, ſpecially, becauſe yͤ name of God is intermedled with it. So then we may wel ſay, that we ſerue God, & that we worſhip him; & yet in the meane while there ſhalbe ſhameful & exceſſiue ydolatrie; as when men turne away from Gods worde, & followe their owne inuentions & fancies. But as for the Papiſts, it is certeine that of the virgin Mary they make an ydol. For wheras they attribute vnto her the office of an Aduocate, to make interceſſion betweene God & men, & terme her their life, light, & hope: what remaineth more to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt? Is he not by that meane bereft of his Prieſthood which was giuen vnto him of God his father? As much is to bee ſaid of all the reſt of their Patrones as they beare themſelues in hand. So then we ought to marke well this text, where God would haue the body of Moſes to be hidden. And why? Becauſe that if the people had giuen themſelues that way, it had bin no leſſe abhomination, than their receiuing of ſtrange gods, & their intangling of themſelues in the ſuperſtitions of the Heathen. I grant there had been a more apparant ſhrowdingſheete: For they would haue ſayd, he was yͤ ſeruant & Prophet of God, who publiſhed the law: and therefore in the honor of God whom he ſerued, hee muſt nowe bee worſhipped and haue his bodie aduaunced among vs. And if the rod which he bare had ſuch vertue in it; howe much more ſhall his bodie haue? Therfore whẽ we would bee heard of God, wee may reſort to his tumb, and there pray vnto God. For needes muſt he be preſent with yͤ bodie of Moſes, ſeeing that ſo great & notable miracles were wrought by his rod only. Such things might they haue alledged. But yet for all that, where are ſo many enticements of Satan, there ought we to be the more afrayde. When Satan hath illuſions, and the things which he faceth vs withall doe carry ſome likelihood: then muſt wee (ſay I) fight the more manfully: or otherwiſe wee ſhalbee carryed away by and by into manie dotages, from whence it will bee vnpoſſible for vs to retyre.

Exod.7.20. & 8.17.
Nom.20.11.

Moreouer, as touching the text which I alledged out of S.Iude, let vs mark that in all ages it hath bin Satans policie, to face men with the things yͭ might corrupt them, or drawe them to ydolatry: like as the Fowler or Birdcatcher hath his ſnares and nettes alwayes ſet; ſo hath Satan his ſleights to beguyle vs. And he knoweth that he hath wunne the goale of vs; when he can once turne vs away from the pureneſſe of Gods ſeruice, and trayne vs to ſome ſuperſtition: for then runne wee headlong into wickednes, and hee carryeth vs whither he liſteth. That is the cauſe why he taketh ſo much paines in this behalfe, and wee ſee it as in reſpect of the bodie of Moſes; yea, we ſee it by experience the which is vſed too much. And herewithall let vs marke well howe S. Iude ſayeth, that Michael the Archangel withſtoode him. Yee ſee here howe there is a ſtryfe betweene the Angels of God and the diuels, the Angels fighting to maintaine vs continually in the purenes which God requireth, that is to ſay, that we ſhould worſhip him alone, and not put our truſt in any creatures. That is the deſire of the Angels. On the other ſide, the diuel being enemie to our ſaluation would faine that the maieſtie of God were quite defaced. And when he cannot do that, he laboureth to darken it, practiſing continually to caſt fooles bables before our eyes, that wee might haue toyes to occupy our heads withal here below, & neither go nor once looke vnto God. And here we be put in mynd, firſt what a care God hath of our ſaluation, in that it is his will that the Angels ſhall fight to draw vs out of all the temptations of Satan. Which thing ought to prouoke vs to bee of the better courage, ſith we ſee we haue ſuch helpes. Now then, if we be weake as of our ſelues, and cannot put from vs the temptations of Satan when we be aſſayled with them; let vs truſt that God wil not faile vs, but that he wil imploy euen his Angels, who be champions valiant ynough to reſiſt all Satans attempts, & whatſoeuer elſe he can practiſe againſt vs. Here yee ſee vppon what truſt wee ought to ſtande to our tackling, when Satan aſſaileth vs & laboureth to win vs. True it is ẏ we ſhould euermore be ouerthrowē & ouerwhelmed out of hand, if God ſuccoured vs not. But ſeeing wee haue the Angels of heauen to reliue vs, and God armeth them with his owne inuincible power: to the intent we ſhould neuer faile; it ought to make vs take courage, as I ſaid afore.

Now moreouer we ſee alſo, what pleaſure the ydolaters do to the Angels, Prophets, Apoſtles, Martyrs, & (at a word) to al the ſeruants of god, when they will needes aduaunce them aboue their degrees. The Papiſts thinke they doe well aduaunce the virgin Marie, when they call her their aduocate, when they terme her the life & welfare of the worlde, when they bid her commaund her ſonne, and when they caſt foorth ſuch other horrible blaſphemies. But if they had troden her vnder their feete when ſhee was in this world, or if they had dragged her by ẏͤ haire of her head; they ſhould not haue done her ſo great outrage. And why? For wee knowe howe exceedingly God hateth al ydolatries. A church that is infected with images, is worſe than a brothelhouſe to Godward. And ſhal men go & abuſe the name of the holy virgin? And whereas the Apoſtles and holy Martyrs haue ſhed their bloud to keepe holy the name of God, whereas (ſay I) they deſpiſed all the abhominations and ydolatries of the world, and ſhed their bloud for the maintenance of Gods trueth and Goſpel; ſhal men now in ſteede thereof goe vnder their ſhadow, to deface Gods honour, to vnhallowe his ſeruice, and to rend him in pieces and gobbets? Let vs marke wel then, that the Papiſtes haue not any worſer or ſorer enemies than the Saintes whome they thinke to honour, becauſe they do them ſo much wrong as to ſet them for contrarie parties againſt God. And how ſee we that? Euen by S. Iudes reporting that the Angels of heauen with their captaine, did ſtriue for the bodie of Moſes. Iude.9. And let vs not thinke that the virgin Marie, the Apoſtles and Martyrs are at variance with the Angels: nay, they bee all of one mynde: And that ſhalbe knowen when the bookes ſhalbe layde open. Dan.7.10. Yee ſee then how that all the ſeruants of God doe fight to keepe the Church from beeing corrupted, & from turning away or ſlipping aſide into any ydolatrie or ſuperſtition. Seeing it is ſo, let vs alſo on our ſide ioyne with them in fighting, & ſticke to our tackeling, that Gods ſeruice may continue vnappayred, and that there may bee no mingling at all to alienate vs from God; and let vs occupie our ſelues wholly therein, ſeeing it is the peculiar office of Satan to ſet himſelfe continually againſt our ſaluation, ſo as he ceaſſeth not euen now to hinder the ſame, but holdeth out ſtil. And his ſtriuing was not then only for the only bodie of Moſes: but he hath ſtriued euer ſince to ſet vp all the bodies of the holy Prophets. When Ieremie ſerued for ydolatrie in Egypt, where was his bodie? To whome ſhall that bee imputed but to Satan, which inuented a newe meane of ydolatrie to the holie Prophet? Againe, whence came all the illuſions and falſe miracles that haue bin wrought in the Popedome, but from the ſame ſhop? Wee ſee then how Satan hath alwayes ſtrayned himſelf to caſt ſome obiect before our eyes, to draw vs away from Gods ſeruice, and to buſie our heads about other things, that being wrapped in ſuperſtition, we might be vtterly marde. Sith it is ſo, let vs keepe the better watch and ſtande at our defence. For ſeeing our enemies come neere vs, and are alwayes watching to ſpye vs at ſome aduantage: ſurely it will waken vs though wee bee neuer ſo loth. But it is ſaid that Satan neuer reſteth, and that he is euer practiſing what he can poſſibly, to catch vs vnawares in ydolatrie. Wee ſee it; the thing bewrayeth it ſelfe. Sith it is ſo, ſhould wee fall aſleepe? Nay rather let vs looke narrowly about vs (as I ſayde afore,) and let vs take good heede that wee bee not intrapped. I ſayde that wee ſee howe Satan practiſeth all meanes to corrupt vs. For hee hath fought, not onely for the bodies of men, but alſo for al other things belonging to them, euen ſuch as a man would not think; inſomuch ẏͤ the very haire of their heads, their kerchiefes, their ſhirts, their pantoples, and diuerſe other things haue bin worſhipped.

To bee ſhort, they haue worſhipped thinges ſo fonde, as that euen litle babes might haue mocked them for it. Yet notwithſtanding, euē the wiſeſt folke haue beene doted with them, & the ſpirit of giddineſſe hath reigned ouer them. And it hath beene Gods will to make men ſo brutiſh. For when they would not hold themſelues ſimply vnto him, but were carryed away with their fickle luſtes; it was meete that they ſhould come to that poynt. For as much then as it is ſo; let vs vnderſtand that our Lorde giueth vs ſo many warnings the mo, to the intent to hold vs in ſuch awe, as we may be well ware that wee be not by any meanes ſeduced. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to note as in reſpect of the things which S. Iude teacheth vs concerning the body of Moſes.

Now there is yet this ſaying further ſet down in the text, No man hath knowen his graue vnto this day. Wee knowe not which of the Prophets wrote this laſt Chapter. The Iewes ſay it was Ioſua: but their coniecture hath no ground. It is much more likely that the ſame Prophet which gathered the booke of Ioſua, did therewithall write the death of Moſes alſo. Neuertheleſſe it is not without cauſe ſayd, that no man vnto this day. For it doeth vs to vnderſtand that it was not for one day onely that God woulde haue the bodie of Moſes ſo hidden: for then it might haue beene ſayd, true it is that the body of Moſes was vnknowen to men, but that was but at the beginning. For the firſt boylings are ſomewhat too headie, and God ſawe that the people might haue beene moued with too great affection, and by that meane they might haue corrupted themſelues. It is not then to be wondered at, if Moſes ſepulchre had beene vnknowen, for two or three dayes, or for a moneth, or for a yeare: for theſe people were too farre in loue with him: but when he was once buryed, then it came to knowledge. But our Lord ſheweth that hee knewe well that men are ſubiect to ydolatrie, and that, not for a day onely; but euen vnto the ende; and that the ſame ſinne is ſo rooted in vs, that as ſoone as wee haue neuer ſo little an obiect, by and by wee ſtart out of our boundes. Let vs marke well then that it behoueth vs to ſtande vppon our garde; for ydolatrie is not for a time, but for euer. And wee take this curſed inclination from our mothers wombe, ſo as wee bee eaſily allured away from the ſeruice of God. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vppon this part of the text. And therefore let vs indeuour al the time of our life, to walke according to Gods ordinance, and let vs alſo beware that wee bee not caried away after the illuſions of Satan. And when we our ſelues ſhall haue continued in the ſeruice of God; let vs teach our children to doe the like, that it may for euer be reteyned in the worlde, ſo as God may be ſerued of al men with one common accord. For if wee be recheles in that behalfe, it wil abaſh vs to ſee howe the diuel will incontinently get the forehand of vs; & in the turning of a hand there wil followe a horrible change which will corrupt and marre all. Sith wee ſee this, let vs be ſteddie and conſtant, and let vs bee ſo zealous to bring to paſſe that God may bee purely worſhipped, as it may continue, not for one day onely, but euen vnto the ende, ſo as we may from age to age proteſt, that Gods name is called vppon ouer vs, and that he hath the whole preheminence; and that the creatures howe excellent ſo euer they bee, doe abyde in their degree and place, and that they haue not occupyed the roome of God nor his ſoueraigne dominion.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God which acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs perceiue them more and more, that wee may be ſo caſt downe in our ſelues, as our whole ſeeking may bee to receiue mercie at his hand, and hauing receiued it, to bee ſo guyded by his holy ſpirite, as we may giue our ſelues wholly vnto him to dedicate our ſelues fully to his obedience, and to ſerue him with all pureneſſe both in body and ſoule, and that hee impute not our imperfections vnto vs which are yet ſtill in vs, but that he rid them from vs day by day, and reclaime vs of them more and more, vntil he haue brought vs to the perfection whereunto he inuiteth vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xv. of Iuly, 1556.

The CC. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the xxxiiij. Chapter of Deuteronomie, and the laſt vpon that booke.

7 Moſes was a hundred and twentie yeres olde when he dyed, his ſight was not dimmed, nor his liuelineſſe abated.

8 And the children of Iſrael mourned for Moſes thirtie dayes in the playne of Moab. And after that, the dayes of mourning and ſorrowing for Moſes were ended.

9 Then Ioſua the ſonne of Nun was filled with the ſpirite of wiſedome,for Moſes had laid his hand vpon him. And the children of Iſrael obeyed him, and did as the Lord had commaunded Moſes.

10 And there aroſe not vp a Prophet in Iſrael thenceforth like vnto Moſes, which knew the Lord face to face, 11 In all ſignes and woonders, for which the Lorde ſent him to do them in the Land of Egypt before Pharao,and all his ſeruants,and all his Land.

12 Nor in all the ſtrong hand,and al the great viſion,which Moſes did before the eyes of all Iſrael.

IT was needefull that after the death of Moſes, the Iewes ſhould know the good that God had done them by the meanes of ſuch a man. For we know that Gods gratious dealings are by and by forgotten, and it is the point wherein men doe chiefly ſhewe their leawdneſſe. For although it be prooued to them that God hath helped them, yea euen with ſignes and myracles: yet woulde they paſſe it ouer ſlightly. In this reſpect it is ſaide expreſly heere, that Moſes had his liuelineſſe, and all his ſtrength vnto the age of a hundred and twentie yeares. Nowe wee knowe what is written in his ſong, in the fowerſcore and tenth Pſalme, That after a man commeth Pſa 90.10. to threeſcore yeares, there remaineth nothing but ſorrowe paine and griefe, and he doeth but linger and pine away. Loe what our life is. Although we haue beene ſtrong, yet doe wee decay in the twinkling of an eye, when wee once paſſe threeſcore yeares, and it is a great matter for a man to attaine thereto, I meane in ſuch ſtrength. But nowe whereas it is reported that Moſes attained to double thoſe yeares: thereby it appeareth that God ſtrengthened him aboue the common rate of men. And that was not for his owne ſake onely; but to the intent he might be able to ſuſteine the charge that was committed vnto him. Had not the people bin vnthankfull, they ſhoulde ere that time haue beene conueyed into the lande of promiſe, and then had Moſes gone in with them. But his life was prolonged a great time, becauſe of the leawdnes of the people. Heere we ſee a wonderfull goodnes in God. For ſeeing that the people (that is to wit, as many of them as were then of diſcretion to knowe good from euill,) were condemned to die in the wilderneſſe: it had beene a great diſ- Num.14.23. comfort to them if Moſes ſhould haue dyed out of hand. But God reſerueth him: and although he chaſtiſe the people, yet notwithſtanding hee moderateth his rigour. Heere then we ſee in effect, that when God tolde the people that they ſhould die in the wilderneſſe, hee meant not to puniſh them with ſuch extremitie, but that hee prouided them firſt of ẏ principall point, which was, ẏ they might haue a good loadeſman: For that is an ineſtimable treaſure. And againe we ſee, howe God wrought in Moſes by a power that was not common to men; that is to wit, that at the age of Sixſcore yeeres, there was in him ſtill all that euer was requiſite in ſo difficult and weightie a charge as wee knowe was committed vnto him. True it is that he had Iudges Exod.18.25 with him; but yet for all that, no one man, no nor a dooſen men had beene able to haue gone through with that charge, though they had bin choſen of the excellenteſt men in the worlde. Needs muſt it be thẽ that God aided him. Now whereas in ſo old age men are wont to be drooping and halfe dead, or at leaſtwiſe in ſuch caſe as they can ſcarſly crawle, and are halfe doted, and yet Moſes continueth ſtill in his perfect ſtate: therein it appeareth that God had compaſſion of his people. And this is expreſly declared that the children of Iſrael ſhoulde knowe that God neuer forſooke them;& that although they had grieuouſly offended him, and were worthy to be cut off from his houſe, and to bee ſtripped out of his gratious giftes; yet he ment not to vſe ſuch rigour: for hee reſerued Moſes, and gaue him wherwith to go through with his charge continually. To be ſhort, in this text it is ſhewed vs, that if God giue vs ſuch men to bee our guides as behaue themſelues faithfully, and haue abilitie matched with their will, and that they bee maintained to doe their office to the full: it behoueth vs to perceiue therin, that God hath pitie vppon vs, and we muſt acknowledge ſuch a benefite, vnleſſe we wil be condemned of vnthankfulneſſe.

Nowe it is ſaide, that the children of Iſrael mourned thirtie days for the death of Moſes. It was a common thing to make ſuch ſorrowe for the deade. But foraſmuch as Moſes was a father to all the whole people, it was verie requiſite that not ſome one houſe or kinred, but that all thoſe which had beene gouerned by him, ſhoulde weepe for him. Euerie man is to be mourned for in his owne houſe by his kinsfolfe and neere friendes: but there was another ſpeciall reaſon in Moſes, becauſe God had giuen him to all the people, and he had guided them with a fatherly care as we knowe. The people therefore doe witneſſe openly howe much they were bounde and beholden vnto Moſes, and al of them ſhewe themſelues as his children. But here it might be demaunded, whether it be lawfull to make ſuch lamentation for a man that is departed: for it ſhoulde ſeeme to bee an incountering of Gods will. Wee knowe that the life and death of men is in Gods hande; nowe if hee call vs away, it behoooueth vs to goe, without any gaineſaying, as I ſaide yeſterday. They that outliue vs muſt not ſorrowe for our death; for it were a kinde of ſtriuing againſt God. But wee muſt euer haue an eye to the end of our ſorrowing, when wee mourne for the deceaſe of men: and againe, we muſt come to the meaſure thereof. Thoſe two things then muſt we obſerue to the intent that our ſorrowing may bee lawfull. The firſt thing is that our mourning for a partie departed be vpon iuſt cauſe. For we haue good occaſion to weepe, becauſe death is a common lookingglaſſe and record vnto vs of Gods curſe, not vppon one or two folkes, but vpon all mankinde. When we ſee any man deade, God ſheweth vs to the vew of our eye, that we be all of vs curſed of him, and that wee be all of vs incloſed in that curſe, becauſe of Adams ſin. For whence comes death, but of the eſtraunging of vs from the fountaine and welſpring of life? God then giueth vs good occaſion to weepe when any man dyeth: but that muſt bee done becauſe of our ſinnes, ſo as we feele what we haue deſerued, and bee aſhamed of our ſelues, and bee touched with the feare of Gods vengeance, and bee ſo wounded therewith, as it may prouoke vs to make ſorrowe. But this ende is ill regarded, welneere of all men. For when wee weepe, we wote not why wee weepe: and ſcarſly ſhall yee finde one among a hundred, which is mooued and ſtirred vp to acknowledge the puniſhment of ſinne & the curſe of God which is ſpred ouer all the ſonnes of Adam. That then is the thing which we haue to remember in the firſt place.

There is another ſeconde ende. That is to wit, when God taketh away a man that was able to doe ſeruice in his Church either publikely or priuately, wee ought to bee ſorie for it foraſmuch as our Lorde chaſtiſeth vs. If there bee a good Sheepeherd, a good Prince, a good Magiſtrate, a man of counſell, or any other that is fitte to ſerue the whole bodie; and God taketh him away: we ought to bee ſorie for him; and not without cauſe: for it is a ſigne that hee is minded to diminiſh his grace in vs. And ought wee not to bee grieued in feeling Gods wrath? On the other ſide we ſee how it is ſaid, Eſa.57.1. that our Lorde taketh away the righteous, when he hath any vengeance in a readineſſe: hee calleth away his ſeruaunts to reſt, that they may be free from the miſchiefe which is at hande. Therefore when God taketh away the excellent men from among vs, it is alwayes a threatning vnto vs. For it is all one as if he told vs, that wee bee not worthie to haue him to dwell in our companie, according to this ſaying in Heb.11.38. the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, that the worlde was not worthie to haue the men that ſerued God with ſuch vertuous conuerſation. True it is that men miſlike of them and thruſt them out of their company, as though they were not worthie to goe vppon the earth. But yet on the contrarie part, God telleth vs that we forgoe the company of the good men, and of thoſe whom hee hath reſerued to himſelfe. Therefore when we bewaile the death of honeſt men, which haue liued in the feare of God, which were indewed with excellent vertues and gifts of grace, which haue done ſeruice to the building vp of the Church, and which coulde haue continued in doing the ſame ſtill: that is a welordered mourning. But yet muſt we alſo come to the meaſure. For it may bee that a man ſhall mourne for iuſt cauſe; and yet if he giue his ſorrowe too much ſcope, then is it a fault and a vice. As howe? If wee ſorrowe for our ſinnes without comfort, wee ſhalbe ſwallowed vp of heauineſſe: and thereuppon oftentimes ſpring grudgings and repynings againſt God. But ſaint Paul telleth vs that when we mourne ſo for the death of our friends and kinsfolke, or of ſuch as ſerued in the Church, we muſt not reſemble the vnbeleeuers, who (ſaith he) haue no hope, and 1.Theſſ.4.13 therefore can haue no comfort. In that place, S. Paul ſaith not that it is ſinne to weepe, hee doth not vtterly condemne the thing: but hee ſheweth that our ſorrowing muſt be moderated, becauſe God giueth vs comfort by calling vs to yͤ hope of the heauenly life, wherein we ſhalbe renewed. So then let vs vnderſtande that GOD humbleth vs by death, and that we muſt goe into corruption like ſtinking carions, yea and euẽ our ſoules muſt ſeeme to vaniſh away, and that all ſhalbe forlorne. Nowe although wee muſt needes bee ſorrowfull when wee conſider theſe things and ſpecially our ſinnes; yet (I ſay) wee muſt euer come backe to this point, that God of his infinite goodneſſe pitieth vs ſtill, and wil not haue vs to periſh in death, but rather that it bee vnto vs a paſſage into the euerlaſting life. And this hope is ynough to comfort vs in the middes of all our heauineſſe: at leaſtwiſe it ought to be a bridle to reſtraine our ſorrowing that it paſſe not the bounds, and ſo we fal to fretting againſt God as we ſee the vnbeleeuers do, who ſtorme and howle and yell, and cannot by any meanes be held in order. And why? Becauſe they haue no comfort, which is the mother of patience. But foraſmuch as God calleth vs to the hope which hee giueth vs; therefore after wee haue wept and mourned, we haue wherefore to giue him thanks, to bleſſe his holy name, and to cõtent our ſelues that he vſeth not extreme rigor againſt vs. Now then, although we weepe when we ſee that our Lorde hath taken thoſe from vs which might haue ſtoode vs in great ſteede: yet muſt we not fall into deſpaire, as though God had no way to ſuccour vs. For he can raiſe vp euen the ſtones, if he thinke it good. Therfore we muſt reſort vnto him when wee perceiue any ſigne of his wrath; and when we haue acknowledged our ſins, and asked forgiuenes of them at his hand; we muſt alſo waite his leiſure vntil he ſhew vs fauour, that in finding mercy wee may alſo find remedy of all our griefs. Thus yͤ meaſure which hee ſpeaketh of, is that hauing ſorrowed to a good end, becauſe our Lord hath taken ſuch folk out of yͤ world, as we ought to long for & deſire; wee muſt alſo haue ſome ſtay of our ſelues, & not be caried away to fretting & chafing in our ſorrowe: but rather aſſwage our ſorrowes, becauſe wee know yͭ when God hath chaſtiſed vs; he will moderate his mightie hand, and not ſtretch it out to the full againſt vs, but chaſtiſe

2.Sam.7.14. ſtiſe vs with the rodde of man, as is ſaid thereof. Sith wee ſee this, let vs learne to comfort our ſelues and be patient.

But herewithall we haue yet one point more to obſerue: which is that our forefathers had mo ceremonies than wee haue, becauſe they had not ſo euident a recorde of the euerlaſting life. And the ſelfeſame reaſon was of burial vnder the lawe, for they buried men with greater pompe than they do nowadays. And what was the reaſon? forſooth becauſe the reſurrection was not yet ſo well witneſſed as it is now. I grant that the fathers knew well what was requiſite to their ſaluation: howbeit, ỹ was vnder ſhadowes and figures. But behold, nowadayes God himſelfe calleth vs from heauen; our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſheweth vs that as he himſelfe is riſen to glorie, ſo we alſo ſhalbe made like to his image, and therefore that wee haue no more neede of ſuch helps as ỹ fathers of old time had. So then, it were a mockery at this day, to counterfeit the thinges that were obſerued in the olde Teſtament. And that is a thing wherein the fondneſſe of the Papiſtes appeareth vnto vs. For they woulde needes counterfeit al things without cauſe or reaſon. And yee ſee that in their burials they haue ſo many gewgawes and pelting toyes, that a man woulde bee aſhamed of them. And what is the cauſe thereof, but that they knowe not the difference that is come in ſince the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; namely that the ancient ceremonies are come to an end? Yee ſee then that the Papiſts are become Iewes, howbeit but baſtarde Iewes. For not without ſome reaſon did the Iewes vſe that cuſtome, becauſe it behooued their ceremonies to ſupplie the want of doctrine. But nowe that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt is come, and we haue the reſurrection manifeſted in his perſon; if we ſet our mindes ſtil vppon ſhadowes and figures, what is it but a defacing of the reſurrection of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & an vtter quenching of ỹ light of the Goſpel? That is ỹ cauſe why I ſaid that the Papiſtes are not worthie to bee called Iewes, but baſtarde Iewes. But whereas it is ſaide that the people made lamentation by the ſpace of thirtie dayes: let vs on our ſide learne that it behooued the auncient fathers to bee kept vnder, becauſe God had not giuen them ſo large a teſtimonie of the euerlaſting life, and that for their rudeneſſe ſake, they were gouerned like Gal.4.3. little children, as Sainct Paul ſpeaketh of them to the Galathians. Let vs nowadayes learne on our ſide to make the reſurrection of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt auailable, that when any man dyeth, there bee plaineneſſe vſed in his buriall, and theſe pompes eſchewed wherewith GOD is mocked, and the people intangled in manie errours and ſuperſtitions. And not without Matt.27.59. cauſe is it ſaide that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was buried after the manner of the Iewes, to ſhew that that cuſtome ought nowadayes to bee chaunged among vs, and a newe to bee put in the ſteede. Alſo let vs moderate our mourning, and let not our ſorrowe bee exceſſiue; but ſith wee haue wherewith to comforte our ſelues; which thing the folke that liued vnder the Lawe had not at all, or at leaſtwiſe not ſo largely as wee haue: let vs practiſe the doctrine which we bee taught in the Goſpell, and alſo by S. Paul to the Theſſalonians. 1.Theſſ.4. Thus much concerning that point where mention is made of the lamentation that was made for the death of Moſes.

Now it followeth, That Ioſua the ſonne of Nun was filled with the ſpirite of wiſedome, becauſe Moſes had laide his handes vppon him. Heere againe the people are put in minde, that God had not forſaken them though they were worthy of it. And it is a very profitable leſſon for vs, to know that God gouerneth his Church, and neuer forgetteth it. For without that, what faith coulde be in vs? Wee ſhoulde bee as folke forlorne. For as long as God gouerneth vs, if wee reſt vppon him, wee boldly proceede and keepe on our courſe. But if God withdrawe his hand, and we perceiue not that hee guideth our ſteppes, or that hee hath a care of vs, and that we be vnder protection: wo will be vnto vs, and men are too dulheaded if they be not then vtterly diſmayed. Behold then, our happineſſe is to haue God to be our watchman, and to be gouerned vnder his hand and protection. Indeede hee appeareth not alwayes viſiblie to ſhewe his preſence; but he giueth vs men to be the miniſters of his grace. True it is that at that time there were viſible ſignes, to ſhewe that he dwelt among his people. Neuertheleſſe as he had bin ſerued by Moſes, ſo was it his will that Ioſua ſhould ſucceede in his place.

And in that reſpect is it ſaide that hee was filled with the ſpirit of wiſdome: to doe vs to vnderſtand that God hath alwayes ſhewed himſelfe mercifull to his Church, and that as a father hath a care of his children, & prouideth thē all things meete for them: ſo God hath alwayes prouided aforehande for the neceſſities of his people. This doctrine (as I ſaid) doeth concerne vs alſo. For wee haue a promiſe that God will neuer faile vs if wee be of his flocke and come to him to ſhrowd our ſelues vnder his wings, that wee may be guided by him: and we knowe hee hath giuen that office to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And for the ſame cauſe alſo hee ſaieth to his diſciples, Matt.28.20. that hee will bee with them to the worldes ende: and that ſaying extendeth to the whole bodie of the Church. Seeing then that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath ſaid that he will neuer bee ſeparated from vs, let vs knowe that in him wee haue God, who will vtter forth all his power to maintaine vs: But yet it is verie much, that beſides the promiſes, we haue moreouer teſtimonies thereof, ſo as hee pointeth vs with his finger to the thing performed, as it is ſpoken of heere, where wee reade that Ioſua was filled with the ſpirite of wiſedome. For to what end was that done? It happened not by chaunce, neither had God regarde of Ioſua alone: but it was becauſe he would ſhewe himſelfe to bee the ſafetie of the Iewes. We nowadayes are in the ſame taking. For if they had abidden in Gods houſe, we ſhould haue bin ioyned ẘ thē. And becauſe they bee baniſhed thence and cut off as rotten members,we take their place , as ſaith S. Rom.11.24. Paul.Now then,let vs aſſure our ſelues that God will neuer ſuffer vs to want any thing requiſite for our ſaluation , but continually ſhew his loue and fauour towardes vs , and prouide vs of the thinges that are for our behoofe , if wee flee to him for refuge; yea euen though wee bee not worthie thereof. For as for this people, we knowe what manner of folke they were , and howe many faultes and offences they committed; ſo as it had beene no wonder though God had vtterly deſtroyed them . But nowe ſeeing hee prouided them of men that were fit and meete to defend them; therby we perceiue that God ſtroue with his mercie againſt the malice of that people . So then , whenſoeuer wee bee tempted to diſtruſt becauſe wee bee rebuked for our ſinnes ; let vs reſort to Gods mercie, and pray him, not to looke vppon our ſinnes,but to proceed continually in his goodneſſe and fauour towardes vs , whatſoeuer vnworthineſſe there be in our perſons.Thus much concerning that point.

Heere is nowe a queſtion that might be demaunded, howe it is ſaide , that when Moſes had laide his hands vppon Ioſua , hee was filled with wiſedome, whether a mans handes haue that power or no ? [No.] but when the ſigne of a thing is ſpoken of, wee muſt go to the thing it ſelfe . Wee knowe that in all ſolemne bleſſings, there was this ſigne of the Laying on of handes . Nowe this was not an inuention fondly contriued after the manner of men, which haue many Apes toyes : but it was a recorde allowed of God , as if an oblation had beene made of the partie that was ſo bleſſed. When the holy Patriarks bleſſed their childrē, it was as though they had giuen them aſſurance that the inheritance of ſaluation belonged vnto them , & that the promiſe ſhould ſtand & abide in full force to their poſteritie . Likewiſe at this day when a man ſelleth lande or houſe,one putteth a fether into his hand, and he deliuereth it ouer to the purchaſer; and in ſome countries the cuſtome is , that he which ſelleth any inheritance and maketh the ſurrender deliuereth a ſticke or wand to the purchaſer in token that he may thence forth poſſeſſe and inioy the ſame. And euen after the ſame manner was it with this ſigne of laying on of handes . For (as I ſaide) it was not a fonde and fooliſh deuice; but it was Gods will that it ſhould be a kinde of warranting , to the intent that the faith of the fathers might be the better helped. That is the cauſe then why it is ſaide in this place,that God gaue the ſpirit of wiſedome vnto Ioſua,becauſe Moſes had laid his hands vpon his head. Nowe in ſo doing he inueſted him in the charge that was committed vnto him.

Let vs nowe ſee firſt of all , whether Moſes choſe Ioſua vppon his owne heade or no . No : but he knew him to be firſt choſen of God. And afterward when he laide his handes vpon him, did he attempt any thing vpon his own fancie? No:but contrariwiſe God only was the orderer or diſpoſer thereof . He knew that Ioſua was to be ſet in his place. And this is ſpoken not of that man onely; but alſo when the Apoſtles did Act.19.6. lay their hands vpon the faithfull,by and by the gifts of the holy Ghoſt were made viſible to the eye. After that manner did the faithful receiue the gift of tongues , yͤ interpretation of tongues, the healing of diſeaſes , and the raiſing of the dead. And how receiued they it? They did but lay their hands vpon them . Yea, but had that Ceremonie ſuch vertue? No:but becauſe it was Gods will to haue his grace ſo declared , & that yͤ laying on of hands was as a gage of it; it was not a vayne and vnprofitable thing.And in that reſpect is it that ſaint Paul ſaith vnto Timothy, That he ſhould make the grace auailable which 1.Tim.3.14. was giuen him by laying on of his hands.Seeing it is ſo(ſaieth hee)looke that thou indeuour thy ſelfe to ſerue God , and labour to builde vp the Church, and that the grace of God which is giuen thee by the laying on of my handes be not hindered . Saint Paul challengeth not to himſelfe yͤ thing that is peculiar to the holy Ghoſt, neither meaneth he that he had the holy Ghoſt in his ſleeue to giue him to whom hee liſted by the reaching out of his arme : but hee ſheweth vs that the ſigne which God had appointed vnto it,was not vaine or vneffectuall.

Moreouer,the ſame is to be conſidered more in all the Sacramentes whereof the Scripture ſpeaketh, than in all other ſignes that are to be had in the world . I haue alreadie alleadged a ſimilitude of yͤ deliuering of a fether or of a wand to him yͭ purchaſeth an inheritance:but there is yet much more in the Sacraments ; we muſt go yet one ſtep higher.For there our Lord worketh that by his power,which men cannot doe.True it is that when ſuch a ceremonie is once done & performed, the lawe will maintaine a man in poſſeſſion of the thing that he hath purchaſed: howbeit, that is not all . For (as I ſaide afore) God performeth by the ſecret power of his ſpirite, whatſoeuer hee ſheweth and witneſſeth to the eye. So then wee muſt euer come to this point, that the ſacraments are effectuall,& that they be no trifling ſignes which vaniſh away in the aire,but that the trueth is alwayes matched with them , becauſe that God who is faithfull, ſheweth that he hath not ordained any thing in vain.And yͭ is the cauſe why yͤ in baptiſme we receiue truly the forgiuenes of our ſins,we be waſhed and clenſed wͭ the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,we be renewed by yͤ operation of his holy ſpirit. And how ſo?Hath a little water ſuch power when it is caſt vpon yͤ head of a child? No:But becauſe it is yͤ will of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, yͭ the water ſhould be a viſible ſigne of his bloud & of yͤ holy Ghoſt:therfore baptiſme hath yͤ vertue & whatſoeuer is there ſet forth to the eye,is forth with accompliſhed in verie deede. If wee come to the Lordes ſupper,it is certaine that a little cantle of bread and a drop of wine cannot quicken our ſoules, for they be corruptible thinges: but therby we haue a record yͭ we be fed with yͤ body & blud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt:& by yͤ record we know yͭ our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſheweth yͭ will not deceiue vs in his promiſes, nor holde vs downe with our nebbes in the water as they ſay; but that he performeth all that euer is tolde vs there: inſomuch that when we come to that holy table, we muſt aſſure ourſelues that our ſoules are nouriſhed with the ſpirituall foode which we ſee not, and that our faith muſt mount vp vnto heauen, there to be ioyned with our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Heere then wee haue to note, that when the ſcripture ſpeaketh vnto vs of the ſignes which we haue in vſe according to Gods ordinaunce; the very trueth of them is preſent with them. And why? For (as I haue ſayde) our Lorde alloweth of our fayth in that behalfe, ſhewing vnto vs that the thinges which proceede from him are not deceiueable. And as we ought to be fully reſolued heereof in the Sacramentes, ſo let vs marke on the contrary part, that when men inuent things of their owne heades without the ordinance of God, they be but toyes and maygames and no better. As for example, in the Popedome they haue many ſignes, which they would haue men to accept as hygh myſteries. What a ſort of fonde thinges are in the Maſſe? And yet (if a man will beleeue them), there is nothing which is not well worthy to bee commended. They would haue it ỹ there they be as it were rauiſhed vp among the Angelles, when they play their pretie pageantes. And yet all is but vtter vanitie, and a blearing or daſeling of mens eyes. And why? For if a man demaunde from whence thoſe thinges come; he ſhall finde that men forged them, and that there is no warrant for them from God; yea and euen we ourſelues doe ſee that they haue defiled baptiſme. True it is that they could not vtterly diſpatch it out of the way, but that (euen in ſpyte of their teeth, and in ſpyte of Satan who ſtirreth them thereunto, and reigneth ouer them yet ſtill at this day), our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath brought to paſſe that his baptiſme continueth ſtill in his Church. But yet we ſee howe it is infected with many ſpottes among the Papiſtes, ſo as the baptiſme it ſelfe is nothing in cõpariſon of the reſt. For they eſteeme not a childe to bee baptiſed with the water [as it is of it ſelfe]; but the water muſt bee charmed aforehande, and it muſt haue coniurations made ouer it: and then muſt other inuentions be mingled with it, as Spittle, Sault, and Tapers, & a number of other gawdes which would make a man amaſed. And what importeth all this? Euery whit of it is but doung taken from Satan and held ſtill: and yet the Papiſtes ſet all their holineſſe therein. Againe, they haue inuented Sacramentes of their owne brayne, as their Sacrament of confirmation as they terme it, and their Sacrament of Anealing, and al their other pelting toyes. And to be ſhort, what elſe are all the Ceremonies which we ſee among them, but vtter illuſions of Satan? Therfore let vs learne to diſcerne the thinges which God ordeyneth and alloweth by his worde, from the thinges that men haue putfoorth at aduenture, and after their owne fancies. And let vs vnderſtande that as Gods trueth is alwayes certaine and infallible; ſo ỹ things that are brought vp by men, can not proceede but of vntrueth and falſhoode. For they be gouerned by Satan who is the father thereof. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to beare in minde.

And let vs marke further, that when men are choſen to gouerne Gods Church, (ſo it be by orderly proceeding according to his word) they ſhalbe guyded and gouerned by him, and hee will furniſh them with his gratious gifts as farre as ſhalbe needefull for them; and whereas wee perceiue not nowadayes the thinges by experience which are contayned heere; it is by reaſon of our vnbeleefe and leaudneſſe. For had wee ſuch order of election as ought to be in chooſing miniſters to preach Gods worde, and that wee went about it with ſuch reuerence as is requiſite, with calling vpon the name of God, & with obſeruing the order in ſuch ſort as hee hath ſet it downe by his worde; and againe if the like were done in the chooſing of magiſtrates and officers of Iuſtice: It is certaine that GOD alſo would ſhed foorth the gratious giftes of his holy ſpirite, and we ſhould ſee that his bleſſing ſhould not be vayne in thoſe elections. But what? Becauſe we be oftentimes puffed vp with preſumption, and euery man deales after his owne fancie, and a great ſort of vs neuer paſſe for the obſeruing of the thinges which God ſheweth vs by his word: therfore he alſo withdraweth his grace from vs: wheras if we had ỹ zeale to gouerne his Church according to his worde, and teaching, and did put our indeuour thereunto; and that in chooſing men to guide the people, we proceeded to it with ſuch ſobrietie as I haue ſpoken of: It is certaine that God would doe his part. For his hande is not ſhortened; but looke what is tolde vs heere, we ſhould ſurely finde it among vs by effect.

Nowe it is ſayde in the ende, That the children of Iſraell obeyed Ioſua, and that they did according to that which God had commaunded by Moſes. Heere in the firſt place we ſee, that among the giftes of the holy Ghoſt Authoritie is one, accordingly alſo as the holy ſcripture maketh mention therof in other places. Put the caſe that a man were as fit and meete to gouerne as were poſſible; yet notwithſtanding hee ſhalbe of no authoritie or reputation, except God ſet him in authoritie, & giue him as it were a marke to the end that men may ſtande in awe of him, and ſticke to him, and receiue the doctrine which he bringeth. Then is it a ſpeciall gift of God; and on the other ſide we ſee that men are deſpiſed and vnregarded vnleſſe our Lorde doe ſo auowe them, and make folke to imbrace them, and inable them to performe their charge, and to acquit themſelues thereof. That is the cauſe why it is added expreſly heere, that the children of Iſraell obeyed Ioſua. It is not onely ſayde that he receiued the giftes that were neceſſarie for his office; but alſo did therewithall girde him with the ſworde, according as it is ſayde in Iob, that when he will haue a man to be honored, it is like as if he gaue him a ſworde. And contrariwiſe when hee will haue a man to be deſpiſed, it is all one as if hee tooke tooke the ſwordgirdle from him. God then did ſet Ioſua after that maner in honour, and it behoued the people to obey him. Now we knowe the pride that is in all men, and we knowe that the people of Iſraell were giuen to rebelling aboue all other people. Therefore God was driuen to holde thē in awe, that Ioſua might reigne ouer them, not in way of tyranny, but to diſcharge himſelfe of his duetie. That is the thing in effect which we haue to remember.

Now heereby Magiſtrates are put in mind to pray vnto God that when he hath giuen them corage and power to do his commandement, he will alſo not ſuffer them to be impeached by the miſdealinges of their people, but that if there be any rebelles, he will vouchſafe to repreſſe them. For it is certaine that euen the very flyes will riſe vp againſt a man, vnleſſe our Lorde do giue him authoritie. Therefore let Magiſtrates liue warely and in feare, and let them aſſure themſelues they ſhal neuer ſtande ſure in their eſtate, vnleſſe God ſet his marke vpon them, and that they be had in reuerence by his meanes. Alſo let the miniſters of Gods worde pray him, that the doctrine may be receiued as from his mouth, & that he ſuffer them not to be deſpyſed and skorned, as we ſee howe the world is ſo vnthankeful that it coueteth nothing ſo much, and that the deuill alſo deſyreth nothing more than that the miniſters ſhould be had in contempt, to the end ẏ the word which they bring might be deſpiſed. What haue we then to doe, but to pray God to worke in ſuch ſort, as we may do men good, and as our labour may edifie them, becauſe he hath giuen vs authoritie to ſpeake in his name? Thus ye ſee how we ought to put that part of this text in practiſe.

Nowe heerewithall it is ſhewed vs, what maner of obedience it was which the Iewes yelded vnto Ioſua. And therupon we may gather howe farre foorth we ought to obey men: namely ſo farre foorth as God haue the dominion & chiefe ſouereintie, and men be but his miniſters. True it is that if God permit Tyrantes to reigne ouer vs, it behoooueth vs to yeelde our neckes to the bearing of that yoke. Yea, but yet muſt we not in the meane while ſwarue aſide from his word. If the Princes, the Magiſtrates or the Paſtors of the Church will turne vs away from the thinges which our Lorde telleth vs: we muſt rather die a hundred times. Why ſo? For ẏ obedience which we owe vnto men, ought alwayes to bee led by this rule, that God holde ſtill his place, and euery man ſubmit himſelfe to him, both great and ſmall. Let vs marke well then, that if wee will haue our Lorde to allowe this lowlineſſe of ours, which we ſhewe in being obedient vnto men; we muſt not bereaue him nor rob him of his right, but that he may gouerne vs by the hande and meanes of men. And herein we ſee how a great number doe ouerſhoot themſelues nowadayes. For they beare themſelues in hand that they be excuſed, if their fathers and mothers, or their elders, or at leaſtwiſe their Princes doe like and allowe of their doinges. But yet ſhall they not fayle to be condemned at Gods hande; for if the blinde leade the blind, both of them ſhall fall into the ditch, and the firſt ſhall not ſaue the laſt. Matt. 15.14 Wherefore let vs learne to obey our ſuperiours in ſuch ſort, as God may neuertheleſſe holde vs vnder him and vnder his guiding, and our life be ruled by his word. And ſpecially let vs haue this regarde to the ſpirituall gouernment of the Church. For if we play ẏ Papiſtes, who alleage that they followe their Prelates, and do as they haue commanded them: we ſhalbe Apoſtataes. For wee ſee that God hath reſerued this obedience to himſelfe, that hee will gouerne vs after his owne will, and not haue his word in any wiſe corrupted. He will ſo reigne ouer vs, as hee will haue none other to meddle, nor to put any thing of their owne inuenting, to that which he hath ordeyned, The way then for vs to practiſe that which is ſet downe here, is ſo to obey thoſe which haue ſuperioritie ouer vs; that firſt wee haue an eye to Gods commandement and ordinance; and then ſerue men as his miniſters whō he ſendeth, and by whoſe meanes he will haue vs to be guyded. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to gather heere.

Now finally he ſayeth, That there was not any Prophet in Iſraell founde like vnto Moſes, which knew God face to face, that is to ſay, to whom God reuealed himſelfe ſo familiarly. Heere wee ſee in the firſt place, that God keepeth not alwayes one rate in vttering forth his grace as we would haue him: but that he doth and dealeth in that behalfe according to his owne will. God then is not bound to any certaine lawe, as who woulde ſay, that becauſe he hath ſent an excellent man to day, he muſt do the like to morrowe too. No. Sometime we ſhalbe depriued of a man, whoſe match we ſhall not finde againe. And why? Becauſe God reſerueth that to himſelfe, to giue the greater glorie to his grace. That is the thing which we haue to note in the firſt place: and it ſerueth to teach vs that wee ſhould not be abaſhed. Notwithſtanding, if our Lorde do ſometimes diminiſh his gratious giftes towardes vs; let it not caſt vs in deſpayre. For why? It ought to content vs that our Lorde is liberall. And againe we haue ſeene already that he ceaſed not to haue a care of his people, though Moſes did farre ſurmount Ioſua, and had not his equall or match. Not that Gods intent was to magnifie Moſes as in reſpect of his perſon; but to the end that the Law ſhould be receiued with ẏ greateſt reuerence, and the people knowe that Moſes was ſent of God. And God alſo meant to giue ſome confirmation to the doctrine of the Lawe, to the intent to print the ſame the better in the heartes of the Iewes, and ſpecially the excellent deliueraunce that had bin wrought [by Moſes]. For we ſee howe all the other prophetes alſo do beate about that marke, when they rebuke the people for their vnthankefulneſſe. When they Ier. 2. 6. & elſwhere. blame them for their vngodlineſſe, they ſet before them their deliueraunce out of Egypt: for it was a deede worthy of eternall memory. To the intent therefore that the people might bee the better prouoked thereunto; it is ſayde that Moſes was the excellenteſt of all men. And therewithal the people were to be helde in obedience to the Lawe, vntill the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And that ſhalbe the concluſion in one worde.

Although God rayſed vp great prophetes after the deceaſe of Moſes, yea and ſuch as ſpeake more loftily than he; (as in Eſay we ſee a doctrin which at the firſt ſight ſeemeth more ſtately thã the doctrine that is contained in Moſes :) yet notwithſtanding it is certaine that Eſay was but an expounder of the Lawe, and that the thinges which he wrate were but dependentes thereof, ſo as he and all the reſt drewe light at the things which had beene taught afore by Moſes. And therefore (as I haue declared already) it behoued the people to haue a continuall regarde of the Lawe that was giuen vnto them, that they might neuer forget it. And although our Lorde had ſo well prouided for it; yet we ſee how negligent they were. 2.Kings.22.8. It is a horrible thing that the Lawe ſhould be loſt, as we knowe it was found againe in the time of Ioſias. And yet it was a treaſure which God had committed to the cuſtodie of the Prieſtes, there was a tribe choſen to that purpoſe, as who ſhould ſay, keepe yee well the Lawe that it periſh not. Deut.11.18 19. The people (as we haue ſeene heeretofore) were warned to haue the lawes written vpon the poſtes of their houſes, to write them vppon tables about their beddes, to carrie thẽ about vpon their hands, and to weare them as bracelettes about their armes. Whereas other people haue Iewels to decke them withal, you (ſayth God) ſhall euermore haue my Lawe before our eyes, that ye may neuer for goe the remembrance thereof. Yet for all this, the people forgate it, whereby we ſee howe needefull it was that the authoritie of Moſes ſhould bee ſo magnified, to the intent that the Lawe might abide vnimpeached. And that is ſhewed vs by Malach.4.4. the prophet Malachie where he ſayth, Remember the Lawe of Moſes ẏ was giuen you in Oreb. After that maner ſpeakes Malachie to the people, telling them that they ſhould be deſtitute of prophetes. For he was the laſt from that time foorth to the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. There was not after him any prophet, there was a horrible deſolation. Notwithſtanding, to the ende that the people ſhould not fall away, and forſake the couenaunt of God: Malachie ſendeth them backe to the Lawe of Moſes; as if he ſhould ſay, All the teaching that yee haue had, tended to none other end but that yee ſhould abide vnder the Lawe of God. And was it of neceſſitie that Moſes ſhould abide in his ſtate for yͤ doing thereof? No: the Law was giuen by Moſes Iohn.1.17. but we haue grace and trueth by Ieſus Chriſt.

Now whereas it is ſayde, That no prophet was like to Moſes, who ſawe God face to face: let vs vnderſtande that it is to the end to bring vs to this cõcluſion of S. Iohn, That our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, Ioha.1.18. who is the only ſonne of God, is come from the boſom of his father to diſcloſe his ſecretes vnto vs, and to accompliſh all the thinges which had beene foretolde by the prophetes: and that many kinges and prophetes haue beene deſyrous to ſee and heare the thinges which wee heare Luke.10.24 and ſee, and haue not obteyned it. So then, let vs vnderſtande that Ieſus Chriſt was not ſimply 1.Tim.3.16. a prophet, but the liuing God himſelfe, manifeſted in fleſh & nature of man, to the intent that we ſhould learne to reſt wholly vppon him, and beare in minde this ſaying of the Apoſtle in the beginning of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, that Hebr.1.1.2. God in time paſt ſpake many and diuers wayes to our fathers, and that now we haue one concluſion of all, in that he hath vttered his wil vnto vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs ſo to perceiue them more and more, as wee may be ſory for them, and reſort vnto him to be rid of them by him; and that in the mean ſeaſon he beare with vs of his infinite goodneſſe, vntill ſuch time as hee haue fully renued vs. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almighty God, heauenly father, &c.
